Case Of Whistling, Sun-Bathing Honey-Blonde Ends In Divorce

HOUSTON, Tex., Feb. 20 (UP)—Wyane Schlesinger, a 28-year-old helicopter pilot who charged that his pretty honey-blonde wife took sun baths in the front yard to "thrill men" has his divorce today, but not custody of his two children.

After a lengthy hearing that fasted well into last night, Judge W. B. Hunt awarded Schlesinger the divorce on a cross petition, but he gave temporary custody of the children to Mrs. Barbara Schlesinger.

As the decision was handed down, the pretty mother ran sobbing from the courtroom while her supporters cheered loudly.

Schlesinger had claimed his wife displayed her scantily-clad form in their front yard "to give men a thrill" and said she whistled at the passing mailman.

The hearing on the divorce started last Thursday, but because of the serious charges, Judge Hunt continued until yesterday to allow Mrs. Schlesinger to produce witnesses.

She came fully equipped. Her witnesses testified that: Schlesinger, a pilot and salesman for the J. D. Reed Company, an aviation firm, had accepted many expensive presents from Mrs. J. D. Reed, wife of the owner.

That he often accompanied Mrs. Reed to the swank Cork Club; that he bragged she had given him a wrist watch with an alarm bell; that at a birthday party for Mrs. Reed at the hangar at municipal airport, Schlesinger had been seen in an automobile hugging and kissing another woman; that Mrs. Schlesinger was a good baby sitter and didn't leave her children alone to go drink beer.

Mrs. Schlesinger's attorney, John O. Douglas, put Mrs. Reed on the stand.

"What do you pay Mr. Schlesinger?" Douglas asked.

"What do you mean?" asked Mrs. Reed. "I don't pay him anything. If the J. D. Reed Company wants to give some of their employees presents it certainly is none of your business."

She told Douglas he was trying to imply she had been "doing bad things" and was downright insulting.

Schlesinger who returned to the stand denied that there had ever been anything between him and Mrs. Reed. He said the watch and a sport jacket, were given him by the company as a bonus.

Douglas produced a letter Schlesinger reportedly wrote to his wife in 1949 from Lincoln, Neb., in which he told of "comforting a girl who had quarreled with her husband."

Schlesinger testified again about finding his wife and another woman with two men petting in a darkened bedroom of the Schlesinger home at a 1949 Christmas party and that his wife later left with a man despite his protests.

Every little bit of moisture helps is the opinion of farmers and even other Ranger citizens, and even though last night's rainfall was less than an inch, it would work towards relieving the current drought.

However, the rain-filled clouds had swept away by mid-morning and a bright sun once more shone on the city. The cool weather was nothing like the last two cold snaps and by this afternoon, it was expected to get warmer. No immediate additional rain was forecast by the weather bureau.

A destructive tornado whipped through Mineral Wells late night, unroofing several buildings and shattering scores of plate glass windows.

The U. S. Weather Bureau at Dallas said the violent cool front also caused thunderstorms at Dallas, Wichita Falls, Fort Worth, Austin, San Antonio, Abilene and Waco, and brought rains to many other points.

The weatherman said cloudy skies prevailing east of Mineral Wells would begin clearing today. However, scattered showers were predicted in extreme East Texas and near the Gulf Coast.

Rain measured at .34-inch fell at the Abilene area during an electrical thunderstorm. The rain, the first of consequence since Sept. 15, was accompanied by some hail. No damage was reported.

Other points receiving rain over night were Childress, Victoria, Corpus Christi, Tyler, Longview, and Texarkana.

No new precipitation was forecast. During the past 24 hours, up to 6.20 a.m., many East Texas points reported rain or drizzle, but none over an inch. Dallas had .79-inch, Texarkana .65, Tyler .27, Austin .29, Childress .15, Wichita Falls .43, Waco .11, San Antonio .10, Fort Worth .24, Palestine and Bellville .06, Mineral Wells and Victoria .05, Beaumont .04, Corpus Christi .03 and Del Rio .01. Only three points reported freezing temperatures early today—Salt Flat with 29, Dalhart 30 and El Paso 32.

