

Rodeo Starts Wednesday

Sliver Johnson's comedy car act will be one of the in-between-performance high lights of the Ranger Jaycee rodeo. The likeable comedian is still fighting that baffling and cantankerous mystery, the gas buggy—especially the Austin gas buggy.

Ranger today began to shake off the last traces of Rodeo lethargy. Stock for the Ranger Jaycee rodeo was in the pens, the cowboys had arrived in town.

A quick scout through Ranger cafes revealed a great number of cowboys and cowgirls, easy to distinguish in their tight fitting pants, high, wide and handsome hats. Mrs. Fannie Mae Cox was registering cowboys at the Paramount hotel desk. She reported that 250 cowboys registered for the rodeo at Coleman and that there should be as many here.

Ticket sales at C. E. May's insurance office were picking up visibly this morning with the excitement that slowly began to permeate the town.

C. E. sold two large blocks of tickets while a Ranger Times reporter was in the office. And the buyer said that he might be back in the afternoon to buy more.

The Ranger rodeo will receive its formal kick-off at 12:15 p. m. Wednesday in the Blue Room of the Gholson hotel when the three leading Civic clubs—Rotary, Lions and Jaycees—meet to break bread and kid each other about their exploits.

Ted Gouidy's Texo Hired Hands will join in the bread breaking and broadcast from the Blue Room over a state wide network at 12:30 p. m. The Hired Hands are slated to play for three American Legion dances at the American Legion hall, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday nights.

Parade Master Dr. Carl Straley said that a larger parade is shaping up for 4 p. m. Wednesday afternoon. Two Sheriff's posses, a large group of Jaycee riders, several high school bands and maybe some floats will participate in the parade.

One of the outstanding attractions at the parade will be the fine horses that will be displayed. Sage to attract visitor's attentions will be the palomino of Dr. P. M. Kuykendall and the rare Appaloosa stallion of James Ratliff. Ratliff believes that there are only four Appaloosa studs in all of Texas.

The horse was a favorite of the Plains Indians during the Indian wars. The breed is relatively small in size compared to Quarterhorses—but fast with lots of stamina.

The parade will be broadcast by wire recording over a Breckenridge station. Broadcasts before rodeo time—7:15 to 7:45 p. m. Wednesday, Thursday and Friday nights from the arena have been slated over the same station.

Election returns will be announced at 30 minute intervals at the rodeo arena Saturday night.

Parade March

The Jaycee parade will form in the intersection of Walnut and Marston about 3 p. m. Wednesday. It will move to Main, march down main to the oil derrick on Commerce, cut to its right on Commerce and march up Pine street to disband at Marston.

Bands from Ranger, Gorman, Stephenville, Eastland will form in the opposite order in Walnut street; Colors, Ranger Junior College, officials and twirlers will form in that order on Marston between Main and Walnut. The Parker and Palo Pinto county sheriff's posses and other riders will form back of the twirlers.

KOREANS MAKE HOSPITALS TOP BOMB TARGETS

U. S. Medics Are Carrying Rifles

By Robert C. Miller
United Press Staff Correspondent
WITH U. S. FORCES AT TEAJON FRONT, July 18 (UP)—There are no red crosses in the Korean war. They give the Communists a better target to shoot at.

The medics carry rifles for their own protection. The wounded often are evacuated by tank. Mercy is just about unknown. The percentage of casualties among doctors and corpsmen has equalled that among combat troops and in many cases is higher.

The enemy expects no quarter and gives none.

The Americans entered the Korean war with polished bright crosses on their ambulances and flags flying from their litter jeeps. The corpsmen who attended the wounded wore arm bands and carried no weapons.

"What a bunch of innocents we were!" Pfc. Edward Wilson, Chico, Calif., said today.

For today there is no front line medic who has not been under fire at one time or another trying to bandage wounds and evacuate the injured. Several collecting stations have been overrun and the wounded murdered. At least two doctors have been killed while tending wounded at front line hospitals.

Sgt. Roy Stewart, Chester, Ill., said the first thing the medics did was to paint out red cross insignia.

"We tried leaving some on the roof for air identification," he said, "but that just drew more fire. So we painted them out too."

Capt. Donald L. Duerk, of Freeport, N. Y., a medical officer, said his medical company was shot to pieces by the Communists.

"Handling the wounded has been a terrible problem," he said. "The infiltrating enemy have no respect for the Red Cross and often seem to wait until we get our load of wounded aboard before they attack us."

