

US Trying To Trade Short Distance For Tim

By Harry Ferguson
United Press Foreign Editor

The American commanders in Korea find themselves in such a tough spot today that they are going to have to borrow a trick from the Russians.

They are going to have to trade distance for time. The trouble is that there isn't too much distance to trade and the Americans need lots of time.

The Russians invented the technique of trading distance for time when they were attacked by Napoleon. They would make a stand against the French army, fight as long as they could and then fall back. Napoleon kept getting deeper into Russia—winning himself a great amount of distance. But the Russians kept winning time—time to reinforce and equip their armies. Napoleon went right into Moscow and found the city in flames. Then he began his long, bitter retreat through the Russian winter and only a few stragglers survived to return to Paris. It was a death blow to the Grand Army of France.

The Russians used the same technique in World War II. They lured a German army all the way to Stalingrad, trading distance for time, every step of the way. Then they struck their blow in the dead of winter and destroyed an army of 300,000 men commanded by Field Marshal Von Paulus.

In 12 days the Korean Communists have fought their way 70 miles south from their jump-off point at the 38th parallel. If they keep going at that rate they are going to have the Americans and South Koreans pushed against the sea by the end of July.

The chances are the Communists won't travel that fast from now on. Much of their advance was made before the American Air Force and Army got into the fight. But they are still pushing forward and the Americans are retreating.

Maj. Gen. William F. Dean, American commander in Korea, said today his troops were making a "planned withdrawal." That means he is going to drop back, establish a new line and make another stand against the Communists. By so doing he hopes to win time enough to get more troops and more planes into the Korean fighting.

It is no easy matter to reinforce the American Army in Korea. The American West coast is 16 days by ship from Korea. Our planes have no bases in Korea. They are based in Japan and every time they fly a mission they have to make a long water hop from Japan and save enough fuel to go back across the water to their base.

Another reason the Americans need time is that we made a military miscalculation in Korea. We threw jet planes into the fight and by trial and error learned that they weren't suited to the Korean war. They can't carry enough fuel and they can't get quickly in and out of the Korean hills. So the jet going to be pulled out is the reason behind today's announcement.

World War II Mustangs going to be sent into the war. But it will take time to get them into action, and that's why Gen. Dean is willing to trade some distance for time.

Ten Killed, Many Hurt In Train Wreck

MONICA, Ill., July 6 (UP)—Ten persons were killed today in the collision of two Santa Fe streamlined trains, Peoria County Coroner Chauncey W. Wood reported. Forty-eight persons were admitted to hospitals in addition to passengers treated for injuries at the scene.

All of the known dead were aboard the El Capitan. Peoria County Coroner Chauncey E. Wood said he counted seven bodies in one coach and one in another. "I'm afraid we might find more in the wreckage," he said.

The Chief was racing toward Chicago at 65 miles an hour when the El Capitan passed it moments before the crash, according to station agent Karl K. Keller of Monica.

Four of the dead were found in the washroom of one coach. The crash occurred at 5:31 a. m. CST and they apparently had just arisen from a night's sleep during their transcontinental journey.

Many of the injured wandered about the scene in their night clothes.

Some passengers were trapped in the twisted wreckage. Their moans could be heard through the twisted steel as rescue workers cut them free.

Most of the injured were aboard the El Capitan.

Keller said the crew of the El Capitan told him they heard "something banging around loose underneath the train just before it jumped the track."

The crash occurred as the two trains sped toward Chicago in separate parallel tracks just outside this little village 150 miles southwest of Chicago.

Thirteen of the El Capitan's cars were derailed as it passed the Chief. The Chief had switched over to the normally Westbound tracks on the North side of the right-of-way to let the transcontinental train go through.

The fifth and sixth cars of the El Capitan jack-knifed across the right-of-way. Seconds later, the Chief's locomotive slipped into them, splitting through their stainless steel sides "like a knife cutting through chunks of cheese," one witness said.

Navy Airforce Has Field Day On North Korean Communication Lines

Editors note: The following is an eye-witness account of the strikes against North Korean targets by carrier-based U. S. and British planes. It was written by Harold Martin of the Atlanta Constitution and the Saturday Evening Post for the combined American press.

