JACK LAMB'S FAMOUS ALASKA PICTURE TO BE SHOWN HERE TONIGHT

When Jack Lamb, nationally-known sportman, appears in High School Auditorium tonight with his sensational technicolor movies of Alaska big game hunting, trout fishing in the virgin wilds, and the stupendous mountain scenery of the North country, the people of this section are going to have a rare treat.

Lamb and his expedition went to Alaska in 1941 and trekked for four months through pathless country to make one of the most spectacular motion pictures ever filmed. They imported 15 horses from Canada and employed 10 veteran Alaskan guides, and left the world behind for many months, traveling across the trackless Alaskan wastelands to many remote places where no man had ever reached before.

Wild bears, caribou, moose and mountain sheep came into view before their astonished eyes, and Lamb fished in rivers literally glutted with trout and salmon. Sometimes he would catch 400 trout in half a day. These huge fish averaged 10 and 12 pounds each and sometimes he would have his tackle torn to pieces by one weighing 30 to 40 pounds.

The party walked for weeks up wild rivers in the jungles to make pictures of the millions of salmon that go up the Alaskan streams to spawn and die, and often the Kodiak bears would be so numerous that three guides walked along behind Lamb with coked guns as these giant brutes cruised dangerously near through the thick underbrush. Often these bears were so close that Lamb could hear them breathing.

This picture cost tens of thousands of dollars to make, not to mention the almost endurable cost of sweat and blood. Brutal cold, 10 degrees below zero; winds that chopped like a knife at 80 miles an hour; ice clogged rivers; brutal tundra that tried the very soul of these intrepid explorers, these are some of the things that made Jack Lamb swear that he would never go back to Alaska.

This picture has drawn thousands into the largest auditoriums in the South wherever it has been shown, and only two weeks ago more than 3,000 people jammed Buckaroo stadium in Breckenridge to see this remarkable and spell-binding picture of the North country.

It will be shown in Ranger High School tonight, Connellee Theaters, Eastland, Thursday, night October 8th; High School Auditorium, Cisco, Friday, October 9th and Ward School Auditorium in Rising Star Saturday night, October 10th. If you live in this area and miss this picture it will be your loss. The shows will be sponsored by the Lions Club of Eastland, Ranger and Cisco, and the entire program.

Drill Sergeants Not So Tough At Aviation School

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UP)—Loud-mouthed, red-faced and hard as his fists—that's a fair description of the classic old-fashioned Army drill sergeant.

But that's not the type of man who is drilling the aviation cadets, the glider pilots and others training at Randolph Field.

Instead, the drill sergeants are a combination of master psychologists and personnel experts. They possess a human understanding of the problems which face the average cadet or enlisted man when he plunges into unfamiliar routine of Army life.

"New men form their opinion of the Army by the treatment they get in the first few weeks," says Sgt. Eddie Kvaapl, one of those who put men from all walks of life and every part of the nation through their first military paces.

"Raising Cain with a rookie at the outset may cloud his entire Army career and make him carry a grudge throughout his service, rather than make him a good soldier."

Men are no longer lined up and put in a state of fear, while an eagle-eyed, tough sergeant tells them what they'll get if they don't obey orders.

"Instead they are told that drill and discipline are the backbone of a successful army," Sgt. Kvaapl says. "Without drill and discipline any army would be a mob. They know that everyone taking aviation training must first learn the rudiments of being a soldier. In other words, he must learn to walk before he can fly."

Rookies discover they are not publicly censured by Sgt. Kvaapl when they miss out on a command. Instead he takes the man out of line and explains the step to him. Then, after a little practice, the man goes back into the line with the others, does the right thing next time.

"I'd rather explain steps to a rookie every day than to have him flustered and nervous because of severe criticism," the sergeant believes.

But this consideration is not to indicate that any foolishness or laxity in the ranks is tolerated. Men found out quickly that just because the sergeant doesn't swear at them or sound off threats, doesn't mean they can take it easy.

Lack of knowledge is one thing that can be excused at first, but laying down on the job, or, as the sergeant puts it, gold bricking, never.

Rural Schools To Close For Fall Peanut Harvest

Many of the rural schools of the County have closed or will close within a few days for a few weeks in order that pupils may assist with gathering the peanut crop which has been estimated at $2,250,000 value.