Attorneys May Ask Special Plea For Cook

OKLAHOMA CITY, Feb. 20 (UP)—Attorneys for Bill Cook, confessed killer of a family of five, may go to court today with a "special plea" aimed at saving the Missouri badman from the electric chair.

Cook, 23-year-old ex-convict, is charged under the Lindbergh Law with the kidnap-murders of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Mosser of Atwood, Ill., and their three children.

The gunman was captured two weeks after the slayings, following one of the most intensive man-hunts in the history of the Southwest.

"We may go into court and make a special pleading on behalf of Cook," said Gomer Smith, one of Cook's court-appointed attorneys, yesterday. "On the other hand, we may decide to go ahead and get ready for his trial as scheduled on March 12."

Smith would not reveal what type of plea was being considered. However, it was reported earlier he might try to save Cook from the death penalty by having him plead guilty and avoid a jury trial.

U. S. District Attorney Robert E. Shelton said he definitely would seek the death penalty for Cook. He said he would petition the court for a jury trial even if Cook pleaded guilty.

The young desperado pleaded innocent after his formal indictment. Shelton pointed out that, under the Lindbergh kidnaping law, the jurge may order a defendant tried by jury if he thinks a jury should determine whether the death penalty is applicable.

Cook confessed that he murdered the Mossers at Joplin, Mo., after a terror-filled 2,000-mile ride through the Southwest.

US TANKS, INFANTRY CAPTURE CHUCHON, MOUNTAIN PASS

By Earnest Höberecht
TOKYO, Wednesday, Feb. 21 (UP)—Gen. Douglas MacArthur ordered United Nations forces to resume their Korean offensive Tuesday. They immediately scored a three-mile gain that put the North Korean 5th Corps to flight.

MacArthur flew to the Wonju battlefield, announced his "entire satisfaction" with the UN campaign, and said: "I have just directed a resumption of the initiative by our forces."

American tanks and infantry, including Negro rangers, immediately jumped off from positions south of Chuchon, 18 miles southeast of Wonju, where the North Koreans were thrusting at vital mountain passes to the south.

The Yanks advanced to the icy, hip-deep Chuchon River, waded across, captured the town of Chuchon and pushed north a half mile to occupy a ridge of hills overlooking the town.

The North Korean 5th Corps, which had smashed seven miles south of Chuchon at the high point of its drive, fled before the advance after one last pre-dawn banzai attack. The attacking force of two companies was virtually wiped out.

American commanders said prisoners from four divisions had been taken in the Red 5th Corps area, but the corps' total strength now was no more than 5,000 men.

Air reports said the entire corps, cut down by "meat-grinder" tactics, was withdrawing en masse to the north in small groups to escape Allied air and artillery assaults.

The North Korean withdrawal wiped out the last enemy salient threatening the 8th Army's present line and completed what MacArthur described as a "decisive" maneuver among "the bloodiest of modern times."

American losses were light in the drive that took Chuchon. Army and Navy jet fighters and British navy Seaferies blasted the town and it was a mass of fire and explosions when the U. S. troops walked in. Among the explosions was an ammunition dump set afire by flaming jellied gasoline.

Tornado Whips Thru Mineral Wells Monday
MINERAL WELLS, Tex., Feb. 20 (UP)—Damage from a tornado that whipped through Mineral Wells late last night was estimated today at $15,000, with indications that it may run higher.

Faybert Holmes, Red Cross disaster chairman for Palo Pinto County, made the estimate, and said there were no reports of injuries.

The storm covered an estimated 27-block area ripping off portions of roofs of at least five homes, and causing considerable damage to a number of others.

Mrs. Ruth Ducker, United Press correspondent, said the twister hit shortly before midnight moving in a more or less direct path from the southwest part of town through the northwest portion. It skipped through the downtown business district, smashing a display window, glasses of several stores in the downtown business district. Damage at a warehouse of the Sinclair Refining Co., was placed at $500.

