Fly-By-Nights

Forming the second and third steps of a basic aerial formation, the echelon, these flying officers of Randolph Field, Texas, with Aviation Cadets as passengers, race through the darkness as they blaze a course across the Texas sky. While night formation flying is not a part of the course at the huge training center, this flight demonstrated to the Cadets what is to come when they move on to an advanced school and eventual "Wings" and an Air Corps commission. It's ticklish business for the beginner, but Randolph's flying instructors can "put 'em where they want 'em," guided only by their wing-tip lights.

Prepare West For Poisoned Gas

SAN FRANCISCO (UP)—War-conscious San Francisco has tested and made ready for use the first of 55 public "de-gassing stations" which will be located at strategic points in the city in case of enemy air attack with poison gas bombs.

Ready by the Red Cross, the station is capable of treating 120 victims an hour. Building cost was $2,000.

Dr. Maurice Tainter of the Red Cross pointed out that speed was the paramount necessity in treatment of poison gas victims and said the stations would "save countless lives" if the city were subjected to a large gas attack.

"The thing that should be emphasized is speed," Tainter said. "Best results from gas contamination are accomplished within 10 or 15 minutes, although benefits can be achieved up to several hours later."

The de-gassing stations would serve as emergency centers for victims, after which they would be transferred to hospitals.

The procedure was demonstrated recently in a drill with live models participating. Attendants, wearing gasproof clothing, rushed the "patients" into a sealed chamber and stripped off their clothes.

In an adjoining section they were treated under a shower and the gas rubbed off. After thorough scrubbing and first aid for gas burns, the patients were transferred to a hospital.

Separate sections are available for men and women.

Houston Youth Is Given Award In Architecture

By United Press
COLLEGE STATION, Texas.—The American Institute of Architects medal has been awarded Frank F. Beadle, Jr., of Houston, who received his bachelor of architecture degree Friday night at Texas A. & M. College commencement.

The medal was presented at a surprise banquet at Sibus Hall and Beadle received also a copy of Henry Adams, book, "Mont. St. Michel and Chartres."

Runner up for the top award was Vernon S. Smith of Dallas. He also received a copy of Adams' book. Smith's award was in absentia; he already is on active duty as second lieutenant with the U. S. Army Engineering Corps.

It was the first time that Texas A. & M. had participated in the American Institute of Architects awards. The institute annually recognizes outstanding students recommended by the faculties of certain schools of architecture, A. & M. and the University of Texas are the only schools in the state receiving the A. I. A. recognition.

Milton B. McGinty, Houston, president of the South Texas chapter, A. I. A., announced the awards at the banquet. Walter T. Rolfe, of the University of Texas and a member of the A. I. A. committee on education, was the principal speaker.

Cowboy Reunion Won't Be Canceled Because of War

By United Press
STAMFORD, Tex.—The Texas Cowboy Reunion is a hardy outfit and is not to be numbered among the meetings canceled because of the war.

The 13th annual Reunion will be held this year July 2-4. Despite the tire shortage and other war conditions which have forced other rodeos to be cancelled this year, directors of the reunion decided to hold their annual event for the benefit of members of the armed services in Texas.

Many of these youths are from the north and east and never have seen a real Texas cowboy in action. The men in uniform will be admitted at reduced prices.

W. G. Swenson, president of the Reunion, has announced that all the regular features of the former rodeos will be featured this year, plus a few innovations. There will be three daily rodeo shows, an old-time square dance, modern balls, a quarter horse show, reunion of old time cowhands and one of the greatest attractions—the chuck wagon meals.

Swenson believes the attendance will surpass last year's record-breaking crowd of more than 60,000.

Old Age Pension Rolls Show Gain During The Month

AUSTIN.—Texas Old Age Assistance rolls for May gained 2,419 recipients above all losses due to death and ineligibility, as compared with 11,443 the previous month, increasing from 169,905 to 172,324, the Department of Public Welfare announced today. The department will mail next Friday, Saturday, Monday, and Tuesday checks totaling $2,374,640, grants averaging $19.58. Received during April were 3,187 new applications for Old Age Assistance.

The number of blind persons to receive aid in May increased from 2,816 in April to 2,999. A total of $68,661 will be distributed in average grants of $22.89. The department received 194 new applications for blind aid during April.

