WASHINGTON COLUMN

BY PETER EDSON NEA Washington Correspondens

WASHINGTON, D. C .- When the Senate Foreign Relations Com-WASHINGTON, D. C.—When the Senate Foreign Relations Committee was considering ratification of President Roosevelt's six nominations for Assistant Secretaryships in the Department of State, Senator Claude Pepper of Florida brought up the issue of American policy with regard to the Spanish revolution and the Spanish dictator, Francisco Franco. Specifically, Pepper cited four pages in Sumner Wellea's recent book, "The Time for Decision," in which the former Undersecretary summed up the situation by saying that "Of all our blind isolationist policies, the most disastrous was our attitude

Referring to the pressure of peace-at-any-price organizations at the end of 1936, to amend existing neutrality legislation to prevent shipment of arms to the Spanish Republican forces, Pepper read the Welles passage which says that when the Senate Poresing Relations Committee again for State Persister.

"You are trying to protect the neutrality of this country, to pretime not sacrificing unduly the interest of our own people by the enactment of this demestic legislation. It is a tremendous step

THUS advised, wrote Welles, Congress revised the neutrality legis-Germany and Fascist Italy and helped bring on the European war.

Welles says that President Roosevelt recognized this danger and hat when the Spanish arms embargo act came to him for signature,

"he expressed in writing the deep disquiet it caused him and the regret with "hich he signed it."

The statement came from the-late R. Walton Moore, who was then Assistant Secretary of State and from 1937 until his death in 1941 was Counselor to Secretary Hull.

Counselor to Secretary Hull.

THE responsibility which Welles puts on Moore's shoulders is not, however, as great as might appear from the Welles book, for in tracking down the crucial policy statement to its correct source, it has also been disclosed that Moore did not make the statement in December, 1936, as Welles says he did, but in January, 1936. This was six menths before the revolution broke out in Spain. Furthermore, Moore made this statement with reference not to the Spanish arms embargo act, but to another measure which was never passed.

There is another point of confusion in the Welles statement that the President was out of the country while the Spanish arms embargo policy was being adopted by Congress. The President, Hull and Welles had gone to the Inter-American Peace conference in Buenos Aires toward the end of 1936. But the Spanish policy had been determined and announced previously by the President and R. Walton Moore on Aug. 22, and the President returned to Washington on Dec. 16. So the President was in on the whole play.

It was Welles who was out of the country. He stopped off in Rio, and in the intervening years his memory played him a dirty trick. The President's message of regret was over the earlier neutrality action the Spanish embargo.

not the Spanish embargo.