Camp Walters, being reactivated at the edge of town, was not damaged. However, considerable damage was reported to one home in the Cool Community six miles east of Mineral Wells.

Telephone and electrical service was disrupted nearly two hours when wires were blown down and cut by flying debris. However, the utilities so far have not reported an extensive damage.

Several trees were uprooted on East Mountain, a short distance from the Baker Hotel. The hotel reported no damage other than a broken television aerial.

Rain accompanied the twister, and measured .40 of an inch.

Contractors Aren't Sheltered From Five Percent Operators

BY PETER EDSON
NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON—(NEA)—Five Percent racketeers are already at work, trying to chisel a commission out of civilian defense. Rep. Kenneth B. Keating of Rochester, N. Y., reports one instance of a contractor from his district who was sucked in on a fictitious bomb shelter deal. An outfit calling itself the Atomic Bomb Shelter Division solicited funds on assurance that it could get government contracts to build shelters. The Rochester contractor paid $750 for travel expenses, and signed an agreement that he would pay five percent commission for all profits resulting from the contracts he would obtain. The stranger who took his money then disappeared, and the so-called Atomic Bomb Shelter Division has been found to be non-existent. Actually, the government has as yet no money and no authority to let contracts for civilian defense works.

At Georgetown University in Washington, they tell this story on Michael V. Di Salle, the former Toledo mayor who is now head of the price control division in ESA—The Economic Stabilization Agency. Di Salle went to college and law school at Georgetown. And in his day, the two strongest factions in the student body were the "Guineas" and the "Micks." They waged constant internecine war.

Into a class which contained 75 per cent of the Georgetown football squad walked Di Salle one day. He was short and light. But since the instructor had not arrived to conduct the class, Di Salle walked up to the blackboard, took a piece of chalk, and wrote in a fine large hand so all could read:

"Resolved, that the Italians have contributed more to civilization than the Irish."

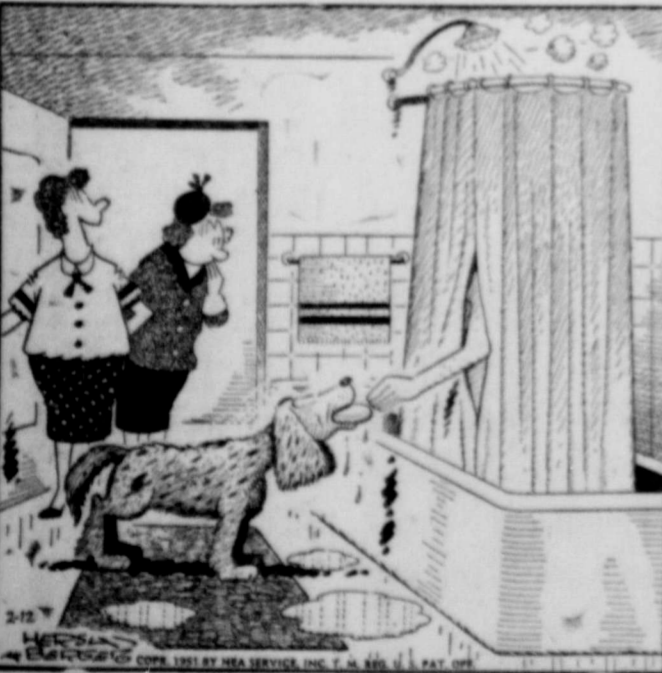

CAPT. RICHARD L. GRUENTHER, son of the Lieut.-Gen. Alfred M. Gruenther who is General Eisenhower's chief of staff in Europe, makes a claim unique in combat history. Capt. Gruenther, wounded in the Korean fighting, says he saw the sniper's bullet in the instant before it hit him in the chest, and as it came out his back. His explanation is that tonight struck the bullet and gave it a split-second reflection of light just before he was struck. The force of the bullet spun him around so that he saw the spent bullet hit a rock behind him, splattering blood. Captain Gruenther is expected to recover completely from the wound.

