RANGER DAILY TIMES

29th YEAR

RANGER, TEXAS, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 11, 1947

PRICE FIVE CENTS No. 10

The Ranger Daily Times is the oldest daily newspaper in Eastland County, the first edition appearing on June 1, 1919.

Well...
I Dunno,
But...

A man in Longview says that he learned about the town from the telephone directory. He said that in the battle of colors, Brown won hands down with 37 listed against 17 Whites, 13 Greens, and six Blacks.

T. J. Spindle tells us that the We insurance company for which he works has paid over $260,000 claims in Texas City. Furthermore the company believes that it was the first to pay a claim on life insurance following the disaster. They paid a claim at 10 o'clock of the morning following the first explosion. Too, they have paid a number of claims where the bodies of the insured were never found. The claims were settled on the basis of the fact that the insured was in the explosion area at the time of the explosion.

The company set up a special division to handle claims from the disaster and the personnel of this division did nothing for weeks but work on those claims. If one company alone has paid out that much, we'd like to know what the total from all companies is.

It were hot Tuesday, weren't it? Well, you should have been hit the 98 mark to reach the highest maximum temperature of the season.

Myrl, who is the son of Mrs. S. E. Squires, has entered the School of Government at the University of Illinois. He will receive his degree in one of the South American countries. He was valedictorian of the 1947 class of Ranger Junior College, president of the class and president of Phi Theta Kappa, national scholarship fraternity.

Today is the sixteenth anniversary of our coming to Ranger. We thought that it would be our home for only a few months, but it turned out that we're like the "Man who came to dinner". For exactly half of those sixteen years we've been working on the paper and those eight years have been filled with pleasant associations with the people of Ranger. There've been a lot more pleasant dealings than unpleasant.

Of course, there was the woman who laughed out loud, right in our ear when she called for the editor on the phone and we answered.

Like we've said before, we have noticed that people who move away from Ranger, always want to come back and after sixteen years here we think we know why. It's a good place to live.

Another one of Ranger's talented young ladies will be graduating from college next week. She is Elsie Hummel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hummel.

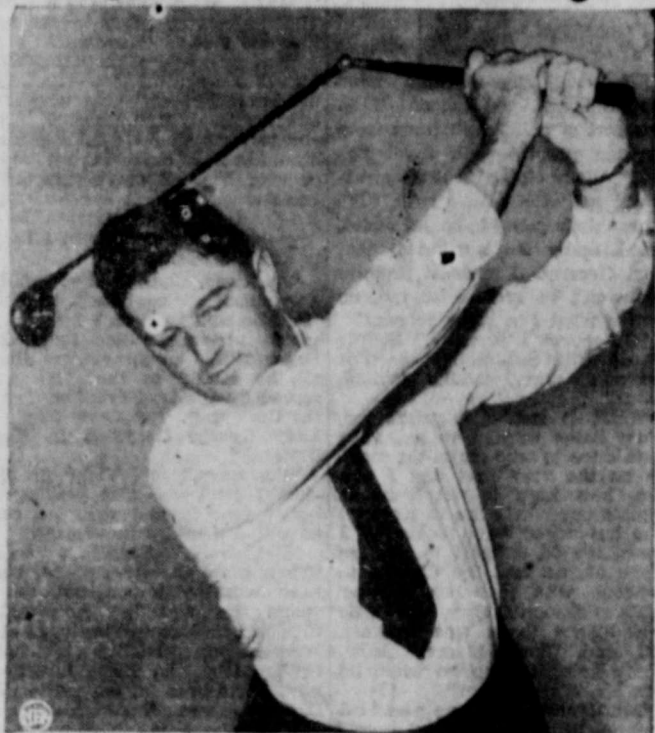

Elsie will receive her B.S. degree in music from the American Conservatory of Music in Chicago on Tuesday, June 17 and Mrs. Hummel will go up to Chicago for the commencement exercises.

If you think the kids don't like their Teen Canteen, just let somebody mention closing it and then hear 'em holler. Like we've said before the Teen Canteen has been a success in Ranger and has been a source of a lot of good times for the kids of high school and college age.

Emphasis on Follow-Through

Amateur Sanford Fredricks of Cleveland demonstrates novel club he designed to give the player correct emphasis on follow-through. The loose clubhead end, carrying most of club's weight, pulls on arms as it follows prescribed arc. The ball-and-socket attachment can be put on any wood, and club can be partially unscrewed for practice, or tightened for play.

BOB KING TO COACH AT ILLINOIS U.

R. O. King has received word that his son, Robert B. (Bob) King, until recently assistant coach at Furman University in Greenville, S. C., has accepted the position of end coach at the University of Illinois.

Coach King is severing a 14-year connection with Furman, having played four years on the University team and upon graduation from the school was placed on the coaching staff. In 1933 he was named All-Southern conference end.

A sports writer on a Greenville paper praises Coach King and headed the story about his leaving with this, "The sun was shining brightly on Furman's oak-shaded campus yesterday, but in the sunlight an unexpected shadow lengthened across the landscape. Figuratively, it was the shadow of a long arm reaching out from the University of Illinois to take one of Furman's finest football coaches." High praise was also given him by Head Coach Bob Smith and the president of the college.

Ray Elliot is head coach at the University of Illinois and the university team last year won the Big-Nine conference and decisively defeated U.C.L.A. in the New Year's Day Rose Bowl championship game.

Coach King was reared in Ranger and is a graduate of Ranger High School. He and his family are expected in Ranger the latter part of the week for a visit.

Water To Be Cut Off Thursday From 8 to 2

A. L. Stiles, water commissioner, announced today that from 8 A.M. to 2 P.M. Thursday the city water system will be shut down while repairs are being made and urged the people to use water conservatively during that time.

It was explained that the stand-pipe will be full and this will guarantee water to all sections of the town except Glenn addition, Lackland addition and Tiffin Road.