(Distributed by United Press)

Aboard a U. S. Navy Carrier Off Korea, July 4 (Delayed)—(UP)—Raiding the West coast of Communist Korea for two consecutive days, carrier planes of the joint United States Seventh Fleet and British task force smashed with rockets, bombs and incendiary projectiles air installations, railroad bridges and locomotives and left great fires burning in the freight marshalling yards of the North Korean capital of Pyongyang South to Haeju.

The attacks were carried out under the overall command of Vice Admiral Arthur Dewey Struble of the United States Navy. All the planes returned safely from the strikes, the first seaborne air assaults by the United Nations against the Communist North Korean government.

No pilots were lost though one crippled dive bomber made a spectacular crash landing on the deck of the carrier, USS Valley Forge.

The pilots, many of whom were seeing their first combat action, described fighter opposition as feeble and anti-aircraft fire as meager and inaccurate.

No enemy aircraft challenged the fast flying jets and dive-bombers. Several of the slower aircraft came back with holes made by anti-aircraft fire.

In the first raid, July 3, the jets were led by Cmdr. Harley P. Lanham of Temple City, Calif. Lanham, a veteran combat pilot and the first man ever to land a jet plane on a carrier at night, destroyed a transport plane on the ground.

Yanks Outnumbered Communications Line Endangered By Reds

Korean War Echoes Around World; Pearl Harbor Goes On War Footing

By United Press

U. S. troops were in general retreat in Korea today, hurried by 50,000 North Korean soldiers and 100 tanks.

The one fact emerging clearly from the confusion of battle was that the G. I.'s were taking a beating in their first big fight with the Communists.

In Washington, however, President Truman reminded the American people that the last battle is yet to be fought. He expressed confidence that the invaders will be defeated despite early successes.

The Yanks seemed to be heavily outnumbered and stretched thin all the way from ports of arrival in Korea to the front lines. But however that may have been, they took a licking in the first round.

The U. S. command was moving up reinforcements as fast as possible. Clearing skies after long hours of murky weather gave promise of an onsurge of American air power.

Some 50,000 Koreans led by perhaps 125 tanks swept down through the soggy Korean hills and valleys against the thin spearhead which the Americans had thrust up almost to Suwon.

The impact hurled the Americans back in a general retreat of eight to ten miles. They lost Pyongyang, 21 miles south of Suwon, and dug in along a more or less stable line on the South bank of a river flowing just below Pyongyang, the big gateway city leading down the main transport route to the provisional capital of Taegong, 49 miles to the southeast.

Altogether the Americans had pulled back as much as 22 miles from their Northernmost penetration near Suwon.

Quarterback Club Needs Moola Badly

Seventeen of the 36 light fixtures ordered for the football field by the Ranger Quarterback Club have arrived.

One is on display at the Arterburn's tool shop. E. F. Arterburn, president of the club said, that dues for the club were still coming in slowly. Boone Yarbrough and Lloyd Clem are the latest Ranger men to have paid their dues.

He said that the estimated cost of $3,500 for lighting the field must come from the club membership and from other donations by city businessmen. The lights are to be placed on poles back of the stadium so there will be an unobstructed view of the field.

Dispatches from the field conceded that the Americans in the advanced positions suffered heavy casualties when the North Koreans hit and kept hitting.

The North Korean radio, which lards its war reports freely with propaganda, said more than 150 Americans were killed and 50 more were captured yesterday.

Reports to Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters said the Communists had committed five divisions of perhaps 50,000 men to their main frontal attack below Suwon.

Americans afield estimated that the North Koreans had sent 160 to 170 tanks into South Korea, and that possibly 50 had been knocked out by U. S. and South Korean forces.

How much strength MacArthur had sent in was his military secret. Last week an official report said a U. S. division, usually running around 15,000 men, would be in Korea by July 4.

The Korean war echoed around the world. Pearl Harbor, where America's share of the Second World War started, was back on a war footing as a relay and supply base for the forces in Korea.

