Anson Man May Enter Race For Congress Seat

Otis Miller, Anson publisher, is seriously considering becoming a candidate for congress against Congressman Sam Russell of Brownsville according to Abilene newspapers.

Miller, former county judge of Jones county, former district attorney of that district and two years ago a candidate for congress in the 17th district, is quoted as saying that he would enter the race if enough people wanted the kind of platform he would run on and would support a man who was willing to go to congress and fight himself while he works for the people and the country in the fight for American freedom and world democracy.

Miller said that his platform would include planks on swift and adequate war preparedness, absolute stoppage of non-defense spending, and all-out war effort, a switch from defense to offense in our war plans at the earliest practical moment and the awakening of the American people to the fact that we are in a life and death struggle for our national existence.

JAPS TO MEET RESISTANCE IN JAVA ATTACKS

BATAVIA, Java, Feb. 17.—The people of Java were urged tonight in a government broadcast to fight to the last ditch against the imminent Japanese invasion of the strategic island.

RANGOON, Burma, Feb. 17.—A British communique reported today that the new Biffin River front was holding well against the Japanese thrusts toward the Burma Road, sided by persistent British air attacks on the Japanese positions.

Fighting was reported in progress along an irregular line, roughly 50 miles from Pegu, the railroad junction connecting Rangoon with the Burma supply route to China.

Delayed Account of Philippine Tank Battle Is Told By One Of The Officers Now In Hospital

By FRANK HEWLETT
United Press Staff Correspondent
WITH GEN. MACARTHUR'S ARMY IN THE PHILIPPINES, (UP)—Americans have met and defeated the Japanese in the Bataan Peninsula in the first battle of tanks alone in United States history.

It was a little fight and it took place on New Year's eve, but the story which came out today showed that it was a clear cut victory.

Ten light, American tanks were covering the withdrawal of Gen. Douglas MacArthur's men to their present strong line when First Lieut. William Gentry, Kentucky National Guard, of Harrodsburg, Ky., sighted a force of eight Japanese tanks, only a few hundred yards away, and flashed the news to other tanks over his radio.

First Lieut. Harold Collins, La. Carne, Ohio, moved up in support and the two American platoons went into action with the guns of their 10 little tanks spitting death.

They fought a fierce fight, sometimes at less than 30-foot range, and destroyed six of the eight Japanese tanks without losing a tank themselves.

NELSON MAKES STATEMENT ON RUBBER STOCK

WASHINGTON.—The following statement is issued by Donald M. Nelson, Chairman of the War Production Board, and Jesse Jones, Secretary of Commerce:

It is extremely important that every citizen understand our situation in rubber.

We cannot win the war unless our military forces have an ample supply of rubber. If rubber is lacking our planes can't fly, our tanks can't move, our field guns can't operate, our warships can't function.

It is perfectly true that we have in the United States today a large stockpile of crude rubber. It is also true that more rubber is coming in. In addition, we have started a program to make synthetic rubber which eventually will give us a substantial supply.

Fighting with the Japs is now occurring in the area our rubber comes from. In fact, the Malayan Peninsula from which a large part of our rubber supply is normally obtained is wholly in Japanese possession today. We have to drive them out before we can get any more rubber from that area.

The rubber we have today, plus the rubber that is on its way in and the rubber we shall eventually make in our new factories, is all the new rubber we can count on at this time. There is about enough to enable us to complete our great armament program—but there is not going to be any to spare. We dare not waste any.

So we have made our choice. We go without any new rubber tires for civilian use this year so that we need not go without rubber for our tanks, planes, guns, and warships next year. Unless we restrict all civilian use of rubber to the bare essentials, we shall not have enough for our military machine during the next two years.

We are rationing rubber now. We are doing so because it is an absolute military necessity. Every American must understand that the fact that we do have large supplies of rubber in this country does not in the least mean that we civilians may have all we want. It simply means that because some foresight was exercised our military needs during the next couple of years can be met—provided that civilian use is held to the absolute minimum.

We should not be rationing rubber today if our national safety did not depend on it. Everyone of us who is used to riding without giving the supply a thought should look at his tires and say: "That's all there is. There isn't any more." Then we should proceed accordingly until adequate supplies once more are assured.

Your Government is aware of the seriousness of this rubber supply problem and is working on all fronts to alleviate this situation as much as possible.

We need rubber to "keep 'em rolling" for the United States and every one of our allies.

