TRUCKS FOR SCRAP DRIVE ARE SECURED

Fire Chief G. A. Murphy, who has been appointed "Colonel" of Ranger Scrap Metal Drive, announced Thursday of this week, that plenty of scrap metal has been secured to haul the scrap metal that is collected for donation to the scrap pile.

"A number of people have called the fire station and stated that they have scrap metal to donate," Murphy stated today, "and we have kept a list of the names and addresses of all of these. Most of the scrap will be left until Thursday, when trucks will pick it up and put it on the scrap heap. No one need fear that just because we have not called yet that we have forgotten, as the list is being kept, and names are being added to it every day."

Listed among those who have in most instances drivers, are: L. W. Meador of the Southern Ice Company, trucks and drivers; H. V. Davenport, county commissioner, one county truck, with driver; Lee Dockery, manager of the Community Public Service Company, pickup and driver; A. J. Ratliff, truck and driver; Killingsworth's, truck and driver and V. V. Cooper, Jr., city commissioner, five city trucks, with drivers.

"We will have plenty of trucks—and we will haul any scrap that is donated," Murphy said today. "In case anyone has a larger quantity of scrap they want to sell to a junk dealer, the junk dealer should be notified and he will call for it."

Rural communities near Ranger have also been urged to cooperate in the scrap drive, gathering up as much scrap metal as possible, and notifying the fire department if they have no means of hauling it to town. A truck will be designated to pick it up and haul it to the scrap heap.

Registration For Surgical Dressing Classes To Open

Mrs. W. L. Jackson, head of the surgical dressings work for the local Red Cross chapter, announced this morning that registration of the surgical dressings classes will be held Wednesday and Thursday from 9 to 11 a. m. and from 2 to 6 p. m., each afternoon in the lobby of the Gibson Hotel.

Those attending the classes will be taught the regulation way of making the dressings and then will be engaged to make dressings for the armed forces. The Red Cross will be in charge of distribution of the dressings made during the classes. Dressings made during the classes will be kept here for use in case of emergency. Classes will be limited to membership of 20 and it is hoped that enough women will be enrolled so that several classes can be organized.

The course will be completed in 15 hours, with classes being held three times one week and two times the next week with each being three hours long.

Mrs. Jackson stated that the material for the classes has already arrived and that an invoice has been received for the material for the first quota to be turned out for the Red Cross.

Mrs. J. J. Kelly has been named assistant to Mrs. Jackson and with Mrs. W. C. Palmer and two others, to be selected, will be given advance training in making the dressings and will then serve as instructors for the classes.

It was pointed out that the dressings which will be made after the course is completed are to be sent to our armed forces everywhere and mothers with sons in the service, no doubt, will be eager to aid in this work which might directly benefit their own sons.

LARGE CONVOY HAD GOOD SEA AND AIR ESCORT

By WALTER CRONKITE
United Press Atlantic Fleet Correspondent

NEW YORK, (UP)—A successful convoy is a boring convoy. It is a convoy so thoroughly planned, so perfectly co-ordinated and so strongly protected that the enemy dare not molest it from under the surface or from the sky.

I have just completed a round trip to the British Isles with such a convoy. It was the largest convoy of American troops to cross the Atlantic and it made the trip without interference through an ocean meshed with Nazi destruction.

It was protected by a fleet of destroyers which virtually screened it from enemy action and by two of the most powerful larger ships in the American Navy. Out from the east coast it had aerial protection furnished by first American and then Canadian air forces, supplemented by Navy blimps.

Out from the British Isles it had the aid of individual scouting units of the RAF, and a British cruiser joined the convoy to escort it into the mined waters of the Isles themselves. In mid-ocean its own scouting planes kept watch, full eyes.

Nothing less than a suicide raid by the enemy could have touched the convoy and the ships in it were so speedy that at the first signal of danger they could have broken for safety and easily outrun and undersurface craft. And the Nazi was not believed able to throw enough surface raiders at the convoy to match the guns of its protecting fleet.

This does not mean that the Nazis are not interested. There was evidence that they knew of the existence of the convoy, that their submarines hovered a safe distance away ready to pick off any stragglers from the protected area, that their planes had the ships under surveillance after the convoy reached European waters.

