THE MISSING WILL FOUND

CAUSE OF ACCIDENT

All Paris is in Mourning for the Untimely Death of the American Millionaire - How the Course Lays

San Francisco, Cal., Aug. 16.—The missing will of Mrs. Charles J. Fair has been found in a safety deposit vault here. Fair's will is in the hands of his attorneys.

If the public administrator does not interfere to press her claim to the administration of the two estates, the wills will not be filed until after the funeral of Mr. and Mrs. Fair in this city.

The will was prepared by Knight & Heggerty in April, 1900. This is the will of which Mrs. Fair told Mrs. Joseph Harvey, and by which it is presumed upon the evidence of her statements to Mrs. Harvey, she left legacies to her mother, brothers, and sisters, aggregating the total amount of $250,000.

No other will was found. In Knight & Heggerty's office there has been found the will of Charles Fair, drawn about the same time, April, 1900. This and the will of Mrs. Fair found in a Trust company's vault, are the documents that will be filed by the attorneys for the Fair heirs whenever it becomes necessary in their opposition to the petition of the public administrator.

Cause of the Accident. New York, Aug. 16.—The cause of the automobile accident in which Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fair were killed and also of other motor accidents is a topic of discussion among the members of the automobile clubs of Paris, says the Tribune correspondent.

The unanimous opinion is that the members of the recognized clubs and owners of automobiles should be impressed with the terrible risk they run the last fortnight at Trouville and speed, even on the long, broad and perfect roads of Normandy.

There is the deepest sympathy felt for Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fair, and it is admitted that almost every automobile on the favorite road between Nantes and Evreux which is as smooth as a billiard table, lets out at full speed. It is also noted that in the last fortnight at Trouville and Dieppe and Aix Les Bains, there has been a great deal too much auto scorching usually by new and young owners of motor cars.

One of the offenders in this respect is Ted Sloan, the American who is reported at going at a maximum speed through the Norman villages near Trouville, Pont Leveque and Cabourg.

IS A BEAUTIFUL ROAD

The road from Evreux to Pacy-sur-Eure is beautifully macadamized and is in perfect condition. The spot where the accident occurred is exactly in front of the gates of the Chateau de Mai and is on a moderate descending grade. Four miles to the west of Pacy the road is slightly winding to make the descent to the river Eure more gradual. There are double rows of fine elm trees beside the route and on each side of the road there are gutters about a yard wide, paved with large rough stones. It was doubtless one of these rough stones that pierced the front tire which was the immediate cause of the accident.

KAISER RAISES A STORM

Letter Criticizing the Reichswath Considered an Interference. (By Associated Press) New York, Aug. 16.—A perfect storm was raised in Germany by the publication of the emperor's telegram to the Princes Regent of Bavaria, criticizing the conduct of the Reichsrath and offering to make a gift of the money which the Reichsrath refused to vote for art purposes, cables the Tribune's London correspondent. There is a disposition to regard the incident as an unwarrantable interference in the domestic affairs of the federated state. The radical press disclaims for the most part the idea that the emperor acted solely in the interests of art.

CHICKASHA ARRESTED

Chickasha arrested an employee of Holt, charging him with participation in the hold up. When Holt heard that his employee had been jailed, so the story goes, he went to Marlow and becoming obstreperous was stopped by Marshal Metcalf. Holt pulled his gun, the marshal did also, and shooting began. Both parties having emptied their guns, went for more ammunition, and Holt returning with a new gun, mounted and rode away. Marshal Metcalf pursued him and overtaking him some distance from town, drew his Winchester shotgun and ordered Holt to stop. Holt paid no attention and Metcalf fired, wounding Holt's horse. Holt continued towards his farm followed by Metcalf and Marshal Chase of Chickasha. Finally weak and faint from loss of blood, he was captured and taken to Marlow, where his wounds were dressed and his condition pronounced not serious. Later, it seems, he became worse, and physicians brought him to Fort Worth last night. If he lives till this morning and is able to stand the shock, an attempt will probably be made to remove the bullet now lodged in his right thigh.

BROUGHT HERE WITH A BULLET IN HIS THIGH

Weak from loss of blood, and with a bullet in his thigh which will probably cause his death, John Holt, a saloonkeeper, from near Marlow, I. T., was brought to this city last evening from that place, where he was wounded Thursday evening in a running battle with Marshal Metcalf of Marlow. It had been intended to remove the bullet from Holt's thigh soon after his arrival here, but after standing half the trip well, he collapsed for the last part of the journey and he was taken to St. Joseph's infirmary while in a precarious condition. Dr. Frank D. Thompson, who was in charge, said late last night that Holt's temperature was very high and that he might die at any time.

According to press dispatches the story of the fight in which Holt was wounded is as follows: The night of July 4, Holt's saloon, which is a short distance west of Marlow, was held up by four men. Parties in the saloon, as well as Holt, were robbed, and after filling up on Holt's liquor the highwaymen left. Friday when a deputy marshal from No clue of the robbers was found till

AUTOPSY KILLS AND NOT THE ELECTRICITY

CLAIM MADE THAT ELECTROCUTED CRIMINALS ARE BURIED ALIVE

(By Associated Press) New York, Aug. 16.—F. A. Stratton, vice president of an electric light company in West Chester county, this state, says that murderers sentenced to die in the electric chair are not killed by the electric current and that they would be buried alive if it were not for the autopsy which follows the electrocution. Mr. Stratton says: "Nearly every week we have men shocked by higher voltage currents than are used in the electric chair at Sing Sing, yet they come around all right after a few days treatment. This being the case, is it not probable that some of the murderers who are sentenced to the electric chair could be resuscitated if they received prompt medical attention and the same care that is given to one of our linemen after he meets with an accident. I have often thought that a great many people who are supposed to be electrocuted are in reality buried alive."

PROMISING YIELD OF COTTON IS IN SIGHT

GOOD REPORTS CONTINUE TO COME IN DAILY

ESTIMATE IS GROWING

THE ANTICIPATIONS OF THREE WEEKS AGO MORE THAN MET

A HALF BALE TO THE ACRE

Conservative Estimates Say This Average Will Be Easily Met in This Section - Encouraging Prices Now Prevail for Staple

There appears to be no question now but that there will be a far better yield of cotton than was two weeks ago anticipated. Careful inquiry among farmers from all sections warrants this assertion. Because of the dry weather prevailing previous to the recent general rains the fields were kept clear of grass and weeds. Hence, when the season came three weeks ago cotton was given a start resulting in a phenomenal growth, and the fruitage will be abundant. It is conservatively estimated that at least a half bale to the acre will result as an average. When it is considered that not less than 8 cents is being paid for cotton, and in some instances nearer 9 cents, it means the farmer who has a reasonable acreage of the staple will have money to meet his obligations and tide him over another crop year. Cotton buyers say they expect cotton to begin rolling in at a lively rate inside of ten days, as picking will be generally inaugurated tomorrow, and they figure that if there is any delay it will be because of the possible overcrowded conditions of the gins. The boll worm has appeared in some isolated sections, and some fields may be unfortunate in furnishing sustenance for these pests, the attack is by no means general, and by reason of the prevailing hot sunshine, knowing ones say, the invaders will disappear inside of a week. Two years ago there was a much more general invasion of the boll worm, yet the crop panned out far better than the most sanguine anticipated. A writer in the Arlington Journal says that the talk about all weed and boll worms has about stopped. There may be a few fields that have too much weed, but if there is any fallowed to see them, and the hot sun has just about put the quietus on the boll worms. There are a few left, but they have chills and fever and in a few days longer will all be gone. The cotton crop, he declares, looks fine, and is opening right along. The prospects now promise as large a yield as this country has had for years, and with the price at which it is starting farmers will have money to burn and merchants business enough to divide up a little with their neighbors. Over the road from Arlington to Mansfield he never saw one sorry piece of cotton. Both timber and prairie land have good crops of cotton and late forage crops.

ACTIVE SCENES AT STOCK YARDS

NOTHING SHORT OF A VISIT CAN CONVEY BUT MEAGER CONCEPTION OF MAGNITUDE

Packeries and Pens to Be Ready by November 1—To Push the Big Exchange Building—Some-thing of Receipts and Prices

Aside from the fact that the packing house sites are the busiest places to be found in Texas, there can be but little said in the nature of detail. But little can be said from the fact that to do the subject justice, pages could be written covering features of the work of which the public has never yet been apprised.

