GERMANS AGAIN ON OFFENSIVE

AMERICANS AND BRITISH ARE HITTING PRIME NAZI TARGETS AT A TEMPO NEVER EQUALLED

Mounting losses of the RAF and United States Army Air force indicate the increased number of bombers used in raids

LONDON, Eng. Feb. 27. (UP)—American Flying Fortresses, Liberators today blasted U-boat base at Brest, on French Atlantic coast, it was learned tonight. All bombers returned safely.

By HARRISON SALISBURY
United Press Staff Correspondent
LONDON, Eng. Feb. 27. (UP)—American and British planes are pounding prime Nazi objectives in Europe at a tempo possibly never equalled before while there are temporary lulls on the Russian and Tunisian fronts.

All day long and through the night great streams of virtually every type of Allied bomber and fighter are taking off from the great stationary aircraft carrier—England.

Following up yesterday's heavy assault by American Flying Fortresses and Liberators on Wilhelmshaven, the Royal Air Force carried out the most powerful attack ever made on Cologne with the exception of the famous 1,000-plane raid.

The general scope of the Allied offensive is indicated by the mounting losses of both the RAF and the United States Army Air Force—a sign that increasing numbers of bombers are roaring over Nazi targets.

The RAF's attack on Cologne topped off the most active week of the air war in many months. Relays of Flying Fortresses, Liberators, Lancasters, Mosquitos and Venturas—almost every weapon in the Allied armament—are taking off almost continuously. Virtually all targets are connected in one way or the other with the Axis submarine war fare which the Allies must beat in order to concentrate forces for the grand assault on the European continent.

Specific targets include submarine repair depots, submarine supply depots, airbases protecting submarine bases on the Atlantic Coast, manufacturing plants supplying engines and other vital parts for U-boats.

Possibility of New League of Nations Foreseen by Some

WASHINGTON, D. C. (UP)—Some observers today saw in this week's official statements on forthcoming post-war studies the beginning of a sort of new League of Nations which could begin consideration now of actual cases and details of post-war planning.

The methods of operation and the types of organization to be used are of course not yet determined. But it would operate under the broad objectives already stated in the four freedoms pledge.

In any event, a closer degree of cooperation between the United Nations, not only on conduct of the war but in dealing with problems which will come with peace, is being initiated and developed by the United States.

Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles revealed in Toronto yesterday that the United States intends to start at once preparations for conferences on economic and related matters.

Welles urged the setting up of United Nations' machinery for the purpose of assembling and studying all international aspects of problems under the general heading of freedom from want.

LONDON, Feb. 27 (UP)—Martin Rimer, 3, was picked up by police today after running away from home.

TANGLE WITH WLB, CONGRESS IS LOOMING

By SERRELL HILLMAN
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON, D. C. (UP)—Congressional pressure for anti-strike legislation mounted today as the War Labor Board continued consideration of wage increase demands by the West Coast Aircraft workers.

Board members rebuked Boeing Aircraft Co., employees for what amounted to a virtual work stoppage threat and declared the WLB would not be high-pressured into an immediate decision in the wage controversy.

With some Congressional tempers rising rapidly over the Boeing situation, WLB members said they probably would not reach a decision until some time next week. By time, it appeared, at least one anti-strike measure will have been introduced in Congress.

Eight major aircraft companies in Southern California are affected by the case at issue in addition to Boeing. The WLB has had the case under consideration since last summer.

Oklahoman Breaks Problem Solving Record In Capitol

WASHINGTON, D. C. Feb. 25. (UP)—It took a man from Savanna, Okla., to prove that "it can be done." He brought a problem to Washington and within 10 minutes had it solved—a record in the capital these days.

The man was having trouble getting rid of his hogs because of certain OPA regulations. He heard about the house small business committee investigating the meat shortage, hopped a train and after a little trouble got to tell about his hog.

"What am I to do?" he asked the committee. "I can't even butcher a hog for myself, and meanwhile there's a flock of war workers in town who'd pay anything for a good ham."

Committee members started to press for more details, but a Philadelphia meatpacker interrupted and offered to buy the hogs.

Survey Indicates Advertising To Be About Same

WASHINGTON, D. C. (UP)—A survey of principal cities indicates that department stores will advertise "about as usual" in 1943 despite falling merchandise stocks the Commerce Department said today.

Some of the larger stores expect to maintain the 1942 advertising volume while eight, including a large chain, reported an increase in lineages this year.

