All Mixed Up

The morning news columns quoted Draft Director Hershey telling a Senate committee that married men with dependent children would be called into the Army during the final quarter of 1943. This was after the Chief of Staff Marshall had announced that the 1943 goal is an Army of 7,500,000 instead of the 10 to 139 millions previously mentioned.

The afternoon news columns quoted General Hershey as having revised his estimate on the basis of overnight study, deciding that married men with children will not have to be called in 1943—and might not be called in 1944 provided the Army remains at around 7,500,000.

Both estimates presupposed that Congress would authorize the conscription of 18 and 19 year oldsters.

General Hershey is doing such a good administrative job with the draft that it seems to bad to pick flaws. But this was only one recent instance of the general's tendency to say publicly things which later have to be corrected.

The draft is one governmental activity which comes distressingly close to individuals and families. It takes sons from their parents, brothers from their sisters, men from their sweethearts, husbands from their wives, and ultimately it may take fathers from their children. Many never will come back alive. More will return maimed in body and broken in mind and soul.

Above all things the draft is the last in which the people should be troubled by conflicting, confused inadequately considered "information" from governmental sources.

In fact, General Hershey is merely administrator of the draft. He did not make the law. He will not amend the law. He does not decide how many men to call up at any given time.

But when General Hershey, director of the draft, speaks publicly people do not remember those qualifications. His words carry much weight. Therefore they should be considered with the greatest of care.

General Hershey originally suggested that married men with dependent children would be called in the final quarter of next year, at a time when he supposed the Army would continue building rapidly until it had at least 10 million men.

When this was cut by 25 per cent, common sense would that the drafting of men with multiple dependents would not come so soon. Yet the general reiterated.

There has been much too much loose talk about important matters. The public is all mixed up, and with good cause.

LEVELAND.—Well, the great Kent State College football gambling scandal has been subdued. There wasn't much to the alarm, yet it did considerable good in calling attention to the fact that players were peddling pool tickets on the campus and elsewhere.

Evidently there was a lot of putting the house in order by the school president and coach after the story of Tom Gavagan, an undergraduate, appeared in the student newspaper, so the yarn was a school service.

School officials cracked down hard on players selling pools. This was the chief evil involved—players participating in a gambling racket, however small.

It was very small-time stuff, but you can see how youngsters their age would be most likely to talk out of turn in offering tickets to a prospective buyer.

Gavagan says one Kent State back told him that most of the pools he sold had been marked for Findlay, O. College, the number being the opinion that Kent State would not beat the Findlay boys by more than 12 points, which was the spot.

It would be only natural for players who had recommended or taken Kent State in the pool to take desperate chances in trying to beat the spot.

FOLLOWERS of the team could not be blamed for suspecting players were going far out of their way to beat the pool and make themselves a pile of dough.

That was what prompted Gavagan's piece. He expressed the opinions of a number who saw the game.

It seemed funny to him that the quarterback in the final period should be taking unnecessary chances with forward passes that might be intercepted when he should have been protecting a safe point lead.

UNDER the circumstances, it would be very easy for Kent State supporters to suspect the team was letting them down if the boys bumped into a bad day when everything went wrong.

It would be entirely logical to suspect the kids were doing another Joe Jackson.

That is where the bad angle comes in. One gambling involvement brings on another. It goes without saying that college boys, especially combatants, should be steered clear of gambling in any form.

As I remarked previously, this is the first time college football has felt the breath of scandal on the back of its broad neck.

College officials should take good care that it is the last.

Women Needed As Pharmacists or Drug Stores

AUSTIN, Texas.—The "corner drug store" is going to be a thing of the past for many communities unless enough women pharmacists can be trained to take the place of men going into military service.

W. F. Gidley, dean of the Pharmacy school of the University of Texas College of Civilian pharmacists are entering service at such a rapid rate that many communities are finding themselves completely without prescriptions service.

At least 5,000 pharmacists are needed by the army, while other branches of the service required proportional number.

A standard non-portable typewriter contains enough aluminum for 22 magnesium incendiary bombs, enough rubber for a pair of rubber boots for the Army.

Of every pound of meat produced in the U. S. about 12 ounces will go to the civilian population. The remaining four ounces will be distributed among our fighting men and the armed forces and civilians of our Lend-Lease allies.

Liver Loaf with Gravy
Two pounds beef liver, 2 cups boiling water, 2 slices of bacon, 2 medium-sized onions, chopped, 2 tablespoons chopped parsley, 2 teaspoons salt, 1-4 teaspoon pepper, 2 eggs, slightly beaten, 2 1-2 cups soft bread crumbs or 2 cups dried bread crumbs.