The real heroes of the war are the litter jeep drivers and corpsmen who drive through enemy roadblocks and fighting areas to bring out wounded.

"Never once have they refused a call, even though it often meant risking death and injury. Many times it has been necessary for us to load our wounded into tanks to get them through the enemy roadblocks to safety."

Lt. Julius Okolovich, Nashua, N. H., said the first target of Communist artillery at Chochiwon was the hospital.

"We had to evacuate the wounded under fire but managed to get them all out safely," he said.

Corp. Alfred A. Fankel, East Palestine, O., a jeep litter driver, said he had to fight off an enemy sniper on the Kum river front while his corpsman was bandaging a casualty.

"It was a case of one of us administering relief while the other was trying to kill," he said. "We managed to get out with our wounded GI, but I sure was glad we had a rifle to help. Without it we would have been lost."

NAT'L GUARD DUE CALL

Defense Department Officials Deny That Decision On Calling Reservists, Guards Made Yet

By Fred Mullen
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, July 18 (UP)—Usually well-informed quarters said today that 100,000 or more Reservists and National Guardsmen will be called up for active duty soon to strengthen the armed forces in the Korean crisis.

High defense department sources insisted, however, that the question of whether the guard or reserve should be mobilized has not been decided.

U.S. FORCES STIFFENING RESISTENCE

WASHINGTON, July 18 (UP)—A military spokesman today said American and South Korean forces "are holding all along the line and enemy pressure has slackened."

He said this was the latest report received here. It came from a radio teletype conversation between 5 a. m. and 6 a. m. (CST) today.

Asked if this meant a turning point had been reached in the Korean war, the spokesman said he thought such a statement would be premature.

"I hope that is correct, but I am not able to say that it is a fact," the spokesman said.

He said the line being held apparently stretches from Kongju in West South Central Korea to Yongju in East Central Korea.

"It looks like a definite stiffening of our forces, that we're on the build-up and getting artillery and air support," he said.

"It was a good day of operations," he said. "In other words, the plays were clicking better."

"It is very encouraging to me." References to the South Korean 1st corps from front line news dispatches, he said, also indicate that the South Korean forces have organized to the extent where a unit the size of a corps is in operation. He also referred to that as an encouraging sign.

A Navy spokesman said he had no information on the report of three unidentified submarines operating in the area between Kyushu, Formosa, and the North China coast.

Girl Scouts Set Meet

A meeting of Girl Scouts and Brownies, scheduled for Wednesday has been canceled. The next meeting will be a swimming party at the Willows, 5:30 p. m., Tuesday, July 25.

They will teach the fire fighting techniques they learned at the school to Ranger's paid fire force and the 20 man volunteer fire force.

MERCURY VAPOR LAMPS ON RANGER STREETS CUT COLLISIONS, COST LITTLE MORE FOR ALL NIGHT ILLUMINATION THAT HELPS BUSINESSES

The Ranger Police department reports that there have been no auto accidents on the lighted streets since the installation of the Mercury Vapor lamps in Ranger, March 18.

The lamps, which burn all night, give several times more illumination than former old type incandescent lights. Yet the new lights cost the city only $50 a month more than the old lights which were turned off at 10:30 p. m., blacking out city streets.

Several Ranger businessmen who have businesses open at night report that volume of trade has increased since the installation of the lights.

Tourist court and filling station operators on Highway 80 report favorable comment from tourists.

One well-informed source reports that the lights have been a long term project for Ranger. The project was brought to its successful conclusion by Mayor Price Crawley and the present city commissioners.

A blurb in a trade publication points out that one unique feature of mercury-vapor street lighting is the way in which one good installation leads directly to another.

"And outstanding case of this kind is the mercury-vapor system installed at Grand Prairie on Highway 80 . . . Officials of West Texas cities, impressed by the Grand Prairie street lights as they drove to and from Dallas, have in a number of cases placed orders for the same street lights they're using in that town just west of Dallas—I can't remember the name."

Albin Larson with the Texas Electric company assures that the Times that this situation was true in a great number of instances.

UNITED PRESS CORRESPONDENT IN KOREA SAYS U.S. READING

Editor's Note
There is a lull in the fighting in Korea. What is the reason for it? What does it portend? From U. S. Eighth Army headquarters in Korea, a veteran United Press war correspondent analyzes the situation.