While the skilled artisans are carrying skyward the massive structures of iron and brick, equally as skilled workmen in other lines are building foundations from excavations which cover hundreds of acres, and in which work hundreds of men are employed.

The same conditions extend to the building of the pens, sheds, scale-houses, roadways, archways and viaducts by the stock yards people. This work reaches out as far almost as the eye can reach west and north from the packing houses of Messrs. Swift and Armour, and an army of men, teams, plows and dirt carts, are engaged in excavating, grading and building. Here and there are huge derricks, manipulated by gasoline engines, boring for water, thus to establish a system of wells throughout the acres of territory.

With reference to the pens, sheds, scalehouses, etc., W. B. King, general manager for the stock yards people, said they hoped to be ready by Oct. 15, and unless bad weather prevented such would result. The work of erecting the big exchange buildings had been inaugurated, and an effort would be made to have this completed by Nov. 1. He hardly thought it possible to have it completed earlier. Much of the finishing material for this structure must come from abroad, and the orders would be filled in their turn and shipments made, he hoped, as rapidly as possible.

Memberships Memberships in the Fort Worth stock exchange are already being taken, and during the week George W. Saunders of San Antonio, purchased the first one, at $250, and engaged quarters to be occupied when the exchange shall have been completed.

While receipts of cattle, sheep and hogs are fairly good at present, they are light compared with what the anticipations are for 30 and 60 days later.

The average daily hog receipts range from 300 to 400 head, taking the week as a basis, and prices range from $6 to $7.10 for hogs weighing from 160 to 180 pounds. A lot of 74 head topped the market for the week at $7.10, averaging near the 200 pound mark.

Cattle range from $1.80 to $3.50, which does not include fancy or even the best beef cattle, while choice fat steers are quick to go at $4 and $4.50; medium fat steers, $3 to $3.50; choice fat cows, $2.50 to $2.75; medium fat cows, $2 to $2.50; bulls, stags and oxen, $1.75 to $2.25, canners, $1.50 to $2.

St. Louis; J. W. Adams, Bluffdale, shipping 33 head of cattle to St. Louis; D. Burnett, Bluffdale, shipping 1 car cattle to Burke.

Harrison, all brought in hogs and sold to the packing house. Messrs. H. T. Gregg, Stonefield & Co. and M. F. Gregg, and W. W. Parker, cattle.

Representative Sales Yesterday's representative sales as furnished by the commission houses show: Thirty-one cattle, average 1621 pounds, $2.10; 30 cattle, average 780 pounds, $2.15; 33 cattle, average 708 pounds, $1.90; 2 cattle, average 895 pounds, $2.25; 1 calf, 160 pounds, $3.25.

The same record shows: One hog, 150 pounds, $6; 2 hogs, average 290 pounds, $6.35; 3 hogs, average 157 pounds, $6.25; 65 hogs, average 123 pounds, $5; 22 hogs, average 169 pounds, $6.20.

Chicago of Town Markets The Chicago wires yesterday reported cattle steady, receipts 300, Hogs, receipts, 15,000, market active and 5c higher, tops bringing $7.12 1-2.

St. Louis reports cattle receipts at 500, including 400 Texans, market steady. Hogs, receipts 1500, market steady, tops $7.10.

Kansas City reports cattle receipts, 200; market unchanged. Hogs, receipts 2000; market strong, tops $6.95.

Range Notes Messrs. Mims and McClung of Johnson county reported at the yards yesterday that they had just returned from Clay county, where they had been looking for feeders. They found feeders, but prices did not suit them. They will look elsewhere.

M. J. Southerland of Marlin also returned from Clay and Johnson counties, and reported having bought 1300 feeder steers, two to four years old, and will ship to Marlin and place on feed after September 1.

The expectancy for a good cotton crop and heavy mill run makes good demand for feeders. This demand was not apparent until within the past ten days. The claim is made that the demand is getting stronger.

PACKING DISTRICT NOTES. At the Armour plant yesterday the brickmasons finished work on the beef cooler department and also topped off the brick work on the freezer department. A force of men will commence Monday placing the tar and gravel on the roofing. Monday will also see the finishing work begun by bricklayers on the hog cooler and ham house on the south end of the solid block. The brickmasons will then be turned loose on the lard refinery.

The receipts of brick amount to six or eight cars daily by this plant, while the lumber receipts vary. The work on the foundation and walls on the new tanking system for the hog killing department is being retarded because of the non-arrival of iron. This is to be three stories high, with iron columns and steel beams. The Armour company is figuring on putting in a temporary electric lighting plant. Some portions of the interior are now as dark as midnight.

Excavations are being made on the east side of the tracks for a fertilizing plant 60x120 feet, three stories.

The foundations for the oleo, beef killing, hog killing, power house and lard refining plants are in and the walls started.

Of the four wells to be bored, one is now down 400 feet on its 900 feet journey, and one is down 200 feet. The other two have not yet been begun.

The Swift Structure The Swift structure is assuming immense proportions in height, breadth and thickness, and the outer walls are nearly a finality, except on the north end.

An immense driveway and chute grew yesterday, and is quite an imposing structure. This company yesterday received 12 cars of brick, two cars of lumber, a car of machinery and pumps. On tomorrow the company's boiler expert will arrive and at once commence putting in the immense boilers.

T. Barbellizza of this city is furnishing the plant 1000 bushels of lime per month. His lime is burned at the city works near Haines' park, and he gets the greater part of his rock from city excavations.

Notes of the New Pens The best story of the stock yards scale house is up just west from the Armour plant. Hundreds of acres of new pens surround it.

A temporary frame house has been erected on the extreme west side of the pens for construction headquarters. F. Blair of Chicago is here to commence the construction of the big exchange building. He is accompanied by his foreman, Mr. McCormick.

The grade is almost complete for that part of the Belt line railroad running directly between the packing house plants and the pens.

NORTH SIDE NOTES. Excavation for the new Rosen Inn has been commenced. No less than a dozen new cottages have been completed along the street car line from the Marine curve to the Stock Yards

TRY THIS TEST And See if Your Kidneys Are Diseased.

A very simple way to determine whether your kidneys or bladder are diseased is to put some of your urine in a glass tumbler and let it stand 24 hours; if it has a sediment of a cloudy,ropy or stringy appearance, if it is pale or discolored, you do not need a physician to tell you that you are in a dangerous condition. Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy speedily cures such serious symptoms as pain in back, inability to hold urine, a burning scalding pain in passing it. Frequent desire to urinate, especially at night, and the staining of linen by your urine and all unpleasant and dangerous effects produced on the system by the use of whisky and beer.

In speaking of the good done him by Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, the Rev. Aaron Coors, D. D., pastor of the M. E. Church of Rhinecliff, N. YOUNG MAN COMES HOME FROM MEXICO

A. N. Jack, Jr., After Year and a Half in Southern Republic Here on Visit—Was With W. C. Green Wealthy Mine Operator

A. N. Jack, Jr., after a year and a half's absence, arrived this morning from Sonora, Mexico, for a brief visit with his father, A. N. Jack, of the Fort Worth postoffice. Mr. Jack has been associated with W. C. Green at La Cananea, a mining locality in Sonora, south of Tombstone, Ariz.

Mr. Green once lived in Fort Worth and prospected for mineral in the Indian Territory and West Texas. Several years ago he was involved in a commercial war with New York people over the possession of valuable Mexican mining properties, which were bitterly contested in the courts of the republic as well as in the states. A compromise was effected whereby Mr. Green came into possession of all properties in dispute, and he was immediately reckoned as one of the richest Americans operating in Mexico.

Mr. Green's next trouble was with Gen. Patrick Egan of army "embalmed beef" fame, and it looked for a time as though the workmen of the two would be involved in a bloody war.

Mr. Jack comes home sick from the effects of the climate. He has recently been in the interior of Sonora dealing in lumber and working on a concession from the Mexican government to secure several hundred railroad ties. After a week's stay in Fort Worth he will return to the Montezuma country.