Repairs will be made on the main line from Lake Hagaman to town and some new sections of pipe put in.

Important Meet For Business People Called

A very important meeting of Ranger merchants and business people has been called for Friday morning at 10 o'clock at the Chamber of Commerce office.

Matters on trade extension will be discussed and it is important that all business men and women attend.

STRAWN WINS GAME FROM RANGER HIGH

Strawn came up from behind Tuesday night to win the softball game from the Ranger Hi team by a score of 6 to 3.

Strawn led off with two points in the first inning and scored two more in the third and fourth innings. Ranger Hi scored one in the first inning and two in the sixth. King of Strawn made the only home run of the game and Gordon of Strawn got a two base hit.

Officials were E. F. Arterburn, Onis Littlefield and Claud Floyd.

Improvements To Schools Outlined By Dr. Boswell

Dr. G. C. Goswell made a report to the school board, Tuesday evening, June 10, on improvements made to Ranger Junior College and Public Schools during the past twelve months. These improvements consist of the Federal housing units, class room building, 12 drafting tables, 140 tablet arm chairs, 6 teachers desks and chairs, filing cabinets, 16 drafting boards, 20 rapid calculators, 16 tables, 1500 gallons paint, 6 compasses, 4 2500 watt light plants, 10 sets drafting material, various science equipment, 3 new school buses, and many other items.

A fair valuation of all these items excluding the school buses is $131,282.41. There are a good many other items anticipated to be secured within a short time, such as steel chairs, and the college has already been approved for adding machines, a great deal of physics equipment, and posting machine.

"The Federal Agencies have been most cooperative in granting to Ranger Junior College this equipment," he said.

The total cost for the buildings, equipment, expense, and freight to the college has been $1901.98, which is about 1 1/2 per cent of the fair value of everything received it was stated.

Truman Pledges Continued Protection Of Weak Nations

PROGRAM FOR LAKE OUTLINED BY OFFICIALS

MINERAL WELLS, June 10—A pledge to combat a rough fish menace and to combine a sizeable restocking program at a meeting of officials of the State Game, Fish and Oyster Commission.

Marion Tool and Joe Marks of Austin, both commission officials, were principal speakers at a meeting of the Possum Kingdom Game & Fish Association held at the Baker Hotel. They stressed that steps were taken to employ commercial fishermen to rid the big lake of gar, drum, carp and turtles.

"This Spring we placed approximately 5,000,000 bass and crappie in Possum Kingdom and we will continue to plant this number of young fish each year," Tool said. "The commission is very proud of Possum Kingdom Lake and are most anxious for it to retain its name as one of the best fishing spots in the Southwest."

Announcement was made at the meeting that the 15 and 16th prize fish of the Possum Kingdom Fish Rodeo had been snagged. They were caught by J. E. McMeans and H. E. McGee, both of Dallas. McMeans caught a pound and a half bass bearing the tag No. 78 worth $160 in prizes. He was fishing from Lakeview Camp. McGee landed a three pound bass bearing tag No. 63 in the mouth of Cedar Creek. It was worth $140 in prizes.

OFFICER CANDIDATE SCHOOL IS OPEN TO CIVILIANS NOW

The War Department has opened Officer Candidate Schools to civilians. It was announced by Sgt. James Hendrick of the Eastland Recruiting Station.

Men in civil life who wish to become a commissioned officer may do so by direct application for OCS training to begin in 1947. The applicant must be between the ages of 20 1/2 and 28, pass an Army General Classification Test with a grade of 110 or better, be a high school graduate, and pass the required physical examination.

Successful applicants will be paid a staff sergeant's pay and allowances for 24 weeks duration of the course. Upon successful completion of the course, the man will be commissioned a 2nd lieutenant in the Army of the United States.

A non-graduate of the OCS who entered from civil life will be discharged from the Army. Additional details and application forms may be obtained from the Army Recruiting Station, located in the Eastland County Courthouse.

Leo Miller In Austin To Attend Legion Boys Week

Leo Miller is in Austin this week to attend the annual American Legion Boys Week.

He was selected to attend the week by the Carl Barnes Post of the American Legion. During the week the boys organize and carry on a government designed for the government of Texas, electing officers, and performing all of the functions of government.

Along with the program the boys have planned recreation and one of the features of entertainment will be the "governor's ball."

Protest On Coup Sent Russia By United States

WASHINGTON — The United States has dispatched a note to Russia strongly protesting the Communist coup in Hungary, it was learned today.

The note, it was said, carried the implication that this country will take the Hungarian case to the United Nations. It did not, however, specifically say so.

Earlier, the United States had exposed as false what it called an "obvious propaganda maneuver" in Hungary.

The protest was said to have called again on the Russians to agree to a United States-Soviet-British investigation of the political situation in Hungary. Russia has rejected two earlier American requests for an investigation.

House Committee Scores Federal Housing Setup

WASHINGTON — The House appropriations committee today released a report accusing the Federal Public Housing Authority of "falling miserably" in its job of managing housing units built with the taxpayers money.

The report charged that FPHA had introduced a "socialistic" responsibility to World War II veterans.

The report was made public as the House prepared to debate on a bill appropriating funds for FPHA and several other government corporations for the fiscal year beginning July 1.

NATIVE OF CARBON DIES; BURIAL AT DUNCAN, OKLAHOMA

Odus A. Russell, 51, died Sunday, June 1, in a St. Louis hospital following a short illness. His home was in Mount Vernon, Illinois. The remains were shipped to Duncan, Oklahoma, his former home, where funeral services were held Thursday, June 5, followed by interment in a Duncan cemetery. The deceased was a driller for the Olsen Drilling Company of Duncan.