By Ralph Tealworth
United Press Staff Correspondent
U. S. EIGHTH ARMY HEADQUARTERS IN KOREA, July 18 (UP)—The turning point has been reached in the Korean war.

After three miserable, uncertain weeks of allied retreats to falling 115 miles, the North Koreans have been forced to a virtual standstill for the past three days.

The Communists have been gaining yards in that period where before they had gained miles. Withdrawals made by the Allies have been orderly and for a definite purpose.

The Americans and South Koreans have fought off vicious attacks of better armed Communists and thus gained valuable time while weapons and reinforcements were pouring into Korea.

Now it may be said that the Allies are ready to turn from the defensive to the offensive.

Where and when and how they will strike is of course a military secret.

The Americans are stronger now and the morale of the South Koreans is soaring despite heavy losses in the early days of the war.

A Korean source said the forward units had been begging for several days to be allowed to attack but had been restrained until the supply problem improves.

Several factors have aided the Allied forces while they were holding on grimly in the face of great odds. Among these are:

1. The Civil population of South Korea has remained orderly and well-disciplined.

2. Railroads have done a magnificent job of running material men and supplies right up to the front lines.

3. There has been almost no sabotage in the South side of the fighting front—no major sabotage at all.

4. The patriotism and loyalty of the South Koreans to their government has been a rallying factor in this "police action" against Communism.

5. The Korean National and provincial governments have been able to function effectively to maintain political stability and thus support the military operations.

Polio

B. MATTHEWS RATED FIRST LOCAL VICTIM

Bobby Matthews, son of Fred Matthews, route 3 Ranger, was taken to an Abilene hospital Monday for treatment for Infantile Paralysis.

As far as is known, Bobby, 2½ years old, is the first Ranger resident to be attacked by the disease which is setting a new record of incidence in Texas.

Health officials have the following suggestions as precautionary measures in the fight against Polio:

Keep clean; keep cool as possible, stay out of drafts; avoid extra fatigue and exhaustion; and don't panic.

Call your doctor immediately if Polio is suspected; get in touch with the National Infantile Paralysis Foundation.

The local fire department has a portable iron lung for emergency use of any countant.

The Loves of Carmen

By SOPHIE KERR
 Copyright, 1948, NEA SERVICE, INC.

THE STORY: Don Jose, young officer in a fashionable Spanish regiment, has just come to Seville from the countryside of Navarre. On his first day in the city, a gorgeous gypsy girl sits with him. Then she disappears. Some days later he is on duty in the square with his friend, Andres, when girls from the neighborhood factory swarm out at closing time. Among them is the gypsy, Andres greets her warmly. Carmen, but her name is not Carmen. Even so she makes a date with Andres. Shortly after she leaves them, Jose hears a commotion down the street. Carmen has gotten into a brawl with another woman and knife has been drawn. Jose is ordered to take Carmen prisoner. She is led away, struggling, by two soldiers. She appeals loudly to Jose, who tries not to pay any attention. Suddenly she snatches the arm of one of the soldiers and pinches his nose.

The soldier ran off. Everyone started talking at once, the bride yelling even more loudly. The sergeant turned to another soldier. "Get that one to a doctor." Two of the soldiers bent to help the woman to her feet.

THE bride, screaming in rage, grabbed Carmen by the hair. Carmen threw her with a swift, powerful twist of her body and the two went down. The crowd increased in size and appetite. Carmen fought in silence, her face contorted. The bride grunted and screamed. Carmen pinned the other to the ground, held her shoulder to the cobblestones and with a flashing gesture pulled a knife from her belt. The crowd gasped with horror. There was a sudden shrill screech of pain from the bride. Carmen had cut a double cross in her cheek and blood oozed in her own hand as she wiped off her victim by the hard-faceted sergeant, who had broken through the mob with a group of soldiers. "What's going on here?" The bride lay writhing and screaming. "I am dying! She killed me! Get me a priest! I am dying!"

Don Jose broke through the crowd, followed by two guardsmen. He passed Carmen by, not knowing she was there. She called to him. "Don't believe a word they say. They're all against me. I didn't touch her." Then she jerked away from the hands that held her. She was quickly seized again. "Take the gypsy to the magistrate," the sergeant said to Don Jose. "She almost cut off that woman's head. She is your prisoner."

THE crowd ignored the wounded woman and accused Carmen in a loud chorus. Ten hands held her forcibly, the knife still clutched in her fist. She panted, her mouth opened to gulp air into her lungs, but she had a look of almost unshy satisfaction on her face. The sergeant turned to one of the soldiers. "Call the guard."

