Query Into Grain Gambling Being Made

Well... I Dunno, But...

Had a real interesting time this morning while watching a worker at the Hi-Lite Neon Service making neon signs. Right there before our eyes the worker took a straight tube of glass and from it fashioned a large "G".

To begin with he has a design for the sign that he is making sketched out on a large cardboard and done backwards so that when the sign is finished it will read left to right.

Then he takes a tube of glass holds it over a very hot fire, all of the time blowing through a tube into the glass to keep it from collapsing, and begins to fashion the letters. It required three sections to form the "G", then they were all burned together. The electrodes, that's the connection for the electric wires, were put in, a tiny tube burned into one end of the "G", through which to insert the gas after all air and impurities have been removed by vacuum. Then he connects the small tube by heat to the gas chamber and fills the "G" with gas.

He was making a pink sign and in order to do this he used blue glass and red gas. To make a gold sign he said that they used green glass and red gas. There're a lot of gadgets that we don't quite understand, not being electrically nor mechanically minded, but it was fascinating to watch and to know that such is being done right here in Ranger.

Heard this morning of an irate citizen complaining about being called upon to donate trees to beautify Ranger and then having the trees killed by burning off lots. Don't make sense, does it?

Well, we got the blame this morning for not getting that rain that came so near and yet remained so far away last night.

It was suggested that we didn't pour it on strong enough in this column yesterday.

Everybody was feeling so smug last night when all of the electrical storm came along and we just knew that the long awaited rain was about to fall. But alas, a few drops, and the thing was over. All we got out of it was the smell of dust being stirred up by those few drops of rain.

And so went to bed and dreamed about it raining.

Sitdown Strike

Two sitdown strikers at the Industrial Container Corp., reach through an open window for kisses from their babies, brought to the plant by their wives. The men, involved in a CIO-AFL jurisdictional strike, have been "sitting" since October 13. Both unions are calling for application of the Taft-Hartley law. (NEA Telephoto).

Bedroom Styles Feature College Fashion Show

COLUMBIA, Mo. (UP)—With two women's colleges here (and the University of Missouri), a girl has to watch how she dresses—even in bed.

First award for the "loveliest" nightie in the annual Christian College bedroom style show went to Miss Mary Tranel, Dexter, Mo. She had on pajamas with a pink sleeveless top and black satin pants. She also wore silver slippers trimmed in black.

Miss Dorothy Peel, San Antonio, Tex., sported the "cutest" night attire—specifically, an old-fashioned nightie of pink flannel with blue flowers. She carried a stuffed rabbit.

Blimp Observers Spot Traffic Jams

SACRAMENTO, Cal. (UP)—A novel method of studying traffic congestion was used here when four officials went aloft in a blimp to observe the flow.

The group stayed up for nearly an hour. The blimp was used because it could hover over the key areas longer than an airplane.

The flight resulted in recommendations for new parking regulations and for traffic signals at additional intersections.

VERDICTS RETURNED IN DEATHS OF EASTLAND MEN

Justice of the Peace E. E. Wood of Eastland, acting as coroner in the case of the death of Samuel Butler and Frank Dwyer, prominent Eastland men, found shot to death near the head of Ringling Lake, two miles north of Eastland Wednesday afternoon, this morning rendered the following verdicts:

In the case of Butler—"The court finds that the deceased came to his death from a pistol shot inflicted by Frank Dwyer."

In the case of Dwyer—"The court finds from evidence surrounding the body that the deceased came to his death from a pistol shot probably self-inflicted."

Truly Carter, foreman at King Motor Company in Eastland, went out to Ringling Lake between 12:00 and 1:00 o'clock Wednesday afternoon to fish. He stopped first on the west side of the lake and fished for some thirty minutes and decided to drive around the head of the lake and try his luck on the east side. While fishing on the west side he heard no shot. On the east side he came upon a case—which it developed

Coffee Vacation For Hawaiian Schools Urged

HONOLULU, T.H. (UP)—Unless school children on the island of Hawaii get their usual late "coffee vacation," it may mean a heavy loss of a half million dollars to the Kona coffee growers.

