Well... I Dunno, But...

People of Ranger have the opportunity this week to contribute to two worthwhile local projects. Elks are soliciting funds for the purchase of an iron lung for the community's use and they are also sponsoring a dance Saturday night, proceeds from which will go to one of their fellow members who was the victim recently of an unfortunate accident.

It doesn't take much from any one if everyone participates in the causes but the mite you give will be a link in the chain of the whole that will serve well.

We've never known of a good deed that didn't repay the donor many times and good deeds have a strange way of coming home. The iron lung, which has a multitude of uses for saving life will be available for use wherever needed, for you the individual that helps to buy it. And who knows where the need may strike.

Like we always say, leave it to the Jaycees to do it up brown. They had a rousing good banquet Monday night with all of the fancy trimmings including a bouquet for us that pleased us mightily. Yes sir, those boys know the way to a gal's heart. Say it with flowers as the florists advertise.

And if anyone of the guests present had ever had any doubt as to the enthusiasm of that group, he had all doubts dispelled Monday night. The way those boys cooperate with each other with a lot of fun poking, etc., would impress the deaf and dumb.

They had the state president here Monday night, but so far as we're concerned, it could have been the president of the United States and we'd still have been proud of the way they put it over.

The weather man is promising us another cold snap and even promising it for two days. Now, we wouldn't want to make any suggestive comparisons, but that's just the way he did us the last time. He kept promising, and promising, until he had us doubting and then he let us have it full blast.

We do notice that comparative temperatures are lower today than yesterday with the maximum for today eight degrees lower than yesterday. That may be a good start, so now if those water pipes freeze, don't say we didn't warn you.

One man warned us this morning that he didn't want to see anything in the Ranger Times about coming cold weather. We wish we could accommodate him, but we merely print what the weather man sends on to us, and what we read on our own thermometers after the weather gets here.

Most sensible statement read yet on the Lewis-UMW contempt cases was that made by Attorney General Tom Clark today when he told the Supreme Court what it is the government is seeking to do. Notice, too, that some of the portal-to-portal pay suits are a bit to be withdrawn.

Now that begins to look like the boys might get together and get things worked out sensibly and without any hard feelings. Arbitration is a wonderful thing for the settlement of difficulties that is provided it can be done without either side getting huffy, and with everybody keeping their shirts on.

All seems to be quiet on the sugar front and on the prices of dresses. Maybe the boys have decided that they were treading a little heavy on the feelings of the female side of the country.

THE UN AND WORLD GOVERNMENT

It would not be surprising if 1947 were to see considerable progress toward the idea of some sort of world government. Some progress, of course, already has been made. There is a growing unofficial enthusiasm for the idea in this and other countries. And in England the government has put itself on record as favoring a super-government of the world's states.

But our guess is that if any favorable sentiment develops where it counts most—in the American and Russian governments—the impetus will come not from the efforts of the enthusiasts, but from the very nature of world problems.

It must be increasingly apparent, even to those most reluctant to admit it, that the UN as presently organized is more of an international debating society than a union of nations. It is in about the same plight that the United States would be with no means of enforcing the provisions of the Constitution, and no executive or judicial branches to assist in carrying out the laws passed by Congress.

The much-discussed veto is an excellent illustration of the UN's weakness. What the veto really means is that the world's most powerful nations are willing to go through the motions of international good will and united action so long as there is nothing particularly vital at stake.

At any other level of government the UN arrangement would be unthinkable. No small city would dream of trying to keep the peace without courts, a police force, and enforceable laws. Yet the UN, being without a body of enforceable law, cannot curb a great power's indulgence in lawlessness.

The members of the United Nations must surely see these weaknesses whenever a difficulty arises. But, with the exception of Britain, they have made no public proposal of the obvious solution. The reason, of course, is clear.

All the UN delegations seem to feel that they have a mandate from their countrymen to protect and preserve that sovereignty, and guard it from insult and disparagement. But if that is their feeling, we think that they are wrong.

We don't hesitate to say that the people of the world would feel a lot more comfortable under a real world government, acting in most cases by a simple majority and with each nation represented on the basis of its population, which had the strength to enforce world disarmament and the utilization of atomic energy, and to supervise world trade.