THE "great debate" on foreign policy in the U. S. Senate has been distinguished principally by the fact that most of the time there were never more than a dozen senators on the floor. The speeches were so long that nobody felt like listening. It was easier to read all about it in the papers. This poor attendance has revived the movement to have sessions of Congress broadcast and televised. When this experiment was tried by the state legislature in Oklahoma recently, a telecast showed one member reading a newspaper while another was fast asleep. The criticism that poured in was so severe that members started attending sessions more regularly. And the members are careful not to get caught asleep. Televising Congress is advocated for the same reason.

Newsman Tells His Own Success Story

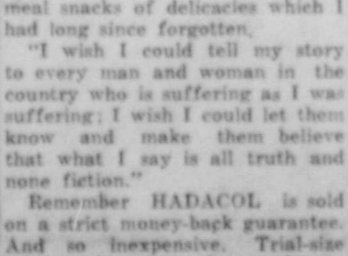

Throughout the years there have been numerous success stories of how this man or that man started from nothing and finally achieved prosperity. But the best of all success stories is where a man in a run-down condition finally gets to where he feels wonderful again. William Bogard, newspaper reporter in Sulphur Springs, Texas, has such a story to tell. Yes, now that Mr. Bogard is taking a HADACOL, he says, "I wish I could tell my story to every man and woman in the country who is now suffering as I was suffering."

This Last Night

THE STORY: Paul Twing took justice in his own hands in kidnapping Judy, small daughter of his dead brother, from her unworthy mother. Paul and Max Jenkins, a girl from the same Judy to New York, where May finds a room for herself and Judy and is to meet Paul the next day. On a subway, Judy sees Paul's picture in a newspaper and her examination exposes her identity.

JUDY TWING was crying. It wasn't until the train had plunged into darkness and the platform was out of sight that May Jenkins was conscious of Judy at all and then she realized that she still was gripping Judy's little wrist with fear inspired strength. In sudden compassion she stooped and embraced the child.

"Hush!" May admonished. "We'll talk later." The speed of the train slackened. They were approaching another station. The ride had been a brief one, but May's heart pounded as she pressed against the glass of the door and peered ahead. She was trembling with the thought that a warning might have been telephoned ahead. Perhaps the station already was being watched.

As soon as the doors opened, May had Judy by the hand and hurried out. The train they had just quit had carried them up-town. At that hour of the morning when the concentration of subway traffic was southbound the station was all but deserted. The few people on the platform ambled into the train and no one gave May or Judy a second glance.

They plunged through the turnstile and up the steps to the beckoning daylight that greeted them from above. On the street May stopped and looked about. She saw a street car waiting for the traffic signal to change. They ran to the car and boarded.

was opened. The landlady looked in. A little boy was with her. "This is Harry," she said, and she shoved him into the room. Harry didn't seem too anxious to come in. He held his ground and looked at Judy glumly.

Harry and Judy stopped staring, at each other and hurried over to May's side to inspect the booty. The landlady smiled with satisfaction and nodded her head.

"His people both work," she explained to May. "He's a good boy, but he gets in the way. I'm glad he has somebody to play with."

Without waiting for a reply, she pulled the door closed and was gone.

MAY sat by the window and read a magazine while the children played through the morning. At noon the landlady came for Harry. It was time for his lunch. May and Judy strolled down to the corner drugstore for their midday meal. The first edition of the evening paper went out. May bought one and carried it back to the room.

As soon as the door was shut, May unfolded the paper and scanned the first page. She hadn't dared permit herself a glance at it before she and Judy were alone. She didn't trust her own reactions.

Through the long morning she had been mortally afraid that she had let Paul down, that Judy's presence in New York had become known, and that the search would be concentrated and focused there. She had a deep sense of guilt.

Now as she looked at the paper, she realized that her fears had not been fanciful. The episode in the subway had not been treated lightly. Her hands tightened on the edges of the paper and her heart sank and grew heavy in her breast as she read the headline: "TWINING GIRL SEEN IN SUBWAY"

Texas Drops To 3rd Place After Loss To Ark.

BY ERNEST CONINE
United Press Sports Writer
Arkansas' surprising Razorbacks pulled within striking distance of the Southwest Conference basketball flag today following a hard-earned victory over the sputtering Texas University Longhorns.

