Lions And Rotary Club Members Hear Harley Sadler Speak Today At Membership Meeting Of C of C

A capacity group of Lions and Rotary Club members filled the Gholson Coffee Shop today to hear Harley Sadler, well known West Texas show man, former State Representative and oil man address the monthly membership meeting of the Chamber of Commerce.

This week has been designated as Oil Progress Week and in addition to Mr. Sadler's address, a 28-minute film, "24 Hours of Progress" was shown. The theme of the film was "The Part Oil Plays In Every Day Life In America."

The program was arranged by David D. Pickrell and was furnished by the American Petroleum Institute in celebration of Oil Progress Week.

Both the Lions and Rotary Club voted to hold their meetings today with the monthly membership meeting of the Chamber of Commerce, instead of their regular meeting days, in celebration of Oil Progress Week.

The program lasted from 12 to 1:30 p. m. Harley Sadler is considered one of the most entertaining speakers of West Texas.

DEMOS CHARGE DEWEY WITH BUYING THIRD NOMINATION FOR GOVERNOR FOR $70,000 AND HANDOUT TO OPPONENT

NEW YORK, Oct. 17 (UP)—Democrats charged today that Gov. Thomas E. Dewey "bought" his third term nomination for governor of New York for $70,000 and promise of a life time income for Lt. Gov. Joe R. Hanley who had been promised the post.

They said the proof was a letter released by Hanley himself as a denial to a "whispering campaign" against his financial, personal and political life in his bid for U. S. senatorship.

Hanley and Dewey will have an opportunity to deny today at a campaign luncheon that there was anything illegal in the deal which enticed Hanley to step aside for Dewey when the governor accepted a third term nomination.

Rep. Walter A. Lynch, Democratic candidate for Governor, charged in Batavia, N. Y., last night that promises of a job and $70,000 to pay his debts persuaded Hanley to junk his hopes of replacing Dewey and run for the Senate instead.

Dewey "would be impeached" if he is elected next month and Hanley, "by his own confession," could never be seated if elected to the Senate, Lynch said.

The "payoff" charge was based on a letter written by Hanley to one of two friends who loaned him a reported $33,000 for pre-campaign expenses last summer.

BANGKOK, Thailand, Oct. 17 (UP)—The United States and Thailand signed a military assistance agreement today.

Under it, the United States agreed to supply arms and equipment for the Thai armed forces, along with a number of officials and technicians for demonstration for training purposes.

Thailand, in return, promised to provide "some facilities for the purchase of certain materials" for the United States' own use.

Truman Speaks At 10:30 Tonight On Pacific Meet

Will Warn Comms Against Further Asia Aggression

By Merriman Smith

(UP) White House Reporter

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 17

(UP)—President Truman was ready today to warn the Communist world that the United States will tolerate no further aggression in the Far East, including Formosa.

The President, who reviewed the Far Eastern situation at a dramatic weekend meeting with Gen. Douglas MacArthur, was prepared to spell out American policy in a speech at the War Memorial Opera House tonight.

Mr. Truman will speak at 8:30 p. m. PST (10:30 p. m. CST) over four major radio networks.

Since meeting MacArthur at Wake Island three days ago, the president worked long and hard on his speech. He considered it so important that he called in his top civilian and military advisers last night to give, if the finishing touches shortly after his arrival from Honolulu.

Informed sources said Mr. Truman would restate the American policy of neutrality toward Formosa as part of his warning against Communist aggression.

Otherwise, the President was expected less to define a new American approach to the Far East than to "clarify" the nation's position toward that vital part of the world.

What interested the man in the street mostly was what Mr. Truman talked to MacArthur about for two hours on Wake Island.

It appeared likely that the President would reveal few details of the actual conversation but that MacArthur's estimate of the situation would be reflected in the President's foreign policy statements.

However, some hint of what the two men may have talked about came from Tokyo. Usually informed sources told the United Press that Mr. Truman and MacArthur agreed that the number of American troops in Japan may be increased after the Korean war is ended.

These sources indicated both agreed that manpower in Japan would not be cut in the immediate future. Before the Korean war broke out, there were four under strength divisions in Japan. The return of these divisions alone—at full strength—would mean 18 more American soldiers in Japan than before.