DAY OF REST TO LABORERS

PLANS FOR THE CELEBRATION, SEPTEMBER 1st.

Nearly All of the Unions Notified Committee That They Will Have Representation in Parade

The executive committee in general charge of the preparations for the celebration of Labor Day in Fort Worth meet this morning at 10 o'clock in the office of the Union Banner and to hear reports from sub-committees and to arrange further details concerning the celebration at Hermann park. An important decision of the committee will be in regard to the parade. It is likely that it will start not later than 9:30 o'clock in order to avoid the heat of the day. All of the unions of the city have notified the committee of their intention to be represented and it is practically assured that the police, fire department and the Texas Brewing company will be represented in the parade which will likely be one of the finest ever viewed in Fort Worth.

Announcement will also be made at this morning's meeting that a rate of one and a third fares on all railroads leading into Fort Worth has been granted for September 1. Visiting unions, or organized bodies will be met at the depot by a reception committee on their arrival and escorted to the place of entertainment.

Notice has been received from Weatherford, Cleburne and Gainesville that union delegations from those places will take advantage of the rates and come to Fort Worth. A communication has also been received from the Trades Assembly of Waco that owing to the fact of there being no Labor Day celebration in Waco this year, some of the unions from there will likely come to Fort Worth on that date.

SAVERS CANNOT COME. Governor Savers has notified the committee that he will be unable to speak owing to his being under a physician's care for throat trouble. Mayor Powell has notified the committee that he will deliver an address and other speakers, including Mr. Mitchell of Greenville, a lecturer of note, will be heard. Senator Culberson has not been heard from.

MUSIC AND ENTERTAINMENT.

Both union bands of the city will furnish music for the day. One will give a concert at the park during the afternoon and furnish the music for the ball in the evening. There will be numberless attractions at the park and every possible attempt to make the time pass agreeably to the visitors will be made.

HAD REASON TO BELIEVE HE WAS LEADER OF MEN

William Edwards, a Negro, Entertained the Court and a Jury, and was Then Ordered Confined

On complaint made by a partner in business, William Edwards was, on Friday morning, arrested and locked up, and a charge of insanity registered against him in the county court. Some of his friends claimed it was a "job," to deprive him of his business interests in two barber shops and bootblack stands on lower Main street. During the afternoon of Friday, County Judge Harris caused to be empaneled a jury for the purpose of determining the prisoner's sanity.

Evidence developed the fact that for two weeks he had been acting in a manner quite contrary to that of a sane man, not only in talk, but in actions. So violent had he become toward his wife, who is in a delicate condition, that her parents caused her to be removed to their home. He had assaulted his wife, using a water pitcher in a dangerously threatening manner. At the shops, in which he was interested, he had, according to statements, threatened the lives of his associates. He also insisted on preaching, saying he was a king. He further declared he was representing Damon and Pythias, and had been commanded to address white and black Pythians in Fort Worth at an early date.

As a clincher, County Attorney Lattimore put Edwards on the stand and asked him if he (Edwards) was crazy. Edwards laughed heartily, and declared he was not. Mr. Lattimore then asked him to explain why he thought he was a king, and a leader of men. The prisoner branched off in such a dramatic manner in explanation, that finally Mr. Lattimore quit the court room, and a bailiff was called on to quiet the darkey. He introduced his explanation by saying that since he was 2 years old, at times he realized that he held a great secret, empowering him to become a king among men. At 15 years of age he joined the Baptist church, because he had been rocked in a Baptist cradle, rested in Baptist arms, nursed at a Baptist breast. When he merged into manhood he realized that he must go in at the wide-open doors of the Methodist Episcopal church, and preach the Methodist gospel, as set forth by John Wesley. He regretted that he was a negro, because he had the white man's instincts and ambitions. In his dreams some-

Miss Annie Hoban, Post Pochontas of Yemassee Council of Red Men (Women's Branch), writes from 872 Eighth Ave., New York:

"Three months ago I was troubled with backache and a troublesome heaviness about the stomach. Sleep brought me no rest for it was a restless sleep. The doctor said my nervous system was out of order but his prescriptions didn't seem to relieve me. I was told that Peruna was good for building up the nervous system. After using it for two months I know now that it is. I want to say that it made a new woman of me. The torturing symptoms have all disappeared and I feel myself again. Peruna did me more good than all the other medicines I have taken."

Secretary Woman's State Federation. Mrs. Julia M. Brown, Secretary of the Woman's State Federation of California, writes from 131 1/2 Fifth St., Los Angeles, Cal., as follows:

"I have never known of any patent medicine which did what it professed to do except Peruna. This remedy does much more than it claims, and while I have never advocated any medicine I feel that it is but justice to speak a good word for it because I have found it to be such a rare exception.

thing told him that he must espouse the cause of Damon and Pythias, and he had followed out this presentment. He married, and because the wife he had selected was unsuited for a man of his ambitions, the Great God of the universe took her from him, that he might not be fettered in his inspired cause. He then bought another wife, and the negroes had taken her from him. The negro was his enemy, and his guns had been trained on this enemy. He knew that the white man was his friend, and only the night previous he dreamed that the gentlemen of the jury, whom he considered his personal friends, would send him on his way to his native state, Louisiana, that he might gather data of his past life and return to Texas and lead men in the right path.

During his harangue he stood up in the witness box and gesticulated wildly, at times pointing his finger at the negroes in the court room and laughing exultingly, saying, "you are my persecutors."

The jury was only out long enough to fill in the blanks of questions and answers, and declared him of unsound mind, and recommended that he be restrained from liberty. The court remanded the man to jail.

NOVEL PARISIAN VEIL EFFECTS

It seems quite marvellous that so many varieties of veils are offered by clever designers, for not only are these quantities of novel effects introduced each season of the year, but several times during a period of three months new and attractive designs are offered to fair wearers.

Nowadays the fashionable woman would as soon think of venturing upon the street without a hat as to appear unveiled, and from recent observations it looks very much as though the habit has grown alarmingly, for one veil does not satisfy the modish woman. Instead, she must wear two. We smile indulgently at the bag fad and, in fact, at all the pretty and serious little fancies of womankind, but for permanency nothing so far has equaled the vogue for veils.

Curiously enough, it is mostly Americans who advocate the wearing of two veils, and yet it cannot be said that we are more careful of our complexions than are other women.

On the contrary, it seems that we are less afraid of tan, sunburn and even abhorrent freckles than is foreign femininity, and yet, even in the city—one might say, more particularly in the city—the set of veils has grown to be considered absolutely necessary to a modish costume.

It might not be amiss to mention the tire-some conspicuousness of brilliant green veils. Four of every five women you see on the street have their flat hats swathed in folds of creme de menthe chiffon, and invariably there are long "stringy" looking streamers fluttering out behind.

At the beginning of the season, when the idea was fresh and novel, it presented rather an attractive effect; but there is such a thing as overworking a fad.

Automobilists are, no doubt, responsible for the vogue of green veils, for chiffon of this color protects the eyes from dust and resists them from the bright glare of the sun.

For such purposes green will always be good style, but let it be confined to automobiling sport.

Black and White Hold Preference.

As the green veil has increased in popularity with the general public, a noticeable preference has been shown by the really fashionable set for veils of all black or all white, in both chiffon and delicate lace.

These soft folds have a way of rendering the lines of the face less marked, while every woman feels that she has set up a screen between herself and the outside world. It seems scarcely credible that such a flimsy barricade could really be considered a protection, even from sun and wind; yet the thin mesh of chiffon is as satisfactory as though the veil were truly impenetrable.

For traveling and for some cutting sports scarfs of chiffon are not only pretty but serviceable, and they certainly add a gracefulness to the stiffest hat.

Spots, large and irregular, reign supreme, while novel ornaments, such as tennis and ping pong rackets, golf clubs, balls and riding crops are more effective in the shops than when covering a veil that adorns a pretty head. The woman of good style never permits herself to indulge in eccentric fashions, partly because they become common in a very short time, but more particularly because her good taste leaves no desire to express itself in any but the most refined

ALL THE MESHERS ARE DIAGONAL NOW.