Perhaps during 1947, the shape of the world's problems will force international statesmen to face the obvious solution squarely, before suspicious sovereignty precipitates a crisis in which action will be impossible.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(NEA)—How much restraint the victorious Republicans will show in dipping into the public till will be a matter worth watching in the new Congress. While "Economy" and "Stop Government Spending" were two of the principal battle cries of the Republicans in the last campaign, every congressman likes to do something handsome for his home folks, particularly at government expense.

This activity will show up clearly when Department of Interior appropriations come up for action. In his message of a year ago President Truman came out strongly for development of the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Seaway project, and for creation of Columbia and Missouri River Valley Authorities.

Democratic Sen. Hugh Mitchell of Washington sponsored Columbia Valley legislation in the last Congress. He wasn't re-elected. But Democratic Sen. James E. Murray of Montana, who backed the Missouri Valley plan, and Republican Sen. George D. Aiken of Vermont, who was the longest-winded speaker for the St. Lawrence project, are both back and are sure to be heard from.

ONE of the big talking points for Department of Interior in Congress has been to spread them around, getting a number for each state. A national park or monument here, a fish and wildlife preserve there, a dam, forest or reclamation project out yonder. A little simple, old-fashioned log-rolling gets most of them passed.

But this year, under White House and Budget Bureau pressure for down-holding and a general reluctance of the Democratic executive to ask the Republicans for anything they may not give, many of these pet projects may be scratched off the boards.

The legislation to be asked for on behalf of the Department of Interior is representative of the broad field of activities it covers. Most of it was requested from but not acted on by the last Congress.

Creation of an Evacuation Claims Commission to handle claims for property lost by U. S. citizens of Japanese extraction during their detention in War Relocation Centers is one such project.