The Hogs came up with a 40 to 38 win over Texas last night to climb into a third-place tie with the Steers, just a half-game back of the front-running Texas Christian and Texas A&M.

Both the Horned Frogs and Aggies will be out for sole ownership of the conference lead in games tonight. TCU plays Baylor at Fort Worth and A&M entertains Southern Methodist at College Station.

Last night's results left only Rice and Baylor definitely out of the championship chase.

In the game at Austin, the Longhorns ran up a narrow, 24-22, lead at halftime. However, guard Henry Williams sparked Arkansas to a third period comeback that left the Hogs with a seven-point lead at the beginning of the final go-round.

The game Texas squad stared a last-minute rally and pulled within one point of the visitors from the Ozarks. However, the Razorbacks sank a final free throw, then held Texas scoreless for the remainder of that game.

About 70 per cent of all U. S. farms have at least one automobile.

Closing 'Them Tax Loopholes' Would Bring in Half a Billion

BY PETER EDSON
NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON—(NEA)—Chairman Walter F. George of the Senate Finance Committee and Chairman Robert L. Doughton of the House Ways and Means Committee just happened to come out of Coolidge Auditorium in the Library of Congress, together. They had been listening to Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower make his first report on European defenses. A reporter who just happened to be behind them overheard their conversation, joshing each other. It ran something like this:

"Bob," said Senator George, "We're not going to do anything about that new tax bill on the Senate side. We're going to leave it all to you."

"Oh, you wouldn't want to do that would you? Why don't you work out half of it, and let us work out the other half in the House," asked Representative Doughton.

"No!" said Senator George. "We wouldn't want to deprive you of the pleasure. Besides, you'll want to close all them loopholes."

Closing of them loopholes is only one of the very tough tax problems which President Truman has now tossed to the Congress. He asked that these loopholes be closed a year ago. Congress partially closed a half-dozen of them, but left the biggest wide open. Closing them would add an estimated $500 million to government revenues from higher income corporations and individuals.

DEPLETION allowances granted to the oil and mining industries, preferential treatment on capital gains, estate and gift tax exemptions are things that don't figure in the life of the ordinary citizen.

But when the $60-a-week guy with a family is being asked to pay more taxes, it is only fair for him to know that nobody in the higher brackets is being exempted for special privilege. If these loopholes are ever closed, this would appear to be the time to do it.

Otherwise, President Truman's request for a two-bite tax hike is in the nature of a slick trick. It is also a confession that the administration itself doesn't know how much more taxes will be asked for eventually.

In other words, the $71 billion budget which President Truman requested in January is just a preliminary request. This is evident in the $40 billion estimate for national defense expenditures in the next year, plus another $20 billion authorization to make contracts for military spending in 1953. These are nice round numbers, as yet unsupported by any breakdowns on what it is intended to buy with this money.

THE President's tax message hints that requests for still more defense appropriations will be made later on. As these supplemental requests pile up, there will be corresponding requests for supplemental taxes. That's where the second bite will come in. And if necessary there will be a third bite.

While all this is called a "pay-as-we-go" tax plan, it would perhaps be more proper to call it a "tax-as-we-go" payment plan.

Little-Known Tax Oddities Show Why Tax Paying Is Such Headache

By Harman W. Nichols
WASHINGTON, Feb. 20 (UP)—Mississippi is a dry state, but it has a black market tax on liquor.

The state levies the tax on sales and gross receipts of illegal liquor and is expected to raise $1,140,000 on it this year.

That is one of the oddities I found in sitting down to make out my federal income tax return. These things have been looked into and reported by an outfit called Tax Foundation, Inc.—a non-profit research agency concerned with tax matters.

The average man can pay his tax and look around and see where his money goes. Like keeping a well-dressed crew of staffers in the government, protecting his home from flash floods and fires. But to get to the nub of a lot of taxes which come to the people statewide, it takes a researcher a mite of digging.

