It is always a source of pride with us to watch the development of paper boys.

Frequent, we get letters from soldiers or sailors starting off, "I used to be one of your paper boys..."

Using Dried Flowers

Blue salvia (left) and strawflowers (right) are both among the flowers that can be dried to use indoors in winter. Interesting ways of using these and other dried flowers are in article.

The gardener who grows flowers likes to keep them with him as long as possible. Given the right flowers this can be all winter.
The blooms of strawflowers, scabellum, blue salvia, celosia and cockscomb, belts of Ireland, Chinese lantern, gomphrena, baby's breath, honesty and statice all can be dried for indoor use. Perhaps you already have a supply of these hanging upside down in a warm, dry place. Next thing is to decide what to do with them. An obvious answer is to make mixed bouquets of them, of the type often referred to as "winter bouquets." But that's not the most interesting use for these blooms you've grown so carefully.
How about making a design of them on the underside of your glass-topped breakfast or coffee table? Fun to do, beautiful to behold. Arrange the blooms on a sheet of clear plastic cut to the size of the glass of your table. Glue them to this sheet. When your design is finished, glue the whole sheet to the underside of the glass. Then stand back and accept praise modestly.
A flower picture is a pretty way to use dried flowers. For use in a bedroom, mount them on a velvet-covered piece of cardboard, cut to fit any picture frame you may own. Plywood can take the place of velvet if the frame is to be used in the living room.
Just to be different mount the dried flowers on a piece of glass. Cover with another of the same size. Bind the edges of the two together with passepartout tape and hang the picture in a window so the light shines through the flowers.
Flat flowers like those of pansies and cosmos, with the gray leaves of artemisia added for contrast, make a lovely picture used under the glass on a dressing table top.
These are just a few of the ways to use dried flowers. By growing your own from seeds you'll have a wide variety available.

in parks, the really "homey" plantings appear. Here, as the National Park Service puts it, are "masses of flowers for masses of passing people."
Under trees may be a large planting of azaleas, shrubs which blossom in brilliant colors in spring. Or large beds of gay tulips or daffodils. Or, perhaps, the deeper hues of thousands of pansies.
When these flowers have faded, annual plants are used to overplant or follow them. Petunias are favorites because of their consistent performance during hot, dry weather. Used with gray-leaved dusty miller and green and white caladium foliage the varieties Pink Magic and White Cascade brighten Mt. Vernon Square. White Cascade is combined with pink Carefree geraniums in plantings on the Water Gate Memorial Bridge Plaza.
The 14th Street bridge approaches, a whole complex of highways, are enhanced by large mass plantings of Spun Gold marigold and Celosia. Forest Fire plus lochia or burning bush, Pershing Square at 15th and Pennsylvania boasts striking groupings of Spun Gold, Forest Fire and Pink Magic petunia while Moonglow petunia, Purple Robe nierembergia, and yellow, tree-form lantanas make spots of color in Palisade Park.
Your city may need to exercise patience while public works are planned and completed but any community can go right ahead refurbishing its parks with those curtain raisers — masses of annual flowers — just like Washington, D.C.

Masses Of Flowers For Masses Of People

Across the street from the White House is this colorful two-toned planting of petunias. They are favorites with landscape architects of the National Park Service because of their consistent performance during hot, dry weather. Washington boasts many "floral display areas."

If you've ever been in Washington, D. C. between 4:30 and 6:00 P.M. you've seen its masses of people heading for home as fast as possible. While plans are afoot to construct underground garages to house 20,000 cars along with many similar projected enormous public works, over 375,000 tulips actually were planted last fall; enjoyed during the past spring. Thus the flowers are certain raisers for the more permanent projects.

Just as you plan your garden in advance so landscape architects of the National Park Service plan the plantings of hundreds of public areas. Some of the 700 city parks, some of its school grounds have been relandscaped with contributions from the public through the Society for a More Beautiful Capital. Trees and shrubs have largely been used in these places.

But in other areas, sometimes the same old-fashioned ones between the diagonal avenues and the gridwork of streets, sometimes larger ones

THE GORDON SPOT

By DeMarquis (Dee) Gordon
Eastland County Extension Agent

The mistake I made in this column last week was obvious to any of you who grow pecans. We stated that the estimated pecan crop in Texas is 35 thousand pounds. We should have said 35 million pounds as compared to the 1966 crop of 26 million pounds and the 1965 crop of 62 million pounds.

Now that the weather is getting cooler you should be on the alert for brown patches in your lawn. This disease most often is found in St. Augustine grass. In severe infestations, disease symptoms are visible from as far away as one can see the lawn itself. The disease areas begin as small yellow spots which enlarge rapidly when allowed to go unchecked. The characteristic circular or irregular shaped diseased areas break the continuity of the lawn and give it an unsightly appearance. When the disease is active, it is encircled by a ring 2 to 4

A fungicide should be applied when the disease symptoms are first noticed. Several fungicides will prevent the disease. Many of these contain PCNB (terraclor). More than one application may be needed.