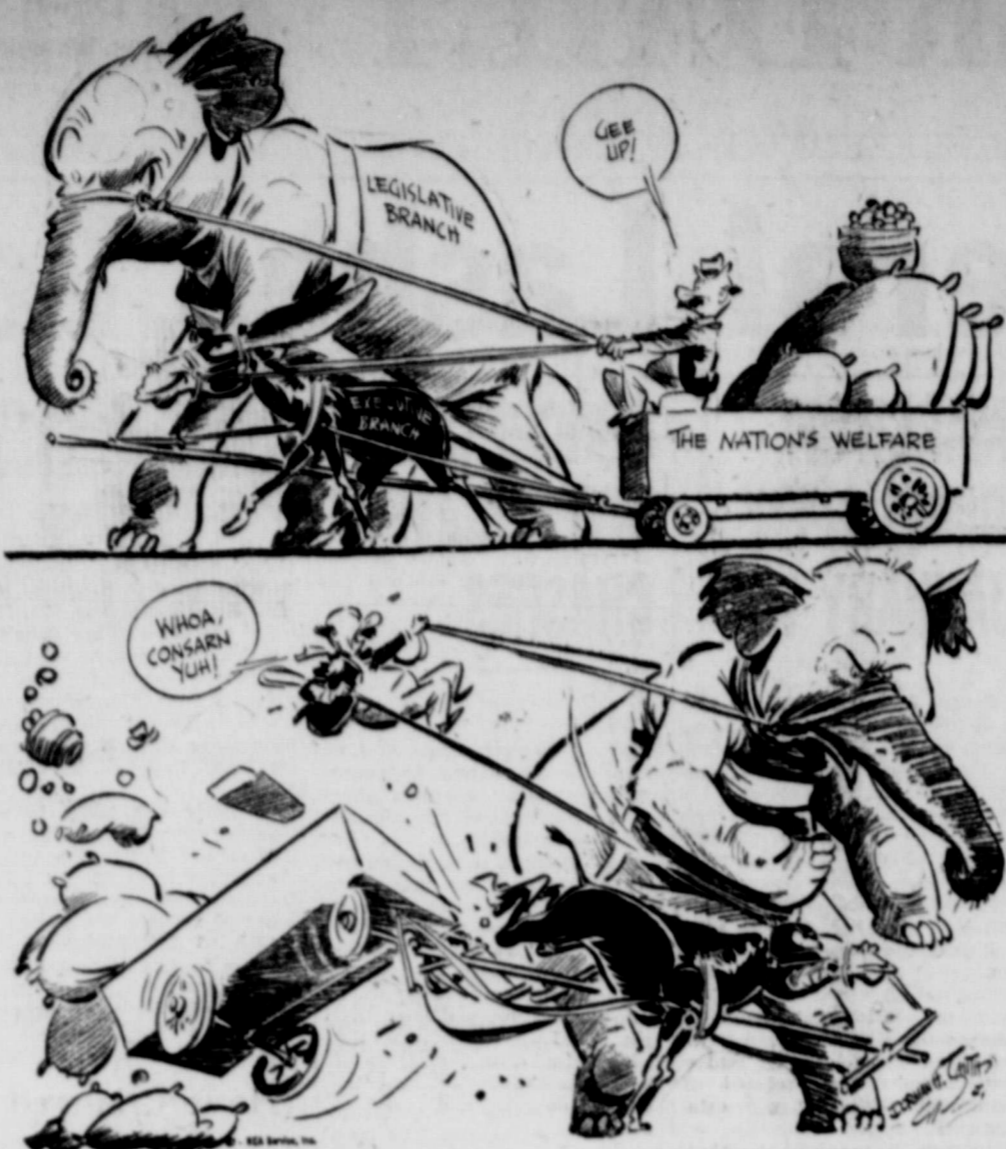

STATEHOOD for Hawaii and Alaska will come up, with a good chance the former may be granted. Secretary of Interior J. A. Krug visited Alaska last summer and has ambitious plans to open up the territory to new settlers—particularly veterans.

Provision for a plebiscite in Puerto Rico to determine the islanders' preferences on statehood, dominion status or territorial government will probably be before Congress again.

Establishment of territorial government for Guam, taking it out of the hands of the Navy, is another project. Passage of a new organic act providing basic civil government for all the liberated islands of the Pacific will be a controversial issue.

Indian affairs will inspire a number of requests for additional legislation from the new Congress. Among them will be a bill to provide a uniform code of descent for Indians whose estates and wills now have to be settled under varying state laws.

NEW YORK—(NEA)—Branch Rickey starts the new year right in his old-year form by telling the incredible Brooklyn bugs that close to $500,000 worth of new talent will join them Beautiful Bums before they again start playing for keeps, April 15.

Pitchers who can pitch and players who can scoot continue to fall as President Rickey shakes the farm trees. Brother Rickey insists that southpaw Johnny Van Cuyk, third baseman and outfielder Boris Woyt and outfielder Marvin Rackley alone represent a value of more than $200,000.

"Had we paid $100,000 for Van Cuyk, there would be a whole lot more hullabaloo about him," chuckles the Mahatma of Montague Street. "He would be touted as the find of the winter. But the fact that we had Johnny with our Fort Worth club getting ready, and that he comes up without too much big league publicity, doesn't detract from his chances. In fact, I believe he will be helped by the situation. There will be no pressure on him, no press notices to live up to."

FIGURES speak eloquently for the 25-year-old, six-foot one-inch, 190-pound Van Cuyk, who compiled the exceedingly stingy earned-run average of 1.42, striking out 207 in 234 innings, helping the Cats to the pennant. Winning 18 while losing eight, with most of his losses real heart-breakers, Van Cuyk, robust resistor of Kimberly, Wis., spun a one-hitter, four two-hitters and a three-hitter, pitching 18 complete engagements.

Woyt—26, 5-11, 175—was, in the opinion of numerous competent judges, the best-looking athlete with the Fort Worth club that dominated the Texas League season. A right-handed hitter, this Linden, N. J. lad batted an even 300, swiped 50 bases, and when he wasn't roaming the outfield appeared to be something out of the ordinary at third base.