US Tells Reds Of Blockade

WASHINGTON, July 6 (UP)—The United States has informed Russia without any threats or frills of President Truman's order to American forces to throw a naval blockade around the Korean coast.

Diplomatic authorities said Truman's blockade order was communicated to the Soviet foreign office by American Ambassador Alan G. Kirk. The envoy acted on orders of the State Department sent to all U.S. Ambassadors and Ministers on July 3.

"A Pound Of Butter"

There was a lady—Who lived on a farm
In a certain deed—She really ment no harm
Took off for the butcher—And lost no time
Said quietly I'll trade—Your butter for mine
For today while at work—My back I turn
A nasty old mouse—Fell into my churn
I washed it, and washed it—In my butter bowl
But I can not eat it—To save my soul
Speaking much softer—She looked all around
Said that's why I'll trade you—For a different pound
Straightening her face—And looking real pert
Said what you don't know—Don't seem to hurt
He quickly agreed—without a grumble
But in the ice box—His hands did fumble
And handed to her—Her very same pound
Being real cautious—He looked all around
Yes; madam you're right—Said butcher boy hurt
For what you don't know—Don't seem to hurt.

Ranger Rambling

One of the bloodiest crimes of history is today being committed in Korea.

But an even eviler crime is being committed here—in the United States—in the hall of Congress and on the editorial desks of the nation's newspapers.

I figured that yesterday's column would be all I'd have to say about the war.

There are things here, closer to home easier, with more humor to write about.

But the crime that is killing American men needlessly must be discussed if even by one poor Joe who knows nothing of military strategy, nothing of politics and nothing of statesmanship—but thinks that he may know a little of America's heritage and something of the responsibility of his job.

One of the tough jobs in writing today's column is that I must be critical of the job that my profession is doing.

This is not a blanket criticism of American newspapers. They are the best and freest of the world. And there are as many ideals attached to this profession as any other.

The profession of journalism has its weaknesses—the same as do the professions of medicine or law.

And the press must answer in the future along with the politicians for the wanton death of American boys in Korea.

It is part of our responsibility to point out the stupidity of our present policy. But we're not doing it. Maybe because this world is getting so specialized that editorial writers are afraid any more to comment on the work of the military expert, the work of the statesman.

At the start of this war, the military experts fed us guff—and most of the world's newspapermen fell for it—that this would be an easy war. Yet never was there an indication that this would be an easy war.

But this is not the real crime. The crime is that this delusion that the experts fed us (perhaps believing it themselves): this delusion that the U. S. newspapermen reported and editorial writers accepted without criticism (knowing better, surely), has now trapped American men in an apparent useless sacrifice.

The United States, supposedly the master of logistics, has not been able to get an effective fighting force into Korea.

Instead we have tricked men into the fight, just enough for the crushing jaws of the North Koreans—not enough to hold these jaws open, to split them back. We've not even put enough men into the battle to hold—only enough to die.

The Alamo had a purpose, Wake Island had a purpose. The deaths in Korea are without purpose.

In a cold war, admitted both by the Democrats and Republicans, we have failed to provide a mobile, self-equipped fighting force of a hundred thousand men.

Instead of providing this force, or criticizing the lack of such a force, our politicians have been too busy fighting among themselves to do their job in the face of a cold war.

So now we can only send handfuls of ill-equipped men into Korea to stop a force of over a hundred thousand highly trained and well-equipped men. And yet our leaders and our newspapers are afraid to come out and admit that we've got a tough battle on our hands.

More

* * *

The North Koreans, highly indoctrinated, are fighting on their own ground. Their base of supply is only a few hundred miles overland from the battle front while our base of supply is over six thousand miles away by water.

Our men and generals have never fought in Korea—their men and generals have fought there since 1936 and before. The North Koreans hold almost the same advantages as the Chinese held in their fight with Japan.

They have the same advantages that we would have if the Russians invaded the continental United States and were limited only to bases in Russia.

Our forces in Japan can not be depleted too much—and besides they are trained as a police force, equipped as a police force.

The North Koreans are trained as a war force and will not be stopped until we have an equal or superior force of war trained, war equipped men.