Two days out of its destination, the convoy's lookouts began "seeing things" darting in and out of the clouds. The "things" never were positively identified because they kept for the most part behind the cloud banks, but they kept popping up at intervals and they more than likely were lone German reconnaissance planes. They could watch this big shipment of troops to the British Isles but they apparently weren't powerful enough to interfere with it.

They gave the convoy officers moments of concern, however. It was after a day of such reports, at the late dusk of the cold North Atlantic when dropping its protective shield around the blacked-out ships, that one of the senior officers said to me:

"Sand by for your story tonight. They've been watching us all day."

But the story didn't develop—no that story anyway. We were un molested.

As quiet was this convoy, there was plentiful evidence on that turbulent green-blue water of the Atlantic that all convoys aren't so lucky, or so well-planned, or so well-protected. Three times we passed through areas of debris—overturned lifeboats, charred bits of timber, sacks of potatoes and onions that had for some reason, bales of cotton half waterlogged and thus half submerged.

Floating debris carries with it a grim humor of its own to taunt in ghostlike fashion luckier ships still afloat. A spar, its lower half waterlogged so that its top sticks vertically from the sea, looks a lot like a periscope. It can give you a bad a bad moment, just like a floating oil drum that in that half-light, half-dark of a foggy dusk looks so much like a mine.

A small black globe, its top hemisphere showing above the choppy waves, looms suddenly on our bow and we veer sharply away, messaging back to the other ships to keep clear likewise.

Then a message flashes back from one of the leading destroyers: "Don't be alarmed," it says, "a small black object. Dropped our medicine ball overboard."

The lookouts and their officers laugh when a "periscope" turns out to be a medicine ball but they laugh with their eyes straight ahead ever searching for the periscope that is not a spar and the mine that it not a medicine ball.

Chinese Regain Strategic Airfields

Chinese troops attacking Japs at Kinwa (top map) are practically in possession of all these "bomb toops" air bases wrested from them last spring after the U. S. raid on the Jap capital. In other attacks, the Chinese are driving close to Nanchang, Jap base in Kiangsi province, and are fighting north of Canton (bottom map), whose capture might prove the key to liberation of allied prisoners in Hong Kong.

RED TROOPS THROW NAZIS BACK MILE AND QUARTER IN STALINGRAD FIGHTING

PARITY PRICE WILL INCLUDE LABOR COSTS

WASHINGTON, D. C. (UP)—The Senate Agriculture Committee today voted 14 to 1 to back a proposed farm block amendment to the administration's anti-inflation legislation to require that all labor costs be included in computing farm parity prices.

The only opposition vote was cast by Sen. Scott W. Lucas of Illinois, who said that corn and wheat farmers could not benefit under the amendment during the war.

He described the committee's action as another step to the corn belt farmers, passed out by the so-called farm bloc.

Soviets Down 700 Of Nazi's Planes

LONDON, Eng. (UP)—The Moscow radio reported today that 700 German planes have been shot down on the Russian Front in the past two weeks.

VICHY, France. (GP)—A communique today reported that Vichy forces have engaged British troops in a violent battle at Mahidy, 20 miles northwest of Tananarive, capital of Madagascar.

For First Time In Days Moscow Report Has Guarded Optimism in Reports As Red Guard Units Make Impressive Gain In Street-to-Street Fighting in City

Moscow reported today that the defenders of Stalingrad have driven the Nazis back a mile and a quarter at one point and elsewhere have made small gains against the crushing Nazi pressure.

The Russian reports for the first time in many days carried a tone of guarded optimism with regard to the momentary turn in the critical battle for one of Russia's most important industrial centers.

Red Guard units, the Soviet elite fighting force, scored the biggest gain against the Germans, Moscow reported. They drove the Germans a mile and a quarter through the Stalingrad streets, exposing the flank of a Nazi infantry unit.

German reports attested to the fury of the battle and made 60 claims of more than slight gains in the fighting that was going on from house to house, and in some instances, from room to room of the large city buildings.

Russian armored trains were backing up the front line fighters and were laying down a crushing barrage against the Nazi strong-points.

In Moscow, Wendell Willkie spent the day sightseeing, preparatory to a conference with premier Josef Stalin.