The Aid to Dependent children rolls continue to show the highest increase. A total of 1,986 families was added to the rolls to bring the April figure of 9,645 families up to 12,629 this month, representing 26,773 children. Grants for May average $20.73 per family and will total $261,806. The department accepted 9,093 new applications for Aid to Dependent Children during the month.

GOOD NEIGHBOR NATIONS CHEER OIL APPRAISAL

By LAWRENCE S. HAAS
United Press Staff Correspondent
Official appraisal for compensation of American-owned petroleum properties which Mexico expropriated in 1938, has been hailed in Washington and Mexico City government circles as a further and vastly important implementation of the Roosevelt good-neighbor policy.

The appraisers' panel, headed by Morris L. Cooke, for the United States and by Manuel J. Zavada, for Mexico, agreed upon a settlement sum of $23,995,991. This amount is understood to be an evaluation of the above-soil properties, such as refineries, pipelines, machinery, filling stations, office buildings and the like.

It is recalled that the Mexican Supreme Court ruled against the companies' claims to oil land concessions granted prior to 1917, and to sub-soil rights. It was understood that the American companies had evaluated their properties, including oil reserves under the land covered by their concessions, at more than $140,000,000.

However, the appraisal figure of the above-soil properties is regarded as eminently fair by some petroleum circles.

The agreement upon the compensation figure and the report thereon made respectively to the United States and Mexican governments, does not carry any compulsion for acceptance by the oil companies. However, should they reject the sum and insist upon greater payment for the sub-soil rights, there appears little chance of a settlement of the long-standing Iksame oil controversy for many years.

The oil companies, having exhausted their legal resources as a result of the Mexican supreme court rulings, pursued their claims through diplomatic action. The compensation figure set by the appraisers' panel is the fruit of that diplomatic intervention. Undoubtedly the agreement figure represents about all that the United States government is able to do for the petroleum interests.

Aside from the merits of the case, political considerations of transcendent importance are involved. Relations between the United States and Mexico today are happier than they have been in many troubled decades. At a time when hemisphere solidarity and all-out cooperation by this country's close neighbors is one of the paramount aims of American foreign policy, the United States government is anxious to dispose of all serious problems that exist between its citizens and other American governments.

The existence of the oil controversy has long constituted an obstacle for a complete understanding between Mexico and the United States. With the matter finally wiped off the slate, the green light could be flashed for economic cooperation between the two countries on a wide scale.

The United States already has agreed to advance Mexico sizeable credits for armament, public works and other needs. Reciprocal trade pact negotiations are pending. Government leaders on both sides of the Rio Grande are hopeful that further steps will be taken leading to important development of Mexican natural resources. They envision advancement of Mexican living standards and raising of the country's status and effectiveness as an economic and industrial partner of the United States.

Atlantic Shark Is Tested For Vitamin

OCEAN CITY, N. J. (UP)—A pot of gold for New Jersey fishermen may be at the end of experiments on shark liver oil by a Philadelphia pharmaceutical company. If the oil proves to contain vitamins D and A, commercial fishermen off the Atlantic coast expect to profit on the once-despised fish as have fishermen off the Pacific coast.

Cutting off of the supply of cod, German occupiers and increased liver oil from Norway through army and navy needs have boomed the shark-catching industry.

The drug company has ordered 80 drums of shark livers from a local fisherman to continue preliminary tests.

Selectees With Dependents May Go Into Service

Many Selective Service registrants who have been deferred from military service solely because they have dependents will eventually be inducted unless in the meantime they become engaged in activities essential to the nation's war effort. General J. Watt Page, State Selective Service Director, stated today.

"We are rapidly approaching the stage where everyone must be either working or fighting to win this war," General Page said. "War requirements—the demand for man power by the armed forces as well as the armed forces within the next several months to find selectees for their quotas among registrants who have dependents.

"Right now local boards are re-considering all registrants with dependency deferrals for two major purposes. The first is to eliminate from this class all men who cannot prove that their dependents need their earned income for support in a reasonable manner and all who cannot prove that they did not acquire dependents to avoid military service. The second purpose is to distinguish between men who have dependents but are not engaged in activities aiding the nation's war effort and those who are contributing for victory by their work as civilians.