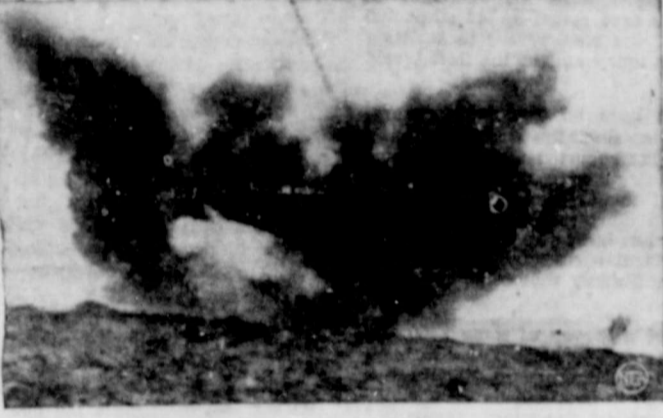

While most stores plan to keep their advertising policies flexible to meet changing conditions, some told Commerce Department surveyors that their newspaper advertising volume would be limited only by the "tools of the trade—merchandise to sell, newspaper paper, and other materials that enter into advertising."

A Richmond, Va., store said that newspaper advertising "will be maintained, come what may."

"If we don't have merchandise to sell," it said "we'll sell the store war bonds, substitutes, self-service etc."

Only one store in the country, in San Francisco, reported "a large cut" in daily advertising, "the cause current sales are booming and it is not considered desirable to attempt to build up a larger volume." It added that the major part of its reduced advertising would be devoted to war purposes, urging war bond sales, blood bank support conservation of critical materials, etc.

German Attack in Tunisia

Nazis in a surprise offensive against our forces in Tunisia provided photographers with this series of action pictures. At top, British tanks move across a field toward a German position in the Bou Arada area. Then down out of the sky comes a twin-motored Nazi dive bomber, dropping its bombs in a great explosion, bottom. One British tank was damaged, one enemy bomber was shot down.

Devasating Raid On Munda Carried Out by Americans

WASHINGTON, D. C. (UP)—Another devastating American air raid—the 77th—on the Japanese central Solomons base at Munda—was announced today by the Navy.

Many fires were started and a plane was destroyed on the ground. Yankee flier also kept up their pounding of the enemy's major Aleutians base at Kiska.

They struck again on Thursday with bombers and fighters but results were not reported.

Munda was attacked on Friday by fighter-escorted dive bombers. The toll of Jap planes destroyed in the Solomons now stands at 875.

80 to 100 Trapped In Explosion At Bear Creek Mine

BEAR CREEK, Mont. (UP)—An explosion rocked the Smith Coal mine at Washoe near here today and mine officials reported between 80 and 100 men had been trapped.

Rescue crews immediately went into the pit in an effort to save the men.

By noon only man had been removed. He is reported recovering from injuries.

ENGLISH GIRL WRITES JUNIOR RED CROSS

On the eve of the launching of the American Red Cross War Fund drive, P. O. Hatley has received a letter which speaks for itself and should encourage every citizen to give every dollar that it is possible to spare to the campaign to raise funds to carry on the work of the Red Cross.

Oakhill C. E. School
Oakhill
Math.
Somerset.

Dear friends:
We have today received the parcels from the American Junior Red Cross, and what surprises they were to us all. We wish to thank all members of the A.J.R.C. for their very kind thoughts towards us. I received the parcel from your school, and that is why I am writing to thank you on behalf of all the members of the Junior Red Cross, and Red Cross Link in our school.

This is only a small village school, but as our War Effort for 1942, we were the means of raising 1,432 pounds 14 shillings and 11 pence for National Savings; 40 pounds 3 shillings and 4 pence for the British Red Cross Society; 21 Pounds 12 Shillings for Mrs. Churchill's Aid to the Russia Fund; and 15 Pounds for local funds.

I would like very much to have a pen friend from your school, about the age of myself which is thirteen.

Should you wish to write at any time we should be pleased to hear from you.

I remain
Your British Friend,
Gwendoline Burcombe.

The "parcel" referred to in this letter was one of thousands collected by the Junior Red Cross before Christmas and sent to children in countries at war.

Tea-Growing In Australia Seen After The War

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal. (UP)—Extensive tea cultivation in Australia after the war may result from experiments being made by the Council for Scientific and Industrial Research, according to the Melbourne Radio.

Different varieties of tea are growing experimentally on various Australian coastal regions, it was announced. Chinese varieties have been found suitable for Tasmanian conditions and Indian varieties for conditions in northern Queensland.