Allied diplomats in London believed that Stalin might ask Willkie to convey a request to the United States to break off relations with Finland.

Defense Guards May Be Guerrillas Or Commandos

AUSTIN, Tex. (GP)—Texas Defense Guard units will operate both as guerrillas and commandos in case enemy invasion of Texas. An outline of both types of fighting was given the 256 Defense Guard officers in training at Camp Bullis this week under instruction from Major George D. Spencer.

"Guerrilla" fighting, Spencer told the men, takes its name from the Spanish diminutive of "guerra" and means little war. It is the method of fighting employed by persons living in an area occupied or surrounded by enemy forces.

"Commando forces," Major Spencer explained, "are roving hit-and-run fighters, and their primary mission is to carry out raids."

The term "commando," he said, is a Dutch word derived from the Portuguese, and became familiar in the Boer War.

Gen. Sam Houston was cited by Major Spencer as an outstanding example of guerrilla warfare.

He predicted that the Texas Defense Guard Units "do even a better job of guerrilla warfare than the earlier Texans under Sam Houston. Houston's force, Spencer pointed out, was an improvised one that sprang up spontaneously after the invader had been operating for some time, yet was very effective."

"We have an advantage over these guerrillas of history," Spencer told the Texas Defense Guard. "We are not yet invaded. We can be prepared. When and if the enemy attacks us—whether his troops land from planes, submarines or otherwise, we will know how to act."

Narcotics Trial Of Texan Gets Started

BY United Press
NEW YORK, N. Y. —The narcotics conspiracy trial of Sam Maceo, Galveston politician and night club operator, which has been pending since 1938, began today before Federal Judge Francis G. Caffery.

Three New Yorkers went to trial with Maceo, charged with conspiracy to import, transport, conceal and sell narcotics.

Physician Shortage May Be Overcome

WASHINGTON, D. C. (UP)—Chairman Paul V. McNutt of the War Relocation Commission, said today that plans are being made to meet the need for medical care in communities where shortages of physicians have developed.

The more scraps we turn in over here the more we'll help the boys in the scraps over there.

More entries have been received in the Cowboy Boot Race, to be staged in connection with the Stanger Rodeo, to be staged Sept. 25 and 26, beginning at 9:15 each night.

Those who have added their names to the list of entries are Frank Marion, Lou Wallace, Shorty Wallace, Phelton Herrington, Zelma Herrington, Rural Stoker, Muri Hilton, Glenn Hamner, Roy McClesky, H. O. Woods, Sr., Henry Woods and E. L. Danley.

Dont's For College Freshmen Given By Campus Veterans

AUSTIN, Tex. (GP)—College students should not drink, swear or wear high school insignia, according to a handbook prepared for new University of Texas students by the campus veterans.

The bulletin warns newcomers against "shine boy" and "shin girl" (show-off tactics) and calls for considerate treatment of fellow students.

"Don'ts" include the following: Don't comb your hair; put on make-up or straighten your stockings in classrooms. Don't drink intoxicating liquor—most co-eds resent men who drink. Drinking is repulsive at a formal. You can have fun without it.

JACK SIKES FUNERAL TO BE WEDNESDAY

Funeral services for second Lieut. Jack Sikes, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Sikes of Eastland, who was killed near Chattanooga, Tenn. Sunday afternoon when his army plane ran into a storm, will be conducted from the Eastland First Methodist Church Wednesday afternoon at 5:00 o'clock. Rev. J. Daniel Barron, pastor will officiate. Interment will be in the Eastland cemetery with Hamner Undertaking Company in charge.

The body will arrive in Eastland about 2:00 a. m. Wednesday and will be taken to the family residence where it will remain until time for the funeral.

The deceased was born in Eastland December 20, 1921. He attended Eastland High school, graduating with the class of '38. He also attended Texas University where he pledged D. K. E. fraternity, and Texas Christian University leaving the institution before entering his senior year, to enlist in the United States Army Air Corps Oct. 7, 1941. He received his wings in April last year and was commissioned a second lieutenant. He was an instructor stationed at Blytheville, Arkansas.

Survivors in addition to his parents are the following brothers and sisters: Private Bobbie Sikes, Camp Wallace, Texas; Miss Elizabeth Ann Sikes and Bill Sikes.