Marv Rackley—25, 5-10, 170 and left-handed all the way—batted .306 and stole 63 bases for the Montreal outfit that tow-roped the International League field. THIS trio, joining southpaw Woyt, Minner and right-hander Harry Taylor, who reported to the Dodgers late last season, is only the beginning.

You have to go back to the old Cardinal chains to find one as well stocked as that of the Brooklynns today. Players like Jackie Robinson, the fleet Negro infielder who led International League batters at the first opportunity, for instance, are not yet definitely mentioned in connection with the plans of the parent body. Reiser, Whitman, Miksis, Woyt, Rackley, Robinson, and Maynard DeWitt, who will likely lead off for Montreal next summer, cracked all records by hitting 109 bases for the Brooklyn subsidiary at Zanesville, O., last season.

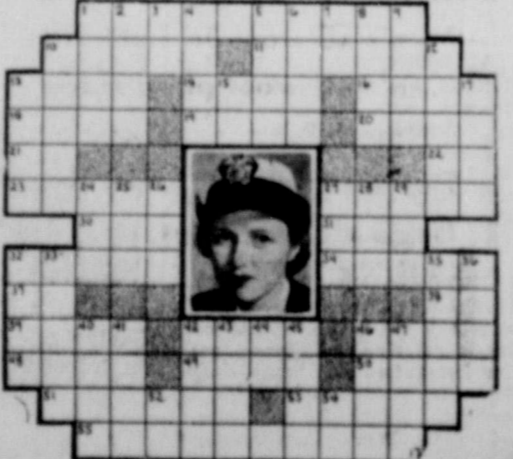

Opposing pitchers, catchers and players will have to keep their heads up. Dodgers will attempt to steal or take that extra base at the slightest slip. They'll make 'em throw them out. Brooklyn branches dominated the minors in 1946, a certain sign of National League things to come.

Branch Rickey was baseball's first farmer, unless he hasn't forgotten how to harvest the crop. A right-handed hitter, this Linden, N. J. lad batted an even 300, swiped 50 bases, and when he President Truman estimates that it will take $37,528,000,000 to run the U. S. during the 1947-48 fiscal year. If America's 140,000,000 people chipped in equally to pay this, it would cost every man, woman and child $268.

Juke Box Doctor Trips Druggist

SACRAMENTO, Cal. (UP)—A medical "juke box" that purported to tell drug store visitors the remedy to take for various ailments has earned a San Francisco druggist a citation for violation of state health laws. The state department of public health tells the story: "This pharmacist had constructed an electrical selector, similar to the well-known 'juke box' on which a patron selects various musical selections, and had modified the gadget to show a prospective purchaser the remedy to use for various ailments of symptoms. "His list included, to name but a few: diabetes, failing memory, gray hair, heart trouble, peptic ulcer, sexual impotence, and tooth decay." The same druggist also was cited for selling boric acid. He glanced up at the sign that hung from a structure that reminded him oddly of a gallows. THE SADDLEBACK INN. A little puff of wind swayed the sign. It cracked.

There were mountains, reasonably high and unreasonably beautiful. One of them was a little too close to the inn, so that the western sun would slip behind it, with astonishing swiftness, leaving the valley in a broad cool shadow that spoke of evening mists and sudden showers.

He dropped his cigarette on the blue-stone gravel drive, crushed it out carefully with his heel, and went inside. Late September sun poured through the big vista windows on to the fluted white columns. The wicker chairs were covered with cretonne. Green and black, wide-striped, cool, spacious and very neat.

He crossed the lobby and picked up the pen. He was aware of two white hands that placed the register card under his pen. The hands fluttered. Then a long white finger pointed.

"If you will sign there, please," Pike signed. He read the name on the metal plaque on the desk: ON DUTY: MR. LESKEY HITT. He looked at Mr. Hitt. Mr. Hitt's pale blue eyes were fixed on Pike's signature. He had a mouth like a flexed bow.

"You have reservations, Mr. Calvin?" he asked.

"No," Pike said.

Mr. Hitt hesitated. His pale eyes flicked over Pike's luggage and back to Pike. He wanted Pike to explain why he had no reservations. But Pike merely waited. Then Mr. Hitt reached behind him and got a key.

