Communists Ram 20 Miles Into Allied Line

Truman Says He Considered Firing MacArthur For A Year

WASHINGTON, May 18 (UP)—Stunned Senators said today the MacArthur investigation might just as well begin all over in view of President Truman's statement that he considered firing the general for a year.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur, himself, was at a loss to explain Truman's statement. He said he was astonished to the point of "incredulity."

Truman told his news conference yesterday that he had considered dismissing the former Pacific Commander for about a year before he fired him on April 11. He said he made up his mind when MacArthur served a peace ultimatum on the Chinese Reds on March 24.

MacArthur reported in New York that the action on his part "would only be regarded as supplementary to and in full support of any political move toward peace unless an agreement was in contemplation on the enemy's own terms."

These seemed to be harsh words in light of the Administration's avowed attempts to secure peace "without appeasement" in Korea.

The investigation by the Senate Armed Services - Foreign Relations Committee, its bipartisan surface harmony already broken, appeared headed for more stormy sessions.

For two weeks a 26-man committee has diligently questioned MacArthur, Defense Secretary George C. Marshall and Gen. Omar N. Bradley about events immediately preceding MacArthur's discharge. Truman's statement brought the lawmakers to a surprised halt.

Sen. Styles Bridges, R., N. H., said that Truman had opened up "an entirely new avenue" for investigation and that it looked as though "long standing personal differences" between the Chief Executive and MacArthur accounted for the firing.

Sen. Bourke B. Hickenlooper, R., Ia., called the latest developments in the boiling controversy "fantastic" in view of the "fantasy" of top secret conferences which surrounded and immediately preceded the actual dismissal.

Sen. Walter F. George, D., Ga., believed it meant "prolonging" the inquiry and "going back over all of it again to see what the president is talking about."

Although Truman didn't elaborate on his troubles of the past year with MacArthur, it appeared that United States policy regarding Formosa may have been where the pinch came.

In December, 1949, Then Army Under-Secretary Tracy S. Voorhees and Lt. Gen. Alfred M. Gruenther visited MacArthur in Tokyo. MacArthur, it was reported, told them in no uncertain terms that Formosa should be kept in Chinese Nationalist—not Communist—hands.

But Jan. 5, 1950, Truman blew the whistle by stating that the United States would take on military action, direct or indirect, to keep Nationalist Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek in control there.

Five months later—in June—after the outbreak of the Korean fighting, Truman ordered the U. S. 7th Fleet to neutralize Formosa, thus preventing the Reds from grabbing the island and the Nationalists from engaging in counter-thrusts against the mainland.

The President did pinpoint MacArthur's late August, 1950, letter to the national convention of the Veterans of Foreign Wars as one occasion when he considered he needed a new commander.

In the letter MacArthur outlined a policy which cut sharply across the administration position on Formosa.

Truman ordered MacArthur to withdraw the letter; but it appeared in print nevertheless.

On this score, MacArthur said last night that he had "long previously furnished copies of a memorandum of similar importance to the Secretary of Defense, the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and the President's personal representative in Japan, without having received the slightly dissent therefrom."

"Subsequent policy indicates that the Administration is in accord with the views therein expressed on Formosa."

The general said he had no slightest inkling of any dissatisfaction from the president before he was dismissed, and instead had been commended repeatedly.

The committee was in recess until Monday when Bradley will resume his testimony. He will be followed by the Joint Chiefs of Staff later in the week, and if the time permits, Secretary of State Dean Acheson.

Letter From Mother of Jackson Hangs On Wall Of Ranger Times

Andrew, if I should not see you again I wish you to remember and treasure some of the things I have already said to you. In this world you will have to make your own way. Do that you must have in mind.

You can make friends by being honest, and you can keep them by being steadfast. You must keep in mind that friends worth having will in the long run expect as much from you as they give to you. To forget an obligation or be ungrateful for a kindness is a base crime—not merely a fault or a sin but an actual crime. Men guilty of it sooner or later must suffer the penalty. In personal conduct be always polite, but never obsequious. No one will respect you more than you esteem yourself. Avoid quarrels as long as you can without yielding to imposition. But sustain your manhood always. Never bring a suit at law for assault and battery or for defamation. The law af-forwards no remedy for such outrages that can satisfy the feelings of a true man. Never wound the feelings of others. Never brook want on outrage upon your honor. Do it calmly. If angry at first wait till your wrath cools before you proceed."