The Hawaii members of the territorial legislature have appealed to the department of public instruction to restore the vacation schedule which will permit school children of the Kona Coast to help pick the coffee crop, now ripening.

The legislators said that unless the schedule under which Kona school children get their vacation in September, October and November is restored, the industry will lose an estimated $500,000.

Famous Names Lists Gets Adds

LUBBOCK, Tex. (UP)—Winston Churchill and William Jennings Bryan are no longer the only students at Texas Technological college who have difficulty convincing folks they aren't using assumed names.

This year's freshman class brought to the college such additional names as Paul Revere, Armistice Day and Sam Johnson.

BULLDOGS, BROWNWOOD PLAY FRIDAY

The Ranger Bulldogs play their first conference game Friday night when they go to Brownwood to meet the powerful Brownwood Lions.

Ranger will be minus the services of Balch and possibly Wilson but Munnerlyn will be back in the starting line-up for the first time since being injured in the Fort Worth Tech-Ranger game. Otherwise the starting line up will be about the same as in the last game.

Brownwood is rated as one of the strongest teams in District 9AAA and of the three games they have played have won two and tied one. Ranger has played four games and won one.

Coach Onis Warden and Coach Sam Aills are going into the game with their fingers crossed, as statistics and statisticians rate Ranger a the underdog.

A big send-off rally will be held in downtown Ranger to night and the pep leaders are planning to see that the Bulldogs know that the fans are behind them. They have asked that citizens join them and the students in the downtown rally to night.

The Bulldogs' B team will play Breckenridge in Breckenridge to night beginning at 7:30 o'clock. This is the B team's first game this season.

Recruiter For National Guard Here Wednesday

Col. Ira H. Treest, retired regular Army officer, was in Ranger Wednesday to confer with Bruce Harris relative to building up the National Guard unit here.

Colonel Treest is on temporary duty with the recruiting service for the National Guard.

The colonel stated that recruiting for the guard has been listed as operation 88,890, through the fact that they seek that many recruits over the country.

States are competing for the championship recruiter and the winner in each state will be given an expense paid trip to Washington with entertainment while there to include a ticket to the Army-Navy game.

Colonel Treest stated that Ranger's unit is now in a position to receive federal recognition and equipment such as uniforms, guns, and trucks will be forthcoming when the recognition is given. He also pointed out that the unit must have a drill field, a strong room in which to store guns and such and housing for the trucks.

At the present time the unit has 11 men and one officer and goal for the unit is 55. The men have an income from the guard and Colonel Treest stated that the payroll would amount to a considerable sum when the unit is completely built up.

WHEAT SELLS AT $3 BUSHEL IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO—Wheat sold for more than $3 a bushel in the Chicago board of trade today as President Truman disclosed that the Attorney General is investigating the soaring grain prices.

Officials of the Board of Trade said they had no previous intimation that Attorney General Tom Clark was looking into the dealings on the exchange. A spokesman for the Board of Trade also said that price developments since the grain exchange doubled its margin requirements on Oct. 7, proved that the speculators were not to blame for high prices.

In the nine days since the grain exchange bowed to the government's demand to increase margins, grain prices have moved steadily upward, although the amount of trading has decreased by 553 per cent.

The margins are the down payment which grain traders must make on their transactions.

Today the price of December wheat hit a new all-time high of $3.02 3-4 a bushel.

British-Soviet Pact On Greece, Rumania Denied

LONDON—A foreign office spokesman today denied a suggestion arising from newspaper comment upon the new book by James F. Byrnes to the effect that Britain and Russia secretly agreed in 1944 to future respective spheres of political influence in Greece and Rumania.