"Henry," he said, and beckoned with a long white forefinger. A bellboy appeared, very rosy-cheeked and straight-backed.

"Take Mr. Calvin to 311."

PIKE followed Henry into the elevator. Henry put down the bags and took his station at the controls. But he did not start the car. He just stood there.

"What's wrong?" Pike said.

"Miss Tudor," Henry said.

"Why?"

Henry pointed.

A girl had just entered the lobby and was coming toward the elevator. Pike could see her shining auburn hair bound with a head velvet band. Silently he watched her approach the elevator.

She was wearing slacks and she wore them well. She had on a forest green gabardine shirt with a long pointed collar and big flap pockets. She stepped into the car. She said:

"Thank you, Henry," and glanced briefly at Pike out of lovely green eyes that were cool and speculative. Behind that virginal stare Pike sensed a troubled spirit.

The girl got off at two. A small desolation settled over the fragrance she had left in the car. Henry made a neat landing at three and propped open the car door. He carried Pike's bags along the corridor. The carpet

A girl had just entered the lobby and was coming toward the elevator.

"Miss Tudor," Henry said.

"What's wrong?" Pike said.

Henry unlocked 311, put the bags on the racks, and opened the windows. The fresh tang of mountain air invaded the room. Pike took out a dollar bill.

"Henry," he gave Henry the bill. "What did you say that girl's name is?"

"Henry unbent so far as to smile appreciatively.

"Miss Tudor, sir."

"Thank you, Henry."

Henry left. Pike stared thoughtfully about him.

Miss Tudor. That was an uncommonly attractive girl. This business could have its pleasant interludes.

It wasn't a bad room. But it was right under that cliff so that he would get little sun and the full benefit of night fogs.

He had begun to unstrap his bags when the telephone tinkled dispiritedly.

"Hello," Pike said.

"Mr. Calvin?" It was Mr. Hitt. His voice was as smooth as syrup.

"Yes."

"New York is calling."

The receiver crackled, then someone said:

"Hello—Pike?"

"Hello, Sam."

THE connection was not good. There was an open circuit somewhere and Sam said:

"Can you hear me?"

"Yes."

"Well, listen. Can you call me back?"

"Sure, Sam."

"When?"

Pike looked at his watch.

"About 2?"

"Fine," Sam paused. The circuit was still open. There was a faint distant whining in the receiver.

"From outside," Sam said.

"Of course," Pike said. "Anything wrong?"

"No," Sam said. "Not here." He stopped. Then said said very plainly, "Who's listening in?"

"It may be someone on the switchboard," Pike said.

The whirring stopped. The connection became clear as Sam said:

"That's what I thought. Don't forget. Two o'clock."

"Your office," Pike said.

"My office."

"You sound serious."

"Well," Sam said, "it isn't funny."

"Okay."

Pike hung up. He stared down at the phone. It gave another faint tinkle. Pike picked it up and a voice flowed into the receiver.

"Desk. Mr. Hitt speaking."

"This thing rang," Pike said.

"Just ringing off," Mr. Hitt said.

Pike set down the phone. He frowned. Mr. Hitt's shell-like ear, he thought, is never very far from that telephone. He was very well placed down at that desk, with the main switchboard under his hand and all entrances and exits under his eye. He was practically ubiquitous.

Pike shaved and showered. He examined himself in the mirror. He was agreeably tanned. A bit lean and leathery perhaps. He could do with a spot of sleep. But he would pass.

He descended to the lobby by the stairway. Mr. Hitt saw him as he entered the lobby. There was something expectant and watchful about Mr. Hitt.

On And Off The Square At Eastland

By FRANK A. JONES

Found County Tax Assessor-Collector, Neil Day, Monday with a crew of men cleaning out a lot of old and obsolete records from the storage room on the first floor of the courthouse. He said it was necessary to make room for some additional permanent records. Nothing, it was important to keep, was being destroyed.

County Agent J. M. Cooper states that according to reports reaching his office, livestock losses in the county from the recent severe freeze were limited to only a few head of goats. Cooper and others stated, however, that many birds, including some quail were killed.