This is the story of Korea: the story that future histories will call the crime of Korea.

And this is originally a crime of military incompetence. And the military must accept it. They failed to do their job.

But it is not only their crime. The politicians in a democracy have a far greater responsibility than the military. And for this reason their failure to meet the Korean situation constitutes an even greater crime.

And perhaps their failure is not as great as that of the press. The press perhaps—I don't know for sure—has an even greater responsibility in a democracy than the politicians as a constructive-critical force. Perhaps the press must assume the greatest blame because it failed to do its job of informing and arousing the people to the recognition that the politicians and military weren't doing their jobs.

And yet the crimes of yesterday aren't as great as the crime that is being committed by these three bodies today. The failures of yesterday are obvious.

But the Military, the Politicians and the Press are still refusing to learn from their mistakes, are still refusing to make adjustments, are still refusing to admit their mistakes.

Instead the military is covering its mistake by sending in too few troops and shouting as a cover—"Oh they'll see now that they have to fight American troops."

And the Press is giving these vainglorious statements prominence over the realities of death.

And the editorial writers are refusing to point up the conflict between the mouthings of the generals and the death of the soldiers.

And the politicians—well they have failed so completely that they no longer enter into the matter. Perhaps they have so missed their responsibility that they no longer have any responsibility.

Ted Atkinson, Veteran Jockey, Still Wants To Win The Derby

By Oscar Fraley
United Press Staff Writer
NEW YORK, July 6 (UP)—
This is a delicate subject, but Max Lovell warns June brides against allowing their husbands to sleep in the raw.

"A woman should put her foot down right at the beginning," he said. "We have just completed a survey which shows that you give a man an inch and he'll take a mile."
Since he is director of the National Association of Pajama Manufacturers, Lovell admitted his interest was not academic.
But he claimed he was at least partly altruistic.
"We asked 1,000 American wives if they minded whether their husband went to bed in his skin and only one-point-five wives said
it was okay," he said.
The overwhelming majority didn't like it but didn't know what they could do about it.
"Most of them told our interviewers that they let down the bars during a heat wave and just couldn't get 'em back up again," Lovell added.

Lovell also had a survey made among men and learned that 58 per cent think they look pretty virile wearing just themselves.
"Our problem was spread out before us right there," he said.
"We've got to educate men to wearing bedclothes without hurting their feelings."
So the manufacturers ran up a sheer, dainty pair of pajamas,
for a man, with accompanying robe,
which makes him look like a bundle of curtains.
"We decided we'd have to tempt men into pajamas for summer time—offer 'em something that's cool and yet attractive and what you call chic," Lovell explained.

Now for how to get a man into those pajamas—Lovell said the wives should do it.
Would You Like
New Freedom From
Monthly Suffering?
Of course you would. Then Cardol may be the medicine for you. Thousands of girls and women agonize each month, a horrible sense of freedom from simple periodic cramps, pain, jittery after taking Cardol.
The tested formula of modern medical science is not a pain-killer. It simply helps control spasm in the uterus, the organ that usually causes the trouble. Try Cardol and see if you can't live trying these analgesics and go about your business as usual.

City dwellers use an average of daily according to government estimates.

which made him the leading jockey in 1944 and 1946. And winning it was a thrill which lighted his eyes with a gleam of satisfaction.
"It isn't only the money," insisted Atkinson as he pulled off a leather ankle brace which protects him from the lead weights under his saddle. "It's deep down inside when you're finished. Then you like to look back on a job well done."

It is a sort of a race with his wife's family for the man his fellow jockeys call "the Professor," because of his precise way of speaking and his one year of college. Atkinson married the former Martha Shanks and she came from a widely known harness racing family.
"Her uncle, Will Catton, drove in Russia before the first war and in 25 years on their main circuit he won every major stake in Russia," Ted said. "That's something of which his family can be proud."

Ted, not in so many words, indicated that he was out to make the home folks as good as the relatives. And the Canadian clouter isn't doing bad, at that.
At 34, Ted is moderately wealthy and adding to the family bank account every day. Some days, like Tuesday when he copped
the Brooklyn, it's quite a chunk.
But Atkinson isn't satisfied.