County School Superintendent Williams stated Tuesday that he did not know at that time just how many of the schools would close, but that a majority of them would.

Bombardier School At San Angelo Is Named Officially

SAN ANGELO, Tex. — The Army Air Forces Bombardier School, that's the official name of Uncle Sam's newest bombardier college, Colonel George M. Palmer, commanding officer, has announced.

Previously the field, located in the heart of the climatologically rich West Texas sector, had been designated as the AAF Advanced Flying School for bombardiers. It also had been known officially as Concho, Carr and San Angelo No. 2.

The field occupies a site originally intended for a municipal airport to be known as Carr Field, in honor of Lt. Col. Robert G. Carr, executive officer of the new bombardier school.

Because of the nearby Concho River, the field was popularly referred to as Concho Field.

For mail and other purposes it temporarily named San Angelo No. 2 when the field's executive offices were located downtown.

But from now on the new bombardier college has a name to call its own—the Army Air Forces Bombardier School.

Application Filed For State Aid For County's School

Application for State aid for Eastland county schools for the current period has been completed and has been checked by Deputy State Superintendent Anthony Hunt of Abilene, according to a statement by County School Superintendent T. C. Williams.

The applications, the total of which was not announced by Superintendent but which he stated, would be less than last year, have been filed with the State Department of Education at Austin.

Advice On How To Treat Cold Is Given By Doctor

AUSTIN, Tex. —With the advent of fall, and colds becoming prevalent, Dr. Geo. W. Cox, State Health Officer, makes the following suggestions as to ways by which these seasonal illnesses may be warded off, or at least may be gotten under control before they do any serious damage.

Keep as fit as possible. Dress according to the weather, indoors, and outdoors. Put on a heavier suit when a cold snap comes. Use a raincoat, overshoes and umbrella on rainy days. Change as quickly as possible, into dry clothes if you are caught in a drenching downpour.

With a shortage of fuel facing all of us, our houses are likely to be chillier than usual during the early fall months. Look up four supply of sweaters and have them ready for use on these first chilly days. Get out some other heavy clothing and warm bed covering at the same time.

Eat plenty of simple nourishing food. Have your meals at regular hours. Drink plenty of water. Take some exercise out of doors, every day. Get the necessary amount of rest.

If you are caught in the clutches of a cold, unware, don't treat it lightly. It may turn into something very serious, if neglected. The quickest way to get over a cold, or, to bring it under control, is to go to bed, keep warm, eat slightly, drink plenty of water and fruit juices, and at the slightest sign of fever, send for your doctor and stay in bed until he feels that it is safe for you to get up and get out again.

And remember, colds are very contagious. Cold-producing germs are scattered far and wide whenever the victim of a cold coughs or sneezes. They are likely to be found on anything the victim touches. If you are the victim, keep your germs to yourself. Have your own towels and wash cloths, and be sure that they are adequately sterilized with hot—very hot—water and soap after you have used them. Keep well supplied with paper handkerchiefs; dispose of them promptly after they have been used.

John T. Line, A U. S. Veteran Is Buried Wednesday

Funeral services for John T. Line, a veteran of the Spanish American War, were held at the Morris-Stone Funeral Home Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock, with burial in the Old Ranger Cemetery. Services were conducted by Rev. R. F. Duncan.

The decedent enlisted in the United States Army in June 1898 and served with Troop F, First Texas Cavalry until November, when he received his discharge, at Fort Sam Houston.

He was born in Weatherford July 30, 1874 and had lived near Ranger for many years. He died in the Veterans hospital at Dallas Tuesday.

Survivors include his widow, Mrs. Nellie V. Line and several brothers.

An "Air Conditioned" Sock Invented For The U. S. Soldiers

CAMP BOWIE, Tex. —The War Department has recently announced that an "air-conditioned" sock with a cushioned heel, toe and sole, for desert and jungle wear, has been developed for the Army, according to Lieut. Colonel H. F. Williams, Post Quartermaster.

These new socks issued by the Quartermaster Corps are 50 per cent cotton and wool, spun in a loose porous stitch which gives the skin a chance to "breathe," a factor which prevents excess sweating, and therefore cuts down on chills and colds. These socks will replace the wool socks formerly worn but which were far too heavy and caused the feet to sweat profusely, and did not produce the necessary "cushioning."