Cover the liver with boiling water, simmer 8-10 minutes. Drain into the "soup pot," and grind with the bacon, salt and pepper, spoon add the other ingredients. Mix thoroughly, and press into a loaf pan. Bake in a moderate oven, 350-375 degrees F., until nicely browned, then turn the loaf out on a hot platter.

Peanut Casserole
Two quarts boiling water, salted, 2 cups spaghetti or macaroni, 1 cup chopped peanuts, 1 cup grated cheese, 1 tablespoon chopped onion, 1-3 cup breadcrumbs, 2 cups thick tomato juice or canned tomatoes, 1-4 tablespoon pepper, 1 tablespoon salt, 2 tablespoons melted butter or margarine.

Drop the spaghetti or macaroni into boiling salted water and cook about 25 minutes. Drain and mix lightly with peanut butter, grated cheese, and onion, place in a greased casserole. Season tomatoes with the salt and pepper, and pour them over the spaghetti. Mix the melted butter with the breadcrumbs, and sprinkle over the top. Bake 30 minutes at 350 degrees F.

SEE here, Private Wilkie: You took things too literally when you were told to paint the town red for the rest of your civilian liberty. It wasn't intended you should set the world on fire.

Then there was that advice to "form no idea of what Army life is going to be like. Leave your mind open." You formed too many ideas and you left your mouth open.

Two weeks from now, you will be thoroughly disgusted with the job you did. You have been flown from place to place in an Army plane. You have wandered in nakedness and bewilderment over miles of physical geography examination, but you must now look upon individuality and privacy as things left behind you in a golden civilian society.

Probably you have developed murderous hatred for one cabinet secretary, two congressmen and a hundred newspaper editors. You are writing and fuming under what you consider "personalities and bippancies" of the people who differ with you, and you are wondering how an enlightened nation can permit such atrocity. Take it easy, Private Wilkie, take it easy. The main things to remember are these: Watch your attitude, do your work, respect your superiors, try to get along with your fellow soldiers, keep yourself, your nose, and your equipment clean at all times and behave yourself.

Do these things and you won't have any trouble. For what happens when you don't do them, let us now look at what MIGHT have happened to Private Wilkie:

PRIVATE WILKIE stuck his head through the door of the office of the Commander-in-Chief.

"Great gods and little py-checks," railed the Commander-in-Chief. "Look what's loose again! What's the latest, or aren't the reporters supposed to know?"

"It has been, withal, a very busy trip," Private Wilkie said. "I'm sure withal has," said the Commander-in-Chief. "What a trip. What a life. With your eyes wide open, you're dreaming."

"It was a little hellish on this last lap," said Private Wilkie, "although it could have been worse. I actually saw a corporal who didn't curse me. I ate Russian food twice, and except for the haphazard way the vodka was thrown toward the caviar, it wasn't too horrifying."

"But I'm broken and bleeding," moaned the Commander-in-Chief. "Oh, I get so discouraged some-

Cotton Is Not 'King' Any Longer

AUSTIN, Texas—Cotton not only is no longer "king" of all Texas industry, it has even lost its position of pre-eminence in the agricultural industry itself, Dr. F. A. Buschel, assistant director of the University of Texas Bureau of Business Research, told members of the Texas Statistical Council at a recent meeting on the University campus. "Cash income from agriculture represents approximately 30 per cent of the state's total spendable income," Dr. Buschel explained. "In 1928, farm cash income was 797 million dollars of which more than 63 per cent came from cotton and cottonseed."

LEAVE it to race track promoters to solve complicated problems, even those with an international flavor. Caliente, the track which superseded old Tipsona—much of the border, down Mexico way—advices that it has made arrangements enabling suckers to continue enjoying Sunday racing and at the same time complying 100 per cent with a new rule in regard to taking money across the line. Caliente is not the one to fool with international regulations, especially when the track can get around them with practically no inconvenience to patrons. Money can be taken across the line, from either side, only in the form of $2 bills, silver, money order, travelers' checks, bank or personal checks. In order that players may comply with these regulations, General Manager Walter C. Marty obtains an ample supply of $2 bills, silver and travelers' checks. ATTENDANTS are stationed at each line of cars on the American side to exchange this money for the customers' currency "at no charge and travelers' checks are accepted at the track. Now, isn't that nice of the Caliente people? There is no limit to the amount you may take across the border from either side, provided it is in the specified form. So hot 'em up, boys. Post for the first of Caliente's 12 races is 12 a. m. There is the Quinella (it doesn't matter which runs first and second), the daily double and you can wager on the fourth horse. Come early and bring lunch and dinner. Things are so prosperous at Caliente that the promoters have even gone into the banking business to keep 'em running. The Caliente case further illustrates how far race track operators will go to keep a good thing going. BOY DOGS ARE GOOD LIVERS

It's easy to be a good liver, but it's harder to be a good loser. In our recent game with the Fighting Ranger Bulldogs with the score one-whole, we lost the game in a truly sportsmanlike manner. We appreciate this attitude from Mr. Serjant and his team.

