ming to the forefront again, State Attorney General Crawford Martin said in impromptu remarks during a speech in Eastland Monday.

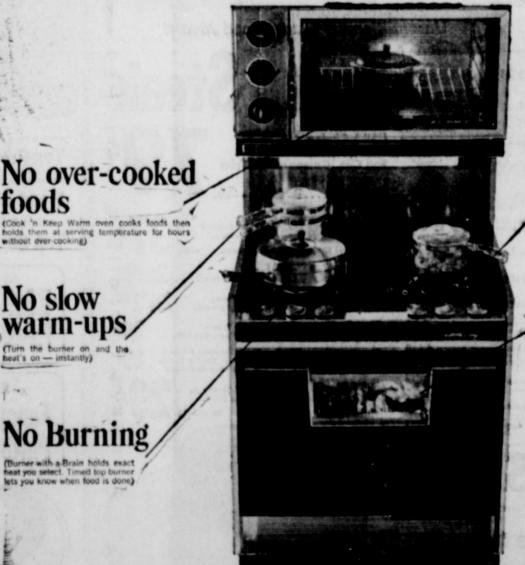

Scheduled to argue before he Supreme Court next week, Gen. Martin said the case is one in which the federal govnment is sueing the State of Texas for some $200 million involving some 46,000 acres of Texas shore-line.

When the tideland bill was passed in the late 1950s, it rovided that all other states bordering open water would relinquish all off-shore holdings further than three miles out, and Texas, beyond 10.5 miles out.

Now the federal govern-nent in its suit, wants that arrangement set up, and based on the coast-line of 1845. This would involve choice Salt Doom oil areas, Martin

Gov. Martin will argue before a seven-man court, he said, with Chief Justice Earl Warren and Thurgood Marhall sitting the hearing out Warren was attorney of California at the time of earlier decision and he disqualified himself on that ground, and Marshall was U. S. Solicitor General at the time the suit against Texas was filed, so he's not going to sit. (It would have been his first case as a member of the Supreme Court.)
"About half my time is spent with the federal government," Martin said, "half the ime they're suing us and the other half, we're suing them."