It is extremely foolish for any woman, no matter if she considers herself free from the ordinary amount of feminine vanity, to buy a veil without first trying its effect. The lines may not conform to her features at all, and the consequence is that the veil will prove to be a decided failure.

On the other hand, she may discover a certain weave that looks so well on her that every charm is heightened. Her eyes may seem ten times more brilliant and even larger, while the texture and tint of her skin will assume a whiteness under the mesh that is almost dazzling.

Again, there are certain styles of faces to which any kind of a veil is unbecoming. It is needless to say that such women have a to the apparent age. There is a charming double-meshed veil, direct from Paris, and those who find it comfortable are taking great delight in its delicateness. The under veil is a fine white tulle and over this is a diamond network in infinitely small threads of black. The spaces between the diamonds formed by the black lines are filled with small black velvet dots.

Something of a novelty, at which women look admiringly but doubtfully, is the veil of opalescent hues. For gowns delicate, misty rainbow colors are indescribably lovely, so why not find a place for this novelty among milady's veils?

Not every woman can bear the combination with satisfactory effect, but she of the

DAINTY COOLNESS OF THE SUMMER TOILETTE.

It is one thing for a woman to look delightfully cool and attractive on a grilling day in August and quite another for her to give the impression that she feels quite as comfortable as she looks.

The problem is one worthy of consideration, for no more entrancing spectacle is presented to the work-worn city man than kind of lingerie that happens to be pretty; instead, it must be made on the most approved lines in order to secure the greatest coolness possible.

In the first place, she chooses the thinnest muslin or lawn for her lingerie, and, instead of having it lavishly trimmed with laces and embroideries, she contents herself the abolition of the chemise, but this garment has become so well established in the list of lingerie articles that no woman feels that she can live without it. However, it is far less bulky than once it was, for there are darts and goes by means of which all extra material is done away with.

Ribbons, as usual, play a conspicuous part in modish fashions in white, and frequently loops and knots of dainty blue, pink or white wash silk are substituted for more cumbersome pieces of muslin.

One of the most aggravating bits of feminine wearing apparel is presented in elastic hose supporters. Since the advent of the new straight front corsets and the banishment of knee garters as being detrimental to the circulation there have been inventions without number in the way of convenient and satisfactory hose supporters.

It is the general custom now to wear the stays over at least two of the undergarments, and yet no woman has a fancy for strapping down the wide, dainty ruffles that edge her muslin drawers. The difficulty is easy of solution for those who advocate the popular style of this garment. The gathered straps of ribbon and rubber should be slipped under the drawers, even though the stays be worn above.

There is no arrangement more heating than to have these undergarments held to the flesh with binding straps, and the woman who hasn't already discovered this method of gaining comfort had better make a trial of it.

Speaking of supporters, there are the conceals. An exaggeration in Stage Wear. As an exaggeration, one might refer to a remarkable hat and veil worn on the stage not long ago. Here, of course, such fancies are permissible, but it must be admitted that a veil to trail to the very edge of a demi-train is scarcely a display of good taste. For covering her face the modish woman has a tremendous variety of veil designs from which to make a selection, and it hapa refreshingly lovely woman upon whom the scorching sun has no ill effects.

After devoting considerable thought to the subject, finally has at last decided that much of the comfort or discomfort felt during the heated term is due to her undergarments.

Therefore, she is not satisfied with any with veils elaborate effects. She abolishes all extra fulness, as well as unnecessary articles of apparel, and if she wears corset covers instead of chemises they are made to come just to the waist and not having besqueelike pieces below.

You've no idea of the great gain achieved in this one respect. Another advance is in most delightful styles offered now, charming conceits of puckered ribbon and even lace, while bows and jeweled buckles are a prominent feature of the handsomest ones.

Another little accessory without which scarcely any woman feels completely dressed is the sachet corset. In style these affairs are legion, for they may be of silk or satin ribbon, of dainty lace applique, or even of embroidered or painted taffeta.

The woman who makes a point of using plenty of talcum powder will find that she is preparing herself to withstand a great amount of heat. It cools the flesh, besides keeping it soft, and just before the corset is assumed an extra powdering will be found very soothing.

Attention to such details successfully solves the problem of looking and feeling cool in hot weather, and if a woman is fresh and dainty underneath there is no reason why her state of feelings should not be reflected in her outward appearance.

The World And Women.

The world is hard on women. It is not sufficient for her to be estimable, she must be esteemed; it is not enough for her to be beautiful, she must be amiable. Her happiness and chances in life will depend more on her reputation than on her conduct.

IT IS MUCH MORE COMFORTABLE TO FASTEN THE CHEMISE ABOUT THE WAIST WITH RIBBONS.

"For now," I said, "I'll surely learn just what she thinks about me. And when she knows I know her heart No more she'll dare to flout me." "Sunday," I read, "that tiresome 'Ted' called twice today already. I hate the very sight of him." "Also," my name is "Teddy."

pens that this choice depends less on personal taste than on the becoming qualities of the different meshes. For instance, a woman with brilliant coloring and large eyes may wear a veil heavily incrustured with spots, while one possessing rather delicate features and a dainty pink and white skin should select a mesh that emphasizes rather than conceals her good points.

THE LAST TOUCH BEFORE ASSUMING THE GOWN IS A GENTLE PAT WITH THE POWDER BOX.

freshness of complexion that needs no artificial aid. To some, small spots are becoming, while others revel in a few larger ones that resemble beauty patches.

Black and white is running a close race with all black, and for variety there are charming zig-zag effects, disks, tiny diamonds and even crosses.

Diagonal Squares Are Popular.

Diagonal squares have had unusual popularity, and they still continue to find favor with almost all women. There is something about the mesh that is not only chic, but makes it look extremely well over any face.

Women who are just between the blond and brunette type should be very careful in their choice of the black and white combination. Nine out of ten styles impart a grayish appearance to the hair that adds years and dull gold tresses and deep blue eyes become a vision rarely beautiful when half screened behind these opal hues.

Chantilly laces in both black and white are very charming for afternoon veils, and, besides, they are so costly that they will never become common.

The prettiest way to wear these veils is to have them draped on a broad-brimmed hat, with the fancy border just touching the shoulders, while at the back the ends are first caught with a jeweled pin and are then permitted to fall loosely to the waist.

French women like to wear the meshed veils to just cover the tip of the nose, and naturally we are not slow to follow their lead. However, not many women find the style really becoming, for it requires features bordering on the Grecian type to make the short veil truly successful.

Music

A SINGER in a Coblenz opera house has brought suit against her manager because he declared in public that she had a voice that sounded as though it came out of a "blechtopf." When the case came to trial the attorney of the defendant declared that the remark was not libelous as no one had ever heard a voice coming from a "blechtopf" and consequently no one was in a position to judge whether or not such a voice was bad. The court itself could not decide whether a voice of the foregoing description was or was not effective in a lyric scene and the manager was acquitted. The clever attorney who invented his defense must have had one or two Solomons among his ancestors. Musical matters are at a standstill in Fort Worth at present. Quite a number of the local musicians are away and those remaining seem to be quite busy teaching. The coming season promises some brilliant and first-class attractions including, probably, the Cecelia Shay Opera company and Gabriowitsch, the famous Russian pianist, who scored such a tremendous success in America a few seasons ago. The Mascagni Opera company is also booking a southern tour and Fort Worth may be fortunate enough to have an opportunity of hearing the popular opera "Cavalleria Rusticana" conducted by the composer. There seems to be a general rumour in London organ circles over the fact that E. H. Lemare, a popular musician did not get the degree of Musical Doctor. We hasten to congratulate Mr. Lemare, says the Musical Courier, in Germany it carries some weight, but in America the title of Musical Doctor is on a par with that of "professor." The latter is usually assumed by corn doctors, magicians and men of such callings. Concerning music being taught in the public schools, or should it be studied as a specialty, could it not be said that every study taught in the public schools—save perhaps the three 12's—is a specialty? Instruction is largely elementary in most of school studies, yet this elementary instruction in many branches is always useful in pursuing any vocation and enjoying an understanding of the things of this world. This is an age of specialties. Men and women must confine themselves to certain direct lines of work—specialties—to accomplish great results. But a child cannot well, at four or five or six years, select for itself—neither can its parents—the avocation which it will pursue in adult life. Is it not wise and necessary then to teach the rudiments and give elementary instruction of many things during grammar school courses for all the scholars, that each may choose for itself some specialty later? In addition, one in the professions must know a little of everything and a great deal of one thing. For instance, a lawyer must know the law well, but to be successful in his profession he must know a great many other things also. Of the nervousness of which even the greatest artists declare themselves almost powerless to resist Campanari says: "Don't believe any artist who tells you he is not nervous, or else decide he is not an artist. I never knew one worth the name who could be self-possessed and unmoved at the beginning of a performance," while Mme. NAMES FOR NEW TRAIN

ARE AFTER THE ROCK ISLAND'S HUNDRED

GUESSES COME HERE

Dallas Correspondents Used Words Forbidden in Contest — Sulphur Springs, Texas, Man Says "The Rocky Flyer," or "The Rocky Star" Would Do

Letters are pouring in to the general passenger office of the Rock Island's Texas lines responding to the contest inaugurated by the road ten days ago to secure an appropriate name for the new California train, which goes into service in November.