H. J. Tanner, secretary of the Eastland Retail Merchants association, announced that Eastland business houses would close at 4:45 Wednesday afternoon for the funeral.

Junior College Student Youngest Sergeant In Army

DER SCHOOL, Amarillo, Texas.—First Sergeant Delwyn Eaton, Jr., of the 738th School Squadron was a high jumper in high school, and he jumped in less than a year from private to possibly the army's youngest top kick at the age of 19.

Sergeant Eaton, just 20 last September 5, enlisted in the Army Air Force on March 4, 1941, leaving Ranger Junior College at Ranger, where he was captain of the basketball team. He had been a basketball, football and track man at high in Pecos, Texas.

Last February 1st Eaton was jumped to sergeant from private first class, skipping a corporal's grade. He was made a staff sergeant in March, and became first sergeant of the 738th on June 23.

"Maybe I'm a little lucky," he said, "I've done clerical work from my first day in the army, and never had to drill, do guard duty or K. P." His luck held good when he met a girl while stationed in Lubbock. He married her four months ago.

Price Ceiling Was Known In 1775

BURLINGTON, N. J. (UP)—Price ceilings, considered an innovation of the present war, were in effect before the Revolutionary War.

Henry B. Weaver, retired pharmacist, was searching through some old family papers when he came across a card bearing notes taken by an ancestor at a provincial convention held in Philadelphia on Jan. 25, 1775.

The notes, apparently the report of legislation introduced at the convention, read:

"That if the manufacturer or vendor of goods or merchandise in this province shall take advantage of the necessities of his country, by selling his goods or merchandise at an unusual and extravagant profit such person shall be considered an enemy to his country and shall be advertised as such by the committee of the place where such offender dwells."

There Was No Fire, Just A Fire Loss.

TYLER, Tex. (UP)—There was no fire, but the fire loss was checked up as $2094 when lightning struck a downtown building here, collapsing the roof and damaging property inside.

Fire Prevention Week Proclaimed By The Governor

AUSTIN.—Gov. Coke Stevenson has formally proclaimed October 4 to 10 "Fire Prevention Week" in Texas.

Citing the urgent necessity for preventing fires during time of war, Gov. Stevenson said, "the production of materials essential to the prosecution of the war by our nation is taxing the capacity of industrial plants, and curtailment of production because of fire becomes a menace to our own safety."

The Governor called upon Texas citizens and various local organizations to emphasize the danger of fire and to encourage fire prevention.

Commenting on Fire Prevention Week, Marvin Hall, State Fire Insurance Commissioner, suggested that every Texan accept individual responsibility in adopting fire prevention measures at home and at work.

"According to the official proclamation," Hall said, "Fire Prevention Week has special significance this year. The defense of factories, farms and homes against destruction by accidental fire is essential to the war production program and conservation of vital resources.

"There is another reason why we must devote more attention to preventing fires. We are now receiving dividends of lower insurance rates—the result of preventing fires. In order to keep low fire insurance rates now in effect, it will be necessary for us to prevent fires in the future."

Height Stops Him From Joining But He's Still Trying

BOSTON (UP)—If John Laxton ever gets into the armed services his "cheering section" will breathe a sigh of relief.

Laxton, who towers six feet, 11 and one half inches, has been rejected by the Army, Navy, Coast Guard, Marines, Air Force.

To keep his many friends informed of his efforts to join, he posts day-by-day bulletins at his place of employment. At the top of the board he has printed, "I really tried."

Laxton was once known as the world's tallest bartender.

Two Dogs Guard A State Radio Station

AUSTIN, Tex. (GP)—Chico and Peko are the names of police dogs who guard the State Police radio broadcast station at Austin.

The dogs were presented to the State Department of Safety by Col. E. H. Tarbutton, a retired officer of the U. S. Army, who lives at Kyle, Texas.

Both dogs are well trained. They know the operators at the station but just because a man wears a uniform doesn't get him past the dogs.

CRISIS IN INDIA

The monsoon season is ending in India. Japanese armies, poised on the border, are ready to spring into action. They count upon the anti-British disturbances, which are worse than censorship has told us, to expedite their conquest of that rich land.