The spokesman said he had not seen Byrnes' book. "Speaking frankly," but was replying to queries concerning statements in newspaper articles on the book.

"There was discussion between Britain and Russia as to the most effective way of bringing pressure to bear on the enemy," he said.

"It was agreed that Britain could best do so in Greece and Russia could best do so in Rumania.

"The resultant arrangement was similar to that by which the British and American forces took over operations in North Africa. It was an ad hoc agreement for coordinating military strategy."

Asked if the "arrangement" still was effective, he replied that "arrangements for fighting Germans in certain areas lapse when there are no longer any Germans to fight."

Calls For Aid To China; Warns Of Soviet Threat

BOSTON—Lt. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer, recently returned from a fact-finding mission to China, called today for American aid to the Chinese people but warned that without "drastic" economic reforms that nation would be "drawn into the Soviet orbit."

Wedemeyer, whose confidential report on the Chinese situation has not yet been made public by the U. S. State Department, charged that the "Soviet Union capitalized fully upon the disorganization and chaos in the area exactly as she had done in Europe."

In a letter to Mrs. John Gardner Coolidge, vice-president of the women's division of United Service to China, Inc., he criticized "corruption and maladministration" in the Chinese government but expressed his confidence in the sincerity of Chiang Kai Shek.

The letter, first break in Wedemeyer's silence since his return from the Far East, was released here by the Boston office of United Service to China with express permission of the General.

DETAILS OF PROBE NOT ANNOUNCED

WASHINGTON — President Truman disclosed today that Attorney General Tom Clark is investigating what the President denounced as inflationary gambling on the grain exchanges.

At the same time the President told reporters that he regarded rationing and price controls as police state methods which should not be undertaken in a free country unless absolutely necessary.

Mr. Truman gave no details of the attorney general's investigation. He said merely that the inquiry is in progress, with Clark investigating gambling in the food and fibre markets.

The President sharply rejected a suggestion that this nation's export program was responsible for current high prices.

He asserted that most of the recent price increases were caused principally by gambling in the futures markets.

Mr. Truman's description of price control and consumer rationing as police state methods caused an outburst of questions from the reporters who were gathered around his desk.

The President stuck to that description of compulsory economic controls. He said that such police station actions—and he included our own OPA in that category—were necessary during an emergency.

Asked whether he thought compulsory controls would have to be reimposed, the President said this was a bridge which the government would have to cross when it came to it after seeing how the voluntary program works.

Britain Not Fooling About Palestine Move

LAKE SUCCESS—A British official at the United Nations said today Great Britain was "not kidding" about pulling out of Palestine at an early date.

The British reminder, scheduled to be delivered officially to the United Nations General Assembly later in the day, was in part an answer to the recent claim by the United States that Britain cannot unceremoniously pull out of Palestine until the United Nations is ready to take over.

The American reference to Britain's responsibility for the territory has held 25 years under a mandate was included by means of thinly-veiled implication in the United States announcement that it favored Palestine partition. Britain's answer, which will underscore the British coolness toward Holy Land partition, was likely to be couched in equally subtle terms.

Leaves Her Money Where She Got It

COLUMBUS, O. (UP)—Mary Kemelhor, Columbus real estate dealer for 35 years, is giving away her fortune to charities and worthy causes.

The 61-year-old widow, who in 1923-24 slept in her basement on a cot, already has donated $250,000 to charity and medical institutions.

"I don't have any use for these rich people who try to hoard their money," the plain-spoken woman says.

Mrs. Kemelhor's latest action was the signing over of her two-story duplex home for a charity hospital. She has placed a $10,000 fund to get it started.

The native New York woman married Nathan Kemelhor, a Boston attorney, and in 1912 came to Columbus to establish local and real estate offices. An office employee absconded with $10,000 and her husband died after a lengthy and expensive illness, causing Mrs. Kemelhor to spend the last of their money for his funeral in 1928.

She recouped her losses during the prosperity period of the late '20s through real estate dealings and continued in business in more recent years.