A half dozen letters were received by General Passenger Agent Firth this morning. All had been addressed to him in Chicago and forwarded back to Texas, from whence they originally came. In nearly every instance the guesser overlooked the vital rule of the contest which excludes from use the words, "special," "limited" and "express."

Several inquiries came from the Indian Territory, Dallas and Cleburne, to know the number of guesses each person could have, and the time limit of the contest. No replies will be considered after September 1, and all should be forwarded to John Sebastian, passenger traffic manager of the Rock Island, Chicago.

Some Names Suggested Two of the guesses came from Dallas, one being "The Golden Gate Limited," and the other "The Colonial Express." From over at Sulphur Springs, Texas, came a response naming the new train "The Rocky Flyer," which the writer said was expressive providing the train didn't get stuck in East Texas.

This would be all right, Mr. Firth says, were it not that the Rock Island does not run through East Texas, and the train which the company hopes to christen will make a straight shoot for the Pacific coast from Chicago, using the El Paso short line, via that Mexican gateway.

RAILROADS IN A BIG WAR

Battle of Titanic Financial Interests Is Now On

A great battle of financial Titans is on, in which the wealth of the contending parties is measured beyond the billion mark, and in which the first gun fired was the order for the Western Union to remove its lines from the Pennsylvania east of Pittsburgh two months ago. It is a fight between the Goulds and the Pennsylvania interests.

The forces in the coming war are marshalled about as follows: With George Gould are allied John D. and William Rockefeller, E. H. Harriman, Jacob Schiff, Senator W. H. Clark, Henry C. Frick, the Moore Brothers, to control Rock Island, and William Henry Smith, who jointly with John D. Rockefeller, is the largest holder of St. Paul stock, Russell Sage and Kuhn, Loeb & Co. are also with the Gould interests, as are the Mercantile Trust company, the Equitable Life and the National City bank.

The principal factors in the Pennsylvania combination are A. J. Cassatt, William K. Vanderbilt, Clement A. Griscom of the American line; J. Pierpont Morgan, Marvin Huggitt, the Cramps' Shipbuilding company and the Postal Telegraph company, with their various interests; George F. Baker and the First National bank and National Bank of Commerce.

SHREVEPORT AS A GATEWAY

Texas and Pacific and Queen and Crescent Using It.

The prominence of Shreveport as a Mississippi gateway for transcontinental passenger business has become more apparent since the efforts made by the Rock Island through the Choctaw, Oklahoma and Gulf to route passengers through Memphis. For several months the Queen and Crescent in connection with the Texas and Pacific has had a fast schedule between Fort Worth and the southeast through Shreveport, and while nothing has been said publicly Chattanooga, Atlanta and other Southeastern points may be reached twelve hours earlier than heretofore. The east end of the business is handled by the Southern Railway.

PASSENGER RATE WAR ENDS

No Further Reduction Made to Chicago and St. Louis

The railroad passenger rate war on business to St. Louis and Chicago ended last night with no further cut from that made Friday. One way tickets to St. Louis cost but $10, the round trip $14, while the round trip to Chicago sold at $17.

The amount of business secured at the reduced rate was disappointing, railroad men say, and while the movement would have been good under ordinary conditions, it was not flattering at those figures. It is believed the rate cutting is at an end, especially for the present.

George Gould is Coming Out West George Gould is slated to be in Denver during the latter part of this month, making an inspection of his Colorado properties, and it is thought will come through Texas in returning East. The Denver papers deny that he is to succeed E. T. Jeffery as president of the Rio Grande system.

THE MOKI SNAKE DANCE

The Indians Will Pray For Rain in Arizona

The Santa Fe has information that the famous Moki snake dance given by Pueblo Indians in the mountains of Arizona will take place August 26. It is a weird ceremony and a prayer for rain, continuing for nine days. During last year the main ceremony which usually occurs on the last day and when live rattle snakes are handled, was witnessed by more than 3,000 tourists.

ROAD IS TO CHANGE DEPOTS

Frisco System to Begin Using Hemphill Street Station

Beginning this week the Frisco system will operate the local mixed trains on the Red River, Texas and Southern, and the Fort Worth and Rio Grande from the new freight depot on Hemphill street instead of from the Adams street station as at present. On the Rio Grande the train leaves for Brownwood at 9:30 p. m. and arrives at 6 a. m. On the Red River, Texas and Southern the train leaves for Sherman at 6 a. m. and arrives at 7:35 p. m. The date of this change will be announced later.

NEWS ALONG TEXAS & PACIFIC

What Geo. E. Nies Saw and Heard on Trip to El Paso

George E. Nies returned yesterday from a trip to El Paso, where he went to meet his family who had been in Arizona for some time, in the Grand Canyon country. He is very enthusiastic over the experience of his trip. He says that on the night of his arrival at El Paso they had a very heavy rain. The plains country is said by old settlers to have never looked better than at the present time. The recent heavy rains have caused a rank growth of vegetation and grass is very high.

The Texas and Pacific has straightened out all the breaks in its line caused by the recent floods and yesterday the train came through on schedule time. All the lines in that section have suffered severely from washouts due to the unprecedented rains, and the night Mr. Nies left El Paso the Rock Island suffered another, which could be speedily repaired, however.

At Kent, El Paso county, a place composed simply of the railroad station, a man brought a wagon load of delicious peaches to the train that had been raised by irrigation in the mountains a short distance away. The irrigated district, said Mr. Nies, looks prosperous, big grapes and big every other kind of fruit being in evidence on all sides. It was said at Barstow that the gardeners there lost the sum of $25,000 on cantaloupes alone on account of the suspension of traffic during the floods.

At Midland the fact that four sections of land had been opened to settlement excited some comment, and the green fields of growing crops could be seen from the train. One man had a car load of stock hogs at the depot that he had shipped in and was transferring by wagons to his ranch, showing that he was figuring on the Fort Worth market and its packing houses.

The Young Men's Christian Association building at Big Springs, says Mr. Nies, is a fine structure, well adapted to its purposes. It is beautifully finished and equipped. It suffered some damage also from the big flood that covered the town.

At El Paso the preliminary work looking toward a union station is making some headway; estimates are being made and the matter of location is being considered.

Mr. Nies met Terry King at El Paso, that now being his home, and says that his health has improved considerably since his residence there.

Jules Kruttschnitt, vice-president and general manager for the Southern Pacific company, was here Friday, en route to California via Denver.

F. E. Dietrich, treasurer for the Rock Island's Texas lines, who has been confined with a spell of fever for a week, was reported much better yesterday afternoon.

Has Views of Big Springs Flood John Ward, superintendent for the Texas and Pacific with headquarters in Big Springs, was here yesterday for the first time since the Big Springs flood. He carried with him to Dallas several views of the high water, and showing box cars standing in the company's yards almost submerged.

OLD MAN LOSES MONEY

Thieves Make a Touch in Happy Hollow

An old man living alone in a tent in Happy Hollow on west Seventh street, was robbed yesterday about 11:30 o'clock. While the old man was away at a nearby grocery the thief entered his tent and robbed his trunk of a purse containing $10 in money, a note for $40, besides taking a Bible and many other trinkets. He thinks a well dressed negro seen hanging about the neighborhood committed the deed.

