MAMMOTH SALVAGE DRIVE IS PLANNED

Do You Know Your Military Insignia? Here's How To Spot A Naval Officer

"Well, if he's a Naval officer, why is he wearing khaki?" About one-half of the general population are still asking that question, although the Navy has been wearing khaki since before Pearl Harbor.

And the explanation is simple—khaki is simply the "work" uniform of the Navy. Because of its durability, it was the most logical material for such uniforms.

But John R. Public is still a little confused by many khaki uniforms. The Army has been in khaki for so many years, it is perhaps justifiable for many persons to assume at first glance that a khaki uniform denotes an Army man or Marine.

Another question frequently raised by Mr. and Mrs. Public is how to distinguish the various branches of the service. This has been the subject of much intense publicity on the part of both the Army and the Navy, for in wartime, one of the first duties of a good patriot is to know the service branches and to be able to distinguish them at a glance.

The easiest rule of recognition is the necktie. If the man in khaki uniform wears a black necktie he's in the navy. It's simple as all that because the Army men all wear khaki neckties.

"Other methods of distinguishing service men are by the rank insignia. The Naval officer always wears his own star, while the Army wears them on the shoulders. The caps too are different. Navy officers always wear anchors on the cap—but nary an anchor you find on the Army officer.

Another problem worrying the average civilian is how to distinguish the various ranks of Army and Navy officers. Well, here's the simplest explanation.

In the first place, the ranks of Army and Marine officers are the same. They are denoted by bars, leaves and stars. The ranks of Naval officers are indicated by stripes, half-stripes, and broad stripes. The star on a Naval officer's uniform indicates he is of the line (a deck officer.) A gold officer indicates the rank of second lieutenant which corresponds to the rank of Ensign in the Navy as designated by one stripe on the officer's sleeve. A silver bar on an Army officer indicates the rank of first lieutenant. A half-inch and a quarter-inch stripe on a Naval officer designates the corresponding rank of lieutenant (junior grade). Two bars for the Army/Naval Captain, but in the Navy two stripes indicate lieutenant (senior grade) which is the corresponding rank. Next in seniority is the Army's Major who wears a gold leaf, the Navy's corresponding rank of lieutenant-commodore wears two full stripes. A Colonel wears a silver spread eagle and corresponds in rank and pay to the Navy's captain who wears four full stripes. A brigadier general wears one star. This rank formerly corresponded to the commodore in the Navy, a rank which has been discontinued. The Army's major general, lieutenant general and full general wear two three and four stripes, respectively. To match them, the Navy has its admirals, known as "Flag Officers," they are: Rear Admiral, Vice Admiral and Admiral and they all wear a two-inch stripe plus one, two and three stripes respectively.

Senate Race Is Taking Shape In 24th District

The twenty-fourth senatorial district composed of Callahan, Eastland, Fisher, Haskell, Jones, Mitchell, Nolan, Scurry, Shackelford, Stephens Taylor and Throckmorton counties is without a senator since John Lee Smith of Throckmorton, recently nominated Lieutenant Governor on the Democratic ticket, resigned last Saturday.

Governor Stevenson has called a special election to fill the vacancy for November 3, coincident with the general election.

The only avowed candidate for the place is Pat Bullock of Snyder, renominated in the July primary without opposition for his second term as Representative from the 108th district. Prospective candidates are: Judge Jesse R. Smith, and Frank S. Roberts, of Breckenridge, Wilbourne B. Collier of Eastland, Judge Sterling Williams of Snyder and W. A. Stephenson of Abilene.

The election in November will be for the remainder of Senator Smith's term, which expires Jan. 1, 1945. Being a special election the high man will be winner whether he receives a majority of all the votes cast or not.

ALL STORES TO CLOSE HALF DAY IN ORDER TO COLLECT THE SCRAP

Only A Few Of Children Receive Aid From State

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP)—Only 16.3 per cent of the dependent children who are receiving aid from the state institutions are orphans in the strict sense of the word. Seventy-four per cent of the 42,263 children for whom aid is being granted have lost one parent. Of these, 71.8 per cent are living with the mother. Aid is not limited to children who have lost parents. More than 10 per cent of those for whom state aid is granted have both parents living.