Don Jose's back was stiff with shock and embarrassment. He quickened his step and marched ahead of his men, very conscious of impersonality at Don Jose. "You have sacrificed months of good behavior. You had a bright future in the Dragons. I advise you to avoid this gypsy," the colonel said.

as they walked. In a low, intimate voice she said, "Look, Navarre. I could give you a little shove and you would fall down and I could get away. Nobody could catch me. I would be gone before these stupid Castilians even knew what happened."

THE soldier's face reddened, puffed with anger. "She lied! I didn't touch her!" "Fall back," Don Jose said gruffly to the soldier. "Let her walk with the other."

Don Jose looked at her, shocked, as they reached the narrow portion of the alley. She went on, "Nobody would know. You could tell them I escaped, then I would be very grateful to you. I think you can tell that I am very nice when I am grateful."

THE first soldier obeyed resentfully and the march continued. Carmen looked at the back of Don Jose's head with a lowering, sullen glare. She screamed again, frightening the soldier perceptibly and making Don Jose wheel. "Now this one!" she said with an outraged howl. She pushed the amazed soldier violently and at the same time she appealed to heaven and to Don Jose. "Is there no protection from the advances of these filthy conscripts?"

He looked at her again, his eyes narrowed. This time he did not glance away so quickly. She slanted her eyes at him provocatively. "Remember? Eight o'clock tonight at Lillas Pastia's?" His face set as though he had already thought of what tonight might have meant to him. She moved closer. "How can we be together if I'm in a dirty prison cell?" Don Jose stumbled a little, as the insinuating words went on. "It would be so easy. I run very fast. You should see me run."

Crossed Fingers Dodgers Winning Pennant At Expense Of Rival Cardinals

By Stan Mockler
 United Press Sports Writer
 ST. LOUIS, July 18 (UP)—The year-in, year-out bitter rivalry between the Dodgers and the Cardinals collapsed today under the weight of an amazing Dodger victory parade, and both clubs were trying to figure out why.

In other years, the National League rivals would wage a season long series with one team finally emerging with a slight edge. But not so this season. The Brooklyn belt has made the St. Louis outfit their personal doormat with 11 in 14 meetings—the last seven in a row. They have won the first three tilts of the current four-games series, which ends today.

The plain truth of the matter is that the Cards are keeping the Dodgers in the pennant race. The Cards are tied with Boston for second place. A half game behind Philadelphia, while Brooklyn is a game out of first place, after beating the Cards twice yesterday, 6 and 3 and 7 to 1.

Silver-haired Burt Shotton believes that the worm, meaning St. Louis, is likely to turn.

"Sure, we've belted the Cards' pitchers," he said, "but we were due for those hits. St. Louis just happened to be the club we got them against. The season isn't over by any means, the Cards are a good club and they will give us plenty of trouble."

Preacher Roe, with a 4-1 record against the Cards this season after a 7 to 1 victory last night, said "I mixed them out good, but I was getting them out with my curve ball. It worked real good."

In the gloomy Cardinal dressing room, Manager Eddie Dyer said ruefully: "We're going to have to strike up the bats, the batting order or something. I'm more worried about my boys not being able to hit Brooklyn pitching than I am about the way they have been murdering ours."

Dyer said that he planned to use Nippy Jones at first base against left-handed pitching in the future, playing Rock Nelson as right-handers.

Outfielder Enos Slaughter angrily denied that Brooklyn had found a secret weapon.

"They're no better than they ever were," he said. "I agree with Skip (Dyer). We played lousy against them—worse than we played against any other club."

Stan Musial, the team's top hitter, agreed.

"We sure aren't getting out hits against them. Their pitching is no better than it was before, but I think a lot of us have been pressing ever since they beat us in the ninth at Brooklyn in that 9 to 8 game."

of the fact that he was on duty and that he must treat Carmen as just another petty criminal. Carmen leaped forward as she walked to appeal to him, tipping her head in an attempt to see his face.

"Where are you taking me, senor Navarre?"

"To the magistrate," said Don Jose without slackening his pace or turning his head.

"To the magistrate? But he'll send me to prison. I can't go to prison. A gypsy dies in prison. And I have no money for bribes. What can anyone do without a penny for a bribe? In this city you rot in prison unless you have the money for a bribe!" She became frantic, tried to catch Don Jose's sleeve as she talked. "I know, believe me, I know. I have a friend who is in prison this very minute. That is why I am here in Seville, working my fingers to the bone to get enough money for bribes to get him out."

