More Condemning Meyers Evidence Heard

Gen. Meyers Explains His Side

Major General Bennett E. Meyers, retired, whose wartime interest in an aviation parts company is currently being investigated by a Senate War Investigating subcommittee, explains his side of the story to reporters in Washington. In the right background is the General's wife. The President of a dummy corporation set up by Meyers told a committee that the Aviation Electric Corp., picked up the bill of $10,000 for redecorating Meyers' Washington apartment in 1941. Final Steps In Airport Program Are Outlined Mayor Lee Dockery and City Secretary Lester Crossley were in Big Spring Wednesday to confer with officials relative to the airport improvements program.

At the conference the Ranger men were given an outline of things to be done before the program is started. One of the main things, Crossley stated today, is to acquire the mineral rights to the airport property. This, he explained, will take about 30 to 60 days and when completed the application will then be submitted for another review. This likely will require 30 to 60 days and then actual work on the airport will be started.

Dewey Attacks Truman's Stand On China Aid

MANCHESTER, N. H. — Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, undeclared Republican presidential candidate, charged today that President Truman "seems to have abandoned China to Communist conquest." Pressing his attack on Soviet Russia, Dewey challenged President Truman for failure to include aid to China in the agenda for the special session of Congress. He said it should have been given prompt consideration.

"There is even a more urgent situation in China," Dewey said. "There the Communist armies are not riding in the streets as in Italy and France but they are way ahead of the schedule in Europe. They are actually engaged at this moment in highly successful warfare against the Chinese government."

A showdown in the countryside violence led by Communists appeared near. The government warned last night that it was ready to use force. Palmira Togliatti, Italian Communist leader, replied today in a signed editorial in the Communist organ Unita. "I am not surprised that the partisans with anxiety seek their arms. 'Difficult days are coming... and we have no faith in the intentions of our adversaries,' minister of interior, Mario Scelba, said last night. As minister of interior, he is responsible for keeping internal order.

Sounds Complicated But It Works

WHITTIER, Cal. (UP)—J. C. Hunnicutt took that adage about "building a better mousetrap" to heart. His latest de luxe "automatic jail" trapped 13 rats in one night at the city dump.

A rodent who sniffs the bait and enters Hunnicutt's gadget first trips a floor trap which closes the door behind him. Then he goes down a tunnel and squeezes through an opening into a larger box, automatically closing the front door for the next victim.

Hunnicutt says he has been working up to this masterpiece through 50 years' trap-making experience.

ELIZABETH PROMISES TO OBEY DUKE

By United Press
WESTMINSTER ABBEY — Princess Elizabeth, tremulous as any bride, today spoke her marriage vows—including a promise "to obey"—to Philip Mountbatten, new Duke of Edinburgh, at Britain's most sacred shrine, the sanctuary of Westminster Abbey.

After the ceremony, rich in the traditions of Britain and Empire, the young couple held hands in public for a moment after entering the fabulous glass coach for the ceremonial return to Buckingham Palace.

The cheers of the multitude assembled in Parliament Square roared out so loud that the crashing carillons of Westminster Abbey were almost drowned out. Millions lined the streets and more than 2,000 persons fainted or collapsed in the crush that turned the Mall, Trafalgar Square and Whitehall into solid seas of humanity.

Like many a bride before her, Elizabeth had trouble with the train of her wedding gown—a dream-like creation studded with thousands of seed pearls and crystals. It proved more than the little page boys could handle.

The Jaycees having wooden toys made for Xmas

Members of the Junior Chamber of Commerce announced today that with the cooperation of the West Texas Vocational Institute, operated by James Smith, wooden toys are being made for distribution to underprivileged children at Christmas time.

Plans for the distribution of the toys will be announced later though tentative plans are to have a Christmas program and Christmas tree for the youngsters.

Clive Calder and A. F. Jackman became blinded by dust while driving over a mountain road. Calder's jeep left the road on a curve and fell 500 feet.

Both men were thrown clear of the vehicle and landed unhurt. The jeep landed right-side up without a scratch or dent.

