A. J. Ratliff chairman of the local NYA Advisory Committee, has announced that National Youth Administration Advisory Boards throughout Texas are sponsoring "open houses" at all the NYA projects on Monday December 7. This open house, which will also be held in Ranger work training centers, will climax a 12-month period since last year's Harbor. The Ranger advisory committee has been urged to invite all their friends to visit the various shops at the Ranger Residence Center on that date.

The NYA is training many girls in Ranger for work in various areas, many of whom have gone to work helping to operate the Consolidated Aircraft Corporation in Ft. Worth. Consolidated officials commented on the fine training on what a fine type of women they are getting from the Ranger Residence Center.

Miss Smith, of the employment division of Consolidated Aircraft Corporation, will visit the shops in Ranger some time during the day Monday, Dec. 7.

The public has been issued an invitation to inspect all the shops on Monday, H. A. Ziegler, project director, in a letter calling attention to the open house, says, "Be sure that the youth at the residence center, and the supervisors, will appreciate visiting the shops on and seeing just how they operate."

Hours at the Ranger shops will be from 10:30 p. m. to 5:30 p. m. and from 7:00 p. m. to 9:00 p. m. The local advisory committee has made arrangements for the local NYA station wagon to be used in transporting anyone who wishes to attend the open house, but who does not have transportation facilities available. Anyone who calls 410 will be called for by NYA officials and taken to the work centers.

It is being pointed out that the NYA program is not limited to those boys and girls whose families who are in need, but is open to anyone who is interested in training for positions in vital war industries.

MEN AND SHIPS WIN IN BATTLE TO DELIVER ORE

By ROBERT J. SERLING
United Press Staff Correspondent
CLEVELAND. (UP)—America is winning a battle of vital importance thousands of miles from the actual fighting fronts.

The battle is a struggle against human fatigue, insufficient equipment and time. It is being fought on the waters of the Great Lakes that fringe the heart of midwestern America.

The victory belongs to the men and ships of the Lakes ore fleet—a combination that has just about exceeded the most gigantic goal ever set before an American transportation system.

The one fleet this year faced the enormous task of carrying 90,000,000 tons of iron ore from the mines of northern Minnesota down to the ports of the Great Lakes—Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, Toledo, Buffalo—and on the fleet depended the bulk of the nation's steel production.

It can now be reported that the fleet has virtually clinched success. By the end of October, the ore carriers had transported 83,858,620 tons and they still have almost two full months in which to attain the 90,000,000-ton goal set before them by the Office of Defense Transportation last spring.

The officers and men wear no gold braid and medals and no admiral's daughter or Senator's niece launches the awkward sturdy ships they sail. But their victory is no less important even without the trimmings.

Thanks to them, the steel mills of the Midwest and East are receiving the iron ore that's digested in roaring blast furnaces and speared out of the war plants in the shape of tanks, guns, planes and warships.

To meet the goal the ore fleet has relied on approximately 300 regular carriers, plus a number of freighters ordinarily used in transporting automobiles from Detroit to Buffalo for shipment to the East, and several new ships.

Even with this imposing shipping equipment, there was some doubt last spring whether the ODT's quota would be met. The ore fleet had to strain to meet the 191 goal of 80,000,000 tons and there were many shipping men who privately predicted failure.

But the ore fleet already has passed the 80 million mark and is well on its way to the 1942 quota. Although the tonnage carried in December will be less than the preceding months because of weather conditions, shippers don't anticipate too much of a drop.

While the ore fleet doesn't have to worry about enemy torpedoes and dive bombers, there still has been an element of danger present on the unruly, unpredictable lakes. Early this fall the fleet lost one of its carriers in a storm. The Steel-vendor foundered in Lake Superior when its cargo shifted in heavy seas.

Cites Ways to Help Emotions of Children

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (UP)—A program to keep the emotions of children and young people stable during wartime has been outlined by Marion McLowell, associate professor of home economics at Pennsylvania State College.

Professor McDowell—placing the burden on teachers and parents—proposed that emotional security may be aided by frank and sympathetic talks with children about their war problems; having children take part in joint activities of parents and teachers; closer co-operation between the parents and teachers; character strength shown by teachers and parents; and maintenance of an inspiring goal.

"What youth needs is to be able to think through and talk about their problems," Mrs. McDowell stated. "Young children worry about who will take care of them if their father is killed and older youths fear the draft and yet feel that they are cowardly to fear it."

Letter Received From Carl Eakin By His Parents

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Eakin of Ranger have received a letter from their son, Lt. Carl Eakin, Jr., written Nov. 19, 1942, in which he states that he has finally reached destination and is well and getting along nicely.

The letter, dated at Guadalcanal, and passed by censor, reads as follows:

"I have moved twice since I wrote you and at last arrived at my destination. I got here a few days ago in time for some good stories of the work the boys have been doing.

"I suppose the newspapers played up the affair, believe me it was some scrap.

"I am O. K. as always and feeling fine. I am doing some work. I can't tell you what kind, but you can probably guess by this time.

"Things here are not as bad as they could be and not as bad as they were earlier in the game out here. We haven't lost anyone in our squadron yet and only two wounded, which is in itself a very marvelous record considering what has been going on.

"I haven't received any mail from anyone since I left the States, but I presume things are O. K. Hope you got the letters I mailed you about 18 days ago. I suppose you have by this time. V-mail is the fastest from the States and air mail to the States.