She had almost pulled herself abreast of Don Jose, but the two soldiers interrupted her sad story by yanking her roughly back. She kicked one viciously in the shinbone, almost cracking it. The soldier grabbed his leg, hopping, grimacing with pain. Carmen did not even turn her head, but took advantage of the moment to strain closer to Don Jose. She clasped her hands in agony and tears rolled down her face. "Nobody cares about me. I am all alone in the world—all alone!" She looked at the gavel in the soldier's hand, but his eyes were straight ahead. The tears disappeared and she twitched her shawl, disgusted.

Because of the narrowness of the alley, one of the soldiers dropped back and Carmen walked abreast with the other. Suddenly she gave a piercing shriek. Both soldiers jumped as Don Jose turned, startled.

Carmen's eyes were flashing with outraged virtue. She appealed indignantly to Don Jose, pointing an accusing finger at the soldier beside her. "He pinched me! I was walking along being quiet as an angel, and he pinched me, officer, HE PINCHED ME!"

and impersonality at Don Jose. "You have sacrificed months of good behavior. You had a bright future in the Dragons. I advise you to avoid this gypsy," the colonel said.

Don Jose maintained a stiff-necked, bitter silence, staring at the wall behind the colonel.

"It is true she is an interesting type," the colonel went on. "But for a young man who takes his future seriously, a girl like that spells ruin. For an older man, who has nothing to lose and time for a little foolish indulgence, it is another matter—perhaps." The colonel took a deep pull on the black cigar and turned back to the business at hand. "Remember what I have told you," he said curtly. "You will take extra guard duty and be confined to barracks for 30 days."

DON JOSE marched in the hottest sun and the wettest rain for 30 days with a pack on his back, carrying full equipment and a rifle, and it seemed to him that every soldier on the post and every cigar girl in the factory pelted him ten times daily with broad jokes about Carmen's escape.

Marching in the hot sun, as the pack grew heavier on his back, resentment against her choked up his throat as he tried to imagine what she could be doing in freedom. This resentment was a strange new emotion to him for it bordered on hatred, and his reason told him that if he was to hate he could only hate himself because it had been of his own will that Carmen had escaped. This eased nothing for him.

He imagined her in Andres' arms. He remembered the bold invitation in her eyes as she had sauntered out of the cigar factory and onto the square. She must attract many men. Or, perhaps, in a foolish, suffocating wave of delight that lifted his heart to a sudden pounding beat, she would be waiting for him, remembering the promise she made to him.

Back in the Early Days—

... this country was surveyed in most part by the railroads in uniform and regular blocks or tracts. Tracts not so surveyed are usually irregular in size and description and are far more difficult to abstract and more expensive. But whether your property be a ranch spreading across the hills or a cottage by the side of the road, we find it by a system of abstracting unexcelled in this area. And by getting the best you also have the cheapest.

Frick Says Americans-Nationals Evenly Matched; Others Think That Frick's Got Definite Edge

By Jack Cuddy
NEW YORK, July 18 (UP)—President Ford Frick of the National League said today the two major circuits "are evenly balanced" in progress; however, many National fans—including some in Frick's own office—believe the National is now forging ahead of the American.

During the week since Frick's Nationals upset the Junior League at Chicago in the 14-inning all star game, Prexy Ford regained his composure sufficiently to state today:

"In my opinion the chief significance of the long, hard battle at Chicago was that it demonstrated vividly the even balance between the two leagues in all departments of play, including power. Naturally we were delighted with the 4-3 victory."

spending and hustle are now bearing fruit. If you're looking for an even balance, you'll find it in our National pennant race. Only 16 games separate last-place Pittsburgh from the top; and four clubs are starting a dog fight for the lead. There are no push-overs in this circuit. Every game is a real battle. And the club that wins this race will be the best in the world."

The boys at the National League office did have some good talking points. As we recall, the Phillies, Braves and Pirates have spent much money since the war. And most of the other clubs have not been miserly. Whether total National expenditures for players and farm improvements since the war have exceeded those of the Junior circuit, we do not know. The Red Sox, Tigers and Yankees have millionaire owners, and they are "quick with a buck" when they go into the market. Nevertheless, the dollars and diligence of National owners since the war certainly have pepped up Frick's circuit to a degree that now enlivens both the National race and Inter-league competition.