A copy of this letter to Andrew Jackson 7th President of the United States, 1829-37, hangs on the wall in the main office of The Ranger Daily Times. In tribute to all mothers and to the fine mother who wrote this sincere letter to her son we publish this letter.

Andrew Jackson had gone far from the reach, the tough of his mother's hand. She must have had a premonition she would not see him again. Her heart reached out to him, she had to reach him, to remind him again of the simple truths she had tried to teach him. So she wrote this letter that has far outlived her and her son's fame. It has lived to become one of the treasured letter-classics in American literature.

Cisco Church Gets Record Lease Bonus

A cash bonus of more than $2,000 per acre, largest paid for an oil lease in Eastland county in more than 32 years, was paid to the Wesley Methodist Church of Cisco for 4.55 acres of land in the Bankline-Owens field by H. S. Fleishman of Tyler after a drilling permit had been approved in Austin and Washington.

A bonus of $10,000 was paid for the land. The church had a net of $7,500 in cash after paying expenses of obtaining the drilling permit, including attorney's fees.

Rev. Chief Warden, pastor of the church and former EHS coach said the deal had been pending for several weeks.

The well will be drilled by Fleishman as his No. 1 Wesley Methodist Church in the old Bedford Chapel church yard which has been owned by the church since 1885. Location is in Section 49, Block 4, H&TC Survey, and it adjoins flush production on Bankline Oil Company's A. V. Clark lease, about four miles northeast of Eastland. Permit is 4,500 feet with rotary.

Church officials said a decision will be made soon as to how the money will be used. They said that the church has a debt of $1,900 and needs a new parsonage. The church will receive a one eighth royalty from the well in addition to the bonus payment.

Rev. Leslie Seymour, superintendent of Cisco District Methodist churches, assisted church officials in clearing title to the property.

In other oil activity in the county, P. S. Kendrick and R. G. Piper of Abilene have completed the No. 1 W. E. Higgins, et al, wildcat seven miles southeast of Eastland.

Lions and Rotary Plan Meeting

John Smith, manager of the local J. C. Penny Store was accepted for membership in the Lions Club yesterday during a regular dinner meeting.

It was announced during the meeting that the Rotary and Lions Clubs will hold a joint meeting Thursday during the regular Lions meeting. The Rotary will not meet Wednesday as usual. The meeting Thursday will be at 12 noon instead of 12:15 p.m.

Randall Reed who is in charge of the soil conservation office at Rising Star will bring the program to the club next week. He will have with him Carl Spencer, who will present a 45-minute program.

Mr. Spencer is sponsored by industrialists and business men of Texas and they have two men touring the State putting on these programs at civic clubs and before business men.

An effort will be made to get a good crowd of business men to attend who are not Lions and suggest that each Lion bring some one next week and arrange to possibly stay a little over the usual time if necessary as this will be a very interesting and worth while program.

Valley Guards Against Using Mexican Cotton

EDINBURG, May 18 (UP)—The Valley has its guard up for smugglers who may try to bring Mexican cotton across the Rio Grande to use in the traditional "first bale."

Each year farmers of the Valley race to produce and haul the first U. S. bale to Houston for premium prices which last year hit an all time high of $2,585.

Ginner W. J. Williams of McAllen, who ginned the bale for the 1949 and 1950 winners, today suggested that each farmer agents.

might be required to register his field in advance with agricultural agents. "That not only would eliminate the chance of any Mexican cotton getting in, but would also eliminate the possibility of two farmers going in together which is just as illegitimate as smuggled cotton," said Williams.

Allied Armored Relief Columns Race Northward To Aid Buddies

By Earnest Hoberecht
United Press Staff Correspondent
TOKYO, May 18 (UP)—Chinese Communist hordes charging across the bodies of their own dead rammed 20 miles into Allied lines in Eastern Korea today and threatened to encircle two Allied divisions, one American and one South Korean.

At last reports Friday night the American division was fighting South in a rearguard action against overwhelming Chinese Communist forces closing in from three sides.

Allied armored relief columns were racing north to aid the endangered division.

Heavily censored dispatches said the South Korean division was endangered southeast of Inje in the area where the Reds made the first major breakthrough of their 1,000,000-man offensive.

Allied troops abandoned their last foothold in North Korea and pulled back the entire Eastern half of their line to seal off the Communist breakthrough.

The Reds established a roadblock on the Hyon-Hongchon road far behind the lines, apparently on the escape route for some of the endangered Allied units.