Factors considered in the development of these new socks were burning of the feet during the long marches on scorching desert sands, and to prevent blisters and scratches while fighting through jungle streams and mountains.

The new socks eliminate all these difficulties. They are lightweight and comfortable, afford special cushioned heel, toe, and sole as a result of the special stitch used, and provide the proper ventilation. Furthermore, the amount of wool—a non-conductor of heat, is just enough to take the "bite" out of the hot desert sands.

Lint Is Not Only Cotton Product An Expert Points Out

AUSTIN, Tex. —The nation's first big mistake in its thinking about cotton and the cotton surplus has been in considering cotton almost entirely in terms of bales of lint, Dr. A. B. Cox, University of Texas professor of cotton marketing, declared recently.

"The importance of cotton cannot be understood without taking into consideration all of its products—some of which are vital to the war effort," Dr. Cox asserted.

"Cotton products," Dr. Cox pointed out, "include lint, of which each soldier requires 250 pounds annually; cottonseed oil, vital since import of other vegetable oils have been cut off; cotton seed cake and meal, excellent source of livestock feed; cotton linters, of which the government takes all and could use more in the manufacture of munitions; and cottonseed hulls, used all the way from feed sources of important chemicals."

50 Students Are Drilling At U of T

Chief Specialist, A. V. Connett, of the University Navy ROTC, will direct the course, which will include military drill, calisthenics, military technique, and disciplines. Students enrolled for this work will receive University credit in physical training.

Scranton School District To Vote On Tax Rate Raise

Taxpayers in the Scranton Rural High School district will vote on October 31 to determine whether or not the tax rate for the district will be raised from 75 cents on the $100 valuation to $1.00 on the $100 valuation.

The election was ordered Monday by County Judge W. S. Adairson who acted on a petition presented to him by property taxpayers of the district.

Some years ago the Scranton, Nimrod and Dan Horn school districts were consolidated and the election that has been called is to equalize the tax rate for the consolidated district.

Judge Adairson appointed A. L. Gattis of Scranton to hold the election.

La Follette filed a minority report on what he calls the "worst tax bill in history."

Citizenship On Required List At Texas University

AUSTIN, Tex. —Two full years' work on "democratic citizenship education" are now required of all students of the University of Texas, since the Board of Regents at its last meeting ruled that a prerequisite for all degrees shall be one year's study of American history.

The new requirement was added to the already existing state requirement that all students in state-owned schools present six hours—a year's work—in American government for graduation.

Dr. M. R. Gutsch, chairman of the history department, estimated that the new plan would bring an additional 2,000 students each year into history classrooms.

The University history department is ranked high among American colleges, particularly because of the achievements of its faculty members. One University historian, Dr. Walter P. Welsh, has been appointed to the Hainsworth chair of American history at Oxford University for the current school year.

American Labor Party

Amateur politicians and the public are following Trush-Buster Dewey's New York state fight against Democratic Candidate Bennett, who has served as attorney general under Franklin D. Roosevelt and Herbert Lehman since 1930.

The Dewey-Bennett contest attracts national attention for three reasons. One, of course is the young ex-prosecutor's "color." Another is his presidential ambitions, and the potential effect of the gubernatorial election upon his 1944 availability for the G. O. P. nomination. The third is the fact that the President tried to keep Bennett from getting the nomination and still has not relented publicly.

But the professional politicians find in the New York race an angle by far more intriguing than these. Their prime interest is in the fortunes of the candidate who cannot win, the American Labor party's nominee for governor, a Democratic attorney of Greek extraction, Dean Alfange.

Although the American Labor party was formed in 1936 and has had candidates in every election since, this is the first opportunity for politicians to discover whether the unions can deliver the vote.

Hitherto, except for an occasional assembly district, the ALP has clung to the coattails of a major party—usually but not exclusively, the Democratic—and has elected its own members to office only when they also had the support of a major party.

Four years ago when Dewey lost to Lehman, the American Labor Party rose to its zenith. A grand total of 420,000 persons voted on the ALP line for Governor Lehman. It was the Labor party votes that enabled the Democrats to retain control.