The question was submitted to the commission on marriages of the French Lutheran synod. But the monthly meeting did not consider the question and will not meet again until after the wedding.

Presbyterian authorities in Edinburgh also have been asked for permission to open a closed Presbyterian Church in Beaulieu for the ceremony. No answer has been received, Flynn's spokesman said.

The swashbuckling star of films now is in Paris, filming scenes for his latest picture. Twenty-two-year-old Pat is in Monte Carlo.

Errol Flynn Has Trouble Getting Married To Pat

PARIS, Oct. 17 (UP)—Screen star Errol Flynn and actress Patricia Wynne of Salina, Kans., have not yet found a minister willing to marry them, a spokesman for Flynn said today.

Flynn and his flaming-haired fiancée are all set for the civil marriage ceremony next Monday at Monaco's town hall, a dice throw from the gaming tables at Monte Carlo.

But their desires for a religious wedding after the civil ceremony have been met by a no from the Lutheran and since from the Scottish Presbyterian church because of Flynn's two divorces.

The pastor of the Lutheran church in mention refused to marry Flynn as scheduled because of Flynn's divorces from Lili Damita and Nora Eddington.

The question was submitted to the commission on marriages of the French Lutheran synod. But the monthly meeting did not consider the question and will not meet again until after the wedding.

Presbyterian authorities in Edinburgh also have been asked for permission to open a closed Presbyterian Church in Beaulieu for the ceremony. No answer has been received, Flynn's spokesman said.

Hurricane To Hit Florida By Nightfall

MIAMI, Fla., Oct. 17 (UP)—The Florida tourist playground boarded up frantically today for a 75-mile an hour hurricane expected to hit by nightfall.

The Miami Weather Bureau warned in a 7 p. m. CST special bulletin that "there is not too much time" for making preparations from the Palm Beach area southward to Marathon, on the Florida Keys.

The hurricane crossed Cuba last night, losing in force from 100 to 60 mile an hour winds but the weather bureau warned that it would pick up more force over the open water.

The late season blow is moving at 14 miles an hour, a fairly rapid pace, and at 7 a. m. CST was only 200 miles south-southeast of Miami.

"Winds will slowly increase over southern Florida and tide will become abnormally high along the east coast and the keys as the center approaches today," the warning said.

MR. AND MRS. GEO. WILLIAMS CELEBRATE GOLDEN WEDDING

Several dozen yellow and red roses, a five-tier cake and over one hundred guests ushered in the fiftieth year of marriage for Mr. and Mrs. George Williams.

Their golden wedding anniversary was celebrated Sunday, Oct. 15 in the home of their daughter, Mrs. George Rogers, 309 S. Marshall.

Mrs. Williams said that in her fifty years of marriage she had attended many parties and events but this was the most beautiful that she had seen. Although the invitations asked that no gifts be brought, several guests brought some anyhow. They were all lovely, Mrs. Williams said.

Mr. and Mrs. Williams came to Ranger from Ohio in 1915. They have lived here ever since. They were married Oct. 15, 1900, in Ohio where Mr. Williams taught school for 18 years.

Mr. Williams has been a machinist for the Lode Star Gas Co. for 26 years. He worked there until he was 80 and retired. He will be 84 in November. Mr. Williams has always been active. Mrs. Williams said, and he still plays golf when the weather permits.

For the past 10 years, Mr. Williams has attended the Old Men's Golf Tournament in Amarillo. The couple belong to the Methodist church and Mrs. Williams has been active in church affairs and clubs in Ranger.

Mrs. Williams said the cake was made in Odessa and was decorated in yellow rosebuds. The table centerpiece was in yellow roses with a ring in the center. The table cloth consisted of imported all-over cutwork.

The Williams have three sons and two daughters: Richard Williams of Odessa; Arthur L. Williams of Dallas; Major Max Williams stationed in Wiesbaden, Germany; Mrs. George Rogers of Ranger; and Mrs. W. F. Miesher of Odessa.

Mr. and Mrs. Williams are also the grandparents of eight grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

The program is much broader in concept than compulsory military training which Mr. Truman previously proposed.