Lieut. Gentry told me the story today at the Field Hospital where he is recuperating—not from battle wounds but from an attack of fever which felled him after his hard-fighting tank platoon had been brought to the rear for a deserved rest.

PANAMA CANAL IS PUT ON ALERT BY SUB RAID ON VENEZUELA'S COAST

19 Million Spent On Defense Work Over Short Period

FORT WORTH, Texas.—Defense Public Works projects amounting to $19,317,010 have been approved for Texas since last July in the program designed to cope with health, sanitation, educational and other problems created by the phenomenal growth of population in military and war industry areas, George F. Harley, Regional Director of the Defense Public Works Division of the Federal Works Agency, reported today.

Sixty-seven projects have been approved in which city and county governments, school districts, hospitals and other applicants were able to bear a portion of the estimated cost $15,455,759. Applicants are providing funds totaling $6,305,546, and are receiving Federal grants of $8,060,213, and loans of $1,088,000.

Thirty-three other Texas projects, estimated to cost $3,331,656, are being financed entirely by Federal funds. In addition, 28 Federal grants totaling $531,595 have been made for maintenance and operation of schools and hospitals. Such funds are restricted to the payment of salaries of school teachers, bus drivers, and janitors, and the operation of clinics.

The largest DPW project in Texas is the expansion of the sewerage system at Houston estimated to cost $2,530,000. The City of Houston is furnishing $2,099,900, and is receiving a grant of $434,100. The second largest Texas project is the Corpus Christi hospital, estimated to cost $1,387,921. The City is furnishing $1,000,000, and is receiving a grant of $387,921.

Additional schools, hospitals and other facilities are needed urgently in other localities where military activities and war industries are centered, and the DPW program is being geared to meet this need as promptly as possible, Director Harley said.

Unsinkable Kelly Has Unsinkable Job For World War II

MIDLAND, Tex. (UP)—The present "deck" on which he is based is positively untorpedoed, much less unsinkable, Staff Sgt. Joseph (Unsinkable) Kelly is pleased to find.

During World War I Kelly was a sailor in the British Navy. He was blasted into the Mediterranean in the Dardanelles campaign, and later into the Atlantic by another German submarine.

He swam away from death that twice came too close. He never liked salt water for bathing anyway.

Nearby Sloan Field must have been made to order for Kelly; the entire area is underlaid with solid stone.

He practically pats the ground he is so pleased with his present station. There's "nary" a worry for him about torpedoes and emergency salt water bathing—all he does these days is tote around in his hip pockets half-pound blocks of TNT with which he blows up dud bombs he finds on the bombing range.

... Strictly dusty operations.

Cigar Blackout

Frank Lopez, Hawaii's director of Civilian Defense, thinks what the country needs is good 5-cent blackout, dreams up copper-lined bakelite "overcoat" to hide lighted cigars from enemy planes. Priorities probably prevent mass production.

BALBOA, C. Z., Feb. 17.—American armed forces tightened their Caribbean defenses today against the possibility that the German submarine attacks in the Dutch West Indies might be a feint in preparation for an enemy thrust at the Panama Canal.

Enemy submarines, one or more of which were possibly sunk, shelled the Standard Oil Company refinery at Aruba and torpedoed five to 10 Allied oil tankers off the great Venezuelan oil center of Maracaibo.

Five ships were definitely reported torpedoed and five others are missing and feared torpedoed with heavy loss of life, in addition to two known dead, 22 missing and 18 injured.

Bombers from all the United States Caribbean bases were converging on the Aruba area in search of the enemy submarines. Army officials, checking and re-checking the Canal Zone defenses, were on a constant state of alert in the event of an enemy attack.

Submarines penetrated deeply into the American defense screen of the West Indies Islands to make the attacks in the Aruba area, about 600 miles from the Canal Zone.

Some officials feared that the attacks were merely a feint in order to cause the United States to withdraw their forces from the Canal Zone to the oil zone and thus leave the way open for a blow at the vital Panama Canal waterway.

Lieut. Gen. Frank M. Andrews, United States Commander in the Caribbean, who was at Aruba during yesterday's attack, reported that at least one of the Nazi submarines which torpedoed the tankers and shelled the oil refinery installations at Aruba was believed to have been sunk.

Leadership Being Forced On Us

For a great nation and a powerful people, the United States is unique in its coy reluctance to assume the leadership that goes with that greatness.

For years the United States has been pictured to the world as swaggeringly imperialistic, with the flag waving and the eagle screaming. It never was true. We took territory from Mexico and Spain, tried to pay for it, and have been apologizing for it ever since. Every Central American country in which we "imperialistically" intervened, is a free country today. Nicaragua is free. Cuba is free. The Philippines would have been free soon, and we are committed to seeing to it that they shall be free again.