Born October 5, 1895, at Carbon (Eastland County, Texas), the deceased was the son of Mrs. H. G. Johnson of Duncan, Oklahoma, and went to Duncan with his family in 1907. He was a World War I veteran and a member of the Duncan American Legion Post. His wife, who with two daughters, his mother and a brother, survive, was the former Ruby Cannon of Duncan, Oklahoma.

Jack Urban's Yarn To Be Heard On House Program

FORT WORTH, June 11—Jack Urban, Ranger oil man, is the source of an oil yarn to be told by Boyce House on the Justin Boot and Shoe Program Sunday, June 15. "I Give You Texas and the Great Southwest" is heard over WBAP-570 and KTSB at 1:45 p.m. and over KGNC (Amarillo) at 4:00 p.m.

House says that Urban can always be counted on for a good oil yarn. Last time he was in Ranger, Urban told House he had caught him unawares, but he came through with a story, and a whooping good one, anyway.

Fear Corn Crop To Be Short One

WASHINGTON — Agriculture department experts, confident of the largest wheat crop in the nation's history, turned their attention today to the uncertain corn crop.

They said a short corn crop would have serious effects on the feed situation and possibly on next year's meat supply. A short crop is threatened, they said, because of adverse weather which has delayed some planting.

WEST TEXAS REPRESENTED ON COMMITTEE

Twenty-one prominent West Texans are listed on the Texas Citizens Committee on Displaced Persons announced in Dallas yesterday by Executive Secretary Robert S. Strauss.

Members from West Texas are R. B. Anderson, Vernon; Dr. J. F. Cox, Abilene; E. B. Harris, Graham; Harold Jones, Wichita Falls; Joe M. Leonard, Sr., Gainesville; Raleigh Martin, Lubbock; H. Y. Overstreet, Farwell; Shine Phillips, Big Spring; French M. Robertson, Abilene; Lexie Dean Robertson, Rising Star; Durrance D. Roderick, El Paso; Mrs. Ethel Harkins Swain, Abilene; Arch S. Underwood, Lubbock; Boyce House, Fort Worth; Deskin Wells, Wellington; Dean Chenoweth, San Angelo; Houston Harle, San Angelo; Philip A. Kazen, Laredo; Claude W. Meadows, Sr., San Angelo; Mrs. Stephen E. Brady, Fort Worth; and Leo Davis, Fort Worth.

Mr. Strauss said the committee, of almost 100 outstanding Texans, has been formed to work for expressions from Texas to their congressmen urging their support of temporary, emergency legislation which would permit the U. S. to receive a rightful share of Europe's displaced persons.

"We are supporting H. R. 2910, a bill which would provide for entry into this country of 400,000 of these homeless people during the next four years. They would be subject to existing laws such as health, political affiliations and all other present restrictions," Mr. Strauss said.

Mr. Strauss pointed out that of the 850,000 now homeless in Europe 80 percent are Christian faiths and 20 percent are Jews. More than 150,000 are children under 18, with at least half having been born in concentration camps.

Russia, China In Diplomatic Clash Over Row

NANKING—A border row in remote Sinkiang province over the capture of eight Outer Mongolians and one horse flared today into a major diplomatic clash between Russia and China.

China dispatched a stiff protest to Moscow over an attack by Outer Mongolian forces upon the provincial center of Peitashan, 117 miles east of Chitai near the Chinese-Outer Mongolian border.

When It's DDT Time in Tokyo

Tokyo school children take turns before spray guns loaded with DDT powder as health authorities take steps to check epidemic of lice. Here smaller boys, whose heads are shaved according to an age-old custom, fight back sneezes while bushy-haired girls, usually the worst carriers, get dusted.

Vets Enrollment To Reach A New High This Fall

Summer will bring a slight reduction in the number of veterans studying in North Texas colleges and universities under the G. I. Bill. Enrollments in all types of training, however, will reach a new high in September, the Veterans Administration reported today.

Robert C. Rice, Regional Manager, said the education and training division of his office had prepared a forecast estimating a training load of 84,455 veterans in the Fall. June 6 enrollment in the 51 counties of the Dallas Region stood at approximately 65,000.

The in-training load, Mr. Rice said, is expected to increase still further to a total of 89,400 by the Spring of 1948.

Since the Dallas Regional Office became operational August 1, 1946, there has been a continued increase in former servicemen seeking training and educational benefits under the G. I. Bill and as disabled veterans.

The field includes World War II men and women attending institutions of higher learning, vocational and trade schools, business colleges, barber colleges, secretarial schools and allied institutions. It also involves veterans learning trades by on-the-job training.

There were 22,377 veterans in training in August of 1946. The number rose to 39,809 in November, 1946 and to 48,908 during February 1947.

Gromyko Favors Atomic Control Commission

LAKE SUCCESS — Andrei Gromyko of Russia, detailing a new eight-point Russian program for atomic control, agreed today that an international control commission should have wide powers to inspect the world's atomic facilities and conduct research in atom-splitting for peaceful purposes.

Gromyko outlined the new Russian views to a special meeting of the United Nations atomic energy commission. He made several new concessions in details, but at the same time left some important gaps between the United States and Russian positions on atomic control.

Approves Appropriation

WASHINGTON (UP)—The House appropriations committee today approved a $58,856,257 urgent deficiency supply bill. It conceded that Congress will not be able to complete action on all new regular appropriations bills by July 1, when the new fiscal year begins.

INTENTION REVEALED IN SPEECH BEFORE CANADIANS

OTTAWA— President Truman, in an historic appearance before the Canadian Parliament made a bid for Canadian support of the "Truman doctrine" today with a pledge of continued American efforts to protect weaker nations from intimidation.

The President's speech was certain to provoke heated discussion in the Canadian House of Commons which recently has been debating the degree to which Canada should bind itself to the foreign policy of the United States.

From the American viewpoint, the President's speech appeared to be another in a series of his efforts to fuse North America into a fortress of good neighborliness and cooperation.

