* WASHINGTON COLUMN

BY PETER EDSON NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON, D. C .- (NEA)-For about a year at the start of the war, one Mrs. Elizabeth P. MacDonald worked in the NEA the war, one Mrs. Elizabeth P. MacDonald worked in the NEA Service office here in Washington. Among other things, she wrote a feature called "Homefront Forecast." This was a folksy, paragraphy, woman's page thing. It was intended to tell the good American housewife what wartime shortages to expect in sugar, salt pork, silk stockings and such stuff.

One day she came in and announced that she was quitting us cold—and for less money, too—so she could become a spy and wear flowers in her teeth and a long black dress.

So she joined Col. Wild Bill Donovan's cloak and daguerrotype OSS—the hush-hush Office of Strategic Services. After flunking all the courses in the crazy cops and robbers finishing schools, which OSS operated in these parts, she was sent out to China and India for the duration. When it was all over she came home and wrote herself a book, which has just been all over she came home and wrote herself a book, which has just been published under the intriguing title of "Undercover Girl."

"UNDERCOVER GIRL" is the story of OSS from the woman's angle.

and it shows what happens to this business of waging war when they let women mess around in it. Also, it is a revelation of what we didn't know about Elizabeth. Oh, the skullduggery that sweet little girl was capable of. Oh, the shame of it.

They assigned her to Morale Operations, the OSS department that dealt in black propagands. Having spent all her innocent girlhood in Hawaii, Elizabeth knew some Japanese. And wherever she went, she was always running into four Hawaiians who knew more Japanese than she did. Together they conspired to fake letters, forge documents, print newspapers full of false information and arrange phony radio broadcasts for Japanese consumption.

The idea was to have all this stuff look like it was made in Japan. It was intended to create confusion and so persuade the Jap soldiers

The idea was to have all this stuff look like it was made in Japan. It was intended to create confusion and so persuade the Jap soldiers and the Jap homefront that they were fighting a lost cause.

For instance, when she first got to India, Mrs. MacD. came across a pack of captured Jap postcards in an intelligence office. They had been written in pencil and were addressed to the folks at home. Mrs. MacD. got the idea of erasing the messages and substituting things like, "Where are the supplies from home? We starve in the jungles." Or, "Don't ever tell our son I die for a lost cause."

Another of her forgeries was a fake order from the Japanese high command to all Jap troops, rescinding the old no-surrender policy and authorizing the men to give themselves up when they were ovinumbered, too ill to fight, or out of ammunition.

T everything worked that click, of course. One earefully thought-

NOT everything worked that click, of course. One carefully thoughtup OSS atunt was to print a lot of Jap railroad passes with a circular telling city people to go to the country because of the danger of U.S. bombs. The only trouble was that the circulars had been printed in Washington on American bond paper.

Then there was a Mr. Erp who knew that all Japs were afraid of fexes. He proposed that U.S. submarines release phosphorescent foxes in Jap waters. He said the animals would swim ashore and panic the populace. This experiment was tried in Long Island sound.

The foxes promptly headed for sea and were never seen again.

"Undercover Girl" isn't all about Mrs. MacDonald. Much of it is a tribute to the heroines and the heroes of OSS who operated underground all over the world. With becoming modesty, Elizabeth says she was never cut out to be a "femme fatale" because she never learned to keep her cover, how to keep a secret, how to tell a lie with a straight face and stick to it under torture.

Just the same, they taught her how to shoot a Tommy gin, how to put knockout drops in a man's beer, how to use an OSS developed perfume called "Who, Me?" It smelled worse than skunk and the idea was to get it splashed on some enemy big shot so he'd have to go home and stay there two weeks until it wore off.

The question all this raises is whether women who know these Gayle West, 17, of Memphis, received the state award of a Chicage trip provided by Westinghouse Educational Foundation for outstanding achievements in the 1947 4-H Better Methods activity. Gayle has been a 4-H'er for six years. Among his work simplification accomplishments on the farm and in the home are using electricity in place of the farm tractor to grind feed, wiring the poultry house and shop, and fencing pastures with electric fences. Gayle has also made a water warmer for chickens and dairy cows, installed an electric water pump, rewired a sewing machine and made a two-way tolephone between the house and the chicken house. His work has increased farm production, saved money and energy and removed drudgery on the farm and in the home.

Lola Mills, 16, of Crowley, wins the Chicago trip award provided by Swift & Co. for her top-ranking 1947 4-H Poultry Achievement record in the State. During seven years in club work she raised 443 chickens, mostly white Leghorns. Lola estimates her income from 4-H Poultry projects at $2,353.09. She has completed 11 4-H projects, including 4 in Poultry Achievement, and has made many poultry demonstrations. She has served her local club as president, vice president and secretary.

A stage without a hack-drop, without scenery, means that much must be left to the imagination. When an actress puts her hat on, she faces a non-existing mirror. When she points to the portrait of her lover hanging on the wall, the wall isn't there—much less the picture.