In the grand old state of Texas for example, there is a tax on confederate pensions. The take there isn't too great and wouldn't keep many long-horned steers in the best style of bovine living.

But let's take a few of 'em down the line.

In the state of Washington, the privilege of advertising what the state is rightly proud of—apples—requires a man to get a license. The state drags in some $630,000.

In Maryland if you want to make a living poking around hotel rooms for bugs you have to have a license. Bedbug hunters kick in an annual $26,000. (Bedding inspection, they call it.)

In Florida, the beauty culturists pay an annual $66,000 for state licenses. And never mind what they have to pay to curl a curl or cut a hair in Miami and Jacksonville. Those are city licenses.

Bank night is a popular sport in Kentucky. But before you can set up shop legally in that interesting business you have to sit still for a tax on sales and gross receipts. Ditto in Texas.

If you want to be a gum-shoe and do any detecting in the state of California, you have to have a special permit. Detectives pay the state $29,000.

For licenses and privileges on "Lord's Day" in Massachusetts, the sponsors pay about $184,000 each year.

In Indiana, fertilizer inspectors add $215,000 to the state treasury for the right to practice their trade.

In Michigan, where people go to fish, the man who stuffs your big catch—the taxidermist—has to pay a little to the state for the honor of stuffing. Maybe he adds it to your bill.

Anyhow, the air we breathe still is free if the man has enough strength to duck his head out the window for a whiff after he pays his taxes.

Census takers for the British crown colony of Hong Kong on China's southern coast find the term, "floating population," no more figure of speech. Among Hong Kong's population of nearly 2,000,000 are 147,000 Chinese fishermen who live on boats in the colony's territorial waters.

Early American housewives used bedrooms made and sold by the Indians.

Cotton Leaders Fight Diseases

An educational program to fight diseases of cotton is being conducted in Texas and across the cotton belt by agricultural leaders. The objective of the campaign is to reduce the huge annual losses which cotton farmers suffer because of seed rot, scorch or damping-off, angular leaf spot and anthracnose boll rot.

Proper treatment with a seed disinfectant can reduce the effects of all these diseases and the importance of seed treatment is being emphasized by a poster and by educational releases on the subject from the Texas Extension Service. Because of the huge cotton production in 1951 and a below average supply of cotton seed, the treatment of seed is particularly important this year.

Texas leaders are shown above examining the poster for the campaign, which is being distributed for display in county agent offices, cotton gin, seed stores and other farm headquarters. Left to right are: Dr. G. M. Watkins, head of the Department of Plant Pathology, Texas A. & M.; Fred C. Elliott, Cotton Specialist, Texas Extension Service; and J. D. Prewitt, Chairman of the Texas Cotton Production Committee and Associate Director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

THE STORY: Paul Twing took justice in his own hands when he slayed Judy Twing, small daughter of his dead father, from her unworthy mother. Now the last in a line of his kindred, Judy and May Jenkins, a girl who insisted on accompanying Paul because she felt that Paul was unjustly accused in New York, after Paul's departure from Judy and May, the child inadvertently exposed herself on a subway when she saw Paul's picture in the paper. May managed to escape, but she has been ordered to leave the city had been ordered. Then she reads the headlines in a newspaper: TWING GUN, SEEN IN SUBWAY.

The newspaper in May's hands gave an accurate account of the incident in the subway, elaborating in full detail on the panic of the woman who accompanied the child who, "although disguised as a boy" was described to police by more than a dozen witnesses in such detail that the officers were satisfied it was Judy Twing.

There was also a fairly good description of May, although the passengers apparently had not noticed her as closely as they had watched Judy.

The account also stated that a dragnet had been ordered to comb New York for Judy Twing and the mysterious woman who accompanied the child.

May Jenkins dropped the paper and stared out of the window with unseeing eyes. It was worse than she had imagined it would be. She had hoped that there would be some official skepticism as to whether or not the child really was Judy Twing, but now she realized how wishful her thinking had been.

How thorough is a dragnet? Would the cab driver who had carried them home this morning see the article and identify his passengers? The clerk in the drug store where they had eaten breakfast? The policeman she had spoken to last night? What of the landlady? Had she seen the papers and did she suspect?