"Sure, I've made plenty of money in Columbus, and I'm giving it away here," she says. The only money Mrs. Kemelhor has set aside for herself is $500 for a tombstone to be placed above her in the site where her husband is buried.

Mystery of the Missing Farms

Yep, the number of farms in America is shrinking (by a quarter-million in the last five years!). What's happened to the missing farms? The land has been taken in by other farms, increasing the average size by twenty acres!

Does this growth mean farming's no longer a family enterprise? Just the opposite! More families own farms today than ever—only with labor-saving equipment they can handle more land, more work.

That's as it should be. The family farm is a fortress of democracy—where our free, American life is secure. Where every member operates and shares the work... living together in temperance and tolerance—temperance that prefers a moderate beverage like beer, and tolerance for a taste that may be different from one's own.

From where I sit, our Family Farms (and they're 96% of all farms) are something that this country can be proud of!

Heartsease by Elsie Glenn

Have A Cigar, Sister? I was standing in a cafe today, waiting to pay the cashier for a cup of coffee. A nicely dressed man walked up, carefully surveyed the cigars on display, selected two, bowed and offered me one. "Have a cigar, sister?" he asked.

I do not have a mustache. I do not wear trousers. I am of the female gender. I don't think I look like the type woman who would enjoy a big, black cigar. "I don't care if I do. Thank you," I said.

He was so taken aback he almost dropped the cigar. Then we both laughed. The cashier laughed. The laughter spread and before we knew it, a number of nearby people were laughing.

He apologized and explained. "I beg your pardon. So many women smoke now a days, I just wondered what one would do if I offered her a cigar."

I gave the cigar back and he walked out. O. K. . . My sisters. There we have it. A lot of us smoke cigarettes. I do, I know, and I enjoy it. Look what we've done to the men. Have a cigar?

English Channel Tunnel Urged

LONDON (UP) — The Dauntless Channel Tunnel Co., formed more than 80 years ago, still is trying to promote the idea of an undersea tunnel connecting Britain and France.

Sir Herbert Walker, company chairman, insists the proposal is more attractive today than at any time since Queen Victoria gave her blessing to the project. Engineers believe it could best be driven from behind the Shakespeare Cliffs, between Dover and Folkestone on the southern coast of Britain, to a point near Wissant, between Boulogne and Calais in France. That would make it about 31 miles long, more than 20 under the open sea.

Estimated pre-war cost was around $30,000,000 ($120,000,000), although increases in building and supply costs indicate some $160,000,000 today.

The job—two tunnels 20 feet in diameter and 50 feet apart, connected by frequent cross galleries—would take about five or six years to complete. Electric trains could make the journey from Britain to France in about 45 minutes.

A 2,000-yard "trail bore" from the Dover cliffs out to sea, made around the trunk of the century, served a vital purpose during the recent war. British scientists with delicate acoustic equipment kept 24-hour-a-day watch for any enemy attempt to drive an invasion tunnel through from the continent.

An English scientist dismisses the danger of atomic destruction with the argument: "What could an atom bomb do to a tunnel 20 or 40 feet beneath the seabed?"

Rigorous Trip Gets Contestant There On Time

DALLAS, Tex. (UP)—After a three-mile walk, a try at hitchhiking and a 6:30 a.m. arrival at the State Fair of Texas, fair policeman J. E. Watkins of Dallas made it in time to take second place in the Rio Grande Valley lemon pie contest.

Watkins, a cook of some ability, whipped up his entry one Saturday night after work, but due to bus schedules he had to endure a rigorous work-out to make the contest on time.

For his trouble, Watkins won four bushels of valley fruit—with lemons thrown in to take care of his future pie making.