Chairman Lyndon B. Johnson, D. Tex., of the senate preparedness committee has asked the President to order executive departments to work closely with legislators in preparing the new plan. There was every indication the president would comply.

The latest proposal would include these features: 1. Compulsory military and civil defense training for all youths who are fit to serve in the armed forces.

2. Those who fail to meet health and mental standards would receive medical treatment in an effort to put them in shape for training.

3. Youths who fail to meet the standards after treatment would be trained for civilian defense work, jobs in defense plants and other forms of "national service."

All men trained for military service would be put through a combined Army-Navy-Air Force basic indoctrination program designed to save money and promote a feeling of "teamwork." After completing this course, the trainees could then choose the branch in which they prefer to serve.

The program of civil defense training for all youths would be intended to provide a vast pool of men ready to cope with any emergency in an atomic attack.

HQ Unable To Keep Up With Lightning Pace

By Earnest Hohereit

TOKYO, Wednesday, Oct. 18 (UP)—American mobile forces blasted open the gateway to Pyongyang today with a lightning thrust into Hwangju, the last big guardian outpost 21 miles south of the Communist capital.

South Korean forces charging toward Pyongyang along the other two main highways spearhead within 23 miles of the city to the southeast and 41 miles to the east.

The war in Korea fell apart yesterday, a dispatch from U. S. 8th Army headquarters said. The Communist defenses crumbled or were smashed to bits or simply vanished. Headquarters officers unable to keep up with the whirlwind advances.

Intelligence reports from Korea indicated big scale enemy movements along all roads northward from Pyongyang. An intelligence officer said "they are getting all the big shots out of the country."

The big question is, still unanswered, whether the mortally stricken Communist army would try to defend Pyongyang stoutly.

The U. S. 1st Cavalry Division spearheaded the race for Pyongyang from three directions. The Yanks and Korean Republicans on their right were all within immediate striking distance of the capital, and speeding toward it at a clip which could take them to their goal within hours.

The edge in the race for Pyongyang lay with the Americans. They traveled in motorized columns, while the South Koreans were obliged to advance afoot. They have walked a long way since they crossed the 38th parallel a week ago.

Nothing more was heard of an American-led South Korean reconnaissance column out to reconnoiter a 1,000 U. S. war prisoners last reported being herded toward Pyongyang. The Army said it was unlikely, for security reasons, that any more information would be released until and unless the prisoners were rescued.

U. S. officers forecast that Hamhung and Hungnam, the twin cities anchoring the east coast defense of North Korea, and possibly Pyongyang as well, would fall before the end of the week.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17 (UP)—A new high-yielding strain of rubber plant can be grown on 2,000,000 acres of Texas dry lands, the Department of Agriculture reported yesterday.

The report said "significant progress" has been made in the government's effort to find out how natural rubber can be produced in this country at reasonable rates.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17 (UP)—UN captured war supplies show that Russia sent arms to KoReds as late as April of this year.

Editor's Note: Russia has tried to give the impression that it has not sent arms to North Korea since Soviet occupation troops were withdrawn in December, 1948. However, UP's Robert Bennyhoff, first American war correspondent to cross into North Korea, reports that he found evidence to the contrary while accompanying the South Korean 2nd Division in its dash up the east coast of Korea.

I saw enough such equipment and weapons made in Russia since 1948 to fill several railroad trains. Almost every village and town in North Korea also shows signs of the recent presence of Russians. The best proof of all I saw was in Wonsan, North Korea's biggest east coast city and port.

The Wonsan railroad station bears two signs—one in Korean and the other in Russian. Most important buildings also are identified in both Korean and Russian.

TOKYO, Oct. 17 (UP)—Was booty captured by United Nations forces in Korea shows that Russia sent arms manufactured as late as April of this year to North Korea.

There also is ample evidence that Soviet agents continued to play a major role in North Korea long after Russian occupation troops were withdrawn in December 1948.