SAYS BRITAIN ANXIOUS OVER BALKAN CASES

LONDON— Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin told Commons today that developments in Bulgaria had aroused "serious anxiety" in the British government.

Bevin said messages concerning Hungary were coming in from Moscow when he left the foreign office, but had had no time to study them.

Sir Maurice Peterson, British ambassador in Moscow, has been asked by Bevin to see Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov about the situation in the Balkans, Bevin told Commons.

Laborite Albert Blackburn asked Bevin to "press hard and quickly for the facts which should have been furnished to him long ago, so that the people of Britain and Europe may make up their mind whether we are witnessing a revival of totalitarian terror."

WASHINGTON COLUMN

BY PETER EDSON
NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(NEA)—The Senate Foreign Relations Committee may be taking President Harry Truman off of a barbed and rusty hook by refusing to do anything about confirming former Attorney General Francis Biddle for the $20,000 a year tax-free job as U. S. representative on the UN Social and Economic Council, to succeed John G. Winant.

The President nominated Biddle for this job last January. Republicans in the Senate gave it silent treatment for a few months. Then the President was asked to withdraw the nomination. He refused, and another showdown fight such as the President had with Ed Pauley became necessary.

Under urging from Democratic Senators Alben B. Barkley of Kentucky and Tom Connally of Texas, Chairman Arthur Vandenberg of Michigan agreed to have Biddle before the Foreign Relations Committee to explain his political views. Biddle is reported to have let on that he wasn't the 100 per cent New Dealer he was supposed to be—even though it was known that he and Harold Ickes were ringleaders with the CIO-PAC in supporting Henry Wallace for vice president at Chicago in 1944. Biddle's defense was that he had opposed Roosevelt's court-packing plan and the NRA.

WHAT Harry Truman knows—what every senator who served under his chairmanship on the War Investigating Committee knows—is that if the Senate Foreign Relations Committee had to go into an all-out investigation of the former attorney general, it would have to dig up a lot of skeletons.

Twice before congressional committees have been on the verge of investigating Biddle's administration of the Department of Justice in wartime. Both cases were outgrowths of the Norman Littell affair of 1944.

Littell had been assistant attorney general in charge of the lands division under Biddle, Frank Murphy, and Bob Jackson. Littell had given off the record testimony to the Truman committee on a number of cases handled by the Department of Justice—the Breakers Hotel case, Sterling Products, Empire Ordinance, Savannah Shipyards, Elk Hills, Canal Pipeline, and surplus property disposal. All were notorious scandals of the early war years.

The brunt of Littell's testimony reflected no great credit on Biddle. In fact, they attempted to make much of Biddle's close connections with Tommy Corcoran. Corcoran and associates represented Sterling Products, Empire Ordinance and Savannah Shipyards among others.

FOR his testimony before the Truman Committee, Littell was accused of disloyalty to the attorney general, who asked for his resignation. When it was refused, Biddle carried the case to the White House. President Roosevelt settled it by firing Littell.

Democratic Sen. Harley Kilgore of West Virginia and other members of the War Investigating Committee favored opening up the whole case and doing a job on Biddle, to purge the party. But Harry Truman had in the meantime been elected vice president and Sen. James M. Mead of New York had succeeded him as chairman of the War Investigating Committee. Not wanting to wash his party's dirty linen in public, Mead dropped the issue.

Littell was in Washington and is apparently doing all right at it. Also, he is entitled to the last laugh in the situation.

When Roosevelt died, Truman—knowing all this background—lost no time in accepting Biddle's resignation which had been submitted as a formality. But then the pressure began to be applied to Truman to find Biddle another job. He was given temporary work as a Nuremberg war crimes trial judge. Now he needs another. Only out for the President now is to have Biddle ask that his name be withdrawn, and go to work in private law practice, as his predecessor Belmont did.

SPORTS

BY HARRY GRAYSON

NEW YORK—(NEA)—Man and boy, Casey Stengel has seen many and wondrous things since at an early age he discarded tooth carpentry for baseball. The irrepressible Stengel obtained a liberal education in the bizarre while playing under Uncle Wilbert Robinson in Brooklyn and coaching and managing the Superbas. He is distinctive for many reasons, among them the fact that he was once paid for not managing the Bums.

A Dodger at heart, the inimitable Stengel has a flair for the fanciful. A bird once flew out of his cap when he doffed it while at bat, for example.

After what he has been through, nothing in baseball would surprise Stengel, but he had to wait until the other day to find out why managers so frequently feel like shooting somebody or committing suicide.

STENDEL had to go to the Pacific Coast League to see something new—a ballplayer, who is a poor judge of it, gone with the wind.

With Stengel's Oakland club and San Diego scrollers in the last of the 11th and two out, a long fly was hit into the territory of Maurice Van Robays, formerly with the Pirates. Van Robays took a look, decided the ball would clear the wall, and trotted into the dugout. The ball landed at the foot of the wall, where the outfielder could have caught it the batter circling the bases for a home run.

This is reminiscent of the afternoon in the early 1920s, when Herb Hunter, playing center field for the Seals in San Francisco's old Recreation Park, caught a fly in the ninth and sprinted for the clubhouse which was directly behind home. He was under a shower when told that his catch was only the second out and that two runs scampered around the bases while he was hurrying to keep an early appointment downtown.

In Dominic DiMaggio's last season with the San Francisco club, 1939, Steve Barath smacked a long ball to left center. As Barath rounded second base, a tremendous cheer went up. Barath had every reason to believe that the ball went over the fence. It was clouded none the less 400 feet, but the hip, hip hooray was for remarkable catch by The Little Professor DiMaggio, who seemingly ran half way up the fence to execute it.

Barath was too happy to think of that, however, tipped his cap as he touched home plate, smiled prettily to his manager in the stand. Teammates in the dugout, seeing that he believed he had hit one out of the park, said not a word.