Physical or mental incapacity of one or both parents has resulted in a state of dependency that requires outside aid if the child is to receive proper attention.

The state allotment for care of children will take care of not more than 12,000 families at the maximum payments that are permitted. In September, the state sent checks to 20,504 families to care for 42,263 children.

To what extent families are leaning on the state provision for care of children, probably never can be determined. Against this possibility the proposition of whether children should suffer because parents seek to shift responsibility to the state.

Typhus Control Is Important In State Right Now

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP)—Strengthening a campaign for the control of typhus in Texas, Dr. Geo. W. Cox, State Health Officer, announced today that the State Department of Health in collaboration with the League of Texas Municipalities has prepared a pattern ordinance for the disposal of garbage which it is hoped will be widely adopted by cities and communities throughout the state. "Rats, like any other animal, seek those fields which offer the most food and best shelter," Dr. Cox said. "Any typhus control program must necessarily hinge on making food inaccessible to rats. It has been found that the rat population in Texas is much greater in those towns where no regular garbage collection is maintained."

Dr. Cox said that this pattern ordinance conforming with war restrictions eliminates the use of wooden garbage pails for the cast iron type formerly used. In order to eliminate the use of war materials for building incinerators the ordinance provides for the use of the land-fill method.

Some of the cities now considering the adoption of this ordinance are Brownwood, Mineral Wells, Kilren, Velasco, Ft. Stockton, and other defense areas. Dr. Cox stated that full information concerning this ordinance can be had through the State Health Department and suggested that all cities and communities which might be benefitted by such protection consult the State Department for full particulars.

Federal allotment of funds for garbage disposal have been made in some instances, in defense areas where local funds were inadequate.

Slave Labor Plan Of Vichy Rapped By Sec. of State

WASHINGTON, D. C. (AP)—Secretary of State Cordell Hull said today that the Vichy government's plan to send 1,000 French laborers into Germany would constitute, if carried out, "such aid to one of our enemies as to be wholly inconsistent with France's obligations under international law."

Col. G. A. Murphy to Supervise Drive, Assisted by Captains Appointed for Each Section. Schools Will Close So Everyone May Aid in Big Salvage Drive

A mammoth salvage drive, to be staged in Ranger on Thursday afternoon, Sept. 24, was planned today at a meeting held in the office of the Chamber of Commerce. Those present voted unanimously to have all business houses close at 12 noon on that date, in order that as much of the needed salvage material as possible may be collected.

It was also decided to enlist the aid of school children, and it was agreed that the public schools would be closed at noon, in order that they might help their elders in finding, collecting and donating the scrap metal to the pile now being accumulated.

Fire Chief G. A. Murphy, chairman of the local salvage drive, pointed out the need for concerted effort, even though much scrap has been sold through junk dealers and has gone into the national defense effort.

After a short discussion it was decided that the movement was so vital, and so important that every place in town should close for the entire afternoon, beginning at noon, and remain closed for the remainder of the day, with instructions being given to all employees to gather up as much scrap as possible.

Fire Chief Murphy was appointed "Colonel" of the drive and it is appointing captains in each section of the city. These captains are to be aided by members of the Texas Defense Guard and others who will be appointed, in supervising the school children and adult workers in gathering up scrap materials. It is hoped that by this method a house-to-house canvass can be made and every dwelling, every garage, every vacant lot thoroughly checked to get every possible piece of scrap, including iron, steel, lead, zinc, copper, brass, rubber or any other of the many needed materials.

"Every house in Ranger has from 10 to 100 pounds of scrap," Murphy pointed out, even though many people say they do not have a pound. At one place I asked permission to gather up all available scrap and was told to help myself, though there was none to be had. Before we finished we had collected 1,800 pounds.

Much enthusiasm was shown in the meeting, and all agreed with Murphy that Ranger had never yet fallen down on a drive of any kind, and would not do so on this one. The vote was unanimous, all present quickly raising their hands to vote for the motion to close a half day for the salvage drive.