XXX

AS he talked, Dr. Gregor managed to speak to Woodward, and at the same time to pass over him. It was quite a performance. Malcolm, his head aching in sharp flashes of white-hot pain, sat back and watched and listened. This Gregor was quite a fellow. He was clever, witty, and charming. His crisp accent was fascinating; he spoke freely, without any sort of inhibition, yet Malcolm suspected deep purpose in everything he chose to talk about. The purpose of a man carefully laying the foundation for future work.

Dr. Gregor took a cigaret from a tray of them upon the table, lit it with his supple fingers. Not a man at the table but noted and admired the skill, the grace of his hands. "I have spent the morning examining the new orthopedic wing, Woodward," he said softly. "Perhaps this is as good a time as any to mention the terms of the contract which I have signed with the Directors of the Hospital Group."

"While I anticipate no more than a professional interchange of ideas with the Gynecologic Chief, I have declared myself to be unwilling to stand subservient to the Pediatric department. In all orthopedic cases I must have a free hand, and the final word if those cases come to me through the Children's Hospital."

He looked down at Woodward, around the entire table, his eyes picking out those men who worked with the children. "I come here as Orthopedic Surgeon and head—boss, if you like the word—and I do!" His wonderful smile flashed for a second, his dark eyes held steady upon Andrew Woodward's face. "Boss of the Orthopedic and Pediatric Department. And when I say boss, I certainly mean all that the word can imply. It is the only arrangement under which I could work. You see, I am very sure the Caroline Lehr Hospital, as a whole, is under competent guidance, that its welfare is in the safest possible hands." He turned and bowed gracefully to Malcolm. "But in my smaller kingdom, I want sovereignty. And sovereignty I mean to have. Again his eyes gathered up those men who would work under him. Or else, his expression seemed to say.

MALCOLM watched him, listened as he went on to talk of the work they could expect to do in the orthopedic wing, and his heart shook off some of the weight which had oppressed it. This man would work for the Hospital, as Malcolm had always worked for it, believing in it, wanting to build it into something worthy of its physical beauty.

Once Woodward got in a reminder that Dr. McAn was Chief of Staff, Gregor's quiet, "I understand," brought round smiles to the faces of the doctors at the table.

When plates were being changed for dessert, Gregor turned again to Malcolm. "I once read in a biographical discussion of you, Doctor, that you sing. That you could sing professionally."

Malcolm smiled. "Fortunately for the public, I don't. I confine my vocal activity to Sunday vespers, and occasional barber shop renditions with the interns."

"Fine! Singing amounts to a vice with me. I sing bass. Naturally, there are few opportunities for a bass solo—next to a solo on a tuba, I think there is nothing so depressing. But in a duet—ah, Dr. Glenn, I can see that you and I shall get along together."

Malcolm chuckled. "From now on, then, all strange noises within the Hospital do not necessarily come from the O.B. department."

"STRANGE noises, indeed!" cried Gregor, apparently delighted with this interchange. "If you did not have the headache I see you do have, Doctor, I would suggest an immediate demonstration. Tell me, would you have migraine?"

Malcolm sighed. "I'm afraid you've hit it, Doctor."

Gregor looked pleased. "Finel Migraine is my sideline, my hobby. I fully mean to make a startling discovery about it some day. I already have ten people so afflicted who send me their symptoms, their reactions. I demand cooperation from you, Glenn. And then—think! I can watch you!"

"Do you have a family, Dr. Gregor?" Woodward asked, making a show of being politely bored at this pother over a headache.

"Yes, I do. So soon as I find a suitable home, I shall bring them here. Though they shall not bother you, particularly. Away from the Hospital, I am a passionate father. In the Hospital, my family does not exist. I am an aesthete of surgery." He smiled at his own extravagance. Then he said, and soberly, "I am not one to take the smell of ether into my home—nor do I choose to bring the towels and diapers of my household to the hospital for laundering."

Malcolm's hand dropped to Gregor's shoulder. "You're right!" he said firmly. "I have always thought that a doctor's family has no more connection with his profession than the family of a banker has a right to spend the funds put into his vaults. You and I shall do more than harmonize in duets, Gregor. We seem to see eye to eye on many things."