His name still isn't on the list of Kentucky Derby winners -- and Ted intimates that he needs that to put the Atkinsons in a class with the Cattons. Nobody is more happily married that the "slasher," but husbands can't ever be too careful.

10,256 Fans Turn Out For Park Opening

By United Press
Fort Worth fans, who turned out 10,256-strong last night for formal dedication of rebuilt La Grave Field, watched the Dallas
Eagles accomplish the amazing feat of turning two measly hits and a Fort Worth error into a 2 to 1 victory over the Texas League-leading cats.

Several notables, including Boss Branch Rickey of the Brooklyn Dodgers organization, were on hand as Cat hurler Ray Moore gave up one ineffective hit over eight innings, but was charged with the loss.
The Fort Worth ball park burned early last season. Last night's crowd was the largest since the season opener at Dallas.

She stays out of the room until he's inspected the cave-man neglige.

She may have to put the stuff on his bed 10 nights in row in the more stubborn cases. If that produces no results, it's time for step two.
She tells him she's glad she isn't married to a hulk who cares nothing for his own appearance. Then she says she has a present for daddy and out come the voile pajamas.
Lovell said even the most stubborn should fall.
But if the old man doesn't the lady can always point out that sleeping in the raw produces bronchial trouble, sinus miseries and other ailments. There is no medical proof of it, but Lovell said:
"A wife has a right to use any ruse to get her husband back into night clothes."

Scientists Say Earth Almost Out Of Quakes

NEW YORK, July 6 (UP)—A study by West coast scientists showed today that major earthquakes are becoming farther apart and that the earth may be shaking itself out of quakes.

Furthermore, the study made at the California Institute of Technology, indicates that scientists are nearer the day when a major earthquake may be predicted. The quakes are down now to about one a year.

The study, in charge of Dr. Hugo Benioff, associate professor of seismology, showed that major quakes used to occur at closely-spaced intervals, with long rest periods between the periods of intense activity.

Dr. Benioff reports that since 1904, the stress or strain which accumulates constantly in the crust of the earth has been released in five active periods, each consisting of a whole series of earthquakes.

Dr. Benioff points out that each of the active periods have been followed by an interval of little or no earthquake activity, during which crustal strain again accumulated. He believes there is some global force, similar to a huge key, which alternately locks and unlocks earthquake cracks in the earth's crust, simultaneously throughout the world.

Navy Airforce—

Lt. Leonard Plog of Hood River, Ore., shot down a Yak-6 fighter as it lifted from the runway on the takeoff.

The only high altitude kill of the morning strike was credited to beardless Ensign Eugene Brown of Little Rock, Ark., who blew a Yak off the tail of his section leader.

Lt. Jr. Grade Donald K. Christanson of Pittsburgh, Calif., and Maj. F. H. Conner of the A 1 F Force, flying with the Navy on an exchange of pilots arrangement, were credited with destroying a plane on the ground.

The Independence day strike began with a strafing sweep over the airfields, which showed no signs of activity. Moving on from Pyongyang airfields to fatter targets, a dozen Panther jets swooped low over the railroad yards at the North Korean capital, exploding three locomotives.

While the Panther jets mauled rolling stock, prop-driven Navy Skyraiders and Corsairs pounded with 1,000-pound bombs an important railway bridge over the Taedong River Southwest of Pyongyang.

Over these bridges pass North Korea's arms and supplies to their troops in the South. Their loss will mean rail traffic must be routed circuitously to the West over a ferry connecting with a single track line.

Lt. Marion Galligher of Coeur D'Alene, Ida., blew up a rolling locomotive with cannon fire. British flyers from the carrier HMS Triumph flew the rail line running East along the 38th parallel from Haeju to Ongin, striking at targets of opportunity. They destroyed one railroad bridge and blasted five parked trucks loaded with North Korean troops.

James Horace Croom, who is attending Mortuary School of Science in Dallas, is spending the week with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Croom, his son, James Horace Croom, Jr., will spend a month with his grandparents.