Moreover, the Nationals can expect strength from the minors next season if the current races in the International League and American Association are indicators. In the International standing, the only two American farms—Baltimore (Browns) and Buffalo (Tigers)—are second and last, respectively. The other six clubs are National sources of talent.

In the American Association, the three American-League farms—Louisville (Red Sox), Kansas City (Yankees), and Toledo (T-

It was apparent that diplomatic Frick desired to start no needless controversy over comparative prowess with Bill Harridge's circuit. Ford probably would be perfectly content to see an evenly balanced world series, in which the National club would win four straight games.

Less diplomatic were a couple of Frick's men, when out of the prexy's ear-range. One of them, whom we will not name, said: "Even the National League now has the edge on the American. Only some bad breaks prevented us from winning that game long before the 14th inning."

Another said: "Since 1945, the American League has been living on its pre-war laurels; but a lot of new blood and a lot of new money have come into the National circuit since the war. Post-war gers)—are third, seventh and eighth, respectively. The other five clubs are Nationals.

The National and American Leagues have not appeared power-balanced in inter-league play in the past. During the past 40 years, the National circuit won but 13 World Series; and it now has won but five of 17 all-star games. Generally speaking, superior "power" has been credited for American superiority. But the Nationals of today are very power-conscious.

Representative 107th Dist.

L. R. PEARSON

My name has been filed by petition with the County Chairman of Eastland and Callahan Counties for a place on the official ballot in the approaching Democratic primary as a candidate for Representative of the 107th Legislative District. This was done without my knowledge or consent.

For this expression of confidence, I am truly grateful. I have concluded to let my name remain on the ballot, and will appreciate any consideration my candidacy may be given. I have no easy political promises to make. They are usually of little or no value. I represented the 107th District in the 49th and 50th sessions and my record in the Legislature reflects my philosophy of State affairs.

The big problems, in my judgment, facing the 52nd Legislature will be water, soil and money, but the greatest of these is money. Runaway government spending, which has increased over 500 percent in the last 14 years, and threatens to increase even more, will be the No. 1 concern of the next Legislature. This money problem can be solved in only one of two ways—by eliminating useless and excessive appropriations to vote for a tax bill of any kind. I will strive to preserve this record.

The present level of State spending, according to the Comptroller, will create an annual deficit of 76 million dollars in the State General Fund. I will strive to balance the budget and prevent this deficit by rigid economy, instead of by new additional taxes. However, if it develops that taxes are "must" legislation and additional revenue is absolutely necessary to operate the State government efficiently, I will not sidestep the responsibility, however painful. If new taxes must come, I would favor placing the new levies on present sources which are now escaping taxes. However, I will not support a general sales tax or State income tax.

Also, redistricting, following the new census, is a constitutional mandate. If elected, I will support it.

On other issues coming before the 52nd Legislature I will vote for what I consider the best interest of my State and District.

Ranger Rambling

From all indications the United States will go on a war footing after Truman's message Wednesday.

It'll probably start off easy—a few national guardsmen and reserves called up, the sights of selective service raised a little bit higher, a little more control on civilian production and credit buying.

But that will be only the start.
And it will possibly be too slow a start.

Though we may still be fighting a bunch of bandits in Korea by official statement, the first shots of the Third World War have been fired.

There never was a stopping point to the Second World War though we closed our eyes, shut our ears and tried to make as if there was one.

The world has grown so close together that no two great powers—completely opposite in ideologies and political motivations—can exist side by side.

While we may like to feel that we are living in a unique period of history, the reverse is true.

This battle has been fought many times—and the result has been that one power has risen supreme to the outside grave on its weakness and toppled it.

One of the most famed power struggles of antiquity was the struggle between Carthage and Rome. Both existed in a close knit world. Both wished to be dominant. Their motivations, their thinking were so different that they could not reconcile their differences peacefully—but had to do it by war.

Then the Teutons grew up in the North. Again two powers had to fight for dominance.

The Teutons won!
In each of these battles, and in all the great battles of the world, a supreme effort by both powers has been called for.

In the Tiber's battle now taking shape by skirmishes, there is perhaps only one unique thing.

Perhaps in this war, People—their minds, their beliefs—will play a greater part than ever before in history. There will quite possibly three over-lapping stages to the war of Russia and the United States.

We have entered the first stage.

have been in that stage before,
during and since World War II.
This stage might be called the "Jockeying for position" stage.
The United States and Russia have been trying to win friends and disband each other, worked on each others nerves and tried to find some allies they could count on.

