* WASHINGTON COLUMN

BY DOUGLAS LARSEN , NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON, D. C .- Although the war has been over for two months, mop-up operations are just beginning in the Battle of the Pentagon, with nobody quite sure who won that one.

Weary girls, obviously victims of typewriter fatigue, stare vacantly at empty file cabinet foxholes. Bombed-out desks, evacuated by hastily retreating officers and office girls, stand littered with papers, mute evidence to the fury of the fray. Litter bearers trudge slowly hrough the ruins, pushing wounded typewriters and adding machines to storage hospitals.

A few shock troops-military personnel with low point scores and civil service personnel with high reduction-in-force scores—are being moved into advance sectors, where some fighting still continues. Everywhere are gathered groups of Pentagon prisoners who have arrendered but haven't been moved out of the battle zone yet. They drink an endless number of cokes and gallons of coffee. They joke among themselves, scoff at the few who have assignments to carry out, and mostly discuss the fate of their former comrades who are gone and now referred to as "missing in action."

MILITARY restrictions in the Pentagon have been relaxed considerably since fighting has been confined to a few scattered fronts. It is no longer necessary for a visitor to be accompanied by or armed guard. Battle scavengers and ordinary sightseers still aren't permitted inside, but wives and children of many of the veterans of the campaign are getting unofficial tours of inspection.

Visitors are being cautioned to carry at least a two-day ration supply lest they lose their way in the no-man's land, now that they're allowed to wander unescorted. Military personnel no longer are required to show identification before they are admitted into the zone. if they aren't on official business they enter at their own risk.

Some enemy sniper fire still exists in the form of congressmen and oliticians who have their sights trained on several of the generals in the Pentagon Theater of Operations.

DROVING that the U.S. doughboy didn't lose his sense of humor even during this battle, are several signs left on the walls. One "Why be difficult when it's only a little more trouble to be im-

And in Gen. Brehon Somerville's private office these words are written beneath a mounted fish with a mouth wide open. The fish and sign are in plain view to anybody sitting on the couch opposite his deak:

"If I had kept my mouth shut I wouldn't be here." Key figure in the Pentagon fray since its start is Capt. K. H. Ripnen from New York City. He's one of the country's best experts on the proper use of office space. His work in Rockefeller Center qualified him for the Pentagon assignment. It's been his job to see that every-body had the proper space and that it was used most efficiently, and to supervise rescue parties for lost visitors. He says the Pentagon is ideally suited for its purpose and could most effectively be turned into a store house for documents or made into a convalescent hospital.

A FEW years ago, the increasing divorce rate and the vogue for Paris divorces was alarming. But even then I felt that marriage has more important beforehand.

Divorces grow, frequently, out of the inability of two people to merge into a single entity. This trouble is usually because they are completely unlike. Naturally, that is why the Little Church Around the Corner refuses to marry people who know little of one another and who are starting mar-riage under a terrific handicap.

There is much talk these days about the cause and inevitability of divorce. But, paradoxically enough, the very fact that divorces are so numerous indicates that the standards of the people as a whole are being raised rather than lowered.

I mean by that that our ideals are so much higher than they used to be that it becomes increasingly nard to live up to them. It used to be that, when a man and woman married, the man earned the money and the woman did as he told her, spent what he allowed her, kept the home reared the children, belonged ner husband and her family, without regard to her own ambitions, hopes, or

Just as we have got rid of slavery, so we have got rid of the slave wife. Both men and women are escaping from the marriage in which freedom, growth, and service cannot play a part. That is why we see so many divorces. Marriage is not a feudal owner-ship of another person by a husfirmly that marriage should be a permanent relationship, I whink that when people are too utterly unlike, it is criminal to keep them together. There are always exceptional cases for which divorce should be made more clastic.

I remember one young woman who came to me in despair. "What shall I do?" she said. "My husband is an utter weakling. I cannot break him of his habit of drinking, and he is a most offen-sive person when he is drunk. My love for him is dead. My respect for him is dead. I have nothing but my marriage vows which I

"Drinking," I said, "is a weak person's escape from his own in-adequacy. Does he love you?"