We have seen a lot of scorched leaves on peanuts, this year. The upper leaf surface turn light brown and darker with age. The scorched area does not take on a definite shape as opposed to leaf spot. The condition may occur on a small area of the leaflet or the entire upper surface may be scorched. Badly affected leaflets shed from the plant.

Leaf spot in peanuts has also increased considerably since the first of September. Several dusts and sprays are effectively controlling leaf spot.

The Screwworm Eradication Program officials are deeply concerned with the threat of new screwworm outbreaks in Texas. The flooding in South Texas are creating a situation that might become serious to the program. Unfavorable weather conditions combined with many stockmen's inability to reach their livestock are causing the situation.

All stockmen are asked to be watchful for possible screwworm cases this fall. If you need mailing tubes to submit specimens let me know.

Diverted Acreage May Be Grazed

Farmers have been reminded by Jesse G. Meredith, office manager of Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, that acreage diverted under the 1967 feed, grain and cotton programs may now be grazed. The dates were changed from Nov. 1 to Oct. 1, but no hay can be harvested from the area. He added this grazing provision does not apply to soil bank or cropland adjustment programs.

ASCS regulations require that in order to maintain full history for peanuts, 75 percent of the allotment must be picked or threshed in the cur-

You can cook a 3-minute egg faster with gas than with electricity.

Here's why. With a modern gas range there's no slow warm-up period. You turn the burner on and get the desired amount of heat — instantly! Burner with a Brain holds that precise temperature until cooking is done. No waiting, no watching, no wondering with flame fast gas. You can see the flame go to work the instant you turn the burner on.

(Of course, faster cooking means less gas used and more economy for you!) Only modern gas cooking gives you this much control, flexibility and speed. See the wide variety of modern gas ranges at your local gas appliance dealer or LONE STAR GAS.

Halloween Fun Can Turn Into Tragedy

Halloween fun can turn into tragedy unless certain safety rules are carefully followed.

This is a timely warning from Fire Chief Charlie Isbell who points out the great hazard of Halloween costumes.

Fire and flowing ghost and witch costumes just don't mix, said Chief Isbell who urges that all costumes purchased be marked "flame-proofed" and homemade ones treated with a solution of borax and boric acid. In addition to precautions, keep a safe distance from any source of flame, sparks or intense heat.

Use a flashlight instead of a candle to light the Jack-O-lantern. Watch out for any type of fire near dry autumn leaves, dry corn stalks and other seasonal decorations.

Pay attention to these safety rules, warns Chief Isbell, and you can be reasonably sure that the hobgoblin of fire won't get you this Halloween.

MURDER INDICTMENTS JUST NOT WHAT THEY USED TO BE, IT SEEMS

Murder indictments just are not written the way they used to be.

In the old days district attorneys and grand juries were very careful to list in explicit detail all the factors involved in a crime. Today a short standard form is generally used, on which a few blanks are filled in, and a short sentence naming the defendant and briefly telling the nature of the crime added.

One of the best examples of the way it used to be done, was found this week by District Clerk Roy Lane in an old desk in 91st District Court when he turned up a 95-year-old court record.

The five-page document includes the complete story of a murder — from request on the victim to hanging of the defendant.

The onion-skin record was found in a desk long used by the late Judge J. F. Davenport who died recently in Fort Worth. Judge Davenport was 91st District Court judge from the time the court was established in about 1925 until his retirement in the 50's. It is not known exactly why the case record was among his papers, unless he had filed it because of its unusual nature.

The murder took place in Collin County (McKinney) and an inquest jury met on Feb. 14, 1871, and ruled that the unknown person "found on the waters of Sloans Creek a few days earlier had died by violence from the hand of some unknown person, think it was from gun shot and also from use of club."

The two-page indictment names a former Collin County man and sets the date of the murder at the previous October, in 1870. And the indictment is thorough — it might well be a sample case.

"...did in and upon the body of one — feloniously, willfully and of his malice aforethought make an assault and that said — a certain gun, said gun being then and there a deadly weapon, charged with gun powder and leaden ball, which said gun the said — in his hands then and there held and had, then and there unlawfully, feloniously, willfully and of his malice aforethought did discharge and shoot off at, against, and upon the said — and the said — with the leaden ball aforesaid, out of the gun aforesaid, then and there by the force of the gun powder aforesaid, by the said — discharged and shot off as aforesaid, then and there unlawfully, feloniously, willfully and of his malice aforethought, did strike, penetrate and wound him the said — in and upon the head of him, the said — then and there, with the leaden ball...one mortal wound of the depth of five inches and of the breadth of one half inch, of which the said — did men and there die."

And so on, until

And the indictment continues carefully detailing the crime.

Date of trial is not known, but the jury verdict read guilty and punishment of hanging recommended.
