WASHINGTON COLUMN

(This is the second of three dispatches on the Sugar Act of 1948)

BY PETER EDSON
NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(NEA)—Biggest political enigma of the last session of Congress was the Sugar Act of 1948. A Democratic White House administration, supposed to be opposed to cartels, allowed the U. S. marketing and off-shore sugar producers to dictate a bill which sets up a virtual sugar trust. A Republican Congress supposed to be dedicated to free enterprise passed a bill which is full of controls. It was smart politics, all right, to get the bill passed this year. That avoids seven months of wrangling in 1948.

When the industry-written bill hit the House floor a little over a month ago, however, it immediately drew fire. Rep. John W. Flannagan of Virginia, former chairman of the House Committee on Agriculture, in which the New Deal's original sugar quota control legislation had been written, called the new act, "the most vicious piece of price-fixing ever proposed in Congress. I am in the role of the lone wolf," said Flannagan. "I am the only one who will oppose this bill."

Nantucket Hospital Must Depend On Self

NANTUCKET, Mass. (UP)—A hospital 30 miles at sea has its troubles.

The tiny Cottage Hospital, serving Nantucket Island, is isolated in storm or fog and must be entirely self-sufficient.

In addition, it must arrange its staff and housekeeping to accommodate the needs of 2,500 persons in the winter and 15,000 in the summer.

SPORTS

BY HARRY GRAYSON
NEA Sports Editor

NEW YORK—(NEA)—As many as a million, the largest attendance ever to witness any kind of an event, is expected to watch Guy Lombardo in his Tempo VI defend the gold-plated silver urn in the 40th International Gold Cup Regatta, on Rockaway Inlet, Jamaica Bay.

A mile and a half spectator area on shore is available, plus the same space for yachts and smaller craft. There is parking space for thousands of cars within walking distance.

With rules relaxed for the second year, 17 boats are expected to start.

THIS subway regatta, the greatest free show on record, will cost the South Shore Yacht Club of Freeport, L. I., the sponsoring organization, and the drivers more than $100,000.

The three 20-mile heats over the three-mile salt water oval course shapes up as a battle between the Motor City's transplanted California carrot-top, Danay Foster, and Lombardo. It started two years ago, when Foster sold a bill of goods to a soft-drink firm, got it to sponsor a boat.

Lombardo, who at the time was racing the smaller classes and not Gold Cup boats, was a member of the American Power Boating Association. The orchestra leader denounced the idea of sponsored boats. He wanted the sport kept an amateur basis, speedboat racing kept within the reach of most people. He carried enough votes to his side. Foster's proposal was tossed out the window.

DEATH OF A DOLL

By Hilda Lawrence

XXXIII
WHEN he got back to the doctor's, Bessy and Beulah had left. "I sent the ladies home," Foy said virtuously. "They were anxious to do all they could, but I told them this wasn't woman's work, not now. You've got something new, haven't you?"

"What about the New York calls?"
"Too soon. Why?"
"Because it's Chicago we want. At least I think so. I've got a name, or part of a name, of a man Ruth Miller called. My source of information isn't too strong in the head, but I don't want to throw this away because of that. Do you think Chicago could track down Lawford and Crawford with one hand and check the 2-8277 phones with the other? Lawford or Crawford is supposed to be a man of prominence. We can let them keep on with the New York calls at the same time."

"The only sound for the next few minutes was Foy's low voice apologizing to Chicago.
Then Foy hung up. "They'll do what they can, but they say it's a paper chase. Can't you dig up a little more?"

"One thing at a time, wash this up first. Did they know a big shot with a name like Lawford or Crawford?"
"They didn't say so. Sometimes a man is so big that people don't think of him."

"Right. But he needs to be big at that. A man of prominence in Ruth Miller's world could be anything. A civil-service employe or a mayor city official, a nice guy in a clean white shirt who finished high school and took courses at night to improve himself."

Foy said, "That guy could be a former employe."

"That's what I'm crossing my fingers for. An employe, preferably in a department store or a shop. Maybe a floorwalker. Miss Libby thinks there's a tie-up with a store or a shop. Miller claimed inexperience, but she knew too much about selling. Libby thinks —"

The phone rang. It was the first New York call from Headquarters. Four exchanges had been cleared, and a squad was covering the locations.
THEY sat on; talking, silent, talking, watching the clock. New York reported at intervals, but there were no leads.
"I don't know why we can't lock somebody up," Foy snapped. "I don't like to be diddled by a girl!"