That is not imperialism. On the other hand, we have always shrunk from influencing other countries, even from carrying our fair share of the load of attempted world adjustments. Far from being screaming imperialists, we are only a little short of the kind of shy, reserved "let-us-alone-ism" that afflicted the Chinese in days gone by.

Now the world is in the course of a tremendous upheaval. New powers and forces are seeking to dominate it, displacing those which have dominated it in the past.

We still crouch back in our corner and ask in quavering voice, "Are we fighting to insure that the British Empire shall dominate the world? Will Russia dominate the world after the war?"

It is characteristically American to those who really know the Americans, that we never ask "How about us doing a little dominating ourselves?"

Are we nothing, then, we 133,000,000 Americans, who first flung the torch of liberty abroad in the world, and who have kept it burning for 150 years, building the while the goodliest way of living the world has ever seen? Are we nobody, that it is not asked abroad, "Is American free democracy going to dominate the world?"

Let us break the chains of this national inferiority complex. Let us cry to the world that we are free and democratic, and proud of it; that we believe it is the best way of life; that we believe others would be wise to follow it; that we propose to fight to preserve, and if necessary to extend it; that we look any post-war world squarely in the face, confident that we have a greater thing to offer the world than Russia, or Britain, or China, or Germany, or Japan.

Let us so make war, that all Latin America will say, yes, totalitarianism was mighty, but free democracy was mightier still, let us cleave to it; so that China may see how to build herself in like manner; so that Russia will say, we'll keep socialism, of course, but a free and democratic regime with personal liberty; so that all the peoples of the world shall say, the United States has GOT something there, let's go and do likewise.

Let us quit cringing and waiting; let us bear ourselves like free men and in such a way that the world may be aware of us.

Another Thing That "Couldn't Happen"

Delayed Account—

in the little town, covering the withdrawal, when the Japanese tanks nosed across the railroad bridge, in advance of the enemy infantry, and Gentry, spotting them at several hundred yards range, gave the alarm.

It was just before dark, and by nightfall six Japanese tanks had been knocked out and the other two had fled to safer pastures.

It was a hot, short fight, right in the streets of the town, and Gentry had no time in which to observe many details. He remembered that one of his bursts of fire ripped into a Japanese tank and then, when the tank got out of the line of fire, knocked over a statue of the Philippine Patriot Jose Rizal in the center of the town square.

At dark Gentry got radio orders to follow the infantry's withdrawal. But under cover of darkness he left his tank and walked back to check up on the Japanese tanks.

He inspected one which had the misfortune to get in the line of fire of three American tanks at once at a street intersection.

As the result of the fight Gentry believes American tanks are far superior to Japanese tanks. They are faster, their armor is better and they are more maneuverable, he said.

Further, Gentry reported, the Japanese tanks he met apparently were able to fire only from the front so it was easy to knock them out by a side attack.

"I'd like to see the tanks lead an immediate drive out of Bataan," he said. "Most of our tank men believe that one of our battalions could break through the Japanese lines and fight their way north faster than we retreated."

Though the American experimental force used tanks in the last war, tank men said this was the first American fight of tank against tank.

The tanks have not ended their good work with the withdrawal to the present lines.

They go out on patrol and occasionally, in small groups, clank out to break up small pockets of Japanese troops.

A technique has been devised by which the tanks drive through densely wooded areas and knock out Japanese field guns and machine gun nests.

It is dangerous work, because the Japanese are using several types of land mines, the most deadly of which is one which Japanese soldiers, sneaking out of the jungle, put on the side of a tank. It explodes a few seconds later.

I inspected a land mine, a discus-shaped, which the Japanese throw in the path of a tank, to knock off its tread.

Sometimes the Japanese tie a mile to a cord and then, hilling in bushes, pull the mine out into the road in the path of a tank.

Second Lieut. Preston, also of Harrodsburg, Ky., like Gentry, favors the use of tanks in open rather than wooded or jungly areas when possible.

"When a tank smashes through a grove of 'sambou trees,' he told me, "the trees spring back straight up. The result is that we not only fail to see where we're going but we don't know where we've been."

Backwoods To Get a College

LAKE PLACID, N. Y. (UP)—The earnings of a backwoods guide will finance Paul Smith's College of Arts and Science when it opens in the heart of the Adirondack wilderness next fall.