Russia must be awarded the first round in this battle.
Because there are many rounds yet to go, we must analyze our mistakes and determine why we allowed Russia to take this round without receiving more than punishing blows from us.

Some of Russia's initial victories were a consequence of factors over which we had no control.

But her great victory so far has been the conquest of people's minds.

If we can believe the reports,
Russia has won a majority of the Chinese people; a majority of the Korean people to her way of thinking.

She has won approximately 30 per cent of the Italian people, somewhere between 30 and 40 per cent of the French people to her way of thinking.

Why!—How has she done all this?

This question will become increasingly important as the war enters its successive stages.
The solution by the United States to this question will win the third and climactic phase of the war for the US. The failure to answer this question will mean the conquest of the US by Russia and Communism.

It is hard to place the responsibility for the United States' failure in winning this war for peoples' minds. But it is not so hard to see why we lost it.

In this type of war we have made the critical mistake of placing our faith in rulers instead of people. That technique was okay in the time of Talleyrand, Metternich. But it has been an increasingly poor tactic ever since the French revolution, the American Revolution and the revolutions of 1848.

Instead of going to the French people, we have taken our program to De Gaulle and other similar rulers.
The Russians on the other hand picked their men from the people, sold the people into electing these men as their representatives.

In China, Russia's most complete victory to date, we placed our money on Chiang Kia Shek.
The Russians found a man among the Chinese people, a man who had starved with them, fought with them. And the Russians made this man a ruler.

The story is the same all over the world. We supported the Dutch in the East Indies. We are supporting the French in Indo-China.

The Russians have found a native leader to support. We could have done the same.

But even this policy might not have been so near-fatal if we had followed through. But because such a policy—a policy of supporting foreign bosses in conflict with the people—was so diametrically opposed to our own political and ideological thinking, we vacillated and are failing.

If we are to win this war, we must develop a firm policy in our hunt for allies.

We have two choices—to sell foreign rulers, support those rulers against all opposition; or to find native rulers and support them.

The second offers the best chance of success. But if we do not support this latter we must support the other wholeheartedly.

This means that we must support the Chiang Kia Sheks, no matter how they are hated, at whatever cost. Our policy must be consistent from now on out.

This will become increasingly important after the war leaves the jockeying stage and enters the Atomic stage.

This will be the push button war that the scientists have written about, that the US military has perhaps prepared for.

This will truly be a War of Gods. It'll be Atomic blast against Atomic blast, factory against factory, production vs. production.

The other countries of the world will step to the side while Russia and the United States slug it out. This will be the struggle that we have feared every since Hiroshima.

It'll bring both of us to our knees. The one that lasts the longest, that is the strongest relatively when the battle is over will be in the position to win the final phase of the war.

But even the victor of this phase will be so weak that he can do nothing without some allies.

He must then make his appeal to the people's of the world.
And if he hopes to win a clear will open his Good Eat bakery at Carwile started to open the

Truman Builds Talk For Congress People; Huge Military Budget May Be Slated When He Goes To People

By Raymond Lehr
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON, July 18 (UP)—President Truman today whipped into shape his special message to Congress on the Korean war. The legislators were expecting only moderate proposals to deal with home front problems.

It will be outlined to Congress tomorrow and the President then will explain it in a nationwide broadcast to the people tomorrow night.

Some highly-placed administration men in Congress believed Truman's proposals would be on the moderate side, limited to the situation as it stands today and not what might happen if it becomes much worse.

It was understood that senate leaders did not expect Truman's proposals to prolong the session of Congress to any great extent. They have been shooting for a recess of some kind about August 1.

Administration officials in both Congress and the executive branch listed these proposals as among those under consideration:

Money—the President will ask for new spending powers—estimated by Congressional sources at from $5,000,000,000 to $8,000,000,000 to strengthen national defense and meet the cost of the Korean war.

Controls—consumer rationing or price control was ruled out but Truman was expected to propose a program, voluntary or otherwise, to allot steel and other basic materials to essential industries; some Administration officials also expected the President to ask for controls on installment buying and bank credit and for new powers to regulate commodity speculation.