Because of the difficulty of growing it economically and in sufficient quantity, tea previously grown here has been kept from the market.

Great progress is also being made by the Council, it stated in experiments of production of rubber from the Mexican gualupe plant and also the Russian plant.

The development of the Russian plant is being made from scratch, the first batch of seed from Russia having arrived only last August.

NEW THRUSTS SAID TO BE MERE ATTEMPTS TO THROW BRITISH AND AMERICANS OFF BALANCE

Action not regarded as alarming as attention turns to increased offensive in Allied attacks on enemy territory

LONDON, Eng. Feb. 27. (UP)—The Germans were on the offensive in Tunisia today—against British positions in the vital northern sector before Tunis—as the Allies were ported unofficially to have occupied the town of Kasserine after clearing the pass north of it.

The Tunisian fighting flared anew while American and British planes pounded Nazi objectives in Europe at an almost unprecedented tempo and a temporary lull developed on the Russian front.

RANGER'S RED CROSS DRIVE BEGINS MONDAY

Ranger's drive for the American Red Cross War Fund will get underway Monday morning at 10 o'clock when workers will meet at the Chamber of Commerce for the take-off.

Every citizen of Ranger will be contacted by some one of the workers and every citizen is asked to give as much as possible to the drive. Due to the tremendous demands on the Red Cross the national quota has been set at 125 million which naturally calls for increases for the units that make up the nation.

Ranger's quota of $4,500 is three times the quota for the last drive and contributions will have to be increased according to the increased quota.

It has been pointed out that the Red Cross in Eastland County has done more in proportion to population than any other county for our men in service and their families. It is also pointed out that Texas with 5 per cent of the nation's population, claims 30 per cent of the personnel of the Marine Corps and 28 per cent of the Navy.

The United States government has designated the Red Cross as the only agent to perform certain services for those men in service and the Red Cross can carry on this work only if the War Fund is raised through the current drive.

Young P T A Buys War Bond, Donates To Red Cross Fund

At a called meeting of the Young School Parent Teacher Association Thursday afternoon members voted to purchase a $100 bond and to contribute $5.00 to the Red Cross War Fund campaign.

This is the first unit of the Association in Ranger to purchase a $100 bond and the first to be announced as a contributor to the current Red Cross drive.

Extension Of Lend-Lease Is Recommended

WASHINGTON, D. C. (UP)—House Foreign Affairs Committee today recommended one-year extension lend-lease in formal report which revealed China thus far received only $156,738,000 worth lend-lease aid.

Report disclosed by committee that Great Britain as of Dec. 31, 1942, got assistance in amount $3,959,973,000 and Soviet Russia $1,552,230,000.

Declaring that lend lease was "an essential part of our mechanism for waging war" which has "operated with brilliant effectiveness," the committee added it is "imperative that the U. S. provide China with all aid that can possibly be supplied."

LET US FORGET

The wise man Solomon said, "Righteousness exalteth nation, but sin is an approach to any people." Prov. 14:34. Today our great nation is facing one of the greatest crises of history. Our industries have been geared up to provide the materials needed and our manpower is being re-adjusted to fit the program of national defense.

This nation was founded on Christian principles and we still call it a Christian nation. We have written around the edges of our coins, "In God We Trust," and even the American Constitution was formulated and adopted under solemnity of prayer.

The psalmist said, "The wicked shall be turned into hell and all nations that forget God." Psalms 9:17. But what is true of a nation is true of all that goes to make that nation. Since our nation is made up of states, righteousness will exalt a state, and the same righteousness will exalt the counties and cities which compose the state.

It depends on you and it depends on me. We need to encourage our service men to righteousness and not to worldliness. All of us need more praying and less cursing, more singing and less drinking, more worship and less worldliness. Remember, righteousness is uplifting and ennobling, but sin has a degenerating, demoralizing, and degrading influence to any country.

EASTLAND COUNTY'S CHALLENGE

This week Eastland county will face another of those war challenges to which in the past it has always responded so magnificently.

And in this challenge it will confront a more serious need perhaps than was met in any of those to which it has been granted the benison of "well done."

For this time the call, the insistent call to duty, is from the Red Cross—the Red Cross which is the only general agency for the comfort and extra-military assistance of our armed forces abroad as well as the principal ministering institution through which the emergencies of our servicemen at home and their dependent families may be met.

Eastland county—with 2,000 men or upwards of that number in service—has been asked to raise $18,000.