"The country here is rugged in the extreme, starting about four or five miles from the coast and between the mountains and the ocean it is level, beautiful fields and along the coast are beautiful palm trees in rows. The water is sky blue except where it breaks over the coral reef, and there it is greenish blue. It is really a wonderful scenic place.

"Write and tell me all the news and maybe some day they will catch up with me. Don't know when I will be home, but don't worry. I am O. K. My love to Virginia, Grandmother, Granddad (both of them), Denna and all the rest. Write soon."

GASOLINE rationing in the 17 Atlantic seaboard states has come so close to breaking down in the last few weeks that it amounts to a national scandal. An estimated 2.5 million gallons of gas a day have apparently been going into black market sales throughout this area, sold with bootlegged coupons, and the only thing which is saving the situation is the expiration of the present system of rationing on Dec. 1, with the imposition of new restrictions on Nov. 21. It is hoped these new restrictions, including the lowering of the basic A ration from four to three gallons in 16 eastern states, will plug the leaks.

War Necessity. In making application for the certificate, the operator must specify how many miles of driving are essential for the operation of his business for a three-month period. He will then be issued a T book containing coupons for only enough gas to operate over this essential mileage. Extra coupons will be torn out of the book before it is delivered to the operator to make sure he does not dispose of the extra rations himself.

The outlast station operator, with this supply of reserve coupons on hand, was then in a position to offer his friends or old customers gasoline in excess of their regular A, B, or C rations. Abolition of the S book system on Dec. 1 has served to speed up the disposition of S book coupons in the past few weeks.

To stop this practice in the future, it is hoped that the new T or Transport-usage ration system going into effect Dec. 1 will do the trick. To get a T book, the operator of a commercial vehicle must first get his Certificate of

Gifts Must Be Mailed Earlier This Christmas

The Post Office Department is starting this most gigantic task in its history—the movement of a deluge of Christmas parcels, cards and letters while maintaining the regular flow of millions of pieces of mail daily to and from our arm of forces all over the world.

Indications are that the volume of Christmas mail will be the largest on record. Already in September, latest month for which figures are available, "mail sales" had reached a level second only to the record month of December, 1941, according to the Department of Commerce. And sales are rising. Such heavy purchases always pressure heavy mailings.

If thousands of soldiers, sailors, marines and civilians are not to be disappointed at Christmas time, the public must cooperate by mailing earlier than ever before and by addressing letters and parcels properly. The best efforts of the Post Office Department alone cannot be enough, in view of wartime difficulties faced by the postal system. The public must assist.

About 25,000 experienced postal workers already have been taken on by the war services. Arrangements are under way to add thousands of temporary personnel to postal staffs, but this man power is hard to find and is inexperienced.

The free-mailing privilege granted to members of the armed forces has raised their mailings 30 per cent. It is estimated. Extension of these forces also is adding rapidly to the postal burden.

The deadline already set for mailing gifts to Army and Navy personnel overseas with assurance that the parcels will arrive by Christmas.

The Post Office Department is making strenuous efforts to avoid such a terrific jam as it faced in 1918 under similar conditions, during the First World War. It can succeed in these efforts—

Equipment On Texas Farms Is Getting Emphasis

The repair of labor-saving equipment for the farm is receiving the greatest emphasis in the 1942 Farm Machinery Repair course now being offered in the Vocational Agriculture Departments in 194 counties of Texas, according to M. F. Thurmond of the State Department of Education who is in charge of the Rural War Production Training Program.

In the picture are two members of a Farm Machinery Repair Class at New Braunfels, Texas, as one of the young men converts a discarded barrel into an automatic watering trough for hogs while the other constructs a self-feeder for hogs, with the idea of saving time and labor in the production of much-needed pork. In addition to receiving this training in farm machinery repair and construction these young farmers also have access to a course in pork production.

Production Are Offered Farmers

The Farm Security Administration is helping thousands of low-income families to increase production at a profit of the needed war funds by loans and help in farm and home management. It is particularly important that farmers who cannot obtain credit from other loan agencies see the county rural supervisor of FSA at their earliest convenience and before the beginning of the peak loan season.

Small farm operators should make immediate inquiry as to the requirements for a "Food for Freedom" loan and start putting all their labor and land resources to work on the Nation's Food production line.

Loans may be made to help the small farmer produce most of the family's food needs and a surplus to sell including dairy and poultry products, poultry, hogs, beef, etc. Farmers qualifying for "Food for Freedom" loans must have a desire to make a contribution to the Nation's food requirements and also have possibilities for repaying the loan over a period of time ranging as high as five years if a lease or rental contract or desirable land can be obtained for the period. Action should not be delayed. See Mr. George I. Lane, County Rural Supervisor for the FSA located on the 2nd floor, Room 216, of the Eastland National Bank Building, Eastland, Texas. Mr. Lane will be in his office on any Friday and will be glad to see anyone that is interested.

taught by farmers and agricultural leaders well versed in their subject and are under the supervision of the Vocational Agricultural Teacher. Approved to offer such courses in Eastland County are the Departments of Vocational Agriculture at Cisco, Pioneer, Ranger, Rising Star, and Garrettsville. Since the Vocational Agriculture Shops of Texas are equipped with more than a half-million dollars worth of equipment for doing farm machinery repair and construction work, thousands of farmers of Texas are expected to make use of this equipment. During the first half of the year farmers repaired 39,775 of their own implements and increased their value an estimated $366,000 while receiving this training.