RETURN ENGAGEMENT

THE STORY: Sophie informs Vicky that Godfrey is joining them. Vicky tells Sophie about Salty Bagot for the first time. Sophie sits upright at the name of Bagot. It had been important to her many years ago.

"GRANNY?"
"Yes, darling."
"Your Bagot came from around here, too—I mean—if he was sort of a little different from average people—well, don't you see? Vicky choked a little, swallowed and went on in a rush. "It's—oh, this is going to sound awful, but I really don't mean it that way, Granny. You must promise you won't be cross with me, no matter what I'm going to say."
"Of course I promise," Sophie agreed with fond indulgence. "For heaven's sake, what's wrong, child?"
"Well, it suddenly struck me, when Salty wanted to get your permission to take me to the movies on the very first day I met him, how hard it would be to explain our whole life to someone who has never lived that way. I mean, it's so difficult to explain Uncle Marcel and Sir Charles to someone who just has spinsters aunts. Salty said once how little resemblance there was between you and Uncle Marcel. Now, what's going to happen when he sees Mr. Mansbridge?"
"Mr. Mansbridge," repeated Sophie. "How strange it sounds to hear you call him that!"
"Excuse me, Granny," the girl went on, "but let me get it off my chest, while I can. Sir Charles, for instance. Now suppose the Bagots should call—Salty said they would, and I honestly want them to call—suppose Sir Charles joins us after dinner, the way he always does when he gets through serving? What could I tell them? I know I'm sounding perfectly ghastly and cruel, and I assure you I would hate Sir Charles not to sit down after dinner—it just never occurred to me before that we are perhaps a little—different."

THERE was a miserable silence. Sophie drew a deep breath before she started to answer. "Are you quite through, Victoria?" she said at last. "Perhaps my household isn't commonplace, but it certainly isn't common. And you can't think for a minute that anything goes on under my roof, or ever has, of which you need be ashamed. Marcel, and Godfrey, too—and even Sir Charles, in a way—are the only friends I have left in the world."
"As for Sir Charles—he is really a somebody," continued Sophie, "besides being a superb butler for which better families than the Bagots would envy me. And after all, he should be that. He has served all the best families, from the Carleys in 'Her Own Way' to Lady George Grayston in 'Our Betters.'"
"I'm sorry," said Vicky firmly, "but I can't see that playing a butler year in and year out can be called a real achievement."
"But wait!" Sophie ordered. "Then came the triumph he had been working toward all those years. He was the Admirable Crichton, the greatest butler of all. When he came back from his Australian tour the King knighted him. I had been introduced to the King two seasons before and knew him slightly. I was there when he knighted Charles Madden. All London was there." Sophie raised her arms to the back of the chaise, framing her face, and a dreamy look came into her eyes. "My, how distinguished he looked in his black silk breeches and pumps! And how pleased he was! To this good day, I can't understand why I never fell in love with him. Everyone else did. In 1914 he came to join my company as a permanent member, playing butlers, and after we dissolved the company he stayed on with me as my own personal butler."

"Well," said Vicky, "that must be just about the longest part anybody ever played."
"HELL play it as long as he can breathe!" Sophie declared. "He's one of the few absolutely happy people I've ever known. No actor likes to retire, you know, but one can't very well go around being King Lear or Ophelia without getting put away." She abandoned her pose and leaned forward to stroke Vicky's hair. "Yes, Sir Charles is one of the few happy people—not like poor Godfrey—Sophie had spoken Godfrey Mansbridge's name in a tone of peculiar tenderness, but suddenly she sat erect, her mood abruptly altered, and cried out, "Godfrey! Leaving the chaise she rose in excitement and began pushing about the room. "Good heavens, Victoria, he'll be here in a few days, just think! I must look a fright. Go and see if there's any mail, darling." She seated herself in front of her dressing table and began undoing her braids. "Gracious! Here we've been wasting hours talking about the past when mine may come back on me any minute! I wonder if he's changed much—"
"I'm going on a picnic with Salty," said Vicky. "He's coming over for me about 12:30. I won't be here for lunch."
"Oh," said Sophie. "Salty." She looked up in the mirror and met Vicky's eyes. "Now don't worry, darling, everything will be all right, I promise."
"Only for a few more days," said Vicky.
"Of course, I'll invite the Bagots to tea when she calls, and I'll speak to Sir Charles and everybody. If it's respectability you want, you shall have it. We're all still a little stage-struck around here and I shouldn't mind a bit acting respectable for a while."
"Just till Salty goes away," said Vicky. "After that I won't mind."
"You'll see, darling," Sophie promised. "We'll give a magnificent performance."

Hi-way Commission States New Policy On County Roads

AUSTIN, June 11 — The State Highway Commission today released details of a new state-wide policy on Farm to Market Roads, which will permit an expansion of the present state operated Farm to Market Road Program.

Federal Funds made available by the Postwar Highway Act of 1944 for the construction of Secondary or Farm to Market Roads, covering a three year period, have all been earmarked for specific roads throughout the state. Approximately one-half of this work has been paced under contract and, consequently, no additional funds from this source are now available.

On behalf of the Highway Commission, State Highway Engineer Dewitt C. Greer explained, "This new policy of the Highway Commission has been formed to place into operation the new laws passed by the Fifth Legislature relative to this type of road."
Mr. Greer pointed out that a law was passed at this session giving permission for the counties, road districts, etc., and the State Highway Department to enter into a cooperative plan of construction of Farm to Market Roads by a pooling of finances.

THE STORY: Vicky is worried about the way Sophie's message will appear to fall in and to not completely conventional.

XIV

AFTER she left Sophie twisting her hair into a coronet, trying a new arrangement that Godfrey Mansbridge might admire, Victoria went back to her own room and stretched out on the bed.

Lying quiet, she tried to think about herself and particularly herself and her grandmother.