Ranger B Team Downed By Breckenridge

The Ranger B team lost its second game to Breckenridge B team here Wednesday night by a score of 24 to 6.

Ranger got off to a fast start but failed to muster enough power to defeat the large Breckenridge team.

On the first play from scrimmage the Pups right half, on a hide out play, took a pass from Buddy Hamrick and out raced the opposing tacklers to score. The play covered 81 yards. The kick was low and Ranger led 6 to 0.

The Buckies proved they had power for on the second play they went all the way to score from their own 30 yard line. The play was a cross buck and covered 70 yards for the score. The kick was blocked and the score stood 6-6. The tie was not broken until late in the second period.

On Ranger's 30 yard line the Buckies' passer tossed a pass to the left end who was behind his defenders. He took the ball and stepped over untouched to score. Again the extra point failed and the half ended 12-6.

Breckenridge came back at the half and scored twice in the third quarter, one on a 64 yard run and again on a 23 yard run. Both were on quick opening plays through center with the left half going all the way. Both extra points failed, making the score 24-6.

The Pups made another threat to score in the last period but were stopped by a fumble and a Breckenridge recovery.

Ranger's passing was good and counted for 133 yards, completing 6 out of 13. Sides and Ice were on the receiving end most of the time.

BY PETER EDSON NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(NEA)—Major Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, the White House military aide with something of a reputation for saying the incorrect thing at precisely the wrong moment, has apparently done it again in his signed article advocating unification of the National Guard with the Organized Reserve.

Edson

It so happens that Vaughan's boss, President Truman, on Sept. 16 proclaimed National Guard Day to launch a two-months "Man-a-Minute" campaign intended to recruit 88,800 new men in the National Guard units.

The story is told that when Lieut.-Gen. John C. H. Lee was wartime chief of supply for Europe with headquarters in Paris, he got the idea that the reason the Army wasn't fighting better was because its morale was low.

STOPPING every GI he met whose helmet was over on one side of his head, the general would return the man's salute very properly and then ask, "Soldier, is my helmet on straight?"

Then the word of what was going on went around Paris. A tough little New Yorker, his helmet on the back of his head, went looking for the general.

Word of that got around Paris, too. It was repeated several times. And that was the end of the morale-building-through-helmet-straightening campaign.

What Democratic politicians are looking for the hardest is a good vice-presidential candidate to run with Harry S. Truman for President in 1948.

But the Democrats don't have a governor in New York or Pennsylvania, and there's no way they can get one.

OTHER New Yorkers being mentioned for the Democratic vice-presidential spot include Secretary of Defense James Forrestal and Secretary of Commerce Averell Harriman.

Associate Justice Robert H. Jackson of the Supreme Court, also a New Yorker, is now being talked of as a leading possibility.

Tired Kidneys Often Bring Sleepless Nights

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filaments which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. When they get tired and don't work right in the daytime, many people have to get up nights. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes show there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. Don't neglect this condition and lose valuable, restful sleep.

10 ways you can help yourself to good telephone service

Telephoning is easy. But more depends on the user than you perhaps realize. What you do when making or receiving a call often has a lot to do with how satisfactory that call is. Here are ten suggestions:

1. Before you call, make sure of the number.
2. Give the called party time to answer.
3. Speak directly into the mouthpiece.
4. Move the switch hook slowly up and down to recall or signal the operator.
5. Replace the receiver carefully when you have finished talking.
6. Answer calls promptly. It's courteous to do so.
7. Identify yourself. Not everyone recognizes you by your voice.
8. Space calls on party lines. If you have a series of calls to make, allow a few minutes between each one so others can use the line.
9. Keep calls brief on party lines. Other folks on the line will appreciate your thoughtfulness.
10. Avoid calling during busy hours if possible.

WINDSOR'S LOVE FOR WALLY BARS BOTH FROM WEDDING

By Robert Kugel
 United Press Staff Correspondent
 LONDON, Nov. 20 (UP)—The Duke and Duchess of Windsor are attending today's wedding in Westminster Abbey but there are many in Britain who had hoped the royal family would be able to end its ten-year ostracism of the American divorcee for so happy an occasion.