"By making this distinction between those engaged in essential activities and those whose civilian activities are not contributing to the war effort, it is desired to induce a voluntary movement of the latter into essential activities and thus release for military service men without dependents who must be deferred as 'necessary men' until they can be replaced at their work."

Persons engaged in non-essential activities, however, should not cease their present employment until their services are needed in some essential activity, General Page warned. He said:

"This voluntary movement from non-essential activities should be a gradual, orderly, and economically sound transfer of man power. The Federal Government will make known, from time to time, the opportunities for training and employment in activities essential to the war effort so that this shift of employment may be made without unnecessary disturbance to the welfare of the community, the family, and the individual. Each individual registrant, however, knows or should know, from his own capabilities and the opportunities for employment in war industry, and should seek such employment without waiting for specific instructions from the Government."

When men with dependents are considered for military service, General Page emphasized, local boards will have regard for occupation together with the degree of dependency. Registrants who have the greatest degree of dependency, such as a dependent wife and children, will be the last group sought for military service, he said, provided that they have become necessary men in war production or supporting activities."

MARTINIQUE SHIPS TO BE IMMOBILIZED

By United Press
WASHINGTON, D. C., May 14—French war vessels at Martinique are being immobilized as one of the results of negotiations now being conducted there between the United States and the governor of Martinique, it was learned from a high authority in Washington today.

Conversations at Martinique are being continued, and it was emphasized in official quarters that the United States is not dealing with the Vichy government on the Martinique issue, but is going directly to the island's leaders with their problems.

Immobilization of the French war vessels was arranged through cooperation between the French and American naval officers and other officials there.

Most important of the vessels considered in the conversations is the giant aircraft carrier Bearn, which fled to Martinique immediately after the collapse of France, to prevent it falling into German hands.

Other French naval vessels in the locality include the modern cruiser Jean Bertin and the training ship Jeanne d'Arc.

No report has been made as to the disposition to be made of more than 100 American-built airplanes that were enroute to France at the time of the country's fall. Merchant ships and tankers totaling 140,000 tons, which belong to the French, had also entered into the negotiations, with an announcement as yet made as to their disposition. Vichy has denied that they will be turned over to the United States for use.

Dirty Little Sheets

Apparently Attorney General Biddle found the water was not so hot as he had feared. Except for a few professional liberals, and of course the Christian Fronters, almost everybody was pleased when Father Coughlin's Social Justice was given the works.

Now Mr. Biddle has announced his readiness to go after a lot more "dirty little sheets," which are preaching sedition, bigotry, defeatism, anti-democracy generally.

The attorney general has a broad and fertile field in which to work.

This nation at war, fighting not alone for the theoretical cause of democracy but for its very existence, has been tolerating hundreds of "dirty little sheets" which have no possible excuse for existence.

Few of them, individually, do much harm. Their circulation is limited. Their prestige is nil. They are read principally by men and women whose loyalty ranges from passivity to non-existence.

Even a categorical list of such publications would require more space than the entire lot is worth.

The Department of Justice has stripped the gears of "Copperhead Notes" by its action against Ellis O. Jones and the deserter Robert Noble, and the vicious "Galilean" by the arrest of William Dudley Pelley.

But there still remain at least a hundred subversive daily and weekly printed and mimeographed sheets which, by design or coincidence, play Hitler's game in this country.

There is "The Broom," issued in that highly strategic defense city, San Diego. Its tone may be judged from its discovery that V (for Victory) actually is a Jewish symbol standing for "Violence, Vengeance and Sabotage."

This is reminiscent of the expose by "X-Ray," of Muncie, Ind., that the V dates from the feast of Belshazzar. The context in which "X-Ray" publicizes its learning may be judged from a February article warning that the Jews are seeking to mingle their and Negro blood with that of other races through the blood banks which have been established for transfusions for our war wounded.

How can a nation at war continue to tolerate "Publicity," published by E. J. Garner at Wichita, which commented on Pearl Harbor:

"The Japs did Sunday just what Secretary of State Hull and his war-mongering pal, Lord Halifax, of London, have been longing for—they attacked Honolulu and the Philippines. Now the United States has a war on its hands. So then what?"

By citation and quotation, space permitting, the case against these and scores of others could be made irrefutable. Truly, Mr. Biddle was restrained in the best Philadelphia Quaker tradition which he confined his epithet to "dirty little sheets."