The endowment of approximately $2,000,000 comes from the estate of the late Paul Smith, who amassed a fortune as host to city hunters and vacationers.

The board of trustees has announced that the junior college will begin operating in September. The institution will be developed under the leadership of Earl C. MacArthur, president, who left the faculty of exclusive Peadar School in New Jersey to organize the college in the mountains where he was born.

Founding of the college was directed by the deceased Phelps Smith, who wished to perpetuate the memory of his father and carry out a promise that he would help educate young people in near-by mountain communities.

The institution will be housed in Paul Smith's Hotel buildings at the little community of Paul Smith, about 25 miles from the winter sports center of Lake Placid.

Respected President MacArthur is well fitted to the task of setting up a center of learning in a section where the sparse roads run through dense evergreens for 10 and 20 miles with a sign of human life.

The son of a lumberman, MacArthur graduated from Yale and then went on to teach English and coach football at Princeton.

His first plans call for admission of 30 students, who will be given ample financial help.

Defense Housing To Be Standardized

FORT WORTH — Homes built in the future for defense workers in Texas will be standardized.

This does not mean, however, that all will be alike. There will be one, two three and four bedroom units; some will be one-story, others two-story; there'll be detached, twin and group houses, but all will conform to some 25 or more standard plans that have been adopted by the Federal Works Agency, it was announced here today.

These standardized plans, designed to speed up construction to meet emergency housing conditions created by the heavy population increase in defense areas, have been approved by a special committee on defense housing standards. This action is expected to facilitate speedy preparation of working drawings for both permanent and demountable types of houses.

The plans will be made available to architects and housing authorities engaged in building the more than 70,000 homes for war workers authorized under the recently amended Lanham Act, which

I found 20 ways to get longer life from our car...

The family car is my responsibility—and I'm taking it seriously, nowadays. Because I didn't know much about what goes on below the hood, or underneath the car, I asked our neighborhood Humble service man about his new plan "20 Ways to Get Longer Life from Your Car." It's all in a booklet, written so anyone can understand it—and my husband is enthusiastic.

"The Humble service man showed me just what we ought to do, to get longer life from our tires, and keep our car young. I went over his suggestions with my husband, and he said, 'That shows a genuine desire to help... you can depend on that fellow.'"

What about your car? How long can you expect it to keep giving you trouble-free service? Experts say the average car is capable of 10 years performance, if you give thorough, regular attention to a few important things. At your neighborhood Humble station is an experienced service man, anxious to give you help and advice about your car. Let him show you the new booklet "20 Ways to Get Longer Life from Your Car." It will pay you in more miles of better service.

Drive by your Humble station today—ask for the facts on "20 Ways to Get Longer Life from Your Car."

SERIAL STORY

KINGS ROW

BY HENRY BELLAMANN

THIS STORY: Schoolroom in small town Kings Row brings together orphaned Parris Mitchell, 12 and foreign-looking, who lives with French grandmother; Drake McHugh, 13 and "oil boy"; beautiful Cassandra Tower; tomboy Bessie Monaghan. Teacher Sally Venable mixes on sharp social lines that will groove their lives as they grow up.

CHAPTER II

THERE was one individual in that noisy playground crowd who felt something of this social difference, and who thought about it. That was Parris Mitchell.

Parris was, in his own dark way, a thoughtful boy. He was standing a little apart and was dreamily half thinking something of Miss Venable's thought. Inside they were all—well, kind of alike. But outside—here, everything was different.

Two or three girls were standing near, talking with their heads close together. He wondered why they always acted that way—as if they had secrets. Vera Lichinsky was one of them. She caught sight of him.

"You going down to Professor Berdorff's for your music lesson?"

"It's my birthday."

"Oh." She looked slightly mystified. Nothing ever interfered with her violin lessons.

"I've got a new Bach piece," Vera made it sound important.

"I have a new Bach piece, too."

"Is it hard?"

"Yes. It's in four flats."

"Well, I've got to go." She turned with an air of serious decision. She did not look back.

"Hello, Parris," Cassandra Tower hung back from the other girls who were walking away, their heads still close together.

"Hello, Cassie."

Cassandra smiled. "I heard you say today's your birthday. How old are you?"

"Twelve."

"I'm going to have a party next Saturday."

"Are you?"

"Yes. I'm going to invite you."

"I'd like to come."

"All right. I'll send you an invitation."