By its action in barring the former Wallis Warfield of Baltimore, Md., from the wedding—and thus her husband—the royal family headed by 80-year-old

Reds Work Through German Stomach

Queen Mother Mary has made all too clear its unrelenting refusal to recognize the woman for whose love King Edward VIII abdicated the throne.

Curiously enough, had the duke not abandoned the throne, the marriage of the princess today would not have the significance it carries, for she would not be first in succession to the throne. But second behind her father, who would still be Duke of York.

The social iron curtain fell on Wallis Warfield even before her marriage to the Duke of Windsor. In the rapid upsurge of events leading to the celebrated dinner party in 1936 when King Edward informed his shocked family that he placed his love for Mrs. Warfield above his family inheritance, she was made to feel what penalty marriage would carry.

The predictions were all too true. She became a duchess because her husband was a duke but all other prerogatives of his position were denied her. She was not named to a royal highness—her husband always was. Thus, even had they attended state functions together, there would be a humiliating disparity in precedence.

The duke as a royal highness ranks third behind his brothers, the King and the Duke of Gloucester. But as the newest of the duchesses she would rank 35th.

Trying to sway the Germans to the Red way of thinking by working through their stomachs, the Soviet Military Government in Berlin recently decreed an extra 20-pound potato ration for students at the University of Berlin. Above, three students carry away their unexpected "good-will" potatoes.

The duke has refused firmly to attend any formal affairs without his wife—an attitude which has won him considerable support from press and public.

He still retains much of his once great popularity and there is a belief his absence from the wedding is due to a promise he made at the time of the abdication not to appear at any state assemblage lest he detract from the attention that should be paid the king.

There is a human side to the affair. The Duke of Windsor always has been Elizabeth's favorite uncle, as she has been his favorite. In their love of lights, music and dancing they are much alike. Somehow, no matter where he is, the duke will find a way of wishing his niece well on her wedding day, so his friends say.

In 1769 Nicholas Cugnot, a French artillery captain, built a three-wheeled wagon equipped with a boiler and engine.

Sports Drive Head

Grantland Rice, dean of American sports writers, has once again organized the sports world for the March of Dimes, January 15-30. Under his national chairmanship, every sport, both professional and amateur, will cooperate 100% in the 1948 crusade against polio, the great crippler.

Stamp Collection Goes To Boys' Town

BOYS TOWN, Neb. (UP)—An extensive collection of stamps and rare currency will be added to the museum of Father Flanagan's Boys' home under an arrangement concluded with D. O. Barrett, Tulsa, Okla.

The Barrett collection comprises more than 50 standard volumes and includes the regular and commemorative issues of United States stamps as well as revenues, consular fees, officials, and other stamps. Several volumes of U. S. proofs and essays also are in the collection.

Barrett recently added to his collection a series of state bank notes, colonial currency, engravings, and old autographed documents of considerable historical value.

Unbreakable Ware Promised By Potters

EAST LIVERPOOL, O. (UP)—The American dinnerware industry promises to make the quarrelsome neighbors upstairs a little less noisy.

Potters are perfecting unbreakable dinnerware, according to W. A. Betz, secretary-treasurer of the U. S. Potters Association.

It will mean that being hit by a flying saucer will be just as painful, but the dish won't make so much noise when it hits the wall.

Betz said the new dinnerware would be especially useful in hotels and restaurants, where the rate of breakage is high.

This Is Happy

By PEGGY DERN

© by Peggy Dern, Distributed by NEA SERVICE, INC.

THE STORY: While Happy and Joyce are out riding, they meet David Boyle. Joyce later asks Happy not to say anything to George about the meeting, and she that she and David are in love and George opposes their marriage. George is in a position to withhold her inheritance if she marries against his wishes.

ting the gentle chestnut mare's head aimed in that direction, plodded behind her, deeply troubled.