All of the assurances May had given Paul that the people of the country were for them dissipated, leaving nothing but nerve-twitching fear. She wondered if Paul had seen the papers. What would he think?

The door to the room flew open. May jumped and ran to Judy who was playing on the bed. It was Harry. With a tremulous sigh May went back to her window chair and let herself fall into it. With shaking hands she lit a cigaret in an effort to steady herself.

After considering a dozen wild projects, she decided that her original idea of staying in the room until it was time to meet Paul. That meant four more hours.

The children lay across the bed on their stomachs reading a comic book. She was grateful for their quiet occupation. She read the newspaper article a second and then a third time. Finally she decided to change her dress and rearrange her hair. When she was through with that, she made Judy change her clothes.

Judy protested that her clothes were clean, but May tempted her into compliance with a new outfit boasting long pants that she had purchased in Wheeling. Harry was disgusted but stooped himself in the comic book and paid no attention.

That had taken less than a half hour and the elongated minutes and hours that remained before rejoining Paul spread themselves before her tauntingly. Thinking of Paul in the abstract, not in connection with the new difficulties that confronted them, proved to be an excellent sedative.

May found that she was hungry just to see him. Since the night she had met him her life had been so full of new, vibrating activity she had had little or no chance to think of anything other than problems of the moment.

Without surprise she faced the revelation that she loved Paul. He was everything she felt a man should be. His courage, sincerity, and the winning simplicity of his easy manner and speech had won her collaboration when first they had met. The confidence and respect he had imparted in her had grown to something much deeper and warmer. She didn't question it. She loved him.

She looked out of the window.

A CAR pulled up in front of the house. May stiffened and watched two men climb out. She saw the landlady run down the stoop and go up to them. May's heart missed a beat. Slowly she rose and stood at one side of the window looking down at the group through the dust gray curtains. The landlady was talking to the men with great emphasis. Twice she pointed up to the second floor window and the men's eyes followed the gesture.

Two stout women who had been gossiping in front of the house next door joined them.

May's knees sagged. She clutched the frame of the window and leaned heavily against the wall. Her breathing was strained and shallow. She was acutely conscious of the sudden trance-like immobility that had seized her, but she was unable to throw it off. Then she saw the men detach themselves from the group and start up the stone stoop.

With a violent thrust May pushed herself from the window. Her frenzied eyes swept the room. The sudden movement startled the children. They stared at her in wonder.

Heavy treads on the steps reached May. If accelerated her thinking, her action. She seized Judy and pushed her into the shallow clothes closet. May's voice was a hurried hoarse whisper. "Not a sound! Not a sound! Not a sound!" She pushed the door shut and wheeled on Harry who had slipped off the bed and was gaping at her in wide-eyed astonishment.

Three More Cage Stars Arrested For Bribery

NEW YORK, Feb. 20 (UP)—Three basketball stars of Long Island University—including the nation's top scorer—confessed today taking money from gamblers to juggle game scores and were arrested for bribery.

District Attorney Frank S. Hogan charged the three—Sherman White, rated by many as the year's outstanding player, Leroy Smith and Adolph Bigos—with taking part in the same betting ring he broke up over the weekend with the arrest of five other college basketball players and a former convict.

The three broke down after being questioned by Hogan in an all-night session that began yesterday afternoon and lasted more than 12 hours.

The three were charged specifically with taking $3,000 in bribes to reduce the margin of points by which they won the opening game of the present season—LIU's 60 to 59 victory over Kansas State in Madison Square Garden, Dec. 2, 1950.

Hogan said the three were involved in "fixing" other games though he declined to specify which they were during the team's 20-4 season.

"They have admitted they took money for shaving points on games," Hogan said, "and they operated with Salvatore Sollazzo and Eddie Gard to set up betting coups." Sollazzo, 46-year-old jeweler and apartment house neighbor of gambler Frank Costello, is under arrest on charges of bribing three City College of New York players and a New York University player. Gard, former Long Island University player, also is under arrest in the scandal, described by police as the "middle man."