He walked slowly toward the stile which spanned the tall fence surrounding the school grounds. He did not see a little girl who stood outside watching him through the gap in the boards. She was smaller than Parris, and rather poorly dressed in a faded calico dress. She was extremely blond, and had an expression of sweetness—half angelic, half sensuous—gave her a somewhat enigmatic charm.

"Hello, Renee."

They proceeded without further speech along the road toward Parris' home. Renee lived on the von Eln place. Her father, Sven Gyllinson, was the overseer of the nurseries owned by Parris' grandmother. Renee and Parris had played together since they were babies. She was only a few months younger than Parris, but she was a grade behind him in school. Seemingly, they took no notice of each other now. When she picked up a rock and threw it, loudly similar gestures. If he swung his book strap from one shoulder to the other, she did, too. Apparently she wished nothing but his company. She was always "tagging" along—always had been as long as he could remember.

As they neared home Renee spoke. "I'll be glad when school's out, won't you?"

"Uh huh."

He opened the wicket gate and stood aside for her to pass through. She waved and turned into a lane that led to the overseer's cottage.

PARRIS MITCHELL'S mother had died when he was born, his father less than a year later. Since then he had been cared for by his maternal grandmother. She adored him, and he adored her. His grandmother, Marie Arnaud von Eln, was wholly French. Her family came originally from Lorraine. She had been twice married, the second time to a wandering German aristocrat who had come to America to make a fortune. After various enterprises he had bought lands at Kings Row because of some fancied similarity of the soil to that of his native German province. He built a house of foreign fashion, laid out elaborate grounds, and manufactured sufficient wine to drink himself to death.

Marie von Eln was a resourceful woman. She employed French and German labor and turned the vineyards into a nursery.

Kings Row had never known quite what to make of her. She was a "foreigner," but obviously did not fit into the usual categories of what were always derogatorily referred to as "the foreign elements." She had the bearing and manner of an aristocrat, and her sense of humor was of the kind that often made the women of Kings Row uncomfortable.

Parris bore a striking resemblance to her.

"Bon soir, grand'mere." He held her very tight and kissed her four times on each smooth cheek. He rubbed his face against her hair.

"Ma belle grand'mere!"

"Mon enfant." She held him off and put up her lorgnettes. "Tu es fatigued?"

"Moi? Non. Pas du tout."

"Are you hungry?"

"Of course."

Madame called, "Anna!"

A short fat maid appeared so quickly that one suspected that she had been waiting at the door. "Anna, dass Kind hat Hunger!"

The maid smiled broadly. "Was willst du—Milch, Brod—eine Pastete?"

"Was fur Pastete gibt es, Anna?"

"Kirsch—ganz frisch."

After the pie he went directly to his piano practice. The square rosewood piano was old, and the keys were yellow, but it was in good tune. Very slowly, very carefully, counting aloud as he practiced, he attacked the Bach piece "in four flats." He began again at the beginning for the 10th time when his grandmother came to the door.

"What is this that you play?"

"It is an invention."

"Indeed. Is that something important?"

"Her Berdorff says so."

"It is extremely ugly. It must be frightful to learn such a thing! Come with me—it is enough of this—in this invention as you call it—and it is your birthday. I have a present for you."

Parris lay in bed listening to the little sounds of the night. He was very happy. It had been a beautiful evening, and his present—all those books! His "belle, belle, belle grand'mere!"

He had heard Anna say that Madame was growing old. Oh! Some day his grandmother would die—sooner than other boys' mothers who were much younger. Terror seized him. He took the edge of the quilt between his teeth so he wouldn't cry, but it was no use—he was already crying.

No, no, no! Le bon Dieu would never permit that. He remembered once that his grandmother had shrugged her shoulders contemptuously at something Anna said about trusting the good God. Was it—was it possible that his grandmother knew something she had never told him—that perhaps—perhaps there wasn't a bon Dieu at all, just as he had found out when he was a very little boy that there was no Santa Claus and no real giants?

He turned his face down into the pillow and pulled the covering over his head.

War Production Is Boosting Silver Use

By United Press
NEW YORK—Use of silver reached a record high of 80,000,000 ounces last year, virtually double the amount of 1940 consumption, according to the authorities, Handy and Harman.

Increased use of the metal was attributed to the speedup in defense construction. Silver and its alloys are used to help build anything from a battleship to a bomber, mostly in the form of a brazing alloy, or solder.

Another contributing factor to the increase was the use of silver as a substitute for copper, nickel and zinc to release those metals to war production.

To speed construction on new buildings at the Naval Academy, five quarries supplied the needed granite.