NEXT SATURDAY FOR PRIMARIES

REPUBLICANS FIX DAY FOR SELECTING COUNTY DELEGATES

CONVENTION AUG. 26

Nothing Said About Chairman During Committee Meeting — E. H. R. Green Sends Circulars to Party Affiliators with View of Learning Situation

The Republican county executive committee held a meeting in city council chamber yesterday afternoon and named Saturday, August 23 as the date for the county primaries, and Tuesday, August 26, as the date for the county convention to name delegates to the state convention which meets in Fort Worth, September 9.

There were only thirteen of the forty-three members of the committee present. They were: First ward, N. Johnson; Second ward, John L. Ward, by J. L. T. Carter; Third ward, Hiram McGar; Fourth ward, H. V. Chamberlain; Sixth ward, A. N. Jack; Seventh ward, Thomas Bush; Eighth ward, R. C. Houston, Jr.; Ninth ward, C. M. Cobb; Arlington, J. L. Carter; Kenedale, C. W. Wilson; Smithfield, O. Ruffield; Keller, J. M. T. Pipkin, and Johnson Station, D. R. Faust.

There was a sprinkling of party members present including Postmaster Burroughs, and Frank B. Stanley, member of the state executive committee. In the absence of County Chairman L. M. Barkley, J. L. Carter representing Arlington was made temporary chairman and Robert C. Houston acted as permanent secretary.

It was decided that the primaries in the several wards in town would be held at 8 o'clock p. m. next Saturday, the time of gathering in the county precincts being left to the pleasure of the chairman. Representation Is Fixed The representation for seats in the county convention was fixed at one for the organization, one delegate, and one for every twenty-five votes cast for President McKinley in the election of 1900. For every fractional part of twenty-five votes one delegate will also be allowed.

Hiram McGar was in favor of reconsidering action in fixing the time the primary conventions should be called, believing it would originate contests when the state convention met. His motion to reconsider was defeated. It was then agreed that the county convention would assemble at noon on August 26, and at 10 o'clock a. m. the executive committee would meet to arrange rules and convention procedure.

Robert Houston was in favor of the committee arranging as much as possible for the state convention. He favored the appointment of a rooming committee to take care of the delegates. Inasmuch as the committee's function ends with the convening of the state convention, the matter was left open. A committee of three consisting of A. N. Jack, W. Z. Manchester and Robert Houston was appointed to secure a hall and make arrangements for the county convention. They secured the city hall auditorium, and will announce arrangements some time during the week.

In adopting a resolution of sympathy for Chairman Barkley who has been critically ill, introduced by A. N. Jack, the committee adjourned. Nothing Said About Chairman Nothing was said during the committee's session about what the county convention's attitude might be over state chairman. It is known Chairman Lyon has a large personal following in the state here, but there may be an attempt to stampede the convention for E. H. R. Green. The movement is believed to be originating among the negro element of the party, aided by quite a number of whites. It was hinted strongly yesterday that a few caucuses were on tap for this week, when a line up would be made on chairman's endorsement.

United States Marshal Green of Dallas was here yesterday, not in politics, but on matters connected with his office. He stopped for a few minutes in front of the city hall where the committeemen were congregating, and said that Dallas county would be found in favor of Chairman Lyon for reelection.

Dr. Acheson, of Denison, the latest of the candidates for chairman does not seem to be mustering much strength. He is practically unknown in Fort Worth, and it is understood is finding little favor in Dallas. Terrell of San Antonio is getting some endorsements in South Texas.

Green Is Anxious to Know

Green is anxious to know where he stands before the state gathering, and to that end has sought the pulse of Republicans over the state. Copies of a circular mailed from his headquarters reached Fort Worth yesterday. They bear four questions which are: First—Did your county convention endorse President Roosevelt? Second—Does your county favor a new party for congress? Third—Does your county favor an alliance between the Green-Hawley people or between the Green-Lyon people? Fourth—Is your delegation instructed for state chairman, and for whom?

Those who have kept up with Green's movements say he has gone to Washington to meet National Committee Chairman Hawley for a conference, and which may result in the hatchet being buried in accordance with a "note" sent from Washington to members attending the Waco conference a few days ago. It is not unlikely that Hawley will see to the withdrawal of Terrell from the chairmanship race.

Roosevelt Looking This Way

President Roosevelt is not satisfied with the political situation in the state and it is understood that he is pleased with the work of Chairman

Lyon. He has recently ignored some of Lyon's recommendations and it is understood has intimated that a change in the chairmanship would please him.

The president is under the impression rightly or wrongly, that Lyon is entirely too friendly with John Grant, lately removed as marshal of the eastern district.

It is asserted that Hawley, Green and Lyon have made an agreement to divide the patronage of the state and thus reach a plan for harmonious action. It is very doubtful if the president will sanction such an understanding.

The announcement of Dr. Acheson, that he is a candidate for the state chairmanship, may furnish a basis for a new deal. The president knows Dr. Acheson and has the greatest confidence in him. It is probable that he will urge some plan of reorganization of the party that will recognize Dr. Acheson in the party councils.

ABOUT BOOKS FOR THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Booksellers Getting Anxious to Know Where They Are at on the Proposition — Some Changes and Additions Noted

Book sellers are getting anxious about the studies which are to govern during the term of 1902-3 in the public schools. So far they are not exactly clear on the list, but have been informed that there will not be a great many changes from the old regime. One of the principals of the ward schools is preparing a list under instructions of the school board's superintendent and committee from the board of trustees, which will in all probability be submitted to the dealers during the week. So far noted, the changes amount to additions, and do not materially interfere with the stocks on hand. For instance, Tilden's commercial geography will be added to the last half of the eighth grade.

Williams & Rogers Commercial Arithmetic will be adopted for the eighth grade. Baldwin's seventh year reader will be put in the seventh grade. Paulbert's Scientific Knowledge will be added to the eighth grade. Benson's Practical Speller and definer will be dropped from the ninth, tenth and eleventh grades.

Other studies will be dropped or carried forward to other grades, at the option of the superintendent. Instead of the 32-leaf copy-book used last year in the first, second, third and fourth grades, there will be used the state-adopted slant. No copy-book will be used in other grades, but a writing book of 40 leaves.

White's educational series of music books, Nos. 1, 2 and 3, will be used in grades 3, 4, 5, 6 and 7. Book No. 4 has not yet been decided upon.

Montgomery's Beginner's and American history, formerly in use, may be cut out.

As to history, there is much discussion. Pressure is being brought to bear to have cut out the history used formerly and adopt a different one. The book sellers are especially anxious over this, as each hope to have a supply of whatever is used in time to supply his customers.

RAPID RIDES FOR FOUR

LIVELY RUNAWAYS YESTERDAY ONLY ONE MAN WAS INJURED

Three men, said to be Lee Haywood, Harry Jones and Louis Hart, were in an exciting runaway at Throckmorton street and Jennings avenue, near Thirteenth street yesterday afternoon. The cause was a mule team which ran into their rig, frightening the horse, which also started to the nucleus, the buggy was overturned falling on Hart. The other two escaped without injury. Hart was picked up with a badly skinned face and was taken to the home of Mrs. Goff, Thirteenth and Throckmorton streets. He refused to send for a physician and was later taken home in a buggy by his companions. Those who saw him, said he appeared to have been injured internally. The men are all said to be residents of Arlington Heights.

Another lively runaway in which three horses attached to a hay-rack, figured, occurred on Monroe street but resulted in no damage. Two of the horses were hitched to the wagon and the third was tied to one of the team. The three ran a long way, but at no time were they out of complete control of the driver, as regards direction, though he did not succeed in stopping them till some distance beyond the central fire station. The only incident of the run, was the narrow escape of a young lady who was standing in the middle of the street when the horses were running towards her. With considerable presence of mind she threw her parasol to the sidewalk, and jumping back, saved herself from injury.