Now that is more than three times the normal quota of the county. But it takes no genius to understand that these fighting men. He should—and he is urgently asked to see to it that the seriousness of the emergency it is designed to meet.

The campaign will begin Monday. It will begin when workers all over Eastland county assemble to receive instructions and then start out to ask the citizens to open their purses with a liberality not before sought.

"See everybody" will be the slogan of the drive. But that command to the workers will not in any way lessen the responsibility of the citizen who is not seen. No failure or mistake of a worker can relieve a citizen of duty to his righting men. He should—and he is urgently asked to see some one of the committee or some local official of the Red Cross and make a voluntary subscription.

SEVEN THOUSAND FOUR HUNDRED reports of sabotage have been received by the Federal Bureau of Investigation between Jan. 1, 1940, and Feb. 1, 1943—an average of a little less than 10 cases a day.

Of these 7400 reported cases, investigation disclosed that 558 cases were definitely acts of sabotage. The remaining 6842 cases were false alarms or natural industrial accidents.

Of the 558 cases of actual sabotage, 424 convictions had been obtained up to Feb. 1. The remaining 134 cases are awaiting trial or in the process of being tried.

Only two of the cases of actual sabotage were committed by axis sympathizers. All the others have American citizen principals who committed their acts of sabotage under strange influences of revenge or carelessness, or were the results of natural causes or industrial accidents.

These amazing figures from FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover in the first round-up of suspected sabotage activities of the war, reveal in startling fashion the contrast between conditions today and in the first World War.

The fact stands out that there has been no organized, enemy-directed sabotage in the United States since the war began.

In more of the sabotage cases than far reported and investigated has there been major damage to any war plant or to any munitions planes, ships, tanks, guns. In most of the cases, the sabotage has been detected before damage has been done. The whole story of anti-sabotage work in this war, in fact, has been a record of sabotage prevention. It makes much less spectacular reading this way, but countless lives have thus been spared and many thousands of dollars have been saved.

PRIOR to the war, the FBI conducted a survey of some 2350 war plants, checking up with factory guards and local police to make sure that ample security measures were being taken—that fences were adequate, pass systems tight enough to keep out unwanted visitors, the records of employees above suspicion, the guards themselves of the right caliber, and that simple precautions against fires and explosions were entered. There are fires and accidents even in peace time, but in wartime the safety-first measures are all the more important. Carelessness of the good anti-sabotage record for the rest of the war is possible only by maintaining this vigilance.

The two acts of sabotage involving axis sympathizers were the Eitel case in Baltimore in which a German national did succeed in damaging some 37 Martin bombers before he was caught, and an attempted arson case at the Kaiser shipyards in Richmond, Calif. The Eitel case attracted considerable attention, but the worst case case received little publicity. It happened at 1:45 a. m. last July 21 when an alert guard saw a man trying to set fire to a pile of lumber with ignited oakum, or ship's caulking. Detected, the saboteur pulled a stick and the guard ran for help. When he got back, the culprit had escaped. Identified by photos, the saboteur proved to be on Heinrich Roedel, a German alien who had entered the United States illegally in 1936. He had been employed at the shipyard for a short time, but was dismissed because of his alien status, and was a suit

"Taxless Session" May Be Phoney Title For 48th

AUSTIN, Tex., Feb. 25—(UP)

Folks who watch proceedings at Austin are beginning to wonder if "taxless session" isn't a phoney name for the 48th legislature.

While prospects still are good that the legislature still will not levy any new tax, appropriations are being favored at a rate that will threaten to have the same effect on the taxpayer by piling up a deficit that he will have to pay off some time.

The constitutional amendment by which the people hoped to put the state on a pay-as-you-go basis does not curb the expenditures of this session. It does not take effect until Jan. 1, 1945. After that time legislators cannot pass an appropriation unless the state comptroller certifies that funds will be ready to pay the cost—unless four-fifths of the membership votes to pile up the debt.

So far, the session has appropriated $70,000 to increase the money available for old age assistance and in a fair way to add $1,500,000 to expendable old age assistance funds. There is pending also a bill to take the lid of $1,750,000 a month off the state expenditure for old age aid and to double Confederate pensions.

The increased aid to Confederate veterans will not amount to much as the rolls rapidly are dwindling and besides a reduction in the Confederate pension tax is the only tax-reducing proposal before the session.

It was first proposed to reduce the tax from seven cents to half a cent on $100 worth of property. It was put at at one cent on a report that calculating a half cent tax put too much strain on county tax assessor's prowess in arithmetic. Now there is a proposal to make the tax three cents on the ground that one cent is not enough.