We can fight this war very well without such publications or their authors and sponsors.

BY PETER EDSON

NRA Service Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON—The way a government agency can be a hero today and a heel tomorrow was never better illustrated than in the case of the Civilian Control Corps. Three or four years ago, no one had enough praise for the CCC, but today there seem to be about as many but shots in the government out gaining for CCC as the CCC has camps, the latter number being around 600.

If you want to make a little side bet, just lay a huck or so that before very long there will be "noise stations" clamoring for restoring or enlarging the CCC, then there are now clamoring in the name of economy for its discontinuance. These yells for building up the CCC again are apt to come when the "noise" season gets going good and there won't be enough CCC boys available to help out in the configurations. The second series of yells will in all likelihood come from farm belt congressmen who'll find out from their constituents that CCC still means and conservation, protection, being discontinued by the hundreds.

The story of how the CCC was exiled to the dog house is one of those things. It goes back to the time CCC was first set up. It was labeled then as a relief agency, and $22 of every boy's $20 monthly wage was sent home to the folks to help keep the corner grocery going during the depression. CCC is still considered a relief agency by most of its critics and as a relief in any form is now unpopular, the CCC suffers from that association.

When defense talk began to get a little hot, there was agitation from some military to make the CCC a purely military training school. CCC Director James J. McEntee spiked that one before the selective service law was passed. If the country was to have compulsory military service, said McEntee, then military training for CCC would be all right, but until there was selective service, it seemed unfair to single out boys from the poorer families and make them the first front line recruits for a war.

It was a sound argument, but in spite of it, CCC's reputation began to suffer as an unimilitary and therefore to some people an unnecessary organization.

CCC's main justification for its own continuance, however, is that it sincerely believes it has a job to do. Today there are some 600 CCC camps in operation. At the height of the depression, there were 2500 camps, with 300 men to the camp.

Furthermore, CCC is making itself as much of an Army auxiliary as it can. It has built Army camps and military roads and airports. It has 115 camps on military reservations today, doing labor battalion jobs that relieve soldiers for strictly military duty.

Pre-Habilitation Stressed By State Health Officer

AUSTIN — "Pre-habilitation is a word with much more meaning than the familiar one 'rehabilitation,'" Dr. Geo. W. Cox, State Health Officer, declared today in emphasizing the advisability of frequent physical examinations.

Dr. Cox pointed out that young men who expect to enter military service within the near future should go to their family doctor for a check-up, so that any remedial physical defects can be attended to before they are called.

"By possible corrective treatment, many young men can be ready for military service when called, who are not now able to serve," Dr. Cox said.

According to the State Health Officer, not only young men expecting to enter military service, but war workers and their families, students cramming four year's work into much less time and all others caught in the accelerated speed of the business world today should be examined by a doctor at least twice a year.

"It costs less to maintain than to repair," Dr. Cox declared, "and to know a good doctor before you need repairs."

NEW YORK.—Price and wage levels have been set. You can't earn more than $25,000 a year. No tires. No gas. Dinosaurs and blackouts.

But hearkening back to the days of normalcy, there went the Cleveland Indians into first place in April.

This reminds you of happier days, when the bumptious Indians always stuck their noses into first place in April. It gives you a feeling of confidence in a screw world.

LUKE SEWELL, manager of the Browns, insists the injury despite their early success, have all the old earmarks of mean inglorious.

But that easily could be due to Sewell's long and close association with the Tribe as catcher, coach, prospective manager and nearby Akron resident.

Cleveland was five games in front and winging when Joe DiMaggio started his streak for the Yankees last June. They had a seven-game margin and Bob Feller in August, 1940.

NO baseball club ever took their supporters so high and let them drop so suddenly and so far so often.

If the Indians had a seven-game lead, Sept. 1, no one outside of Cuyahoga county would believe they'd take the top prize.

They have, however, come up with a left-handed hitting outfielder who can smack the sphere in the person of Chris Hockett. The Nashville outfit must have been able to bust the ball last season, for accompanying Hockett from the Volunteers to the Indians was Les Fleming, a squatly left-handed throwing and hitting first baseman who compiled the magnificent average of .414. Hockett checked at a .259 pace, and both look as though they'll hit up here.