IS A RESIDENT OF FORT WORTH

PRESIDENT WAPLES OF BOARD OF TRADE HOME AGAIN

INTENDS TO RESIGN

Been to Washington Where He Presented Fort Worth's Invitation to President Roosevelt to Visit Here in Fall—Vacation in New York

"I am a resident of Fort Worth. My home is here, my principle business is here, and I regret exceedingly, the conditions which caused these facts to be questioned," was the expression given by Paul Waples, president of the Waples-Platter Grocery company, and president of the Fort Worth Board of Trade to the Telegram yesterday afternoon.

"I shall, however, at the next meeting of the directory," continued Mr. Waples, "tender my resignation as president of the Fort Worth Board of Trade, and as a member of the Board. I feel this is due since my loyalty to Fort Worth is questioned, and that at a time when I was absent on public business for the town."

Mr. Waples returned Friday night from the east where he had been combining business with pleasure. He left Dallas with a special party of Texans some weeks ago for Washington where he, as president of the Fort Worth Board of Trade, joined representatives from every other important city in Texas in extending invitations to President Roosevelt to pay the state a visit during the fall. The party was joined by United States Senator Culbertson who added a personal invitation.

Remained for Waples to Act. During the absence of Mr. Waples there has been measured criticism of his official position, and the charge freely made that he was a resident of Dallas in which place the Waples-Platter Grocery Co. recently established a branch of its Fort Worth business.

A short time prior to the departure of the party from Dallas a general invitation had been extended Texas towns to join in securing President Roosevelt's presence here in the fall. The Board of Trade had written a letter to Washington. Business matters were such that Mr. Waples requested a number of Fort Worth people to make the trip for Fort Worth in his stead, and all of whom, it appears, were much in a similar position, and at the last moment expressed their regrets. Mr. Waples then left his office and journeyed to Washington.

After a brief visit there he went to New York for a vacation. Board of Trade Important to Town It is with a feeling of regret that I shall take the action indicated at the next session of the Board of Trade directory," continued Mr. Waples, "but not with regret for the time I have spent in working for the interest of Fort Worth and the organization. Commercial organizations are important functions in the conduct of a town's business. True it is that you cannot lay your finger directly upon any one thing accomplished, probably, its force is there nevertheless, and a town without one is surely slow to progress."

"People should not lose sight of the fact that the directory while only an adjunct of the main body is important for the reason matters vitally interesting the town which supports the commercial body are presented, and then a line is thrown out for every enterprise that is calculated to do a town good. In the Fort Worth Board of Trade, I feel a pride, having assisted in its organization, served as its first president, and would not be holding that position now were it not it was ended me at the last annual meeting. I only took it then agreeing to serve temporarily or until a permanent head could be decided upon. Fort Worth is my home. I feel a pride in its advancements and an interest in its endeavors. In all the time of my association with the firm's Dallas house, I have occupied my apartments here save probably a half dozen nights."

Roosevelt Likes Texas

Regarding the trip to Washington, and invitations extended President Roosevelt, Mr. Waples said: "The president expressed his appreciation of the many invitations accorded him, and agreed if conditions would permit and they were then very favorable—he would pay the state a visit this fall. He knows much of Texas, and expressed a fond desire to revisit San Antonio where his Rough Rider regiment was mobilized and organized. Details of the itinerary are to be arranged by Mr. Cortleyou, the president's private secretary, and I feel sure if he sets foot in Texas he will come to Fort Worth, and see real evidence of industrial development of which Texas boasts so much."

NOT READY TO RESIGN

CITY ATTORNEY WILLIAMS' POSITION STATED

If Elected He Will Not Have to Vacate Office Till Qualifying for the Legislature in January

"I think it is understood by a majority of the people in the city, at least," said City Attorney Williams to the Telegram, "that in case of my election I will not resign from the office of city attorney until time for qualifying in January next." The answer was in reply to a question as to how soon he expected to resign, and the chances as to who would likely be his successor.

There is no need of my resigning till I have to, and maybe I won't want to resign one job till I see which one is the best," continued Mr. Williams, jokingly. "Seriously, though, when the time comes to resign, I'll resign, though it is far too early to say anything about the matter at all."

Since the nomination of Mr. Williams for member of the legislature on the Democratic ticket, from the 78th district, there has been a deal of conjecture as to when he would resign from the office of city attorney and, it is said, several of the anxious ones have even been promoting their own candidacy in anticipation of the far-away event. Even after the election, and there is little doubt of Mr. Williams' choice by the people of this district, it will not be necessary for him to qualify for the legislature till January next. Meantime he can continue to hold the office of city attorney and look after the city's interests in the Walker damage suit, viaduct matters, and other cases that are coming up this fall.

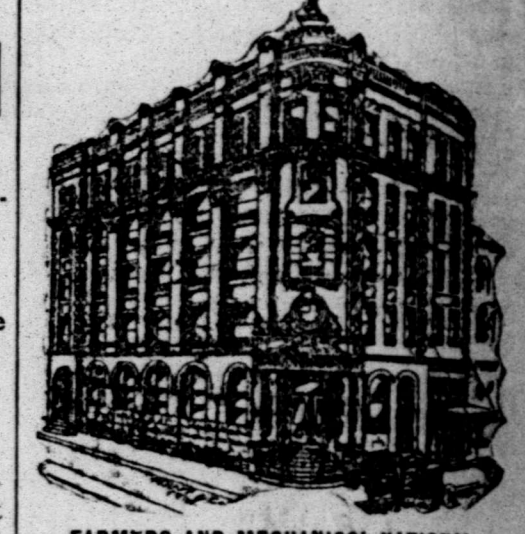

Owing to the absence of two of the prominent members of the new street railway company, and delay in securing a charter, the petition for a franchise was not presented at the city council last night by Colonel J. T. Voss. It is understood that it will come up at the next council meeting.

Sermon for Non-Church Goers

This message is intended to reach non-church-going masses and be an incentive to form the habit of church attendance.

Sin is the great burden-maker for the human life. Sin it is that enervated men in the days of old, and sin it is that holds them in bondage and burdens them now as does nothing else.

Many young men and many young women are drawn into sin by the promise of good fellowship. The devil tells them that sinners are more friendly and more given to good fellowship than are Christians and so like the Prodigal they give themselves over to friends who are by no means steadfast when the day of trouble comes.

But he was greatly astonished to receive notes back from all of them, giving the very best reasons and excuses why not one of them could farm until his exuberance of spirits gave him a penny.

To all such burdened hearts, who have sought happiness and satisfaction in sin and found only disappointment, Christ comes offering a divine rest of soul. St. Augustine tells us that one day in Milan, when his sins burdened him until he could stand no longer, he went out alone into the garden behind his house and threw himself down in great trouble of soul.

Fort Worth beat Paris yesterday by every rule of the game and won handsily by a score of 12 to 3. Never was there serious danger of the local team losing the game and the only time the score was close enough to cause some little feeling of disquiet or a possible fear that the game might be won by Paris was in the fifth inning with the score 5 to 3 in favor of the home team.

LOCALS WIN FROM PARIS

FORT WORTH TAKES GAME IN SCORE OF 12 TO 3

LATHAM WAS WILD

Thebo, a Visitor, Put Out of the Game for Disrupting - Dallas Loses to Corsicana - Double Header on for Today

Fort Worth beat Paris yesterday by every rule of the game and won handsily by a score of 12 to 3.

Never was there serious danger of the local team losing the game and the only time the score was close enough to cause some little feeling of disquiet or a possible fear that the game might be won by Paris was in the fifth inning with the score 5 to 3 in favor of the home team.

Latham, who is a very good outfielder, was on the slab for the visitors. He was not in pitching form yesterday and was as wild as kildie.

The feature of the game was the excellent fielding of Walsh in center. He has six outs to his credit, some of them good running catches, and he also appears to advantage in the batting column.

Fort Worth started in the business of the game, making runs, in a single hit being made. Latham passed four to first and an error and a sacrifice, aided by some stolen bases, tallied three runs over the inning was over.

In the third Cartwright, the Fort Worth amateur, who played at short, was given his base. He went to center on the fumble of McKay's hit by Erwin and home on the wild throw of Aiken over Rogers' head.

In the eighth Welter made a three-bagger in between right and center and scored on O'Donnell's sacrifice. In the ninth White led off with a single over second, Walsh bunted to sacrifice if necessary, and beat out the ball. Flaherty, Wolfe and Cartwright hit the ball, the latter two for two bases each and before the last man was put out five runs had been scored.