XVI
SHE was weeping now, as a child weeps, one arm crooked over her face, her body shaken with her sobbing. Happy put her arms about her and held her close, soothing her with honest pity.

Suddenly Joyce threw up her head and looked belligerently at Happy.

"Don't you start thinking that David is a cheap little fortune hunter, or that he won't marry me unless I get the money," she said fiercely. "He'd marry me this minute if I'd let him. But how can I? You see, David hasn't a penny except what he can earn, and then there's his mother. I can't just move in on them and let them support me while I do nothing—which is all I've ever been trained to do. David is riding instructor at the Golden Isles Hotel. It's on a smaller island east of here, and one of the most exclusive and expensive winter resorts in the country."

She had herself under better control now, and she managed a damp smile at Happy as she said, "Sorry I was such a fool. I hadn't seen David in several days and I sort of blew my top."

"You are in love with him, aren't you?" said Happy slowly. "Surely, if George understood—" Joyce gave a derisive sniff.

"That's funny—knowing George as I do! All George can understand is that David and his mother are not descendants of the original settlers and that they come from poor people."

She swung into the saddle and turned her horse toward home. And Happy, after laboriously getting the gentle chestnut mare's head aimed in that direction, plodded behind her, deeply troubled.

The picture Joyce had sketched of George was utterly incredible; it just couldn't be true!

BY the end of the week Happy was riding with more confidence and beginning to enjoy it. She had seen George only in the evenings, for he was very busy with the spring routine on the vast acreage that comprised Sundown's holdings.

There had been guests for dinner on two occasions, and once they had dined at a neighboring estate.

George had been worried lest she be bored, and she had laughed the idea to scorn. She was having a marvelous time, she assured him quite honestly; it was all so beautiful and so different from anything she had ever known.

On Saturday evening, George told her, laughing, "With Saturday night, comes drink and ructions. Hardworking farmers knock off from their labors on Saturday afternoon and really step out! How'd you like to go dining and dancing at the Golden Isles Hotel?"

"Sounds like fun," said Happy. "You're a very nice child, Happy," said George, and his voice was almost caressing. "You ask me a little of life; it's fun to do things for you and see your eyes light up. And did you know there's the cutest little ghost of a dimple beside your mouth when you laugh? You should laugh often, Happy—it's very becoming!"

She colored a little and laughed. "I've been told that my happy disposition can be a distinct bore. The fact that I smile before breakfast and like to walk in the rain indicates I'm not too bright—or so I've been told," she said lightly.

"By Steve Landers, I suppose." George's eyes were cold and his jaw set a little. "It sounds like something he might say. Well, let's leave Steve Landers in New York where he belongs. Run along now and do yourself up in your most devastating frock and we'll liddle off to the hotel and have some fun!"

IN her own room, Happy was hesitating between a pale blue frock that made her eyes look very blue, and a jade-green that did even more interesting things to them, when there was a knock on the door, and Joyce came in. She was dressed in daffodil yellow, and looked very pretty and gay—if you didn't notice her somber eyes.

"The green, pal. It makes you look like a mermaid or something with all that misty, silvery emerald. It's a beautiful dress, Happy," she said casually.

"That settles it. I couldn't decide between the blue and the green. Thanks," said Happy, and she took the dress over her head, settling it about her slim body with a whirl of the full skirts above silver sandals.

Joyce prowled restlessly about the room, and it was obvious that there was something on her mind. Suddenly, she turned to Happy and demanded sharply, "Did you tell George about meeting David?"

Happy turned an astonished face to her.

"Why, of course not; why should I?"

Joyce made a little gesture and her young face relaxed.

"Sorry. But George has a perfectly poisonous way of worming secrets out of people without their even knowing it," she apologized. "Will David be at the hotel?"

Joyce's eyebrows went way up in pretended shock.

"One of the hired help? My dear—how you do carry on!"

"I'm sorry, Joyce."

"Let's not talk about it. I'm such a fool and I don't want to spoil my make-up with tears. Come on, if you're ready, the carriage awaits without, m'lady!"