Fleming is no George Harold Sisler, but, as Sewell stresses, somehow he manages to catch the ball.

A young fellow named Mel Harder isn't hurting the injury either.

BUT I'll confess that I'll be worried if the Indians aren't slapped down again.

Their carrying through without a fold-up would be so different that it would almost be ominous.

He was dead wrong, as some were criticized for suspecting.

Giants' poor relations in more recent years, were so dazzled by a turnout of 49,034 at the Polo Grounds they dropped a doubleheader to the warty Braves. In their first seven game dates, the first drive (46,832, or better than 20,000 an afternoon.

There is plenty of fresh money around, which does not mean sports as usual, but sports as unusual.

Also there must be something in what they chirped about the people wanting an outlet.

LUKE SEWELL says those taking into consideration only a ball player's wages and hours are unfair. As long as there is a market for baseball, someone has to play it, he points out, and the noble athletes are taking their turns in the draft.

SERIAL STORY

FRANTIC WEEKEND

BY EDMUND FANCOTT

COPYRIGHT, 1942, NEA SERVICE, INC.

THE STORY: Peggy Mark, it is the luckiest girl in Canada as her East weekend party, invited with her sister Myra and brother Michael to the country place of Peggy's father, who is dropped into a world of tangled affairs and immediately takes over. Her project is to win the lovely Fay Hanson for Michael in spite of Nigel Monkhouse, who also loves her, and Holly Helen, her manager, who is trying to take her back to her former successful Broadway career. Peggy also is trying to persuade Baldy that she, too, belongs on Broadway.

PEGGY TAKES OVER

MYRA yawned, stretched her arms toward the sun, feigning casualness. Baldy, preoccupied though he might be with the problem of getting Fay back on his bread and butter list, was a shrewd customer, Myra decided. If her younger sister had made an impression on him, she must counteract it without betraying more than a detached interest in Peggy.

"Plenty of pretty girls around," said Myra. "Why worry about losing one, even if her reputation is built up in show business? The woods are full of talent. Look at Peggy, for instance."

Baldy, his cigar chewed to pulp, spluttered as he jerked it from his mouth to speak. "Listen, sister. I seen so many pretty faces in my time I give me a positive pleasure to look at yours." He flicked the cigar into the lake and continued.

"In show business, pretty faces are a dime a dozen, you get so you'd rather have a stein of beer any day. When I was a kid I liked molasses, couldn't get enough of it until one day my mother leaves a gallon crock around and I eat until I'm sick. After that I don't touch it and if I see the name in print I feel my stomach turn. That's the way with pretty faces when you've seen 'em coming and going like we in show business—just a bunch of bugs around a street light. The face that gives a movie fan a thump in the tucker gives me a pain in the stomach."

"And that's why I like you—honest to goodness, plain downright honesty."

Myra looked at him with a doubtful expression. "Easy on the compliments, brother."

"Then's not compliments, them's facts. If I'd kept out of show business maybe I'd have married a nice homely girl like you, maybe I'd have had a nice cozy job and a home and a couple of kids."

His voice drifted off with the suspicion of a break in it, but he recovered himself.

"But no! I go into show business. I marry a pretty girl and what does she do? As soon as she gets the contract to love, honor and obey, she walks out on me, and that's the way with all of 'em."

"All of them?" said Myra. "How many have you married?"

"Don't get me wrong, sister. After the third try I quit. But I got a talent for managing talent and that's what I mean. They're all the same, get a contract and they change their minds. I should have bought a ball team—they got no minds to change. But no, I pick on girls and they get to be pretty girls and there ain't a doll in this world who wouldn't give a 60 per cent cut to be managed by me. I make 'em, see. I build 'em up. I put 'em on the top of the heap and keep 'em there and believe me, sister, do you know what nightmare wakes me up in the night sweating. I'm so scared!"

Myra shook her head sympathetically.

"You wouldn't," said Baldy. "It's glamour girls, glamour girls, hundreds of 'em, smiling at me in my sleep with hanks of white teeth, perfect teeth, and blue eyes, black eyes, sweet as sugar, and I jump up screaming in the middle of the night."

"Well," said Myra. "That certainly is a point of view."