Those present at the meeting were Lee Dockery, L. E. Gray, A. J. Ratliff, C. E. May, Rev. E. N. Seartlett, Rev. David M. Phillips, Arlie Carver, Morris Levitt, Mrs. Carrol Clark, G. A. Murphy, E. F. Mills, O. H. Woods, Joe Dennis, C. L. Beard, S. Freeman, W. H. Clarke, J. J. Kelly, Floyd Killingsworth, S. O. Montgomery, Dr. G. C. Boswell, Lester Crossley, Joe N. Graham, C. H. Pruet, Walter Davis, Hall Walker, J. E. Meroney and R. V. Galloway.

STALINGRAD STILL HOLDS AFTER RAIDS

The battle of Stalingrad raged toward a decision today. A Nazi report said that German forces had driven into the city and had captured the main railroad station in some of the war's fiercest fighting.

Russian reports said that the Soviet air and cavalry reinforcements had arrived on the scene at the moment when a general Soviet withdrawal under continued Axis pressure seemed imminent.

Russian planes, the Moscow report said, were unable to challenge the Nazi air superiority, but had afforded sufficient cover to enable the Red troops to hold their lines, except at one point in the southwestern approaches to the city.

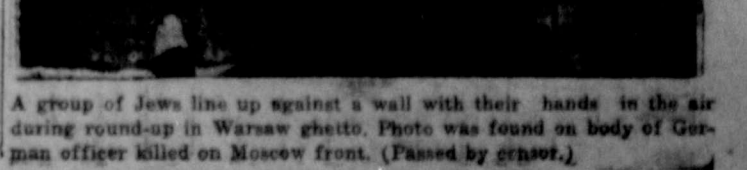

London again reported a growing belief in Allied quarters that the unprecedented Soviet resistance at Stalingrad had twisted the timetable Hitler had planned.

On the Egyptian front Allied planes ranged over the Axis, smashing Marshal Erwin Rommel's transport, communication and supply lines in what was described as an effort to impede the Nazi effort to reorganize and replace losses of the futile Alamein attack.

American bombers participated generally in the action, which included a foray against Trobruk in light naval and land forces.

In the Pacific little action was reported. Rear Admiral W. H. Blandy, American naval ordnance chief, reported that American forces now hold the balance of power in the Western Pacific.

This Might Be a Fable

This could be the fable of the ensign's father who demanded a B card. In that event, it could be told as follows:

Once upon a time, on the eastern seaboard of the United States of America, there lived a man in early middle life whose beloved son was graduated from a famous college in the midst of a terrible war. This man's son enlisted in the Naval Reserve, and immediately upon graduation he was commissioned an ensign. And went away to fight for his country.

Now this father, and his wife, were very proud of their son, and of their son's desire to help save his country from destruction and although they were too old to fight, themselves, they too wanted to help, so when their country decreed that those should live on the eastern seaboard must confine themselves to four gallons of gasoline a week, to save transportation for our war purposes and to save rubber for the use of fighting men, this father and mother consented willingly, never dreaming of trying to chisel a few more gallons of gas by making a fuss about not being able to get to their summer camp.

But soon this father, as he waited for the omnibus to take him to his work, noticed that almost every automobile that passed had a B card or a C card, permitting the owner to have extra gasoline. His subordinates, including some who lived on his street, had such cards. Then he discovered that men who worked in defense plants were being given extra allowances, once a month, so they could take pleasure trips to nearby cities to which there was frequent, ample connections by fast, luxurious trains at low cost. He discovered that these workmen were claiming such extra gasoline as a matter of right, and were getting away with their demands, so that his father and a few others, who also were intelligent enough to know that their country was losing the war, were co-operating to save gasoline and rubber.

So this father himself went to his rationing board, and asked for an A card, and was given one, so that he could burn up more gasoline and wear out his tires faster, like everybody else.

This could be a fable, but it is not. It is the true story of one out of hundreds of thousands who have refused to remain goats for a system in which local rationing boards are failing to co-operate to win this war.

In rationing, Washington has tried to preserve democracy by working through local boards. Some such groups do their parts. And are intensely critical of every demand for special favors. Others are "good fellows," and nobody loves them more than Hitler and Hirohito. Why not? They are playing the axis' game.