During the game our top leadership went very well and helped the Bulldogs leaders lead the Breckenridge pep squad in some pep for both teams. The visiting pep leaders in turn came over to our side of the stadium and helped our leaders direct several yell for the Ranger pep squad.

This attitude of good fellowship should prove to us that the value of the game isn't the game itself and not in the winning of the game.

SERIAL STORY OF BRIGHTNESS GONE BY HOLLY WATTERSON

CHAPTER XXI VANISHED DREAM Candace was lucky enough to find Dr. Patterson in his office. He pushed forward a chair for her. "How are you, Miss Bech? What can I do for you?" She said directly, unwilling to waste any of his time, "Dr. Patterson, I've come to ask you please to take me off the Harper case." He groaned. "Not you, too, Miss Bech," he begged ruefully. "I trusted you to see me through this, even though all the others fell by the wayside. You've managed worse patients for me before. You really mean you're giving up on this case?" Candace said, "Yes," firmly. "I'm sorry, Doctor." Dr. Patterson sighed. "You mean it, I see. Whatever is the matter with all you big strong girls that you can't manage a frail old woman?" She saw that his eyes were twinkling. She said, "I can manage her all right, but there's a complication, Dr. Patterson. That grandson of Mrs. Harper's. He's—he's—" Indignation choked her. "He's been sending me things right along—to the place where I live, though I don't know how ever he learned where it is—boxes of flowers that I threw out until I decided that was just wasteful since he wouldn't know whether I'd thrown them out or not, tons of candy; and, lately, clothes. Intimate things. I've had the nuisance of sending them back—" "His approach is pretty bad, eh?" Dr. Patterson asked gravely. But he was amused, she saw. It wasn't funny. She said with distaste, "Yesterday afternoon when I went off duty the Harper chauffeur was waiting for me. Mrs. Harper sometimes sends me on errands in the car and I thought it was something like that, something she'd forgotten to mention to me. I started to get in the car. 'Where to?' I asked Jackson. He was grinning. 'That's up to you, Miss, this year is your car.' I noticed the initials on the car then, 'C. B.' Jackson didn't seem to see anything odd about fresh youth to scare me off a case. She realized then that she had practically committed herself. She shrugged mental shoulders. Oh, well, this case or another, what difference did it make? Mrs. Harper grinned weakly at Candace from her pillows. She said with satisfaction, "I guess you'll believe I'm really sick now. I guess you'll have to stay with me now." Candace smiled at her. One could grow really fond of this tall little old reprobate, she thought. "The only thing I'm going to do," she said, "is that you'll go to any lengths to get your own way." "Humph," Mrs. Harper said. "I have the devil's own time trying to make you believe that I'm sick, and Patterson that I'm well enough to go home. Of course I want to go home. This place is all right for a well person, but it's too depressing when one is really ill." "There's logic for you," Candace said, laughing. She was thinking privately, if she comes home, Dr. Patterson or I, I don't go with her. I won't stay in the same house with that fresh grandson of hers, thank you. But the old lady had evidently expected that reaction and was prepared. That evening Duffy asked to speak with Candace. "My grandmother wants to go home," he said, "but she's afraid that you may refuse to go with her. Because of me." His usual laughing insolence was missing; he seemed subdued and even a bit embarrassed. "Miss Bech," he said hesitantly, "I—well, Dr. Patterson has talked to me and I—well, I'm awfully sorry I've made such an ass of myself. I didn't realize how you felt about things. You see, I have so much and most of the people I know who haven't much themselves are glad enough—" He came to a stumbling halt. "To accept little presents like cars and stuff?" she finished for him dryly. She added severely, "You have too much, that's the trouble. Or at least, one trouble. There are a lot of other things wrong with you too." He didn't take offense. He said humbly, "You're the only nurse in the place Grandmother can stand. If you'll just stick with her I promise you'll have no reason to be annoyed with me, you won't have to be at all afraid of me, afraid that—" "Afraid!" Candace echoed coldly. "Let me assure you, young man, that it would take more than a

NIGHT COUGHS

YOUR CHILD'S coughing at night—caused by throat "tickles" or irritation, mouth breathing, or a cold—can often be prevented by rubbing throat and chest with Vicks VapoRub at bedtime.

VAPORUB'S antiseptic and vapor action loosens phlegm, relieves irritation, helps clear upper air passages, thus tends to stop mouth breathing and invite restful sleep. Try it!
