

The first week he cut out smoking. The second week he cut out drinking. The third week he cut out women. And the fourth week he cut out paper dolls.

One always widely discussed and highly publicized topic of the holi-day season is traffic safety.

Our biggest job, as citizens and motorists, is to exercise care and caution during holiday periods in averting needless vehicle damage and loss of life as a result of acidents on our city streets and out ridents on our city streets and outof-town highways.

A couple years ago about this time, a State Highway patrolman handed the walking meat shortage a clipping from the DPC Chaparral, published by the Department of Public Safety at Austin.

The clipping bore the title
"You Guys Wouldn't Hurt Her, Would You?" and we've since seen it reprinted in several other publications. Perhaps you, too, have read it. And perhaps not.

Anyway, its words, we chink,

Anyway, its words, we think, make an indelible impression and are a reminder of our responsi-bility behind the steering wheel.

And now, quote— Today, my daughter, who is sev-en years old, started to school as usual. She wore a dark blue dress with a white collar. She had on black shoes and wore blue socks. Her cocker spaniel, whose name is "Scoot", sat on the front porch and whined his canine belief in the folly of education and she waved "goodbye" and started off to the halls of learning.

Tonight we talked about school. She told me about the girl who sits in front of her—the girl with yellow curls -- and the boy across the aisle who makes funny faces. She told me about her teacher, who has eyes in the back of her head, and about the trees on the school yard, and about the big girl who doesn't believe in Santa Claus. We talked about a lot of things-tremendously vital, unim-portant things-and then we stud-ed reading, spelling and arithme-cic, and then to bed. She's back there now—back in the nursery—sound asleep with "Princess Elizabeth" (that's a doll) cuddled in her right arm. You guys wouldn't hurt her, would you? When her doll is broken or her finger is cut, of her thead gets bumped, I can fix it, but when she starts to school, when she walks across the street, then she's in your hands.

She's a nice kid. She runs like a deer and darts about like a chipmunk. She likes to ride horses and swim and hike with me on Sunday afternoons. But I can't be with her all the time—I have to erable rise in the last quarter of look out for her. Please drive Please drive slowly past please remember that children run from behind parked cars.

County Citizen Calls For Unity In S-T Letter

E. L. Norris, Rt. 2, Ranger,

And the Fort Worth Star-Tele gram was no exception.

In a published letter of Norris' which appeared in a recent edition of the Fort Worth daily, the Eastland Countian wrote:

"In a Sunday editorial you called the Texas revolt a Democratic victory. I can not see by what process of imagination you arrived at that conclusion. If the Re-publican Party runs true to form, and it's a safe bet that they will. the Democrats will lose all their patronage, all the appointive of-fices in the state, and any other advantages that may accrue to the party in office.

THE STORY: George Kendall, s ing a private detective, is going broke at it when Aibert P. Sutworth appears at his office and asks him to protect his daughter from an "unacrupulous fortune hunter." II with

GEORGE KENDALE was still clouded with confusion. "Let's start over again, Mr. Sutworth, but slow. Real slow. This Chief Big Bear, for instance. What is he—an Indian?"

"He's no more an Indian than I am. I tell you, Mr. Kendall, if I were about 30 years younger I'd cut this tinhorn four-flusher in two." His face was red and his lips had begun to tremble.

Kendall was puzzled. He lean across the desk and scratched his head. "Mr. Sutworth, this is still nothing but a hodge-podge to me. Let's try to put the pieces to-gether."

The old man mopped his brow with a handkerchief, "You'll have to excuse me for being a little ex-Even the Ann Love home was a mecca of homecoming from Tuesday through Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Lum Love and hildren from Lubbock, spent art time with his mother.

Mr. and Mrs. Kerbert Love and hildren from Odessa came Tuesday.

Kendall started. "Yes, Chief Big Bear has designs of his own. Much as it hurts me, Mr. Kendall, I'm forced to admit that my daughter, Marilyn, is probably the most spoiled, pam-pered, unpredictable brat any-where in the city of New York." Kendall shook his head. He was beginning to appreciate the se-glousness of Mr. Sutworth's prob-trouble. She went to finishing school, was Phi Beta Kappa in college, but she still prefers blue jeans and juke boxes to formals and Beethoven. And her taste in men—Mr. Kendall, it's absurd."

"Sounds like quite a girl," Kendall commented.

"You have utterly no conception. First, there was a saxophone player with buck teeth, and then a bald-headed lumberjack, and after him, a Portuguese track star. Now, this Chief Isig Bear."

"Well," Kendall said, suppressing a grin, "you have to admit she likes variety."

The old man pounded his fist on the desk. "It's no joking matter and 1 certainly didn't come here to be amused."

Kendall felt his face flush. He straightened up. "Yes, of course," he said soberly.