Considering skirts and hosiery, we're having a very short summer.

GORMAN TO BE FIRST ON BULLDOG SCHEDULE HERE ON THURSDAY SEPT. 17

Both Ranger and Gorman Have Heavier Teams and More Experience Than They Boasted Last Year, With Close Game Expected To Result in Season Opener

The heaviest Ranger Bulldog team to take the field since 1931, and what Coach Herman Scruggs believes will be the strongest since that far-away year when the Bulldogs overran all opposition, will take the field Thursday night against Gorman in the first football game of the season for both clubs.

Gorman boasts no less than eight lettermen, most of them with three years of experience, and will present strong opposition as a test for the Bulldogs in their starting game of the season.

The Bulldogs, however, are not without a considerable number of lettermen, and have been working out regularly in preparation for the season opening.

In a scrimmage against the Eastland Mavericks, who have not as yet secured a coach, but who have been working out strenuously, the two teams appeared to be about even on offense, and the offense of both failed time after time to crack the stout defense of their opposition's line play.

In passing, the Mavericks appeared to have the edge in accuracy, for the afternoon, but on pass defense the Bulldog looked much better than did their rivals.

The team is rapidly whipping

BY HARRY GRAYSON

MEMO to Comdr. Gene Tunney of the all work-no play department: Sports and service teams in wartime have received the positive approval of tough as nails Adm. Ernest J. King, commander in chief of the U. S. fleet.

Speaking to a baseball crowd during his homecoming in Lorain, O., Admiral King declared: "Baseball has a rightful place in America at war."

"All work and no play seven days a week would soon take its toll on national morale. You people here today have a right to such events as this baseball game. They will help you better fight the Lattle on the home front during the hard struggle ahead."

Turning to Lieut. Mickey Cochran, director of the Great Lakes Training Station team, Admiral King said: "I mean every word of it. Baseball has a rightful place, and your Great Lakes team is doing a terrific job."

With baseball waning, the boys

BY PETER EDSON

(NAME PAPEE) Washington Correspondent

If you would like a simple explanation of Washington in A. R. C. form, to read to your children as a bedtime story, it would run something like this:

A is for Administrator. An Administrator is a big man in the government. He makes plans and carries out programs. He runs things.

B is for Bureau. An administrator runs a Bureau. It also stands for Bureau of the Budget, which makes the first guess as to how much money every other Bureau should have for its operation. Therefore the Bureau of the Budget bosses the administrators.

C used to stand for Constitution, Congress and Cabinet, which used to be tops. But now C stands for Co-ordinator. A co-ordinator is supposed to coordinate several administrators' programs and plans which might otherwise conflict. A co-ordinator therefore has supervision over several bureaus and their administrators.

D might stand for Dollar-a-year-man, but more properly, D stands for Director. A director issues directives. A director can issue directives to the co-ordinators.

E stands for the Chief Executive. The chief executive issues executive orders which give the directors authority to issue directives to the co-ordinators, telling them to co-ordinate the work of the bureaus through their administrators.

F stands for Fiscal Year, the clumsy, confusing period between one July 1 and the next June 30 in which the chief executive tells the directors to co-ordinate the bureau administrators.

G stands for Government. Heavy, administrators, bureaus, cabinet officers, co-ordinators, directors and even the chief executive all try to get the Budget Bureau to give them more and more government gravy.

H STANDS for Higher-ups. No matter how high you go in the government, or how much gravy you get, there are always higher-ups to tell you what to do.

I stands for Inefficiency, which is ruthlessly hunted down by inspectors. Administrators designate some subordinate as an inspector to see that the gravy is going where the higher-ups hoped it would.

J stands for Justice, which nobody in government ever seems to get, if you ask them.

K stands for Kicked-upstairs. An inspector who finds any inefficiency will recommend to the higher-ups that because of mismanagement of government gravy in the last fiscal year, an executive order should be issued, relieving administrator A from his duties as head of bureau B and appointing him to a job as co-ordinator of departments X, Y and Z. Such an administrator is said to be kicked-upstairs.