All this is of import because the American Labor party is a laboratory experiment. The plan was to determine whether union labor was capable of functioning politically in its own right. If the ALP succeeded in New York, then it was to be made a national party.

In all this time the ALP never has tried its wings all by itself. It claims as a minimum the 420,000 votes that went to Governor Lehman under its emblem. Major party strategists aren't sure of this.

The entire question whether union labor can and should have its own national political party, run its own candidates and function similarly to the British Labor party may hinge upon how many votes the inconspicuous Dean Alfange gets in New York in November.

If he cuts as poor a figure as many expert observers anticipate, then organized labor is expected to continue politically as a pressure group, endeavoring to exercise a balance of power by which it can face the major parties to head its demands to some extent.

Governor Not To Name Colonels Or Special Rangers

precedent of many of his predecessors. The governor announced firmly this week that he will appoint no honorary colonels nor special Texas Rangers.

Already there is one exception, but it only helps prove the rule. A certain man was awnted to head a defense committee and it was desirable that the head of the committee have a military title, so the governor made him a lieutenant-colonel. Such a rank for members of the governor's staff is authorized.

"I am not a military man," said

Stevenson. "I do not know who is qualified to be a military officer. I think a man who receives a military title should have earned the right to it by military training or experience."

The same is true for the Texas Rangers.

"The Texas Rangers have built up a reputation by years of faithful and fearless service under hard conditions," Stevenson said. "To them and to the people of Texas the title of Texas Ranger means something. I know that military men with whom I have been acquainted do not relish civilians receiving military titles and I feel sure the Texas Rangers have the same pride in their right to be known as Rangers."

The governor's guarding of the Ranger title extends to "special Rangers." In past administrations many commissions were issued to special Rangers—mainly to give them authority to act as guardians of property or to do policing that required operations outside the area in which a local peace officer could be commissioned.

Rangers did not object to this practice, except they got tired of reading reports from over the state that so and so arrested for some offense was "a former Texas Ranger." When these reports were run down in the state records, it invariably turned out that the person had been a special Ranger. Denials that the person involved was a real Texas Ranger frequently failed to get the publicity equal the first pictorialization as one of the famous boys.

SERIAL STORY OF BRIGHTNESS GONE

BY HOLLY WATTERSON

THE STORY: When Candace Beck falls in love with her cousin Peter Frasier's medical school friend, Martin Curby, Peter realizes that he loves Candace—and is jealous. Peter, through an excuse to leave early for a summer hospital job, taking Martin with him the morning after he leaves Candace. Later Martin calls at the home of Bruce Frasier, Peter's father, and Belle, his second wife and Candace's aunt. There he and Candace tell each other of their love and plan for marriage when Martin has finished medical school.

DOMESTIC TEMPEST CHAPTER VI

BELLE came home unexpectedly the end of July. The circumstances of her return had an ominous air. Bruce was with her and they had with them, beside Belle's ever-present personal maid, the servant couple from the apartment in town. Candace saw neither of them that night or the next day, but whenever she passed through the halls she could hear their voices: Bruce's low and, it seemed, pleading; Belle's strident; and once she thought she heard Belle sobbing angrily.

She saw Bruce alone for an instant the next evening before dinner. It had been weeks since she'd seen him, but she was shocked by the change in him, he looked so tired and so almost old. She said lightly, "It's been a tough summer in town, hasn't it, Uncle Bruce?"

He sighed. "Plenty tough," he agreed. "You shouldn't have stayed there all the time," she said. Candace saw his expression change—the "steeple" straighter, as though he had snapped to attention, and his face took on the harassed expression that the servants invariably wore during one of Belle's not infrequent rages—and she knew that Belle had entered the room behind her. She thought indignantly, she seats him as though he were her servant too. She turned slowly, her chin unconsciously lifting, and allowed Belle to advance without making any move toward her.

"You've grown older," she said. Candace laughed. "It's a habit we all have," she agreed. Belle looked almost apologetic at that; but Candace's tone had been pleasant and there was nothing in her expression to indicate malice, and after a tense instant Belle apparently decided to let the remark go.

