FLOOD WATERS

Greatest War tragedy For Germany

LONDON, May 19-Raging lood waters loosed in Germany by the RAF's blasting of two of Germany's largest dams were said today to be continuing their devasting work. Loss of life and property could not be accurately estimated though some reports said that at least 1000 persons had been drown in the torrents.

Riots were reported to have broken out in parts of the Ruhr valley still threatened by the oncoming waters. Fifty-four towns are said to be inunated with important industries crippled and even greater industrial centers threatened and possibly now flooded.

Parts of Kassel, an aircraft U-boat, tank and artillery manufacturing town thirty-five miles downstream from the rapidly emptying Eder Dam, are under

THE thunderheads of inflation now forming on the economic horizon get bigger and blacker every hour. Prices are rising, wages are ising, national income is spiraling up in a whirlwind that carries with it increased purchasing power and in whose vortex is a $40 billion inflationary gap.

In spite of this storm warning, there is every indication that when the House of Representatives again takes up tax legislation during the first week in May it will put through some form of tax forgiveness. It may not be pure Ruml plan which in its original conception called for forgiveness of a whole year's taxes to put tax collection on a current basis. It will probably be a compromise with that idea, tailored to fit the whims of Congress and the popular notion that forgiveness of taxes is nice And it would be good news to many taxpayers learn that half of their tax bill for 1942 would

e forgiven, as the new bill reported out by the House Ways and Means Committee proposes. But what has been entirely overlooked is that for every tax dollar whose collection is canceled, the threat of inflation is just that much more real, comes just that much closer. IT is seriously to be questioned if this is a time to think of canceling any taxes. Maybe it's too late to talk of avoiding inflation. Inflation may already be here. But if the menaces of inflation are to he kept under any kind of control at all, now is the time not to talk , of fergiving taxes, but, if anything, of increasing taxes.

That is a highly unpopular doctrine to espouse and that is why you no longer hear the golden voices rising in Congress or out to decry the idea of tax forgiveness and to plead for higher taxes and still higher taxes to stop inflation. The administration has fought a losing battle on this policy right from the start, . Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, Jr., has expressed himself as satisfied with the tax bill now before the House. He could do little else. At this late date it is essential that the Treasury know what its tax program is to be for the coming year, and the administration seems to what helplessly pleading that any kind of a tax bill now is better than no tax bill at all.

AST year, it was October before tax legislation was completed. This year, to delay passage beyond May 15 would be disastrous. The tax reforms proposed in shifting to a pay-as-you-go tax plan are admit edly important, requiring careful consideration and full

"The Ruml plan" is a good trade name that catches the eye and the ear. It is a Sottle of medicine that has been smartly merchandised, but oversold as something that would put tax collections on a current basis. That it would do, but the hidden ingredient in the bottle and the potential poison is its power to induce inflation by forgiving taxes The Ruml plan in its original form was not pay-as-you-go taxa-on. Pay-as-you-go taxation means deducting taxes from your pay envelope and other income at the source, before you get your hands on it. The revised House tax bill is on sound ground in advocating these withholding taxes of 20 per cent, for they are definitely anti-inflationary. Tax forgiveness, in any form, isn'i,