"It certainly is," said Baldy. "And believe me the time is coming, sure as blouses follow brunettes, and vice-versa, when a girl with a pan like yours will get up on a floor and knock 'em cold."

"You leave my face alone," said Myra. "Look at the landscape instead."

BALDY glanced around at the serenity of the tree-bounded lake in the sunlight morning. "I wouldn't give you two cents for this in a picture postcard," said Baldy. "Give me a smoke fog over Pittsburgh in a nasty rain in winter. That's beauty, that is."

Myra glanced over Baldy's beautifully tailored play suit, painstakingly immaculate, the collar pressed carefully open at the throat and even the short sleeves knitted with a sharp crease.

"You don't look as though you dress to your beliefs."

Baldy gave a grunt of disgust. "That's show business. You got to put on a front—glamish it on. Wear a pair of pants twice and the boys think you're on the way out and after a touch, and you can't get near 'em."

With a snap of his fingers Baldy jumped to his feet. "Sorry, sister. I got to be going. You're a nice kid, you are. Wish there was more like you. Where's that kid sister of yours, with Fay? I got to get that girl. There's a girl for you. Character, she's got. Character and what it takes; best looking in the business and what a voice! Knock 'em flat. I got Benny Blatter from Hollywood all fixed up to spot her on her first reappearance with Johnny White and then you'll see me play 'em for a contract. Play 'em like a fish, I will," he planned excitedly, "one against the other till their pockets sweat the dough. She'll really go places, then. I'll swing her up where she can't quit even if she wants to. That's what you gotta do. Dream up a contract that'll fix 'em so long they'll never be able to wriggle out of it."

Myra let her fingers trail in the water by the wooden wharf. She could see through the clear greenish water under the shadow of the wharf down to the clean sand of the bottom.

"Just like pinning down a butterfly," she said slowly.

"That's it," said Baldy. "That's just it. Give 'em a chance and they'll quit, and you've chased 'em all for nothing."

MYRA began to understand why Fay had run away. She looked up the lake for her sister and saw an empty canoe floating idly with the current.

It was the blue canoe that Peggy and Nigel had taken. It drifted slowly from an island that lay at the far end of the lake, and had it been occupied by anyone except her sister and the capable Nigel she might have been worried. As it was her eyes narrowed slightly as she wondered what prankish trick Peggy was up to now.

Peggy, as Myra suspected, had worked out her plot as carefully as any teen-aged strategist. As Nigel guided the canoe up the lake, flicking his stern paddle against Peggy's bow strokes to scan the wooded shore for any sign of Fay Hanson, she studied him with a calculating air. Not handsome, she observed again to herself, but with possibilities as a charming companion. He was also—point for any designing female to remember—fairly well-to-do. But for other and more devious reasons he fitted into her plans and Peggy, not one to underestimate her own attractiveness, intended to make him useful. If they were to lose the canoe.

Hero Of Tornado Of 1929 Still Is Conducting School

PALESTINE, Tex. — (UP) — Thomas Gatlin, the hero of the Slocum tornado of 1929, still heads the public school system there.

Thirteen years ago this spring, a vicious tornado struck the little farming center and reduced every house and business building to shambles. Seven persons were killed. Dozens were injured.

But this is only part of the story.

If it hadn't been for Gatlin's alertness and presence of mind, hundreds of school students would almost certainly have lost their lives.

When the wind became strong, Gatlin ordered his pupils to crawl under the desks where they would be safe from flying timbers.

Only one pupil suffered a scratch. She was a little girl who failed to obey instructions and she was bruised slightly.

Gatlin now is teaching his third generation in Slocum. Many children of those pupils he ordered to ren of those pupils he ordered to duck under their desks now are attending classes under Gatlin.

Gatlin, like Sam Houston, was born in Tennessee. He came to Slocum in 1907 and started his teaching career in a two-teacher country school which he has built into a large independent school.

quit. "I believe in modernizing education without going to extremes," he said. "The first essential is to train the student how to make a living. That is why we have cut out a lot of non-essentials."

Slocum was the first school in Anderson county to add vocational agriculture to the curriculum, and the farm practices of the Slocum students have done much to further better agriculture in this part of East Texas.

"In Slocum we have found no good substitute for hard work," Gatlin philosophizes. "We want our youngsters to do a little digging for their education."