Russia has sought to disassociate itself from the Korean war by saying that it has not given

George Suh, Korean Reporter, Has Doctor Cut His Arm And Pretends He Is Wounded To Escape KoReds

By H. D. Quigg
SEOUL, Korea, Oct. 17 (UP)—With the Communists hot on his trail, George Suh, a young Korean reporter for the United Press who had remained in Seoul when the North Koreans invaded, began hiding out.

The "People's Army" was searching for him, and the "People's Committee" had ordered his arrest. He gave about half his money to his sister and half to his sister-in-law, both of whom lived in Seoul. He kept enough money to buy rice to feed himself for a month and gave the rice to a boarding house to cook for him.

One day, George was baby-sitting for a friend of his sister. There was a knock at the door. "I wouldn't have opened the door if that kid hadn't made a noise," George said.

The woman came in and said the lawyer was in jail and that her husband, who also was a lawyer, would defend him. The lawyer's niece and a maid arrived then, and George left the woman to them. During the conversation the two girls innocently remarked that George had worked for the American press.

Army Orders Christmas Cards Last February

By Elizabeth Toomey
NEW YORK, Oct. 17 (UP)—Army and Air Force men serving in hot climates like Guam or Saudi Arabia will be able to buy their Christmas cards in the post exchange any day now, but they don't need to look for any snow scenes or flippant verses.

Alice Gilhooly, the girl who picked all the Christmas cards round the arm, poured on plenty of mercurochrome and put the arm in a neck sling. The doctor refused pay because as he said—"this is a very special operation."

for overseas post exchanges for four years, says she keeps snow scenes out of the hot spots and humorous greetings out of every overseas post exchange.

"It is a morale reducer for a boy on Guam, for instance, to see a Christmas card picturing a snow scene," said Miss Gilhooly. "He would start wishing he could get a hand full."

As for the comic verses, Miss Gilhooly said, "When a boy gets that far from home he wants traditional Christmas cards. Something with a picture of a fireplace or pine cones over a doorway or a Christmas tree."

an attractive 28-year-old brunette explained. Which brings up the mixup in Miss Gilhooly's holidays. All Christmas cards must be shipped to post exchanges overseas by July 15, so she starts looking at them as early as February.

Right now she's about completed her selection of valentines for boys overseas to send back home. These, she said, include plenty of comic verses.

"By Christmas I'll be winding up Father's Day," Miss Gilhooly said a little sadly. "I'll always look a little blank when people wish me a 'Merry Christmas' in December."

the reception room 15 minutes. At the end of that time an office boy appeared and escorted her, languidly, to the presence.

LEWIS NORTHCOTT, Edie declared immediately upon the dictator's complex. His desk was at the far end of a large office, which compelled her to cross the entire room in order to get to it. In the two or three seconds that this required, she felt that Northcott was sizing her up, as one would an adversary. She forced herself to walk slowly, almost nonchalantly. And she kept her eyes resolutely on Northcott's face.

Northcott had risen as she entered the room and Edie was surprised at his height. He was easily six-foot-four, but very slim. His movements were quick and decisive. It flashed across Edie's mind that he looked like a long gray whip. Light gray hair. His light gray eyebrows were thin lines above almost colorless eyes. But the eyes were bright, made even brighter by the gold-rimmed spectacles he wore. They seemed to glitter at Edie with a cold hard light. Even Northcott's suit was of a light gray material. Heaven, Edie thought, give him a beard and a butcher's knife and he'd look like a Druid.

With a quick movement of one hand, Northcott indicated a chair on the opposite of his desk. Edie sat. So did Northcott. There was a moment of silence while his eyes roved her face.

"Well, Miss Frey," he said, at length, "I suppose you'd like to know why I asked you to come over?"

"I do know," Edie said boldly. "Edie" Northcott seemed to start. "All right, then. You tell me."

Edie set her handbag on his desk. She knew that she had sounded bolder than she felt. It could be for only one of two reasons, she said carefully. "Either you've got bad news for me or you want to know my strength. Or weaknesses."

Northcott laughed. His laugh was as hard and bright as his eyes. "You're rather a surprise to me, Miss Frey."

A queer expression came over Northcott's face. It made her think of a gray wolf grinning. "You're very confident, Miss Frey."