To the Japanese, anxious to bring all of the East under their rule, India would be a prize hardly second to China. Many of us do not realize that, in addition to the natural resources of which we know, India has become the tighth industrial country of the world.

To the United Nations, already under terrific handicaps in our attempt to preserve democracy, the loss of India would be another awful blow.

Unless some settlement of the British-Indian controversy is worked out soon—if, indeed, it is not already too late—saving India will be well nigh impossible.

On principle, Americans sympathize with the Indians and feel that they are entitled to their freedom. If India fails, because that freedom has not been granted, there will be an eruption of violent criticism of the British.

Before that happens, if it must, let us have in mind certain facts, which, while they do not excuse British pre-war errors, are very pertinent now.

Most important is this: Whatever was true before the war, Great Britain can not turn India loose now.

India is not a nation, as we think of nations, nor are Indians a race. There is unanimity on a single matter.

There are 562 Indian states, the largest with 16 million citizens. There are 24 languages, each spoken by as many as a million Indians.

Two Indians out of three are Hindus. One out of four is a Moslem. The two hate each other with an all-consuming hatred. While the Hindus greatly outnumber the Moslems, the latter are better fighters, and could prolong civil war for years.

The Hindus insist upon freedom of India as an entity. Thus they would rule the Moslems by force of numbers. The Moslems insist upon a separate state, and will fight for it.

There is no way in which Britain now can turn India loose without provoking a war between these two major factions.

Presumably Washington has been exploring every possibility to find some compromise, which would induce the Indians to defer settlement of this problem until after Japan has been beaten.

If such efforts fail, let's not be too hard on the British.

A Chicago lecturer contends the average woman wears better than the average man. But not so much.

IN THE NICK OF TIME

THE PAYOFF

BY HARRY GRAYSON NEA Service Sports Editor

NEW YORK—As has been pointed out, the results of copy written about the 50th anniversary of the Sullivan-Corbett fight further solidifies its position as the nation's most historic sports event.

Accounts of the actual battle were accurate, of course. All the boys had to do was turn to yellowed newspaper clippings.

But some of the descriptions of the great John Lawrence Sullivan tied old-timers who knew him well.

Mike Jacobs was reading an interview given by William A. Brady, the theatrical man who managed James J. Corbett, when William Joseph Roche poked his head through the door.

"It says here," said Promoter Jacobs, "that Sullivan was a wild, right-hand punching Tony Galento, no better."

That was a bit more than Billy Roche could stand.

Roche, crowding in, saw Sullivan in several starts. He went in to manage Mysterious Billy Smith, Elbows McFadden and other famous warriors, became the top referee of his time. His father, John S., trained Paddy Ryan, Jimmy Elliott and Dominick McCaffrey for their engagements with Sullivan and seconded them.

"Sullivan," explained Roche to the John S. name-Lakeys, "was a terrific brawler who had only to hit an opponent once with his right hand."

"Originally a hollermaker, Sullivan was taught by a Negro—his name slips my mind for the moment—who was the first boxing instructor at Yale."

name slips my mind for the moment—who was the first boxing instructor at Yale.

"SULLIVAN was the first boxer to prove the worth of a straight right-hand punch to the chin, and don't let anybody tell you he didn't punch as straight as a string."

"Until Sullivan came along, prize fighters concentrated on a point back of the ear, the temple or aimed to close the other bloke's eyes."

"Sullivan blocked well and feinted rivals into position."

"Jim Corbett brought dancing—fancy footwork—into boxing. Sullivan slid over the surface of the ring as did George Dixon, Joe Gans and Jack Johnson."

"When he tackled the 25-year-old Corbett, Sullivan was a fat old man of 34 who had not had a fight in more than three years and who in that time had allowed himself as a saloonkeeper, and otherwise."

"Yet he went into the 21st round with Jim Corbett, whom Billy Conn wouldn't hit in a week."

"SULLIVAN stood no more than 5 feet 10 1/2 and at his peak weighed no more than 154 pounds."

"Only a Billy Brady would compare him with Galento. Brady never saw a fight until Corbett met Sullivan, knew nothing at all about Sullivan until he was finished, and less about boxing of any time."