ATOM BOMB EFFECT SEEN BENEFIT TO AGRICULTURE

CHICAGO (UP)—The atom bomb kicked up a lot of dust in the pea patches of Nagasaki. Some good, some bad.

Dr. Raymond E. Zirkle, director of the Institute of Radiobiology and Biophysics at the University of Chicago, says radioactive peas in the Japanese city may grow to be just as dangerous.

Nagasaki, it may be recalled, was the second Japanese city to be the size of a grenade—and may feel the sting of the atom bomb. The soil in that area, the scientists report, showed increased productivity of 50 to 300 per cent over the normal yield, making little pea grow into strangely big peas.

"Although atomic research offers agriculture tremendous hope for improvement," Zirkle said, "it is going to take time, money and scientific teamwork before beneficial results can be achieved on a practical scale."

"The University of Chicago is investing $12,000,000 in an atomic research program that may pay heavy dividends, not only in agricultural benefits, but in all fields which advance civilization."

The scientist warned that experiments with radioactive plant fertilizers may create a health hazard unless conducted or supervised by qualified scientists.

"Radioactive substances emit rays destructive to living cells," he said. "When these substances are absorbed by plants—such as peas—a concentration of them sometimes occurs in the edible portion."

"If these plants are eaten by humans, the radioactivity sometimes may concentrate further in a part of the body, such as bone or liver. A sufficient amount may cause radiation by poisoning, and that is why it is necessary to check each plant that has been used in radioactive experiments."

"Despite the hazard of radioactivity," Zirkle said, "it does not preclude the possibility that agricultural benefits may result from more intensive experiments."

"Through the use of radioactive tracers, we may learn how to obtain improved soils and fertilizers, healthier plants and animals, and food products far superior to those we now know."

"Tracers are being used to help unravel the complicated phenomenon of growth. If the mechanism of growth were well understood, remarkable improvement in crops would result."

"Tracers are making possible a better understanding of the way in which plants actually draw from the soil. This research is quite likely to result in improved fertilizer practices."

HE CALLS IT
LINCOLN, Neb. (UP)—Lincoln police often test for drunkenness by asking the suspect to distinguish coins flipped on the floor. A sober person, they contend, should be able to tell a nickel from a dime.

When a week-long tippler was brought in, the desk sergeant threw a quarter on the floor. "What is it?" the sergeant asked. The suspect leaned far over and quipped.

"Heads," he answered. It was, too.

Whitewashing Gag Still Goes Over

PEWAUKEE, Wis. (UP)—The Tom Sawyer whitewashing trick still works.

Ivan Oliphant had a garage he wanted painted, and he didn't feel like doing the job himself. He rigged up a power-driven egg beater and began mixing paint.

His teen-age daughter, Phyllis, watched the mixing. She wanted to try her hand at painting. His other daughter, Yvonne, watched as long as she could, then took up a brush, too.

Oliphant had a fine time—just sitting and watching.

Black Gold Becomes a Headache

Oil gushing from the backyard of his Newport Beach, Calif., home doesn't put William Tallman on Easy Street. He can't sell it because a city ordinance prohibits it. Capping the gusher would cost $2,000, which Tallman says would bankrupt him. So to keep it from flooding neighbors' yards and city streets, he has to bail it into disposal buckets. To add to his woes, geologists claim it would bring a $525 daily income. Above, a relative, Mrs. Frances Tallman, helps keep oil under control.

Copper and brass strainers should not be used for citrus or tomato juice, since they destroy vitamin C.

The grain crop, according to estimates, is destroyed at the rate of 200,000,000 bushels a year by rats.

TIMES HAVE CHANGED A SEARCH SHOWS

LONDON (UP)—Times have changed since the days of James I, when austerity did not apply to kings.

The wedding of Princess Elizabeth to Lieut. Philip Mountbatten will cost the British public $18,000. The remainder of the modest cost will be borne by the King's own private purse.

James I also married off a daughter named Princess Elizabeth. That was St. Valentine's Day, 1613 and it cost Britain $215,000—the equivalent of about $2,000,000 today.