Edie shrugged. "I'll back my team," she said. "If we lose that's just hard luck. But, of course, you're not playing fair with me."

There was a wary look in Northcott's eyes. "Just what do you mean by that?"

"Only that there's something in back of all this. Something you haven't told me."

He put his hands on the desk, behind them and leaned forward. "You're very shrewd, Miss Frey. And you're a better contact man than your brother. I like people who aren't afraid of me."

Northcott's eyes were bright, made even brighter by the gold-rimmed spectacles he wore. They seemed to glitter at Edie with a cold hard light. Even Northcott's suit was of a light gray material. Heaven, Edie thought, give him a beard and a butcher's knife and he'd look like a Druid.

SCENES AROUND RANGER

Just received the first issue of the first school paper that Ranger Junior College has published. It's called "The Stampede" and though it is only a four column paper about 16 inches deep its birth marks the filling in of an important gap at the college.

A college without its school paper is like a teacher without his condensation or an editor without his sarcasm. Something is just missing.

The Stampede may not appear an impressive journal at first. But time and experience will improve it. The staff will quickly get the hang of what the students want to read and what they don't want to read—and give them a little of both.

As Dr. G. C. Boswell, RJC president, said in the first issue, "The Stampede is your paper, a student paper." By next year the Stampede will have become an important factor in school life and the official voice of the student body.

One of the best ways a school paper can sound out its readers is through a "Letter to the Editor's column." Now that RJC has a paper, students will be wanting to sound off—and they will do it on just about any topic. And the Stampede will suddenly find that it has become father, mother, enemy and the shoulder upon which the student can cry. It will be pelted with insults and applauded with compliments. That is as it should be for the ways of college students are varied and strange.

But it will be a lot of fun for the staff—and a little apprehensive at times. The Stampede is the voice of the students and there never was a more diversified and perplexing personality in the world. Here's wishing the Stampede a lot of success.

Want A Kidskin Canasta Apron? Yours For $495

By Elizabeth Toomey
United Press Staff Correspondent
NEW YORK, Oct. 16 (UP)—There's fur on everything from negligees to sweaters this winter, including the season's swankiest note—a grey kidskin canasta apron, priced at $495.

"These things do not exactly sell like hotcakes," Esther Dorothy, one fur designer who caters to fashionable and wealthy women, said "but somebody always buys them."

Here, if anybody's doing any upper bracket Christmas shopping early, are some of the furry items it's possible to add to the list.

For $295 you can buy a mint green Eurasian lamb sweater, with wool ribbing at the waist and three quarter sleeves. The same price purchases a violet lamb vestee with fur buttons.

One of the women voted among the nation's ten best dressed bought a pearl pink Eurasian lamb negligee this season, according to Miss Dorothy. She shows it over a brown chiffon pleated nightgown, though it can be bought separately (for about $800).

While the penthouse set is putting on the dog, if you'll pardon the expression, they're as likely as not to add a little moleskin or mink to their poodle's wardrobe.

"We feel a mink coat for a dog is in bad taste," one retailer commented, "though we did make one of our customers."

Most of Miss Dorothy's doggy customers settle for a moleskin jacket for their pet, in their choice of red, blue or caramel. She said, "we sell about a half dozen a season."

Another East Side women's shop features opossum fur bibs about eight inches square this season. They're supposed to be tied around the neck and tucked inside a suit jacket.

Shoe designer Herman Delman has a pump of black velvet with a cuff of silver blue mink, which he'll make up to order for $75.

Or a girl can just settle for a silver blue mink bracelet, decorated with a small spray of plush flowers, for $15.

Man Enters Hat Making Contest At State Fair

Chapeaux by the score—feathered, plumed, beribboned and veiled—are the net results of the first of two big hat-making contests at the 1950 State Fair of Texas.

The bonnets were created by amateur milliners, including one lone male, in the first installment of a brand new feature for the largest Women's Show in Fair history.

Contestants snipped, tacked and stitched throughout a four-hour marathon Friday, Oct. 13. A second contest, also strictly for amateurs, will be held Friday, Oct. 20. It is expected to draw a capacity crowd of hat-makers—and throngs of arm-chair experts on the sidelines.

