The Dreadful Decade

We enter now the 10th year of Hitler's influence on world affairs. Doddering President Hindenburg handed over the power to Hitler in Germany on Jan. 30, 1933.

Only a very few people suspected at the time just what it would mean to the world. To the great majority, even in Germany, it seemed that Hitler's accession to power was a grotesque accident; that the man's essential ridiculousness would soon disgust even his own followers, his failure would soon be apparent, the incident would pass.

"Give us four years," he cried, "and then pass judgment on us." The four years came and went, and at their end Germany had been stripped of all that remained of its power to pass judgment on anything. A whole people had been already so deeply channeled into the groove that led to world war that there was no escape. Under whip and lash a faint simulacrum of prosperity had been established, based solely on the building of a vast military estabbolishment whose sole possible purpose the world obstinately refused to see.

The Germans have had not four years of Hitler, but nine, and the 10th year is now beginning, the last two and a half of which have been years of war. Hitler has succeeded in making his 10 years into a shambles that histor- Increased Acreage ians may well refer to as the Dreadful Decade.

Doctor Cox asserted that failties with determination and cheer fulness will undermine our nation al strength more seriously than can the enemy acting from with-

"It has been proved in industry that a gloomy, worried mental state is conducive to accidents, and the President has issued proclamation declaring that the reduction of accidental injuries is essential to national strength, Doctor Cox asserted.

"Your State Health Department stresses a warning against worry that is carried to the extreme. If you notice a growing tendency to worry, try by the exercise of your own will to stop this futile, de-vitalizing habit," he urged.

Doctor Cox pointed out that these are troubled times, and it is natural that we should feel concern about our national affairs. It is one thing, he pointed out, to feel this concern and do whatever we can that may be constructive in solving our difficulties, but it is worse than folly, he added, to abandon ourselves to the ravages of worry and fear.