"The Boston Strong Boy a Two-Ton Tony Galento!"

"That's funnier than the heavyweight champions we had between Tunney and Louis."

Arsenal Employees Given An Insight Into War Effort

FORT SAM HOUSTON, Tex. (UP)—Employees of the San Antonio Arsenal got an insight on the war effort in the Northwest when they napped a load of lumber from Idaho.

They lay a large sign proclaiming: "We are over the top by 100 per cent. This lumber was produced and loaded by a crew in which every man has agreed to a monthly payroll deduction for the purchase of defense bonds. We hope this lumber will be unloaded and used by crews whose record is as good as ours. Potlatch Forests, Inc. Mills at Coeur d'Alene, Potlatch, Lewiston, Idaho."

So impressed with the "direct advertising" was the San Antonio Arsenal war bond officer, C. K. Scaman, that he had the sign reproduced in poster size, asking the question of arsenal employees: "How about each of us signing a pay reservation so that we can say 'Yes.' Join the 10 per cent Club."

SERIAL STORY

LUCKY PENNY

BY GLORIA KAYE

COPYRIGHT 1942, NEA SERVICE, INC.

THE STORY: Wealthy Penny Kirk has returned from Paris to Kirktown to learn something about the great steel mills she owns and the people who work in them. Under the name of Penny Kellogg she takes a job on the newspaper run by Jim Vickers, whom she had met in Paris but who doesn't recognize her. One day a bridge at the mill's gate was killed two men. Penny had been appointed to fix the bridge, but had been stolen by a crooked city government dominated by the Gastros, a gang of gamblers.

PENNY KIRK AGAIN

CHAPTER VII

SUNLIGHT had a way of softening Penny's resolutions. She had determined to be angry, and to raise the roof when she visited the Kirk offices. Now, with the sun's rays streaming across her bed, she couldn't find a frown in herself.

"What's the smart approach?" she asked herself, sitting up to greet the day. "I know. They'll naturally think I'm dumb. I'll just play dumb."

She picked a well-tailored suit from her wardrobe. To it, she added her furs. Standing before the mirror, she practiced a few suitable facial expressions. She laughed at herself.

Somehow, she felt overdressed. What a vast world of difference separated Penelope Kirk and Penny Kellogg, she reflected.

The elevator lifted her swiftly to the 14th floor. A pleasant receptionist smiled a cheery "Good morning. May I help you?"

From her repertoire, Penny selected a bored look. She managed to tilt her nose a couple of notches.

"Tell Mr. Stimson that Penelope Kirk is here to see him. And please hurry," she said.

A surprised receptionist jumped to her feet. "Yes, Miss Kirk. Won't you please be seated?" She flew to Mr. Stimson's office with the startling news.

PENNY examined the elaborate and expensively decorated reception room. Its rich carpeting and mahogany-leathered easy chairs were luxurious.

Mr. Stimson, perfectly groomed as befitted the supervisor of an industry so vast as the Kirk steel enterprises, hurried down the corridor to greet Penny.

"My, my, Miss Kirk," he panted, out of breath as a result of his unusual exertion. "This is a most pleasant surprise. I had no idea you were anywhere near here. I thought you were in New York."

"New York," Penny said, "is such a bore."

"Yes. Yes. It is, isn't it?" he said. "Won't you come into my office?" Deferentially, he led the way.

"You might give me a cigarette, old dear," Stimson was obviously flattered by her intimate salutation. He felt more at ease. He smiled as he offered her his cigarette case.

"Well, now that I am here, I suppose I should make the best of it." Then, reflectively, she said, "There is something you can do for me, if you will."

"Just ask, Miss Kirk," he said, eagerly. "I'll be glad to do anything I can."

"My grandfather certainly had some unusual ideas about building a house. I want to make some changes. Could you recommend the best architect in town?"

"Why, yes, Miss Kirk," said Stimson. "I'd recommend Johnathan and Jones. They're the architects who designed my home. Shall I call them?"

"No, thanks. I'll drop in and see them. Just something to do, you know." She rose from the chair that enveloped her. "Thank you so much. I really must be going. By the way, Mr. Stimson, please don't mention my visit to the newspapers or to anyone else. I'm here for a rest. I'll call you again."