Dr. Gregor nodded; only his eyes smiled knowingly into Malcolm's. "We'll work together," he promised.

Mental Clinics Urged For U. S.

ST. LOUIS (UP)—Five times the existing number of mental health clinics are needed in the United States, according to Dr. James V. Lowery, of the U. S. Public Health Service.

Dr. Lowery, senior surgeon of the service's mental hygiene division, says more psychiatric specialists and psychiatric training in general medical courses are required.

He predicts that expanded community mental health programs will result in general improvement in the mental treatment field during 1948.

Dr. Lowery points out, however, that some states still have no mental health programs and that large areas in others do not have access to mental clinic facilities.

Synthetic Jewels Produced in U. S.

NEW YORK (UP)—Star sapphires and star rubies, the first ever made by man, have been placed on exhibit at the American Museum of Natural History. The synthetic gems, described as the greatest achievement yet in man-made gems, were created by the Linde Air Products Co. in Chicago and in Tonawanda, N. Y., in an oxy-hydrogen flame from powdered aluminum.

War-time necessity resulted in development of the synthetic jewels. Although such gems have been manufactured in Europe for 40 years, the process is new to America. The company developed synthetic jewels for precision instruments for planes and other war machines and now is making them for the jewelry trade.

A star ruby weighing about 10 carats was shown in comparison with a natural star ruby of the same size. The natural ruby was worth $50,000 to $100,000, whereas the artificial ruby was valued in hundreds of dollars. The difference between the two was said to be indistinguishable to a layman, although experts can identify the synthetic jewel.

Two Eastland--

(Continued from page 1) eyeglasses was broken out and the other was blood smeared. The glass and considerable blood, was found behind the front seat on the right hand side of the car. The bullet did not pass through Butler's head. His body was outside the car near the right door. Blood had soaked the ground underneath the body. Some small changes were found about the body and apparently had fallen out of his pockets as the body fell or was pulled from the car. The right car door was closed.

Dwyer's body was found some eight or ten feet from the right side of the car and that distance from Butler's body. A .32-caliber revolver, which evidence disclosed, belonged to Dwyer, was found partially beneath his body. Two shots had been fired from this gun. Dwyer, like Butler, had bled profusely from a shot that entered a temple and passed through the head.

In the car officers found a pad of writing paper about the size of an ordinary business letterhead. Across the top was printed "Sharples Corporation." At the left hand top corner of the first sheet on the first line were written with a pen and blue ink the words "Dear Frank." John Turner, attorney for many years for Butler, stated definitely that these two words, the only ones on the page, were written by Butler.

A pen containing blue ink was found in Dwyer's shirt pocket. No pen of any kind was found on or about Butler's body, nor in the car.

Dwyer and Butler came to Eastland about 1920 at which time The Arab Gasoline Corporation began the construction of a plant north of Eastland which they operated for many years. The company had operated since 1919 in West Virginia as the United Carbon Company and both Butler and Dwyer had been connected with the company before coming to Eastland. Both men remained with the company, Dwyer as superintendent, until the business was liquidated some years ago.

Following the liquidation of the Arab Gasoline Corporation, the Sharples Corporation was organized for oil exploration and development and the main offices were shortly moved to Denver, Colorado. Butler and Dwyer both went with the new company. Dwyer, however, had not recently been connected with the company.

Wednesday morning Dwyer left his home in Eastland about 10:00 o'clock, drove to Butler's home and told Butler that he wanted to show him some oil leases. Butler got in the car with him and they left together. Butler told his wife that he had a luncheon engagement with a man from Breckenridge and that he would be back by 12:00 o'clock.

Frank Dwyer was born in Rayone, New Jersey, in April, 1895. He came to Eastland from West Virginia in 1919. Among his survivors are his widow, a brother, Jack Dwyer of Mount Pleasant, and a sister. His home is in Eastland.