The fury of the Communist attack gained momentum during the day but Allied officers were confident it ultimately would be stopped despite the Red breakthrough.

Three Peace Officers Are Killed In Blazing Hill Country Gun War

BOAZ, Ala., May 18 (UP)—Three officers and a sand mountain bootlegger were killed in a blazing gun battle last midnight when the police walked into an ambush in a remote hill country section populated by feuding farmers.

A fourth officer, carried from the scene of the battle by a mortally wounded deputy, lay near death after the battle was over. Shot to death were Marshall County Sheriff E. M. (Zeke) Boyles, about 40, of Guntersville; Police Chief Leonard J. Floyd of Boaz, and Aubrey Kilpatrick, a farmer-moonshiner who defied arrest.

Investigators said Chief Deputy Washington Bennett, about 35, of Guntersville heroically rescued a wounded deputy from the scene of the pitched battle and, although he was wounded fatally in the

Unsung, Unheralded Heroes Honored At Austin Banquet

Last Tuesday night glory and praise was showered on a group of public servants who, heretofore have been generally unsung and unheralded for their deeds.

Several hundred prominent Texas citizens gathered at the Driskill Hotel in Austin to attend and witness the Texas Department of Public Safety Awards and appreciation Banquet sponsored by the Texas Safety Association.

Musical background for the dinner was furnished by Patrolman Harold Knerim. Following dinner, various members of the Department of Public Safety entertained with their renditions of popular and western music.

Governor Allen Shivers paid special tribute to the Department and its members for their outstanding service. Col. Garrison, Director of the Department, gave the response for his men.

Larry Cain, Vice President for Traffic of the Texas Safety Association, and Master of Ceremonies said that the task of the Selection Committee was a most difficult one. He also stated that although the awards will be presented to just a few men, he wanted to make it clear that the winners are, in a sense, receiving the watches and cash awards on behalf of every other police officer in the field. The people behind the scenes, who do so much to make the Department efficient...

honors going to E. J. Banks of Dallas.

The most dramatic moment of the evening followed the award presentations. The lights in the banquet room were dimmed, and a panel unveiled revealing the portraits of the twelve men of the Texas Highway Patrol who gave their lives in the line of duty since the formation of the Patrol in 1930. As Cain called off their names a spotlight was turned on each portrait, centering for a moment, the attention of everyone in the ballroom on those who made the supreme sacrifice to protect Texas lives and property. Taps for these men was blown as the curtain was slowly re-drawn. Following that hallowed moment, the Lord's Prayer was sung by the Reverend James Berry, Minister of Music, First Baptist Church, Austin.

TEXAS AND OKLAHOMA COUNTIES WANT RAINMAKING CONTRACT

GUYMON, OKLA., May 17 (UP)—Farmers in the one-time dust bowl area in the Oklahoma and Texas Panhandles today were the hopeful owners of a rainmaking contract.

Representatives of two high plains organizations met here last night while rain spattered down outside to end a long drought—and signed a contract with the water Resources Development Corp., headed by Dr. Irving Krick and headquartered in Denver.

The contract will extend until May 15, 1952. It covers four counties in Oklahoma and five in Texas. The 12,000,000 acre contract will be handled...

The contract calls for cloud seeding by ground generators using silver iodide between now and October 1. If rainfall has not been sufficient by then the seeding will be continued.

Either of the state organizations can request increased rainmaking activity for specific areas where drought threatens, but the Krick Organization reserved the right to limit rainmaking if floods or other damaging effects might result in adjacent areas.

Assistants to Dr. Krick said gentle rain received in the Guymon area late Monday probably were caused by ground generators located 50 miles southwest of here on an experimental basis.

Heavy rains received here Monday morning were not seeded, the aides said.

Krick's rainmaking technique will get the supreme test in the Panhandle project, Drought is a regular phenomenon in the area.

The wheat crop in most of the area covered by the contract has been ruined by a winter-long dry spell. The rain received in the past three days has revived hopes for grain sorghum crops which can be used for livestock feed and which also serve as ground cover to prevent wind erosion-dust storms.

The rainmakers have set a goal of 30 inches of rainfall for the contract year, as compared with the average rainfall of 18 inches.

Texas counties covered in the contract are Dallam, Hartley, Hansford and Lipscomb. Oklahoma counties are Beaver, Cottonwood, Harrison and Harper.