White, six-foot, seven-inch Negro forward, was the nation's highest scorer with an amazing average of 27.7 points per game. He had been regarded as a leading candidate for All-American honors and already had been named basketball's "player of the year" by the Sporting News.

We Like To Talk About Abstracts—

... because making abstracts has been our business for many years. And it is an interesting subject. Every day people come to us with their title problems. Some cases are tragic. Take the example of the couple who have spent their all for a home to find out later they have no title. Most title problems are simple and the abstracts helps to make them simple. So before buying real estate of any kind have the title examined.

Navy Offers Officer Rank At Graduation

College students who want to hang up a Naval Reserve Commission alongside their college sheepskin in the next few years now are being offered that opportunity.

The Navy's Reserve Officer Candidate program, open to male and female students now in freshman, sophomore or junior classes, offers an officer's commission in exchange for two summers of Navy training. During the regular 9 months of the academic year, the student continues regular work toward a diploma, at an accredited junior or senior college or university.

The Eighth Naval District has been assigned a limited quota of 285 male and 39 female candidates from its 5 states for 1951. The applicant must be a member of the Naval Reserve at the time of application, in order to be eligible for the program.

Inspector-instructors, and commanding officers of all Organized and Volunteer units will accept and process applications. March 19, 1951 is the deadline for applications through district headquarters in New Orleans.

In connection with specialized Navy summer training for successful applicants, known as "I-O-C" students, Navy headquarters also announced that reservists in certain categories may be granted active duty in 1951 at the ROC training schools.

Approximately 8 weeks of extended training duty is available to officers in Lieutenant (jg) to Commander grades, qualified as instructors in navigation, naval orientation, weapons, leadership, seamanship, communications or administration.

Treasury Dept. Sponsors Project For School Kids

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Mr. and Mrs. America's dreams for a better future through thrift will be illustrated this spring when several million elementary school children will be encouraged to participate in the Treasury Department's Schools for Defense program, "Draw the Dream You Save For."

In "Draw the Dream You Save For" school children will draw what they hope Defense Bond and Stamp savings will provide for them and their families.

The project will begin next week when 48,000 elementary schools receive brochures outlining the project and its history-making incentives.

The President of the United States will pay tribute to the youth of the nation participating in the "Draw the Dream You Save For" project at a White House ceremony late in May when he places a representative group of the drawings chosen by the National Cartoonists Society on exhibition in his cartoon gallery adjoining the Cabinet Room.

The more than three hundred members of the National Cartoonists Society, co-sponsors of this school program in behalf of the U. S. Defense Bond and Stamp program will serve as project advisors throughout the country. The Society has named an executive committee to supervise their part of the project. The committee consists of Alex Raymond, President of the Society, and creator of "Rip Kirby," Gus Edson, Committee Chairman, "The Gumps," Milton Caniff, "Steve Canyon," Ham Fisher, "Joe Palooka," Walt Disney Productions, Al Posen, "Sweeney and Son," Hilda Terry, "Tecum," Russell Patterson, "Mamie," and Rube

Goldberg, the Pulitzer-Prize winning cartoonists.

This committee has appointed ten cartoonists as chairmen of the ten "Draw the Dream You Save For" regional centers. These chairmen and their committees will screen drawings in their respective regions and send a representation of the best illustrations of the theme "Draw the Dream You Save For" to the National Cartoonists Society in New York. There, the executive committee, with the help of the entire membership will select the group of drawings to be hung in the White House.

Each school may enter up to five drawings. Drawings are to be sent to the State Savings Bonds Director in its state by each school participating. All schools are urged to submit their exhibits before midnight, April 23, when the project closes.

The idea for "Drawing the Dream" grew out of classroom assignments in Gary, Indiana, and in Oak Ridge, Tennessee, where teachers asked pupils to show the things for which their families save through the U. S. Defense Bond and Stamp program.

Results were so interesting that the sponsors decided to employ the idea on a national scale as the first Schools for Defense program in the national emergency.