County Agent J. M. Cooper, who is secretary of the Eastland County Livestock Association, stated first of the week that M. E. Fry, president of the Association, was asking for a meeting of all association directors to be held at the Chamber of Commerce in Cisco, Friday night, January 17, at 7:30. Plans for the annual stock show are to be discussed.

"Dug" Barton, Constable of the Eastland precinct, and who has been engaged in the real estate business, has severed his connection with the real estate firm of Barton, Pentecost and Company, in order to devote his full time to the duties of his office.

Lee Black of Wheeler County and son of the late Judge R. M. Black, one of the early County Judges of Eastland County, was in Eastland this week visiting old friends, looking after some property he owns in the County and visiting familiar places. Born in Eastland 62 years ago, Black moved when five years of age, with his parents to Sabanno, in Eastland County, where he resided for about 19 years before moving to Wheeler County.

N. B. (Nate) Gray, pioneer Eastland county farmer-stockman of the Mangum Community, was transacting business at the Courthouse Monday in the office of Justice of the Peace E. E. Wood. Gray's son, J. H., with his family, have moved to Eastland and reside at the extreme southern end of Sennan Street.

Sheriff J. B. Williams and his men, assisted by representatives of the State Liquor Control Board, struck swiftly and hard a few days ago in an effort to catch some liquor law violators and as a result, one man was arrested and charged in three cases: one for transporting whiskey and one for unlawfully carrying a gun. They confiscated his car, valued at $1,000 and fines aggregating $1,750 were assessed against him. It is understood that he will make bond, if he has not already done so, and replevy his car.

In another move by the Sheriff's force an Eastland County citizen was taken in charge and charged with violating the liquor laws in two cases were filed against him. He was fined $400 in each case.

We intend to make more," he promised.

CONFIDENCE EXPRESSED BY FORD OFFICIAL

DEARBORN, Mich.—Sounding a strong note of confidence in the future of the Ford Motor Company and American industry, Ernest R. Breech, the company's executive vice-president, said today in a year-end statement that "the best way to prevent foreign ideas from taking firm root in this country is for us to have a well-run, successful, prosperous America with the largest practicable security for the individual and the highest possible standard of living for all."

Indication that Ford expects to take the lead in efforts to reduce the present costs of cars was seen in Mr. Breech's prediction that prices in general will spiral downward in 1947. He pointed out that Ford's first objective is to produce more and better cars and trucks at lower costs.

"At the same time," he added, "we expect to make a major contribution toward raising the standards of living for all the people of this country."

Labor received assurance from Mr. Breech's statement that Ford's efforts to reduce production costs so that cars can be sold to the American public at lower prices did not mean lower wages.

"But it does mean," he said, "higher efficiency and output all along the line."

Citing Ford's policy of fostering good will between management and employees, Mr. Breech said that Ford's contribution as a manufacturer toward industrial peace would be to continue during 1947 "to do everything within our power" to eliminate conflict. "We already have made substantial progress toward confidence and understanding between labor and management, but GALVESTON, Tex., (UP)—A 50-star flag is ready in Galveston if Alaska and Hawaii should gain admittance to the union.

The modern Betsy Ross—Mrs. Rhoda Crawford Tryman—has prepared a United States flag with two new stars added. It also carries a symbolic picture of the four freedoms.

The flag is broken up into four fields of stars, four stars across and three down in each field. A space separates each field.

Joining the four fields in the center are two stars for the territories, placed horizontally. The flag is orthodox otherwise.

RIN TIN TIN, III GOING INTO MOVIES

RIVERSIDE, Cal. (UP) — Rin Tin Tin III, following the paw prints of his famous grandfather and father has entered the movies.

Scion of one of dogdom's most illustrious families, Rin II makes his film debut in "Rin Tin Tin Returns," a technicolor production now being released.

When he is not appearing before Hollywood's whirling cameras Rin III lives on an 80-acre ranch near here with his owner, Lee Duncan. The ranch was paid for by the movie earnings of the earlier Rin Tin Tins.