HE bowed low, regretted her refusal to have dinner with him, and promised to care for her every whim. She knew he would breathe a sigh of relief the moment the elevator door separated them.

Penny had learned what she wanted to know about the executives of the Kirk mills. Even this short visit revealed how little they knew or cared about Kirktown.

She found the offices of Johnathan and Jones, architects. The reception room was small and practical. The girl at the switchboard doubled as a typist. Her greeting was business-like, brief.

Penny liked Charlie Jones the minute she saw him. He was in his shirt-sleeves, studying two sets of drawings offered to him by two young men.

"Sit down. I'll be with you in a minute," he told Penny, without interrupting his study. He suggested a change, asked a question, and sent his assistants back to their desks.

"Now," he said, smiling pleasantly. "What can I do for you?"

"I'd like to order a model village," Penny said.

Charlie Jones was struck dumb. "What . . . what was that you said?"

Penny laughed. "I just said I'd like to order a model village." Then she continued, eagerly. She introduced herself, assured him he wasn't dreaming, and outlined briefly her plan. From her purse she extracted a clipping.

"Here's a story," she said, "about the model defense village of 300 homes built by an airplane plant to house its workers. The village was built so swiftly that it was finished before people in the vicinity knew what was happening. I want 500 houses, built the same way, on the plateau above the present site of Kirktown."

WHEN he had sufficiently re-covered his senses, he caught and enlarged upon Penny's enthusiasm. This, Charlie Jones assured her, had oys been his greatest ambition in life. To plan, to build, to work out the details of just such a project, was the Jones idea of heaven.

They talked about comfortable, low-cost houses. They talked about pleasant, shady streets. They located stores in a convenient shopping center. They found room for a swimming pool and playgrounds. They were playing an exciting game.

"Only one thing I must insist upon," said Penny. "I want absolute secrecy. Nobody is to know just what we're doing until it's all done. I want a good job. I want it fast. I want no publicity."

Charlie Jones assured her he'd respect her wishes. His eyes were dancing for joy as he shook her hand. She hadn't been out of his office a minute before all his young assistants poured from their cubbyholes to crowd into his tiny work-room. She knew she had come to the right place and to the right man.

A taxi took her to the bus stop. The slow-moving Kirktown "express" dropped her in front of the Courier office just as the whistle blew for the 4 o'clock turn. She skipped happily down the steps.

"Hello Jim," she greeted cheerfully, salting her straw hat accurately toward a nail on the wall. "How's tricks?"

"Hiya, Penny," Jim smiled. "Jim watched her admiringly as Penny swung easily into the routine of her work. He wanted to tell her how much he had missed her, even for a few hours—how much he needed her. Instead—

"By the way, Penny, I almost forgot," he said. "You start on your story assignment at the Kirk mills tomorrow. Everything's arranged, provided you promise to be good."

"I'll be good," she answered. "Good and scared. Heaven help the poor working girl alone in a steel mill with 3000 men."

BY ROBERT RUARK, NEA Service Washington Correspondent

THIS is a town where you have to cut your way through three layers of preliminary red tape before you can get to the basic red ribbon, but the Office of Defense Transportation seems to be carrying things a mile too far, even for the nation's capital. Maybe complete bureaucracy is necessary to win the war, but sometimes you wonder.

Listen: Down in Dallas, Tex., four wholesale florists wanted to conserve their trucking facilities, so they hatched themselves a plan. They cut the delivery area into four districts, with each of the four dealers assigned to a single district on a given day.

Each dealer, then, makes all deliveries for himself and the other three florists in his specific area. The plan further provides for rotation of districts, thus equalizing mileage.

Other joint-action plans have been adopted by other dealers all over the nation. They hew pretty much to the Dallas gentlemen's line, and all seem to be well-planned efforts toward conservation. Which is, of course, all very fine.

But if these people just sat down and decided to put their schemes into effect without first getting a "Go ahead" from ODT, they are apt to find themselves all jammed up with the Department of Justice.

It seems that if you want to get together with your neighbor and pool your delivery resources, you've either got to submit full plans to ODT and await clearance, or else you can go ahead with your scheme and then file your plans. If ODT and Justice don't like them, in this latter alternative, maybe Thurman, Arnold drops down and trust-busts you.