There is a big surplus in the confederate pension fund but a senate-passed bill proposes to take $1,500,000 of this and put it in the state general revenue, because the state spent more than that out of its general revenue to maintain the confederate homes. The attorney general is being asked to rule on validity of taking the $1,500,000.

More, Better And Bigger Fish Is Professors' Aim

DALLAS, Feb. 25—More, better, and bigger fish in Texas lakes is the end in view of two Southern Methodist University biology professors, Drs. Elmer F. Cheatum and W. Mayne Long, who, after a year of study, have published a pamphlet telling laymen how they can better fishing conditions in their community, Dr. Cheatum said.

Based on research into better methods of fish culture, the work deals with practical application of biological principles to aquatic farming and shows how by introduction of fertilizers such as cottonseed meal, soybean meal and other substances rich in soluble nitrates into lake water, worked jointly with the two biologists in making the study.

Results obtained have attracted the attention of fishing clubs and individual fishermen in such numbers that plans have been made for the publication of a non-technical pamphlet telling laymen how they can better fishing conditions in their community, Dr. Cheatum said.

Scientist Has Answer For Budgeting Oil

SCHENECTADY, N. Y. (UP)—A self-starting clock is the answer to the problem of budgeting the use of an oil burner to stay within fuel oil ration limits, when fuel oil first was rationed.

Dr. Katherine Hodgett of the General Electric Research Laboratory here tried the recommended procedure of setting her thermostat at home to 65 degrees. It didn't work. So by determining the furnace consumption she calculated she could use the furnace 4.5 hours per day.

The rest was simple. She connected an electric clock to the furnace compressor. Each night before retiring she set the clock for midnight. The clock runs only when the furnace does. It indicates, she can tell how long the burner operated during the night. Then, by subtraction,

"WELL," began Hildy, "when I got back to the maze, father was fuming. And the first thing he did was accuse me of--of fraternizing with itinerant photographers."

"He did, eh?" exclaimed Jonah wrathfully. "Nobody can call me itinerant."

"Don't take your eye off the ball, Jonah. Father went on to say that he was very displeased with me. Of course, that wasn't news."

"Go on," said Jonah.

"Well, one thing led to another and we had a beautiful fight. And Jonah, my father showed himself in his true colors. He's a monster."

"You don't say."

"I do so. Listen! Father said that he was simply waiting for Chet to be accepted in the Air Corps. Then he's going to use his influence to have Chet stationed in Ireland or Mongolia or some other god-awful place. And the terrible part is, father really does have influence. He's this way with a lot of the brass hats and Mr. Big."

For the second time that day Jonah Logan felt a feeling akin to love for Henry L. Channing. But he said cautiously, "I appreciate that Saxton won't be much good to you rocking around in Ireland. What can I do about it, though?"

"Why, tell Chet, of course. He must be warned. Probably he can do something to offset father's scheming."

"Okay," said Jonah. "I'll tell him."

"Thanks a million, Jonah. You're a dear. Now I've got to get back. I sneaked out and they'll miss me."

"I had to. Father has impounded my car. At least he gave my tires to the scrap rubber campaign."

"Unbelievable," said Jonah. "But, naturally, I'll drive you back. First, though, how's for a look at the Terrible Eye?"

Hildy hesitated. "I oughtn't to, but... well, just a peep."

They watched as, on the screen,

SERIAL STORY

THE TERRIBLE EYE

BY EDWIN RUTT

"The Terrible Eye" has brought Hildy Channing and Jonah Logan together, through a strange series of coincidences. Jonah has been trying to obtain an interview with Hildy's father, so that he can tell Hildy of his love for her. He learns she is engaged to marry another. Much to his surprise, Hildy comes to Jonah's laboratory, tells him she is terribly worried.

JONAH STILL HOPES

CHAPTER IX

"WELL," began Hildy, "when I got back to the maze, father was fuming. And the first thing he did was accuse me of--of fraternizing with itinerant photographers."

"He did, eh?" exclaimed Jonah wrathfully. "Nobody can call me itinerant."

"Don't take your eye off the ball, Jonah. Father went on to say that he was very displeased with me. Of course, that wasn't news."

"Go on," said Jonah.

"Well, one thing led to another and we had a beautiful fight. And Jonah, my father showed himself in his true colors. He's a monster."

"You don't say."