She had always been known as Sophie van Eyck's granddaughter. Did she want to remain so all her life? It would be easy, Granny would leave her well provided for. She could probably find someone to marry her and plenty of companions eager to welcome the only living descendant of the great actress. She could have a comfortable, even a distinguished life, by coasting along on her grandmother's name.

But did she want that? If not, what did she want? Certainly not a career of any kind for herself. She had not the smallest talent. Did she want position? Consequence? Quite suddenly she knew exactly what she wanted. She was just an ordinary girl and she wanted what all girls want: to fall in love, to be loved, to have a family of her own. She wanted a family group and connection that had nothing to do with her grandmother's fame and Uncle Max's money.

In other words, she wanted Sally Bagot.

This conclusion Victoria arrived at quite as much through her emotions as with her mind, for she realized simultaneously that unless she got what she wanted her heart would break.

This knowledge made it impossible for her to lie around supinely and wait for Sally to call for her. Although not normally an energetic person, she felt the need now of exercise and occupation. She would help Hathaway in the garden, she decided. Since he was so busy, and gardeners so scarce, Hathaway had been able to give Madame van Eyck only two days a week and the flower beds were sadly in need of weeding.

The weeds were everywhere. Vicky got down on her hands and knees and began clearing the base of each flower with meticulous care. She weeded daintily—she did everything—treating each plant as though it were the only one of its kind in the world. And she thought about her unaccountable and sudden love for Sally Bagot.

Vicky had forgotten about Godfrey Mansbridge when she heard a man's voice behind her saying, "Hello—is anybody home?"

Startled, she screwed around and squinted up at him, sitting back on her heels. He was looking over a barberry hedge and her first thought was surprise that he was so short; the hedge nearly hid him. Then she wondered why he was so stout. He wore a gray business suit which looked as if it were straining to cover him, and above his black bow tie his face was cherubically round.

"Hello," she said.

"Am I in the right place?" he asked calmly.

"I think you are," Vicky said, resigned. She got to her feet. "I'm sorry no one met you. We don't use the car much now, of course. The tires are so old."

He shrugged. "Naturally, I never expect to be met. I prefer my independence. I might have decided at the last minute not to come."

Vicky looked at him, puzzled. She had heard a good many different accents among the international idlers on the Riviera, but was unable to place the one she now heard. It was certainly not supposed to make the assessors keep the value up. But that is circumvented by raising the local tax rate while keeping the valuation down.

The proposal now is not to abolish the ad valorem tax but to let the counties levy it for their local uses. So the values may be expected to rise, if the change is made.

Under The Dome At Austin

By Gordon K. Shearer
United Press Staff Correspondent
AUSTIN, Tex., (UP)—Texas' legislature submission to the people of a constitutional amendment to abolish the state ad valorem tax for general purposes is a single proposal with two edges.

Both edges have been sharpened to do away with tax favoritism. One edge will cut off the inequity suffered by property owners in 202 of the 254 counties of the state because 52 counties or parts of counties have been granted remission of all or part of the state ad valorem tax for general purposes.

The other edge will pare the discrimination that results from some counties assessing property at a high value—others at small value.

If there is no state ad valorem tax for general purposes all alike will be exempt. So long as there is a state school tax collected on an ad valorem basis, the inequality will be but partly ended. The valuation discrimination will continue.

Take the tax remission situation for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1946, the remissions amounted to a total of $2,382,574. Of course the property owners in the remission areas paid the tax the same as property owners elsewhere in Texas, but the money was then kept in the county, or city or district for special use on projects of special benefit to the community. Tax remissions were granted under authority of a "public calamity" clause of the state constitution.

The situation in regard to varying valuations results in a still greater discrepancy between what the tax-paying property owner contributes in some parts of the state than in others.

Total assessed valuation of property for ad valorem taxes in the state for 1946 was $3,123,582,400 (B). The same state tax rate is paid in all parts of the state. But the catch is in local assessments.

J. V. Hucker of San Antonio, who has made a study of tax valuations, says that in 136 counties of the state assessments are accepted by the tax authorities at 25 per cent to 50 per cent of value while in 118 counties the assessments vary from 55 per cent to 100 per cent of full value.

In other words, if you owned a $5,000 piece of property in one county it might be assessed at $1,250. In some other county you might have to pay tax on the full $5,000. It is possible for the state ad valorem tax to amount to 77 cents a year on $100 property valuation. If the state school, general revenue and Confederate pension taxes all are levied at the maximum the differences in tax to the individual might vary from $38.50 to $9.62—the tax on the same amount of property for the same purposes, depending on its situation.

It is no secret that many communities make the most of this "valuation" system of dodging taxes. They set a low valuation on which to pay state taxes. The fact that local taxes are collected on the same basis is theoretically

Mushroom Season's On In Indiana And Hoosiers Turn Out In Force

INDANAPOLIS, Ind. (UP)—This is the time of year when Hoosiers become mushroom hunters.

Come the first warm spring day after a shower, the countryside is alive with hunters peering through the new-grown grass and vegetation for the elusive sponge-type mushroom.

In Indiana, the spring mushroom is a much sought-after commodity. It doesn't have much food value, but Hoosiers think the mushroom is delicious—much better than the commercial types grown in windowless buildings. The wild mushroom is hard to find and the season is short, which adds to its prestige.

There two types of mushroom hunters. One group gathers the crop by the bushel and sells it house to house. The mushroom always brings a good price. This year, the hunter can sell his crop for upwards of $1 a pound.

The other type looks only for mushrooms to grace his own dinner menu, or perhaps proudly present a few to his neighbor.

It is common knowledge that once you find a bed of mushrooms growing wild, you can expect to find them in the same spot year after year. Most hunters who sell their mushroom harvest are experts at the business of knowing just what day and what hour they are likely to spring up. Mushrooms appear in a matter of minutes, the experts say.