THE conversation during dinner degenerated, in their combined efforts to keep the peace, into almost childish prattle between herself and Bruce, haying to do with how she had been keeping herself occupied. Then Bruce said, "Which college is it to be this fall?" Candace smiled; her face lighted happily. "I've been dying for a chance to tell you both," she confided. "I go into training at Mertrymount Hospital next week."

"You what?" Belle questioned sharply. Her tone erased Candace's smile. She repeated carefully, "I'm going into training, I'm going to be a nurse."

"Oh, you are," Belle said, smiling. "How romantic! How too, too charming! So there's to be a glorified scullery maid in the family! How delightful." She dropped her tone of sarcasm. "Get that insane idea out of your head at once," she ordered.

Out of sight, under cover of the tablecloth, Candace clasped her hands tightly together to still their trembling. "I haven't the slightest intention of doing that," she said. Bruce said, "I'll manage this, Belle."

She whirled on him. "May I point out to you," she remarked, her tone dripping scorn, "that under the circumstances you can scarcely claim to be able to manage anything? I'll manage this—and I prefer," she added sharply, "to do it alone."

Candace turned her back so as not to see Bruce's ignominious retreat from the room. What the trouble between them was she couldn't guess, but she was hot with shame for him at Belle's treatment and her indignation lashed her into a fury that made her forget some of her own fear. Belle had lighted a cigaret and was inhaling deeply and then expelling the smoke in angry gusts. "It's a simple reversion to type, I suppose," she said. "Peasants don't mind doing things like that. And your father was a peasant. With a gift of music, but a peasant for all of that. Did it ever occur to you," she demanded, "in your zeal to do things that are expected of you, that something might be expected of you for all I've done?"

Candace said miserably, "Of course, Aunt Belle, I owe you a lot, I know. But—" "BUT what? But you're just like your mother in that, that's the answer, not an ounce of gratitude in your whole make-up. I should have known. I wasted my whole youth doing without things so that she could have them. But when she had a chance to marry well so that she could make all that up to me, did she do it? No! No; instead she

ARE YOU A GOOD SOLDIER?

To many of us this question may seem absurd, but we are all soldiers whether we realize it or not. One doesn't have to wear a uniform to do as great a job as the soldiers in the far parts of the world. For instance—do your best in school and your best in the home or in any civic organization that will help you to be a better soldier on the home front. If you do this, you are a good soldier. If you do not, what do you consider yourself—a Jap traitor, or a saboteur. We soldiers on the home front don't carry a gun or a bayonet, but we carry the ideals of liberty. We often think of this war as being in Europe or Asia or Bataan; but this war is here. Doing without certain items that we have always been used to is only one part of the many ways in which we soldiers on the home front do our part. Have you done enough to get an advance in rating in this war of the home front? If not start working—NOW.

On October 29 and all members are urged to attend.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Arrandale have had as their guests their daughter, Mrs. Tom Lang and Mr. Lang of Alexandria, Va. Mr. Lang has returned home where he is employed in the ordnance department of the government and Mrs. Lang will remain for a longer visit.

HODGES STUDENTS BUY DEFENSE STAMPS AND BONDS

Every teacher and every student at Hodges is pulling his hardest in an effort to do more than his or her share in buying of defense stamps and bonds. Mrs. Morris reports that every child in her room bought at least one stamp last week.

Some of the rooms have a regular bond day each week at which time stamps and bonds are sold by the teacher. The eight grade, with Mrs. Phillips as supervisor, has led the field in this activity. Wednesday is their regular bond day.

EAGLES DEFEAT ASP'S IN V. CABULARY CONTEST. On Friday the members of Mrs. Lightfoot's reading 8 two class divided themselves into two teams: the Eagles and the Asps after a heated contest.

Bobby Rex was elected captain of the Eagles and Kenneth Hargraves captain of the Asps. Each side furnished keen competition for the others. As the contest neared the end of the period only one contestant was left standing for each side: Gloria Rogers for the Eagles, and Kenneth Hargraves for the Asps. Kenneth finally failed to give the proper pronunciation and meaning of a word and was turned down by Gloria.

Gloria and Kenneth will serve as team captains for another contest next Friday and a "hot" contest is expected.

SECOND AND THIRD GRADES OBSERVE FIRE PREVENTION WEEK. Part of the time programs are presented by members of the class. As all good Americans should, we are buying our share of war stamps.