Duncan found the original Rin, a week old war orphan, in a concrete dugout at St. Mihiel, France, in September, 1918. Duncan named the dog for good luck dolls found in France, and brought him home when the war was over.

Rin I made his first picture, "Where the North Begins," in 1921. During his 14 years he made 22 movies, which brought $332,000 to Duncan. Producer Darryl Zanuck used to be a dialogue writer on his first pictures.

The second Rin carried on the family tradition, appearing in "Tough Guy" in 1935 and "Hollywood Cavalcade" in 1938.

Rin III was born five years ago but had to postpone his movie debut till he got out of the Army. He served in the K-9 corps for three years.

U. S. Gets More Dentists
CHICAGO (UP) — Dental schools in the United States graduated 2,666 new dentists in the 1945-46 school year, the second largest number in recent history, the council on dental education of the American Dental Association announced. The war time peak of 3,212 received diplomas in 1944-45.

SCIENCE AT WORK

By Dan L. Thrapp and Robert Musel United Press Staff Correspondents

LONDON (UP)—The famous scientist who 30 years ago said, "Death is the price man pays for his brain," was being unduly pessimistic.

Research authorities, toiling with infinite patience, are making progress in the struggle to understand this most marvelous of the body's mechanisms.

When Dr. Alexis Carrel made his comment, he wanted to stress dramatically that man as a simple mass of protoplasm might exist into the centuries, just as the piece of the heart of a chicken embryo which was kept alive for years in a solution at the Rockefeller Institute in New York.

It is the brain which gives true life and often—because it has been so little understood—death. But since then much has been learned about the brain. Now Professor Le Gros Clark of Oxford University is helping add another mite to the precious sum of knowledge.

Among Prof. Clark's researches is work on how the eye and brain ingeniously combine to produce from three primary colors all the shades of the rainbow. Preliminary evidence, he said, tends to confirm a 150 year old theory that the retina of the eye actually "sees" only the colors, red, green, and violet. Then the brain takes over and blends these three into the proper proportions to reflect whatever colors the subject is looking at—blue, yellow, orange, in fact, all the modulations of the spectrum.

"Presumably," Prof. Clark said "this blending occurs in the visual center of grey matter lying on the surface of the brain because cases have been recorded in which injuries to the visual center in this area have, in fact, led to color blindness."

From an interview with Prof. Clark these facts, old and new emerged:

The speed of a nerve impulse—the wave of electric activity which sweeps along the protoplasmic fibers of the nerve to the spinal cord or brain—is perhaps 100 yards a second.

All sensations—cold, heat, pain touch etcetera—have their own special kind of sense organs. The late Prof. Woolard of London's University College, who demonstrated this, did so by mapping out sensitive areas on his own skin, snipping off bits and examining them under the microscope.

Most of the important nerve systems have been located in the maze of the spinal cord and brain by painstaking examination of degenerated or injured nerves linked with the known effect they have had on the body.

"If someone keeps his eyes fixed on a landscape we know to the minute fraction of an inch the exact points in the grey matter of the brain where all the individual points in the field of his vision are registered."

Scientists believe they have located the portion of the brain which deals with "self" in deep-seated masses of grey matter situated near the base—a very ancient part—of the brain.

Injury here will lead a patient to say "I feel I MUST jerk my hand." On the other hand, injury to the surface of the brain—the cerebral cortex—will lead a patient to say, "My hand will jump OF ITS OWN ACCORD."

ed with the known effect they have had on the body.

Tells Tow To Make Family Budget Success

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (UP)—Wives who have to toe the budget line have been given the following rules by Mrs. Elsie Stapleton, a budget counselor to young married couples for 11 years:

1. Be optimistic and businesslike—not rebellious—as you approach your budget making.
2. Figure on minimum income and maximum outgo.
3. Decide what you want most out of life.
4. Live on your own budget, not the Joneses.
5. Call the entire family in on budget discussions.

6. Expect no immediate miracles. Your budget won't be accurate on the first draft.

Roughly speaking, Mrs. Stapleton says that one third of a family's income should go for housing, one-third for food, 13 per cent for clothes and cleaning, 10 per cent for savings and 10 per cent for fun.