For that reason, you'll never get a mushroom hunter to confide where he found that last bushel basketful. He wants to get back there next year, and he doesn't want to have you beat him to the crop.
 Hunters have different ideas unless they are termed edible by reliable authorities. Some mushroom fungi are poisonous—some likely to be fatal within a matter of hours. But cases of mushroom poisoning seldom are reported. Indiana state health authorities say they haven't heard of any deaths from that cause in recent years.

During the mushroom season, Hoosier wildlife is fairly safe from harm. So avidly do the hunters search for mushrooms that they're apt not to bother the rabbits and squirrels and wild flowers.

and H. H. Hickman buy 900 acres in northern Brown county, near Rising Star. Last year they produced 46,000 pounds of vetch seed and sold it to other farmers of Brown, Comanche and Eastland counties.

They plan to establish grain seed cleaning and separating plants at Brownwood and Rising Star.

Having pioneered in establishment of a culture that in three years has given the West Cross Timber area from Brownwood north more potential production of vetch than the rest of the United States combined, the brothers say they believe the growing of winter legumes is only in its infancy in the nation.

The brothers bought out the Brownwood elevator of the Brown county feed mill and invested $30,000 in the Brownwood plant. Cleaning and separating machinery for both the Brownwood and Rising Star plants has been ordered.

RETURN ENGAGEMENT

By Gwen Davenport Copyright by Gwen Davenport Distributed by NEA SERVICE, INC.

THE STORY: Vicky is reading the garden when a stranger comes up. She takes him for Godfrey and brings him into the house. Sophie is shocked when she sees him. "Basil!" she whispers. "Is it he?"

Basil, who had once left home and wife to follow her, was now neglected and unappreciated.

IN the momentary silence Victoria said gently, "Another one of your old friends, Grandmother?" Sophie looked at her granddaughter over the top of Basil's head. "But, darling, excuse me," she said, breaking away. "This is the great Basil Vastlov. You're top young to remember, but he's one of the most famous dramatic critics who ever lived."

"Working?" "My book, 'The Doom of the American Stage,' in seven volumes."

"But how clever!" cried Sophie. "To stretch one book into seven volumes. It must have taken years."

"Eleven," he admitted proudly. "Of course I am not nearly finished yet."

Vicky saw that her grandmother and Mr. Vastlov had drawn together in the intimacy of old friends, shutting out anyone else. Without speaking, she left them alone and went back to the garden. Sophie and Basil were absorbed.

HE paused significantly. And in the pause Sophie's conscience began working again within her like yeast. She thought of Basil, who had left home and wife in Russia to follow her, being now neglected and unappreciated; the thought smote her conscience. There was still a good bedroom vacant at Gray Shingles.

She did not hesitate. "Basil!" she exclaimed. "You must stay here! Where could you find a more congenial atmosphere? We've plenty of room—and we can all help with your book."

"No, no," he protested, kissing her hand. "You are too kind, as always. I came merely to call—"

Sophie began an eloquent plea urging Basil to consider his own comfort no less than her wishes. She was being so persuasive, handling her voice with all the skill she possessed in the use of its range and depth and resonance, that she felt sure she would have received a grateful acceptance after another sentence or two had not Marcel and Charles come bumbling down the stairs into the hall, dragging suitcases and all the paraphernalia which the artist had taken with him from Paris to Buenos Aires, to Cairo, to Chicago and Denver, Melbourne and Sydney, Budapest, Vienna, Sofia, Rome and the French Riviera. Sophie stopped impatiently. "Perrault!" exclaimed Basil, not without a trace of jealousy. "I was just going to inquire about him."

"Look who has come, boys!" Sophie called out. "A surprise."

WHEN they appeared in the doorway, she displayed Basil with a proprietary air, as if she had produced him from an opera hat. "Look—it's Basil! Isn't that wonderful?"

"Basil," a c k n o w l e d g e d Sir Charles. "So it is. But I thought it was Godfrey who was expected."

"How are you, Sir Charles?" Basil said. "Still in livery, I see. And Perrault. I didn't think I'd ever meet you again."

Marcel put down the suitcase he was carrying and advanced into the room. "Why did you not expect to see me?" he inquired. "Did you expect heaven here below—ah? How are you, Basil? I regret you find me just leaving. Perhaps you know Godfrey is to come."

"Dear Marcel!" Sophie pleaded, pulling out all the stops. She began to wonder if he might really mean to leave. "Won't you stay if Basil does? You two always got along well enough. Ah, please! I could never rest again if I had to think of both of you with nowhere to go—"

The little Frenchman sniffed, worrying his mustache to hide the trembling of his lips. He hesitated. "Well—"

"You will!" she urged, pressing her advantage. "Don't let Mansbridge frighten you off, Marcel," said Sir Charles, kindly. "You should be able to stand it if I can."

"I'll stay if you will," Basil said suddenly. "Since Sophie seems to wish it so much."

Marcel allowed himself the luxury of being persuaded to remain. (To Be Continued)

Says Phoenicians Visited America 18 Centuries Before Columbus

By Don Jennings HARRISBURG, Pa. (UP)—Dr. William Walker Strong believes after seven years of research that a band of Phoenicians colonized the Susquehanna Valley about 18 centuries before Christopher Columbus landed in America.

The Mechanicsburg archaeologist, who is a fellow of the Mellon Institute of Pittsburgh has 400 stones bearing inscriptions of the ancient seafaring specialists to support his contention.

From the stones, which he has collected since 1940 in this area, Strong theorized that some 3,000 Phoenicians sailed up the Susquehanna River in 871 B. C. and established mining camps for iron ore production because their iron reserves had been seriously depleted in the war against Greece.

Strong said other Aristotle writings described a journey of Carthaginians "beyond the pillars of Hercules" (the Straits of Gibraltar.) Strong concluded that the route of the Phoenicians took them first to the Azores, then across to the North American coast, into the Chesapeake Bay and finally up the Susquehanna River.