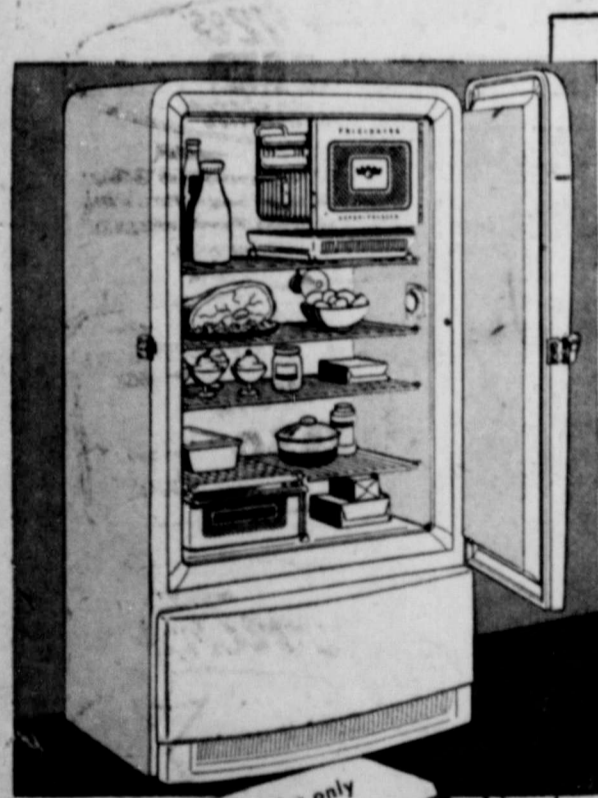

Taxes—some officials in the executive branch foresaw a request for an excess profits tax and perhaps higher corporation taxes, but some authoritative Congressional sources firmly believed that Truman would make no tax recommendations at this time.

The President discussed his ideas with Democratic Congressional leaders yesterday. They would give no clue to his thinking beyond saying that consumer rat-

Expert Advice On Promoting Good Health And Juvenile Cleanliness

Mothers with a flair for staging can promote cleanliness at home, and help to insure the health of their families at the same time. Such precautionary measures thwart the spread of disease, and the annual summertime fear of polio.

A July and August campaign has been launched jointly by health services and other interested organizations—for the purpose of combating polio with this basic premise: that many diseases, may be including polio, are spread by unclean hands, and that hands washed frequently are not apt to spread germs. And special reminders of this fact are being directed toward youngsters—who need this particular protection during the holiday months.

If you dramatize the business of cleanliness, your small fry will find it pleasant and fun to "wash up." Keep charts—award stars—any visual way to keep track of the day's soap and water activity is good for the record. Supply children with their own equipment—a towel rack located low enough for little short arms to reach, a personal soap dish—complete with soap. Let them use the gentle pumice soap that working men use to get their hands clean. They can feel the pumice, feel the 50,000 fine scrubbers in every inch of lather. Brighten the job with small, gay, colorful towels.

One woman suggests you make use of old Turkish towels whose edges have become frayed, centers worn, or borders shrunk. Cut off worn parts (divide the larger towels in two), hem the edges, and try out some of your needlework skill on decoration.

Then, taking your cue from the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, teach your youngsters the important times they must remember to wash their hands: before meals, after toilet, whenever hands have been soiled by oral or nasal discharges. Have them recite this schedule back to you so you know it's perfectly clear to them.

Make the child his own guardian against germs.

Beaver Fight To Draw With Road Builders

WICOMICO CHURCH, Va. (U. P.)—A battle has been going on for several months between the state highway department and a colony of beavers released near here by the commission of game and fisheries.

As often as the highway department removes the dam, the beavers rebuild it in the same spot.

"LIKE ONE OF THE FAMILY"

The Bundys believe in good old-fashioned family life, depend greatly on their telephone to keep them in touch with their many relatives in Topeka.

As Mrs. Bundy puts it: "We'd be lost without our telephone. It's like one of the family. And best of all—when we kept a five-day record of all our calls recently, we found that we're paying only about 2¢ for each call made and received!"

Yes, Mrs. Bundy, a real bargain—and one that increases in value year after year as more telephones are added and improvements are made. Southwestern Bell Telephone Company.

One of the many calls listed in our five-day record was from my MOTHER-IN-LAW. She wondered what our little Larry would like for his birthday. He'll be five next week.

Called AUNT CLARA. Out-of-town friends dropped in, wanted to say hello to Mother and Dad. Thought they might be at Aunt Clara's. They were!

GRANDMA WELLS called, invited us to dinner. She has some fresh vegetables for us, too—saves about $4 on the grocery bill. Grandma lives alone, three miles from our house, but she's just seconds away by telephone.
