Curry said that he voluntarily went to the police station after hearing that they wanted him. He volunteed for a lie detector test, and the results nger at him in a lineup with four plain clothes policemen Curry said that "I knew that was in for trouble."

He then telephoned J o h n Watts, Odessa atttorney who represented him in the Hussey case, and the attorney flew to Amarillo. Next day, Curry was free on bond. They waived examining trial, pointing out that "We want this case to come to trial so the truth will be presented to a jury." Nathan went back to Canyon. Although college officials said he could stay in school, both he and his attorney felt that he should withdraw. He was passing in all courses, e added, and was being conidered as a dormitory superisor for next year.

Since coming home, a good many friends have made it a point to express their faith in him, Nathan said. He has had a letter from one of the jurors who heard the Palo Pinto case, expressing confidence that he will be acquitted.

The future isn't too bright, Curry says. "I often feel like I'm in a blind alley," he said. "If it wasn't for my family, I think I'd just give up." Nathan has prospects of a road job, and he likes running the big 'Cats. When it's all over, he now feels that it will be best for him to take his family and move to some distant state and start over.