Strong said he has identified the entire Phoenician alphabet of 22 letters and his translations reveal the names of 70 captains and princes inscribed on the stones. He believes this number of men would have headed an expedition of about 3,000 persons.

Some of the stones bear the name of the Phoenician god, Taned, to whom they offered human sacrifices in time of distress. These relics were believed to be parts of sacrificial altars. Other pieces were in the shape of wedges and mauls believed to have been used in ship building and repair.

Strong, whose research has been credited with extending modern knowledge of the Phoenician language, said the writings of Marina, a 16th Century Spanish historian, agreed largely with Strong's beliefs regarding the fate of the ancient seafarers who colonized here.

Priests Buy Church Move It 15 Miles

ARGUSVILLE, N. D. (UP)—You have heard about the mountain going to Monamet. In this case it's the church at Grandon going to Argusville.

For a year the Rev. L. J. Arrell, priest of St. Mary's Cathedral at Fargo, N. D., and his three assistants dreamed of a church for the growing parish at Argusville. Last summer they shed their robes for overalls and laid a concrete foundation. But building materials costs were high, so instead of erecting a new church, the priests bought an unused church at Grandon, N. D., 15 miles north of Argusville.

Mounted on 32 huge wheels, the building was moved to Argusville in one day, and the parishioners there had a church of their own.

Claims Labor Bill Prevents Some Bargaining

WASHINGTON—Eugene Cotton, assistant CIO general counsel, said today that a provision in the Taft-Hartley bill "quite conceivably" could prevent unions from bargaining for paid vacations, sick leave and lunch periods.

Cotton cited a section of the bill which makes it an unfair labor practice for a "labor organization, or its agents . . . to cause or attempt to cause an employer to pay or deliver any money or any other thing of value in the nature of an exaction for services which or not performed or not to be performed."

Congress wrote this into the bill to eliminate union "feather bedding" practices.

WORLD EMPLOYMENT FAIRLY GOOD, ILO DATA SHOWS

MONTREAL (UP)—Unemployment continues relatively low in most countries of the world, the International Labor Office reports. The ILO presented a survey of conditions in 24 countries during the last six months in the June issue of the International Labor Review, its monthly publication.

In the United States and Canada, the number of unemployed has fluctuated slightly during the period. In Great Britain, the weather and fuel crisis of February, 1947, increased the number of persons registering at employment exchanges to almost 2,000,000—and that does not include the 500,000 persons who did not claim unemployment benefits because they received their wages although not working.

In countries formerly occupied by Germany, the dearth of manpower—especially skilled—has continued unabated and has brought unemployment to less than one-third of the prewar level.

In the United States, unemployment amounted to 2,330,000 through March, 1947, or out of every 100 persons in the labor force, four were unemployed. That compares with 2,700,000 unemployed in March, 1946, or five out of every 100.

In Canada, there were 141,000 unemployed at the end of February, 1947, or three out of every 100 persons in the labor force, compared with 213,000 unemployed persons, or five out of 100 in February, 1946.

Of the two Latin American countries for which recent information on unemployment is available, Chile had 5,700 applicants registered for work, employment exchanges through February, 1947 compared with 4,000 through the corresponding month of 1946. Puerto Rico listed unemployment at 97,000 at the end of January, 1947, or 14 out of every 100 of the total labor force, compared with 71,000 for the corresponding month of 1946.

In France, the number of insured unemployed decreased to 9,500 at the end of February, 1947 as compared with 20,000 for the corresponding month of 1946. Most of them were unskilled workers and clerks whose placement is made difficult by their lack of specialization.

In Germany according to the statistical report of the office of the United States military governor, unemployed numbered 1,193,000, or four out of every 100 in the total labor force, through September, 1946, as compared with 1,628,000 through April of the same year. The law on labor registration furnished a basis for the estimates of the number of unemployed in all zones.

In Austria, persons seeking work at employment exchanges numbered 61,000 at the end of 1946, compared with 80,000 in December, 1945.

In Switzerland, unemployment continued to be low, with three out of every 100 of the insured workers registered as wholly unemployed at the end of February, 1947.

In Italy, unemployment was high, with ten per cent of the employable population looking for work. Through January, 1947, the number of wholly unemployed persons registered at exchanges ran to 2,228,000, almost double that of the corresponding month in 1946.

Urges End Of Discriminating Labor Practises

WASHINGTON—Sen. Irving M. Ives, R., N. Y., today described discriminatory employment practices as an "American dilemma" which must be solved. He testified at the opening of two weeks of Senate labor subcommittee hearings on his bill to forbid discrimination in employment because of race, religion, color or national origin.

The bill had strong support from Republicans and Northern Democrats. But it appeared unlikely that an attempt would be made to pass it this year in the face of already-promised southern Democratic opposition.

Shaw Gives Nod To Henry Wallace

BRUSSELS—George Bernard Shaw endorsed Henry A. Wallace today for president of the United States in 1948.

The 90-year-old British dramatist and playwright praised Wallace's speaking tour as an aid to the cause of peace.

In a postal interview between Belgium and Eireland, Shaw warned that "waddle about for mules" would not help avoid a third world war. Political capacity of leaders will determine events, he said.

Denies Request

PARIS (UP)—President Vincent Auriu today rejected a request by the Federation of Railroad workers for a special conference with him to seek a solution of the nationwide rail strike.

Birds Double Up On Nest Then Robin Takes Over

GREENWOOD, Ind. (UP)—The housing shortage apparently has hit the bird population in this town.

Mrs. Roy Hicks found robins and doves occupying the same nest on her porch. When they both laid eggs, she said, there was not enough room for both birds to sit on them.

The doves finally gave up and abandoned their eggs, she said. Mrs. Hicks is wondering what will happen when the robin hatches the dove eggs.