It was this hard work and Gatlin's healthy influence in aiding the heart-broken citizens to rebuild their town when everyone said it never would come back.

But it did come back. In less than a year after the tornado every house had been rebuilt, schools and churches had been reconstructed and the progress of the community has been substantial.

Figures just released by the Children's Bureau of the U. S. Department of Labor show that while the infant mortality rate for the country as a whole was only 47 per thousand in 1940, the rate for New Mexico was 92.6 per thousand, for Arizona, 64 per thousand, and for Texas, 65 per thousand.

Social Security Does Not Provide Sick Insurance

ABIENE, Texas.—As a result of numerous inquiries being received by his office concerning the payment of "sick" insurance to individuals who are ill and unable to work, Mr. W. O. King, manager of the Abilene field office of the Social Security Board issued a statement today to the effect that there are no provisions in the Social Security Act for such payments.

"Claims for benefits under the Federal old-age and survivors insurance program are not accepted by the Social Security Board until the wage earner attains the age of 65, or unless the wage earner dies before reaching that age," King stated.

It was pointed out by Mr. King that one of the qualifications for benefits under the unemployment compensation law is that the applicant for such benefits must be able to work and available for employment if a job is offered him.

"According to recommendations for social security amendments recently submitted by the Social Security Board, provisions would be made for health insurance," King explained. "Under the present law an individual who is ill is not covered by either the Federal old-age and survivors insurance law or the State unemployment compensation law."

"It behooves every citizen," Garrett stated, "to find the place where he can most effectively serve in the present emergency and although I shall deeply regret to sever the splendid and pleasant connections which I have with the Hon. THE fishing season on the West coast won't open until May, but British Columbia fishermen are out hunting now—for bigger catches than salmon or halibut. They're after submarines and mines.

All up and down Canada's fjorded Pacific shores, fishermen—members of the Fishermen's Reserve of the Royal Canadian Navy—are voluntarily patrolling the seas, protecting their own home waters. Controlling Price Control Is Big Job But One Which Is Vital to the Nation BY PETER EDSON NEA Service Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON-The big question on the new general maximum price schedule announced by Price Administrator Leon Henderson is, "Will it work?"

There will be heartbreaks, confusion and fights in and out of court, getting the price control machinery set up. This is unquestionably the most drastic order ever slapped on the American people and their free economy.

ENOUGH columns of type, enough words have been spilled to leave everyone a little confused as to what this over-all price ceiling plan will do, and how it will do it.

Reducing the order to its lowest common denominator, the ultimate consumer, Administrator Henderson does not foresee any vast army of government officials or even housewives called upon to police the ceilings imposed.

Beverages Under A Price Ceiling DALLAS, Texas-Beverages merely cooled and opened and sold on the premises of any establishment come under the maximum price provisions of the Price Control Act, Washington advised the legal division of the Region OPA here today.

It is our position that cooling and opening or drawing off do not constitute preparation of beverages; consequently, bottled soft drinks, bottled beer and draught beer are subject to the regulation although sold by hotels, restaurants, etc., for consumption on the premises," Mr. Cobb said.

Nine Chief Types Of Auto Accidents Have Been Listed

Austin, Tex., (U.P.)—Nine chief types of automobile accidents that caused 1,979 deaths and additional thousands of injuries in Texas were analyzed by the department of Public Safety.

Of fatal accidents, 26.25 involved pedestrians; 18.94 were on collisions; 11.35 per cent were overturning on straight roads; 14.13 per cent overturning on curves; 6.35 per cent collisions with fixed objects such as bridges; 4.35 per cent rear-end collisions with other cars; 7.19 per cent collisions at angles such as intersections; 3.86 per cent collisions with trains and 0.4 per cent side-swipe collisions.

All other causes were responsible for 6.78 per cent of the fatal accidents.

Other highlights of the traffic accident report:

Wrecks at night are increasing, and the half-hour between sunset and darkness continue to be the most dangerous driving period.

Excluding military travel, Texas motorists drove more than 2,000,000,000 (B) miles further in 1941 than they did in 1940, with 10 deaths per 100,000,000 miles.

Loving county, near New Mexico border, and Real county, north of Uvalde, have gone five years without a single reported traffic death.