L stands for Liaison. As you have seen, things are getting pretty complicated.

M STANDS for Military. Of late, all the fussing, from ad-

ter the race, which will be open to everyone, and in which anyone can win. The "cowboys" will ride across the arena, take off their boots and put them all in one pile, ride back to the starting point, turn and return to the boot pile.

The first to find his own boots, put them on and run back to the starting point will be the winner, and will be awarded a cash prize.

Tickets good for the performance Friday night have been printed and are now being distributed among the ticket sellers, who expect to sell at least $350 in admissions by opening night. The tickets will be good only for Friday night.

Additional entries in the boot race are: Jack Chapman, J. E. Mersney, Sig Faircloth, L. W. Meador, Virge Johnson, John Quincy Adams, C. B. Pruet and L. R. Pearson.

Pruet and Pearson have made a special race out of their part in the open competition, with Pruet offering to take half of any bets made that he will be back over the starting line before Pearson.

Other entries are expected to be received in the boot race, which it is hoped, will likely draw at least 50 entries.

Mayor Raymond E. Clays shot a skunk that was prowling in his back yard at night, without knowing at the time that it was a skunk. He knew, to his dismay, afterwards.

Signal Corps Has Need Of Technical Men For Service

DALLAS, Tex.—A swift-growing Signal Corps whose motto is "Get the Message Through" is facing a constantly increasing need for expert technicians—men who work with tools—to man the Army's far-flung communications systems, Colonel C. K. Rhinehart, District Recruiting and Induction Officer said today.

"That's the Signal Corps' message to me," he said, "and it's my duty to get that message through to the men who have skilled hands."

The need for technicians in the Signal Corps is immediate, he asserted. The Army is combing the country to find them for this service, and for the Ordnance Department and Army Air Forces as well.

"In the case where a man is already a trained radio operator or repairman, or a telegraph or telephone worker, we can enlist him directly for the Signal Corps and he will go right to work, fighting with the tools he works with," Colonel Rhinehart pointed out.

"A man who has not had experience in the specific jobs the Signal Corps' communications require, but who has worked with tools and has skilled hands, will be enlisted for the Signal Corps and learn to do the job for which he is needed. Then he will be called to active duty and will put his knowledge and skills to work."

Colonel Rhinehart said that men who are between 18 and 44 years of age, inclusive, may enlist in the Signal Corps and the Signal Corps Enlisted Reserve if

Wartime Lighting Lesson No. 1:

WARTIME economy demands that we make the best use of what we have. GOOD LIGHT, so essential to good work, can be BETTER light, just by keeping light bulbs and glass diffusing bowls clean.

There's no rationing on soap and water, so improve your lighting in a few minutes this easy way. Disconnect your lamp and unscrew the bulb and wipe it with a damp cloth. Remove the glass diffusing bowl and give it a good bath in soap and water. Be sure the bulb and bowl are dry before putting them back in the lamp. You'll be agreeably surprised how much more light you get.

White Shade Linings give more light. You can "roll your own" by marking the shade outline on good white paper. Trim to fit inside of the shade and fasten with Scotch tape.

Keep Spare Fuses on hand to save time and trouble if a fuse blows. First, disconnect any lamps or appliances that may have caused the fuse to burn out, and then replace the blown fuse.

SERIAL STORY
LUCKY PENNY
 BY GLORIA KAYE

THE STORY: The war has worked a change in Kirktown. The Kirk, wealthy, spoiled and idle, has had workers European and returned to the town's estate at Kirktown. The mill town where her grandfather built his fortune. As she goes to the memorial auditorium to be questioned by her grandfather who overheard a man making disparaging remarks about her family and herself. She recognizes the speaker as Jim Kirk, a former Pacific newspaperman.