"But this is no ordinary diddling, and no ordinary girl. She looks and acts average, and that's why she has us by the throat. This one is as smart as anything that ever went through your hands. She did her stuff like a mathematician. In the end, when she takes her aside for a little heart-to-heart, we'll probably find that her schedule ran something like this. She got hold of the extra costume, because she knew all about it. She hid it—my guess is the second-floor bathroom or packroom; easy to get at. She was lucky about the chef's accident, that gave her a break; but she could have worked without it. . . . She eased Miller into position under Plummer's eyes when the other girls turned Plummer down. She'd had Miller spotted from the first, probably because Miller appeared with April who was too easy to identify. . . . She then went upstairs and waited, and I think she locked Flister's door for added safety. Too close to the first floor. So Miller, poor little devil, had to go on up to Brady's. And in Brady's we had the business. Knockout with music box, trade masks. Then a quick look-se down the hall, another safety measure. But the elevator was ringing then, and that might bring trouble. So she took the elevator over, she didn't dare not to, and ferried Mrs. Marshall-Gill to the main floor. She returned at once to eighth. Marshall-Gill watched the indicator. Back in Brady's she finished her job, and I don't have to tell you what that was, went down to Miller's room and opened the window. Getting set for the suicide angle, see? He gave his theory of the changed masks, the series of appearances as Ruth Miller and herself. "I've gone over that routine until I'm sick of it," he said. "It's clear, it fits with what I've been told. So what? So that's all it is. A piece of crowding that fits."

Then the phone rang.
CHICAGO had found a private residence in an exclusive suburb with the right phone number. It belonged to Norman Crawford, president of Bassett and Wright, one of Chicago's largest department stores. Crawford was not home, but they knew where he was and were getting to him fast. It would be a matter of minutes, they were keeping an open wire.

Foy sat with the receiver to his ear.
"At times like this," Mark said softly, "I wouldn't take a million for my job."
Foy said, "Hello. All set here, get on with it."

The other two crowded him. They heard respect creep into his voice and saw it straighten his shoulders. He sat as if he were standing at attention.
Chicago talked, first in a hearty growl, then in a steady, flowing stream. Foy said little beyond, "Yes, sir, you have it correct, sir," but he clung to the phone as Ruth Miller must have done. He had nothing to fear, nothing to hide from, but his mobile Irish face told the watchers that Ruth was living and dying again in Norman Crawford's story. The story took seven minutes to tell, and Foy interrupted only twice, toward the end. He said, "I've got everything, but the name, sir, and after that he said, "I'll be —"

Great-Grandmother Back In Class So She Can Keep Up Teaching Job

CHICAGO (UP)—A 69-year-old great-grandmother is attending summer school at Rockford College so she can continue being a school marm.

She is Mrs. Otto Reichard, a teacher during three wars. A mother of eight children, she has 17 grandchildren and one great-granddaughter.

She is planning to put what she learns into immediate effect next fall in her one-room schoolhouse near here. Besides her education course, she is studying games for younger pupils. By doing so she expects to add interest to recesses or physical education periods.

At the age of 16, when she was Miss Anna Mitchell, she began her career as a rural teacher. After the Spanish-American War, she gave up teaching to become a housewife.

Because of the teacher shortage in World War I, Mrs. Reichard returned to the classroom. Then she went back to her kitchen to resume her housewife career. A couple of decades later, during World War II, she was teaching again.

Mrs. Reichard was so well-liked that her school wants her back for the next term. To keep her emergency teaching certificate, she is

Not What You Get—

... but what you have is the important thing in buying real estate. If one buys without an abstract he may get something, but its value will depend on the sufficiency of the title. Gainesville Clowns Know Their Public

Fun-making as a clown in a big circus arena is serious business, take it from Uncle Ezra Wells, tramp comic of the Gainesville Community Circus, coming to Ranger on Thursday, September 11.

Wells, who in every-day life teaches mathematics at high school and edits the sport page of the Daily Register in Gainesville, is one of half a hundred jesters, merry andrews and pantomimists, who make up clown alley in the famous horse town show.

But creating clown gags that will appeal to boys and girls, men and women of all ages, is not as easy as solving a trigonometry problem or scoring a baseball game, Uncle Ezra insists.

With 30 to 40 clowns in the arena at one and the same time bidding for attention, each must have a sure-fire stunt different from all others if he is going to get his share of chuckles and belly-laughs from the audience.

In the big modern American circus, with three rings and a post-poned track, there is no place for the old-time singing and talking clown, and the joy must rely upon pantomime to put over his comic ideas.