Cash prizes of $50, $20 and $10 will go to the three top winners in the second trimming-bee. Three tailored creations finished in the money Friday. The single male in the contest, A. W. Ford of Dallas, took no prize but said he had "a whale of a lot of fun"

George Suh, Korean Reporter For United Press, Tells How He Lived During Red Occupation Of S. Korea

By H. D. Quigg
United Press Staff Correspondent

SEOUL, Korea, Oct. (UP)—George Suh walked in here the other day grinning. One arm was bandaged. That was the arm he had asked a doctor to slas!

He told the Reds he had been wounded and thereby escaped being drafted into the North Korean army.

George, 25, a Korean reporter for the United Press, stayed in Seoul when the North Koreans invaded the capital.

He finally left here and walked 250 miles in an effort to escape Communist hounding. He ended up where he started.

On the way back he started to write his story with a pencil on ruled paper: "To keep oneself out of the Communist reach is by no means an easy matter. I, a reporter to a foreign press, have undergone a pretty rough exile during their three months conquest over Seoul. When I found the People's Army had robbed me of my company's jeep and my effects on June 29, two days after the city was taken, I was not surprised because I had already been in exile from North Korea for three years. Having observed their methods there, however, I was not farsighted enough to foresee the following rough time."

At that point the pain of the two inch gash in his right forearm halted his writing, but when he got to Seoul he told me the story of his "rough time."

The People's Committee of the North Korean government confiscated the land of George Suh's family. He refused to join the Democratic young men's league, a Communist organization. He had attended a Korean technical high making his elaborate plumed creation. He entered on a dare, he said, and was glad hat-makers did not have to model their creations for judges.

"This style isn't becoming to me," he quipped.

Both millinery-marathons are sponsored by the Fair, and the Dallas Millinery Industries, which is supplying thousands of dollars worth of hat forms and trimmings to contestants free.

Committee, and said he was guarding the house for the landlady who had gone away. George said he was merely an acquaintance and left quickly.

A friend in the neighborhood informed him the People's Committee had ordered the landlady several times to locate George Suh.

"I told him I was now in the mouth of the tiger," George said. How he hid and finally escaped from the city is a story for tomorrow.

BOYCE HOUSE SAYS

When Abraham Lincoln was running for the United States Senate against Sen. Stephen A. Douglas, the latter sneered, "The first time I ever men Lincoln, he was selling whiskey." Abe replied, "Yes, it is true that I clerked in a grocery store where whiskey was sold. I sold it and Judge Douglas drank it. I have quit my connection with it—Judge Douglas has not."

Greatly irked by General Meckell's inactivity during the Civil War, President Lincoln wrote "Dear General, if you don't want to use the army, I would like to borrow it for a few days."

When George returned home his landlady said the People's Committee had told the army men to arrest him. The next day George moved to another boarding house. Ten days later he went back to his old boarding house and knocked.

Typhoon Slows Retreat Of Indo China Troops

SAIGON, Indo-China, Oct. 17 (UP)—A raging typhoon whipped northward from the Gulf of Tonkin today, hampering French efforts to cover the withdrawal of troops from outposts along the Chinese border.

High winds grounded all French planes and landslides toppled out roads in the northern crisis area raising havoc with the French supply line linking the border forts with Moncaoy on the Gulf of Tonkin.

The violent tropical storm hit as thousands of civilians, mostly women and children, streamed out of the threatened fortresses of Langson, 80 miles north of Hanoi. Refugees trudging along the tortuous, twisting colonial route four—the invasion route from China—were forced to seek shelter in French military blockhouses along the way.

Tree-bending winds and blinding rains curtailed the rocky military theater around Dongkang, north of Langson, one of the prize targets of marching Viet Minh Communist forces believed armed and trained in China.

A French military spokesman said he had "no information" regarding foreign radio reports that 9,000 Red troops had crossed the border from China.

Shortly after the storm hit Jean Le Tourneur, French minister of Associated States, and Gen. Alphonse Juin, one of France's top colonial generals, arrived by plane from Paris to help halve the southward surge of the Communists.

Their arrival underlined the gravity of the French situation.