"I do so. Listen! Father said that he was simply waiting for Chet to be accepted in the Air Corps. Then he's going to use his influence to have Chet stationed in Ireland or Mongolia or some other god-awful place. And the terrible part is, father really does have influence. He's this way with a lot of the brass hats and Mr. Big."

For the second time that day Jonah Logan felt a feeling akin to love for Henry L. Channing. But he said cautiously, "I appreciate that Saxton won't be much good to you rocking around in Ireland. What can I do about it, though?"

"Why, tell Chet, of course. He must be warned. Probably he can do something to offset father's scheming."

"Okay," said Jonah. "I'll tell him."

"Thanks a million, Jonah. You're a dear. Now I've got to get back. I sneaked out and they'll miss me."

"I had to. Father has impounded my car. At least he gave my tires to the scrap rubber campaign."

"Unbelievable," said Jonah. "But, naturally, I'll drive you back. First, though, how's for a look at the Terrible Eye?"

Hildy hesitated. "I oughtn't to, but... well, just a peep."

They watched as, on the screen,

There was a loud, regretful sigh from within the house. The living room lights went up.

Jonah snapped off the overhead lights and fiddled with mechanisms. Presently a blank oblong sprang up on the movie screen. He twisted the dial carefully. A few minutes passed. Then Jonah spoke.

"You wanted to see the Declaration of Independence," he said. "Well, that she shows."

HILDY gasped. A picture had come onto the screen. It was a view of a large high-ceilinged room. The room was filled with men in queer costumes. Men in powdered wigs and knee-breeches, who crowded around a table, evidently shouting and quite obviously gesticulating.

For a few minutes Hildy watched, in entranced silence. Then she turned away, said slowly, "Listen, Jonah! Please don't get sore, but it could be a fake, you know. This might be just a movie film you've gotten hold of somewhere. And this gadget--" she tapped the Terrible Eye--"might be some weird kind of projector."

Jonah sighed. "Always," he said, "genius has had to combat skepticism. Remember how they kicked Columbus around? I suppose you'd believe it's on the up-and-up if I showed you something that happened on your estate--say, yesterday."

Without a word Jonah worked the dial again. The Declaration of Independence went back into limbo. For a short interval the movie screen was a mass of blurs. Then, very suddenly, a much clearer picture began to appear on it.

"Jonah," said Hildy, in a contrite tone, "I take it back. Your machine's wonderful. That's our summerhouse. And the lily pond."

A figure had suddenly materialized in the background and was walking purposefully toward the summerhouse. Its costume was mannish, but it was definitely not a man.

"Why, it's Meath," Hildy said, surprised. "That new secretary of father's. Skulking about the grounds as usual."

They watched as, on the screen,

Miss Meath reached the summerhouse. They saw her glance furtively around her. Then, all at once, she put one hand to her mouth.

"Removing her bridgework, no doubt," suggested Jonah.

"No," Hildy said suddenly. "She... Jonah, I think she's whistling! Through her fingers."

Near the summerhouse was a large clump of rhododendrons. And from this cover there emerged suddenly, like a grotesque number in dimes, the toughest-looking character that either Jonah or Hildy had ever seen.

"WHAT ON earth," said Hildy, in a hushed voice, "is that?"

"But why would Meath be meeting such a--a thug at our place?"

"I don't know," said Jonah. "It's food for thought."

Hildy was quiet a moment. On the screen Meath and the grizzled individual seemed to be in earnest converse. Meath was doing the talking, with the grizzled one on the receiving end. While he listened, he fanned himself languidly with a gray felt fedora. Once, he spat in practiced fashion. The removal of the fedora revealed a round close-cropped head.

"Jonah," said Hildy meditatively, "I'm not going to say a word about this. But I'm going to do a little spying on friend Meath, for a change."

Just then the figures on the screen moved. They walked off, still in deep conversation, and were lost behind the rhododendrons.

"I'll fish around and see if we can get 'em again," said Jonah, reaching for the Terrible Eye.

"No," Hildy said, "wait. You'd better take me home."

"Jonah," Hildy said slowly, "I think you're swell guy. I really like you awfully, Jonah. If it weren't for Chet, I..."

She didn't finish it. But all at once, she raised herself on tiptoe. Lips, soft and warm, brushed Jonah's. Then she was gone.

Mr. Logan experienced a moment of sheer ecstasy. He cut a kind of dignified caper and bounded into the eavesdropping Ford.

"Ha," he said, addressing the Ford. "Ho! Did you ever hear, you mug, that while there's life, there's hope?"