But the clowns are not the only laugh-provoking features in the circus. There are Bill Lucas and his educated mule, and the husky entertaining and amusing pony riding dogs and monkeys, to mention a few of the acts that provide much merriment with their antics.

The clowns acts are sandwiches between a wide variety of aerial, acrobatic and trained animal numbers which provide a well balanced program with features appealing to every member of the family.

Tickets for the show are now on sale at the Chamber of Commerce, Swaney's Pharmacy, Oil City Pharmacy and the Texas Drug Store.

What Is Duty?

Duty is an obligation but the question of duty involves one's self and others. And which comes first?

The natural instinct is toward oneself; yet, in thinking of oneself, it is impossible to exclude others. It is not possible to live or totally for oneself, as anyone knows who has tried it.

As an individual, we have a duty to preserve our health as much as we can lest we involve others. We also have a duty to contribute as much as we can to society to help make the world a better place in which to live and to make at least one spot on this earth less accursed.

But how often do we think of the others as we dash around like ants trying to improve our own particular spot?

Not often.

The fittest are too busy surviving. When we have learned, through enough wars and bloodshed and human misery that people must work together for the good of the universe we will have begun to emerge from The Dark Ages.

Only time can show what the world decides to do with itself.

Give it a little thought: Are you interested in survival for yourself and your posterity? What are you doing about it? There is an atom bomb loose in the world now.

Dublin Rodeo To Be Held Next Week

The rodeo that has become famous as the Pre-Madison Square Garden Rodeo will begin Thursday night of next week at Dublin for four days, Sept. 4, 5, 6, and 7th. Reports received from officials are that this year's show will be even bigger and better than in past years. Dublin is so enthusiastic over the approaching date that they have established a jail cell on their main street and are locking up any local citizens that appear without some kind of rodeo clothing or advertising on. The results are that the rodeo is receiving the full support of the citizens.

Everett Colborn, the New York arena director, announces that the cowboys, cowgirls and specialty acts for his New York and Boston shows are assembling at Dublin for the Dublin rodeo before departing by special train from that city for the Eastern rodeos. The same stock and equipment is also used, as the Lightning C ranch is near Dublin.

An added attraction has been scheduled, which is the appearance of the world renowned Hardin-Simmons Cowboy Band that will play for this rodeo for all three nights. This alone will make the rodeo much better in every respect. Some fifteen high school bands have also been invited to participate.

Former Governor Coke Stevenson has announced by letter that he will lead the Parade and appear in the grand entry for the first day, which is Thursday.

Over 9,000 seats will be available at the same prices as last year. The parades will be held each day at 5:30 o'clock and on Sunday at 12:30. The big show starts each night at 8:00 o'clock.

Rogers Memorial Coliseum and Boothman said that at least 30 girls from eight or ten states will participate.
Louise Massie, radio and recording star, will be featured entertainer. She will sing among other, the song that made her famous—and that she composed—"My Adobie Hacienda."

The following judges have been named by the show committee: Hughie Long, Cresson; Raymond Adams, Maple Hill, Kan.; and Warren Shoemaker, Watrous, N. M., will judge the stock horse classes.

Halter classes will be judged by Temple Stephens, Moberly, Mo.; Harry H. Wilkinson, Fort Worth, and Glen Perkins, El Cajon, Cal. Individually, Stephens will judge the saddle-bred animals; Wilkinson the Tennessee walking horses, and Perkins the pleasure classes. Thoroughbred racing horses will perform before the eyes of Dr. M. T. Ramey, Abilene; Shoemaker, and Adams.

"We have tried to pick as many out-of-state judges as possible in order to make this a truly representative event," J. T. Boothman, Fort Worth, secretary-manager, said.
Tickets will go on sale Sept. 1 with the Fort Worth Junior Chamber of Commerce in charge of the sale. Mail orders for the tickets are now being accepted.

THIS SUMMER SURE HAS BEEN TOUGH ON ME, TOO!

"These are the days when I put in many hours of extra work for you every day."
"In a great many homes, fans, room coolers and attic ventilating systems have been going full blast around the clock—twenty-four hours a day for days at a time. Electric refrigerators have been dishing on their reserve power to keep food fresh and wholesome at constant temperatures under 40 degrees and to maintain ready supplies of ice cubes and cooling beverages."
"Some electric service bills may be a little higher during the extreme hot weather because of my extra work, but now is when your electric service really proves to be the biggest bargain in your home."