The Gold Mannequin

By Myles Connolly

COPYRIGHT 1951 BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

Jean Roland was the top model in Manhattan, an arresting young woman with a tall, slender body, haloed with silvered blonde hair.

THE windows of "Jean Paul," topflight New York designer, offered a bright defiance to the chill, drizzly March day. The hats on their chaste pedestals were like flowers and birds, from a summer garden, and the saucy mannequins in their smart spring prints looked, if you were not too exacting, very much like debutantes on parade.

It was a brave front the windows put up. There was no question about that. But upstairs, in the apartment on the fourth floor where the owners of the shop lived, there was anything but brightness and bravery.

Mr. Paul Panclera, elegant, urbane, paced the deep carpet of the luxurious living room, nervously fingering his thin black moustache. His partner and chief model, Jean Roland, lounged listlessly in a great chair, her long, slender body limp and careless.

"It can't be," Mr. Panclera said. "It just simply can't happen to us."

"But it has," the girl said emptily. "We're broke."

"Please don't put it that way, precious," Mr. Panclera's sensibilities were hurt. "It sounds so common, so plebeian."

"We're bankrupt, then. Does that sound better?"

"Dear, dear," Mr. Panclera was distraught. "Why must we have to have money?"

"It's lovely stuff," the girl drew her body together, getting ready to rise. "Nice to have around. Nice to spend. Nice any way you look at it."

"You are so materialistic, my sweet," Mr. Panclera complained. "Darn tootin' I am." The girl rose languidly to her feet. "I'm going over to Cocket's and get my old job back."

MR. PANCLERA was alarmed. "No, no. You're not going to walk out on me, are you?"

"No!" She was cool, offhand. "Cocket's been calling for weeks now. He's offering me $50 an hour to model for him—"

"But here you're a member of our firm," Mr. Panclera interrupted.

She laughed softly. "A member of the firm and broke. Excuse me, bankrupt."

"Dear, dear," Mr. Panclera moaned again. "Even our conversation has become common. What has happened to us? What has happened to our destiny? I don't understand it."

"I do. As a designer, Paul, you haven't sketched an idea in six months that anyone would look twice at except when it was on me, and then they weren't looking at the dress. You're just looking at the dress. You're just a plain, ordinary flop, my love."

Mr. Panclera shook his head sadly. "How I hate honesty," he said.

THE girl went into the back of the apartment, returned with a top coat. Mr. Panclera, in distress, faced her.

"This can't be, Jean," he said again. "This just simply can't be. It's completely too crude for people like you and me."

As he spoke the door buzzer sounded. Mr. Panclera went to the door, opened it. An office girl stood there with a large Manila envelope in her hand.

"This just came special delivery, registered," she said. "I thought it might be important."

Mr. Panclera shrugged, took the envelope. "Nothing is important any more."

He closed the door and, looking at the envelope turned back to Jean. "Special delivery, registered. Well, somebody must still love us."

"Another way of sending a bill probably," Jean was not interested. Mr. Panclera read aloud the return address on the envelope. "Teresa. General Delivery. Cedarbrook, New York." It's nothing.

Nothing. Just another nitwit who thinks we run a mail order house." He sighed, tossed the envelope unopened on to a table. "I thought perhaps it was destiny buzzing at the door just now."

"I think you'll hear the sheriff buzzing first," Jean went to the door. "So long, my love."

She smiled her cool little smile, waved and went out.

It had been a beautiful dream for Mr. Panclera, this gown shop. It had for Jean, too. And it must in fairness be said the dream was not altogether without foundation.

Jean Roland was the top model in Manhattan, an arresting young woman with a tall, slender body haloed with silvered blonde hair, a sort of gray-and-gold effect, artificially created.

Her face was petite and child-like and her skin luminous, as if it were translucent, and she had a prettily spoiled mouth and drowsy dark brown eyes. It looked detachedly into those which was hard to do and not done, you could see they were and quite old, much older certainly than her young vibrant body.

But, whatever you thought of the eyes, you had to admit she was striking. She could look—and had looked in many advertising pictures and fashion magazine illustrations—the high school graduate, the college prom girl, the debutante, the young wife, the seductress, and the cool, smart woman of the world.

She would appear a dozen times in the issue of one magazine, and few, outside of the trade, knew it was one and the same girl.

Her gift was to be what the designer desired—innocent or evil, naive or sophisticated, cool or tender, girlish or mature. She could be any woman she was asked to be, provided only that the woman be lovely looking.