ALL this applies to local delivery joint actions. ODT has another category, called "over-the-road carriers," which covers things like bus and trucking lines. Says the ODT bible: "Joint action agreements can be put into effect by over-the-road carriers only in accordance with specific ODT orders. No such orders have yet been issued."

Help! Let us go into this thing calmly. The natural question is: "Why is all this fuss and flutter necessary, if all I want to do is pool my delivery resources with Bill Smith? How does the Department of Justice fit into the picture? We aren't gamblers. We're just a couple of florists trying to save rubber and gas."

Says ODT: "Since most over-the-road carriers are operating in accord with state and interstate commerce regulations, you might bust some of the anti-trust laws if you start making private agreements with your competitors. You might wind up as a monopoly, against the best public interests. Continues ODT: If you are an over-the-road carrier, a special order must be given by us authorizing your plan. We have not yet given any such orders, because we've just scratched the surface of his problem.

QUESTION: "But we are not an over-the-road carrier. We are just a couple of florists named Joe. We are local dealers, and we wouldn't recognize a monopoly if it bit us on the leg. How come all this hocus-pocus as far as we are concerned?"

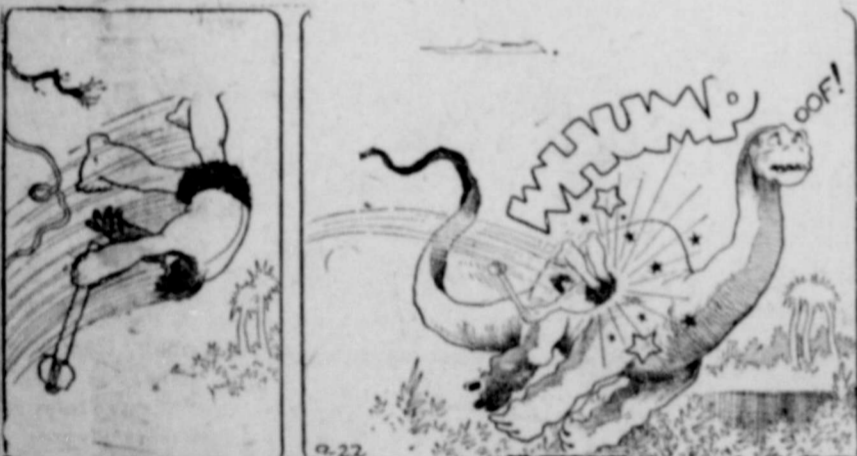

ANSWERS ODT: Well, how do we know you don't want to knock off a couple of unprofitable delivery routes under the name of conservation? Maybe there are a couple of blocks you'd rather not serve.

So this is how it sums up. If you submit your conservation plan and it is approved, you are clear forever more.

If you go ahead with your plan and then submit it to ODT, you are taking a chance ODT won't like it and will sic Justice upon you.

And if you just ignore ODT and Justice, and work out your own salvation, really dire things may befall you.

Ward's know, too, that the "short 34" girl isn't proportioned as the "tall 34." Her slip should have a higher waist and hips—and that's exactly what she'll get in a Ward 3-length—for they're proportioned in bust, waist, and hips as well as in length! Beautifully made—with rip-proof seams, double fabric yokes for long wear. In rayon crepe or satin.

CLEAN FIXTURES GIVE MORE LIGHT!

Here are three easy and economical ways to get more light from your present electric lighting fixtures without using vital war materials. They apply in the home, the store, office or factory.

- Keep Bulbs and Shades Clean. Lamp bulbs, glass diffusing bowls and lamp shades collect a film of dust that greatly decreases the amount of light you receive. Use a damp cloth to keep bulbs and glass shades clean, and dust cloth and parchment shades frequently. You'll get as much as 20 per cent more light!
- Use Light-Colored Shades. Lamp shades that are dark on the under side absorb light, while light-colored and white shade linings reflect light. Use shades on all lights, for they help direct more light on the book or newspaper you are reading.
- Place the Light Near the Place it is Needed. The intensity of illumination decreases rapidly as the distance between the light and the object increases. Keep your lamp as close as practical for maximum illumination.