That earlier Elizabeth wore a gown of color of silver, the sleeves embroidered with diamonds and a coronet of gold, pearls and diamonds. The bridegroom, Frederick, Elector of the Palatinate, also wore a suit of cloth of silver. More than 500 yards of silver cloth were ordered for the bridesmaids. A fur-lined velvet cloak, 17 pairs of silk stockings (then a fabulous luxury) and many petticoats of brocade and satin are listed.

There was a week of new plays, masquerades, balls, fireworks and carnivals until James I protested he was worn out.

Nebraskans Dominate Mission in Athens

OMAHA, Neb. (UP)—The week Aid mission in Athens has a distinct Nebraska flavor, a check of personnel serving under former Nebraska governor Dwight Griswold revealed.

Griswold's chief deputy as administrator of the aid program is Roy L. Cochran, another former governor of Nebraska. Other Nebraskans include:

Harold F. Wolitz, Wayne; Kenneth H. McGill, Tekamah; Ann R. Corovaki, Omaha; Arthur E. Dolson, Patricia O. Jensen, and Laural L. Scanton, all of Lincoln; Kathryn Duerfeldt and John R. Snyder, both of Gordon; Kenneth R. Keller, Gothenberg, and Robert A. Rowford, legal resident of Athens.

Shoe Vamp Hat Styles Forecast

BOSTON (UP)—A "vamp" style is forecast for women's hats next spring.

Exhibitors at a Boston fashion show said the "vamp" did not refer to a type of woman, but was named because the new styles resemble the shape of a shoe vamp. The back of the head style, they said, is changing into a forward-jutting line, high in the front.

GOOD OLD DAYS DIE AS PARIS BLACK MARKET WANES

By James McGlinchy
United Press Staff Correspondent
PARIS (UP)—Things are so tough for the toots these days, it's all a man can do to turn over a dishonest franc, one of them said in an interview today.

He was a gray-haired, slight man of 60, rather shabbily dressed, with a most disconcerting set of crossed eyes. He sidled up to the Rue de Rivoli and asked out of the corner of his mouth, "Any money to change?"

He was one of the thousands of toots in Paris who'll do virtually anything for a living except work. They haunt the central districts around the Opera and the Madeleine, buying dollars or English pounds from tourists. They deal in cigarettes, coffee, gasoline coupons, anything with a black market value.

The wages of such sin are pretty poor, the tout said over a coffee and cognac.

"I make maybe 2,000 or 3,000 francs a week," he said. "My wife works in a dressmaker's and she gets 2,000 francs."

That gives them a total of 30 or 40 dollars a week to live on, a condition almost worse than being broke with Paris prices what they are.

"I had a little savings from before the war and every week I have to draw on them," he said sadly. "It costs us about 500 francs a day for food. Every day I buy a liter of wine for 45 francs. A kilo of meat costs 300 to 350 francs and lasts us for two days."

"Ah, before the war—those were the days. Plenty of Americans. Plenty of money. I take the tourists everywhere. I know Paris like the bottom of my pocket. I show them everything."

He sipped his cognac and became enthusiastic about the old days.

"Suppose you want a night out. We go first to the Folies Bergere, and see the show and then maybe to the Bal Tabarin. Then we go to the Neant, where they have no delusions."

"The what?"

"The delusions. There's a little stage with girls and they tell stories."

"Dirty stories?"

"Of course. Then we go to the Soulin Rouge and see the can-can dancers. Wonderful. Then we go see a cinema."

"But naturally. After that a little place with naked girls dancing. And then to other places."

"There is nothing like that any more. I can take you nowhere. I stand around the streets and buy soap. I buy a pound for 650 francs. I sell it for 670. A Swiss franc, I give 75 and get 80."

The tout got into his present line during the war by buying candy bars from GIs for 20 francs and selling them for 25. He paid 80 or 85 for cigarettes and sold them for 100. But he made one mistake. He had his GI friends up for poker games every week. "They won all the money I made," he said.

In 1946 the New York City fire department put out 44,764 fires, an average of 122 per day.