PENNY LANDS A JOB
 CHAPTER II

PENNY sang "good morning" to a bright and cloudless day. From her window she could see white plumes of smoke floating lazily up from the valley-hugging mills. She had realized last night that Kirktown would be no paradise. She had known that a community nestled so close to the smoke of the steel mills and the soot of the railroad yards must absorb some blackness. But Penny was not prepared for the nightmare of ramshackle, broken-down buildings that made up Kirktown. They looked for all the world as though they were held together with clotheslines and built on foundations of toothpicks. The river was not a stream at all, but a rusty, smelly, steaming sewer. It cut the town in half. On one side the Kirk mills rose in black majesty. They were huge, powerful, impressive... and dirty. Central avenue lined the other side. Its dirty-faced buildings fronted the river. Two foot bridges crossed street and river, providing access to the fenced-in mills. To the right, as far as her eye could see, stretched buildings and furnaces and railroad yards—

"A glass of milk, please," said Penny. "Sure, honey," replied the waitress. "And don't worry. You'll get the job."

day of fruitless search for employment. Should she take the job? She had realized, was a golden opportunity to pierce below the surface of Kirktown to find out for herself what had caused such deterioration. She adjusted her hair and brushed a fleck of soot from her nose. She wanted to make a good impression on "the boss."

In a moment he bustled out of his kitchen, a round, excited little man. He appraised her swiftly, nodded. "All right," he said, "you start tomorrow."

So Penny Kirk, who used to sleep until noon, started her first day's work at Pietro's Restaurant at 6 o'clock the next morning. "Good morning, honey," her friend of yesterday greeted. "My name's Midge Carter. What's yours?" "Penny Kellough," the heiress to the Kirk millions responded, glancing swiftly at the row of breakfast foods on the back counter. "Thanks for the boost, Midge."

BACK on Central avenue again, she paused to rest in front of a restaurant whose interior was the most inviting she had seen since starting her tour of the town. The girl behind the counter was neatly uniformed. Steel workers in long-sleeved black shirts despite the heat of the day, sat at the long counter. Penny realized she had been waiting for hours. She was thirsty. She walked in and sat down. The girl behind the counter smiled a cheerful greeting as she placed a glass of water in front of Penny. "A glass of milk, please," said Penny. "Sure, honey," replied the waitress. "And don't worry. You'll get the job. I'll put in a word for you with the boss. Chin up, kid. You're in."

Then she looked at herself in the mirror. Her dress no longer wore the crisp look that had endeared it to her. It was wrinkled now. Her face showed unmistakable signs of the smudges she had accumulated during her long walk. This, Penny thought as she studied the troubled, weary expression on her face, must be the way jobless girls look after a hard routine of the restaurant. From Midge she learned to take her work in the spirit of a lark, as though she were picknicking instead of laboring. At the expense of a few nervous dimes, she soon learned to carry the amazing number of things waitresses can manage with skillful hands and wrists. Men sauntered into Pietro's in groups of three or four. Most of them were young. She liked their cheery greetings and their natural courtesy toward her. Later on, storekeepers drifted in to discuss business conditions and the day's headlines over their cups of coffee. When the noon rush had ended, Penny felt she had earned the rest and the luncheon Pietro offered. From the kitchen came tantalizing odors and Pietro's excited voice. "Sit down, Miss Penny," Pietro said. "I have something special for you." He pushed through the swinging door, a steaming dish of spaghetti held aloft for Penny's inspection. "You have to eat every bit of it," Pietro insisted. "I made the meat sauce especially for you." He hovered over the table, arranging the basket of white bread and the dish of cheese. "Eat. It's good for you."

Penny hadn't realized she was so hungry. She hadn't believed anything could be so appetizing. Intent on her dinner, she didn't notice the newcomers who swaggered in. Had she been watching Midge, usually so friendly, she would have been surprised at the cold stare that was her only greeting or them. There were five men in the group. Definitely not steel workers, Penny decided. They didn't bother to remove aprons, white felt hats as they seated themselves. They wore expensive silk sport shirts, vividly colored; trousers that were too carefully creased, shoes shined to mirror perfection. Suspensives of tooled leather completed their garish splendor. Midge took their "black" coffee orders in silence. She served them and walked to the other side of the counter, where she busied herself arranging napkins and filling sugar bowls. Then, in a flash, like a cloud burst descending suddenly from a clear sky, black fury hit Pietro's restaurant. That was the only way Penny could describe the scent that caught her startled eyes when she turned at the sound of crashing dishes. (To Be Continued)