Close friends of Dwyer say that he has never been the same since the loss of an only child, a son, in a plane crash during the recent war.

Samuel Butler, son of the late congressman Butler of Pennsylvania, and a brother of the late General Smedley Butler and the late Horace Butler, who was killed in a car accident between Eastland and Mineral Wells a number of years ago, is survived by his widow, who before her marriage to Butler, was the widow of the late C. U. Connelley, a son and daughter, the son, Samuel, Jr., was enroute Wednesday by plane to Eastland. A brother-in-law, a member of Sharples family of Pennsylvania, and Butler's daughter, Miss Helen Butler, were due in Fort Worth today by plane. Friends from Eastland were to meet them there and bring them to Eastland.

Funeral arrangements for Dwyer were still pending this morning.

A short service for Mr. Butler will be held at the home in Eastland Friday morning at 10 o'clock and the family has requested that no flowers be sent. Following the service in Eastland the body will leave on a chartered American Airlines plane for Philadelphia where it will arrive about seven hours later. The plane will leave Eastland at 11 o'clock.

Pioneer Farming Days Not Over Two Men Prove

By Glenn Martz
United Press Staff Correspondent
WESTHOPE, N. D. (UP)

Back in the dust-dreary days of the early 30's, a tired, hungry man was stranded in the little town of Rolla, N. D., because he didn't have money to buy a tire for an ancient truck.

He was Howard Henry, who this year will harvest a $37,000 wheat and flax crop.

Howard Henry, like a great many other North Dakota farmers in those days, borrowed money year after year—stayed off creditors—waited for crops that never came.

Swirling dust, cloudless skies, burning sun—all combined to turn Bottineau County into a desolate waste of Russian thistles.

He and a friend succeeded in getting one more grub-stake. With Bill Shaffer, his partner, he got the needed tire for the old truck and commenced hauling lignite coal. In exchange they got government seed for a dime a bushel.

"We never had our shoes off for three months," he recalled as he watched his trucks haul wheat away from four combines. "We had to keep rolling in those days."

Today, Howard Henry farms 23 quarters of land and doesn't own a cent on a single acre. Shaffer now is a "retired" farmer.

But Henry, sun-tanned and only 44 years old, is making things hum in this little prairie town. He owns the only hotel and a restaurant and he is building a new theater, a 70-room all-modern apartment house and jewelry store.

Next summer he plans to sponsor a children's playground.

"All of my money came out of Bottineau County soil," he explained, "and it's all going to stay right here."

He is vice-president of the state's flying farmers chapter and a member of the state board of

Says Suspicion, Hatred Retard Wartorn Nations

LUBBOCK, Tex. (UP)— European nations today are as disrupted by hatred and suspicion as by the more tangible destruction of war, according to Mrs. Lillian P. Eaves, accounting and finance professor at Texas Tech who recently returned from Germany.

Mrs. Eaves recently returned to the Tech faculty from a year's leave of absence spent teaching commercial courses to American military personnel with the occupation forces.

Concluding her teaching duties last May, Mrs. Eaves spent the summer traveling over the continent and in England. She visited Italy, Belgium, France, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Czechoslovakia, Austria, Luxembourg and Switzerland.

Most of the smaller nations are in terror of the Russians, envious of Americans and disgusted with British smugness, Mrs. Eaves declared. Russians in their occupation zone of Germany appear sullen and distrustful of outsiders, she stated, and their prison camps are reportedly more horrible than those of the Nazis.

Commenting on European economic recovery, Mrs. Eaves said Belgium is far ahead of other nations on their return to a normal state.

Austria and Czechoslovakia are fairly well off, probably because they did not suffer during the war as other nations did, she said, adding that France and the Netherlands appear to be recovering slowly with Germany training the other countries.

The five races of mankind are Caucasian, Mongolian, Negro, Malay and American Indian.