Week-ends and holidays continued to be the most dangerous days, and December led the year with 226 traffic deaths.

Persons between 20 and 44 years of age have more accidents proportionately than younger or older drivers.

Military personnel was involved in accidents that caused 194 deaths and 1,226 injuries, of which 114 and 597 injured were soldiers and the remainder civilians.

The typical accident involving military personnel occurred between 12 midnight and 1 a. m., at a distance of 60 miles from an army camp, indicating that the accidents were not caused while the soldiers were on duty.

Public Safety Department employees investigated 5,226 accidents. They made 25,544 arrests.

War Increases A Shakeup In State Authority

AUSTIN, Tex., (U.P.)—War time has increased the shifting of government authority from Austin to Washington.

The absorption by the federal government of powers formerly exercised by the state has been in process for many years, particularly when development of a social security program during the 1930's caused more and more people to look to Washington.

Under war emergency powers, federal agencies have taken over the once partly state-operated employment service. The Defense Transportation Board has issued orders which Col. Ernest O. Thompson, chairman of the Texas Railroad Commission, says will have "far reaching effects on operation of trucks in this state."

The rationing system for tires, automobiles and sugar has been handled through state administrators, carrying out instructions from Washington, but informed persons here would not be surprised to see the whole rationing program, as well as price control, managed directly from Washington before long.

At least three state agencies—the public welfare department, unemployment compensation commission, and health department—are subject to varying degrees of direct federal control. Personnel policies for all three are formulated in Washington. For the welfare department, the general policies of distributing money are made in Washington.

It's a very touchy subject with some persons in state government as well as the great oil industry, but talk of federal oil control is being revived now. The latest discussion arose after Railroad Commissioners Jerry Sadler and Olin Culbertson told Harold L. Ickes, federal petroleum coordinator, that they didn't agree with his 960,000-barrel-a-day figure for Texas oil production this month.

The matter may be settled before long, but nobody knows when—if ever—the vocates of state are going to rest easily again. There is a feeling hereabout that if the federal coordinator took control under temporary war-time authority, it might be a very difficult operation to return the administration to states after the war.

For federal control of the industry was a subject of warm controversy before the war began.

Neighbors Do Not Know Each Other

BEEVILLE, Texas, (U.P.)—A couple of Pettus youths today

knew the meaning of the old phrase that the army makes a new man out of you.

Garrett Moore of Pettus was drilling at Puget Sound Navy Yard, Bremerton, Wash. The man next in line asked his name and "where he was from?" "I'm Malcolm Newman," he said.

It turned out that they were next door neighbors in the small town of Pettus but in army uniforms and "G.I." haircuts they had not recognized each other.

TEAM WEIGHTS TONIGHT WILL BE THE SAME

After being weighed in for the annual Bulldog-Exes game tonight, it was found that the Exes had but a one-pound average weight advantage of the Bulldogs, with the Exes averaging 195 pounds and the Bulldogs 164.

With the additional experience the Exes have, however, it is expected that this will partly add to their slight weight advantage, while the Bulldogs will likely be a little better conditioned.

The lineup for the two teams will be as follows: Exes—Jackson, 180 and Arterburn, 150, ends; Williams, 160 and Garbin, 170, tackles; guards, G. Horn, 155 and Lingle, 160; center, Woods, 190; backs, White, 145, Gray, 170, Warden, 175 and Floyd, 160. Substitutes will be Townzen, 155, Ownby, 180, Martin, 145, and Brown, 155.

Governor Rows As Secretary Fishes

By United Press

AUSTIN.—Ernest Boyett, who is Governor Stevenson's secretary and long time friend from Junction, was chortling the other day over their fishing expedition to the Llano river which is in "the front yard" of Stevenson's Kimble county ranch.

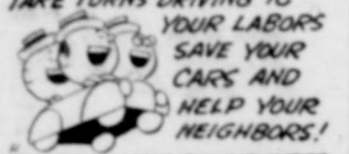

"You should have seen me fishing, while the governor rowed the boat," said Boyett. "I just sat there in front whipping the water with my bait and thinking how nice it was to have the governor do the work."

"It's a ten-passenger boat, and to tell the truth I felt real sorry for the governor sitting back there pulling the oars by himself when we were going upstream."

Incidentally, the pair caught four bass and two crappie.