Dugan and Latham made the runs for Paris in the fourth on two hits and two errors. Russell made the last run for his side in the fifth. He was sent to first on balls, went to third on the fly Wolfe dropped, and scored on Dugan's short fly to right. The score by innings: 0 3 0 1 0 1 1 1 5 -12

FRIDAY'S BALL GAME. A rather small crowd found plenty of entertainment at the ball park Friday afternoon, in watching a game as full of surprises as Aiken in Wonderland.

With a score of 12 to 3 in the seventh Fort Worth romped around the diamond for 5 runs, the doughty Frenchmen rallied and did the trick one better in the eighth, making 6 scores. The final score was 15 to 12 in favor of Paris. Chetham was the pitcher for Paris the first seven innings, but he was replaced at the beginning of the eighth by Ahorn. Had he remained, the score would probably have been 26 to 15 in favor of Fort Worth.

The score by innings: Fort Worth 12 3 0 1 0 4 5 0 1 -12 Paris 0 0 0 2 1 0 0 0 0 -3

Double Header for Today. The same clubs will play today and there will be a double header, but only the usual single admission fee will be charged. When Fort Worth was last at Paris rain caused the postponement of a game and that was transferred here and will be played off today with the regular schedule game. Burns and Jarvis will pitch for Fort Worth and Paris will present her two crack pitchers, Ahorn and Russell. It was to save one of these pitchers that Latham was put in to pitch yesterday.

Dallas Is Beaten. Dallas, Aug. 16.-Corsicana won from Dallas this afternoon in a game without a redeeming feature. Errors were made at all stages and both pitchers were hampered all over the lot.

The Himalaya record is held by Sir Martin Conway, who climbed the Pioneer peak, 21,000 feet high, ten years ago.

THE RACES UNFINISHED

CLOSE CONTESTS AT THE KITE TRACK YESTERDAY

Pretty Trotting Match in Nearly 2:20 Gait - Darkness Caused Horsemen to Leave Grounds

A heat in the trotting match, in which Ashland came under the wire but a half length ahead of Bob Guy, in 1:12 for the half mile, was the most sensational of the events at the kite track yesterday afternoon.

The races were two pacing events, one trotting and one running race. Though having but two entries, the last caused the most enthusiasm among the crowd. Burns' Katie McMurray won the 3-8 mile easily from Ben Evans' Bob Fear in 38 1-2 seconds.

The second pace was practically unfinished because of the darkness, though first money went to Woods, whose "Star" got two firsts and two seconds out of the four heats paced. Deacon Post, owned by McMurray, and White's "Kid" broke even for second money, each having gotten two thirds, one second and one first.

WEEK ON STOCK

New York, Aug. 16.-Gratification over the country's brilliant crop prospects and anxiety as to the effect on money rates of the imminent demand from the interior for currency, have divided attention on the stock exchange this week.

Heavy offerings of sterling loan bills have broken the exchange market and put a check to the gold export movement.

Many rumors have continued prevalent of intended railroad combination and absorptions, and speculative pools have been active in several quarters of the market.

The sailing for home of J. P. Morgan has also made the occasion for speculation based on rumored financial projects believed to await his coming.

COAL TO GO TO $14 A TON

HIGH FIGURE LOOKED FOR IN ANTHRACITE

Yards Are Empty and If Strike Continues for a Few More Weeks Record Breaker Price Is Sure

New York, Aug. 16.-Anthracite at $14 a ton is in prospect here according to one of a firm of miners and dealers. This is of course, contingent on a continuation of the strike for a few weeks more.

All the coal that has been hoarded up is practically cleaned up and those who happen to have small stocks or favored customers, it is impossible to fix now a price. Anthracite sells simply for what it will bring. It is luxury and is only bought by people who must have it, and who have the money to pay for it.

The representative of another large firm, "I went along the line of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad and found all the yards empty. There was not even coal dust in them. At other places I found barges laden with anthracite. What they carried might seem a large quantity to laymen, but it would be only a drop in the bucket as far as the needs of New York are concerned.

Presidents of the coal carrying companies will not undertake to predict when the strike will be over. They are inclined to extend the probable time when it will end from September to October 1.

A DOCTOR CURED OF MORPHINE HABIT

Dr. H. L. Sullivan, a prominent physician of Ruth, N. C., was cured of the morphine habit by the British Medical Institute after he had made many attempts with other cures and failed.

Dr. Sullivan, in a letter to the Institute, writes as follows: "It is now over a year since you cured me of the morphine habit, and since that time I have never taken a dose nor had the slightest desire for the drug. For five years I have been using morphine in large quantities and had made more than a dozen attempts to be cured and had always failed. Your treatment is without a doubt the best and easiest treatment ever discovered, and I am satisfied that you can cure the worst cases with ease."

Dr. Sullivan has given permission to use his name and will verify the above statement. The British Doctors also treat all forms of chronic diseases, including male and female weakness, catarrh and catarrhal deafness, cancer, goiter, all blood and skin diseases and all diseases of the rectum with new and up-to-date methods.

HUMAN BODIES PRESERVED

Human remains recently unearthed at Giza, Egypt, consist of a continuous series extending backward over at least 8,000 years. The bodies are so well preserved owing to the dryness of the atmosphere in the region and to the perfection of interment that not only can the hair, the nails, the ligaments, be made out, but also the muscles of the brain also is preserved and the climax has been reached in two cases where the eyes with the lens in good condition are present. There are now unearthed a series of later prehistoric graves ranging throughout the first fifteen dynasties, others of the sixteenth and yet others of the Ptolemaic and early and recent Coptic periods.

RAILROADS ARE AT WAR

GOULDS AND PENNSYLVANIA SYSTEM ARE IN CLASH

The principal railroads in the Gould system are the Missouri Pacific, St. Louis and Southwestern, Texas and Pacific, Denver and Rio Grande, Rio Grande Western, Western Maryland, Wabash, Wheeling and Lake Erie and International and Great Northern. Friendly to the Gould interests are the Chicago and North Western, Rock Island, Union and Southern Pacific, Missouri, Kansas and Texas and Kansas City Southern, the last two being controlled by John D. Rockefeller. The Western Union Telegraph Company and the Pacific Express Company have also been drawn into the fight.

Allied with Pennsylvania in the fight are Baltimore and Ohio, Norfolk and Western, Chesapeake and Ohio, Reading, and for the time being, Pennsylvania are New York Central, Lake Shore and Michigan Southern, Michigan Central, Chicago and North Western, Northern Pacific, Burlington and Great Northern, with their subsidiary and allied lines.

The great steel interests, or, rather, the Pittsburg faction of the steel trade, are friendly to the Goulds. Andrew Carnegie is behind them in the fight, because of his long antipathy to the Pennsylvania railroad and its management. The greatest thorn at the present time in the side of the Pennsylvania railroad is the fact that the Wabash has a contract with the United States steel corporation, which still has many years to run, by which the Carnegie company agrees to give 1,000,000 tons annually of freight to the Wabash in consideration of its building into Pittsburg.

Other eastern roads are involved in the war, and William K. Vanderbilt has marshaled sufficient strength against the Goulds to block several of their movements. The grand result which the latter has been aiming at, however, the control of a transcontinental line from tidewater to tidewater, has been consummated. When it was discovered what this plan was, Cassatt warned Mr. Gould that the control of the Western Union Telegraph company with the Pennsylvania lines east of Pittsburg expired in 1902, and that unless he gave up his idea of building a competing line from Warrenton to the seaboard the Western Union would be ousted from its valuable franchise on the Pennsylvania railroad.

In the meantime Mr. Gould was continuing the development of his plan. His Fuller syndicate had made an offer to the city of Baltimore for Western Maryland and had practically had the offer accepted by the Baltimore city administration before the Pennsylvania railroad realized what was going on. Every possible political influence was brought to bear by Baltimore and Ohio, which practically controls the state of Maryland, and Pennsylvania, its ally, to prevent the consummation of the deal. But George Gould was finally successful. They secured the road and a franchise to build a connecting line from Cherry Run, Md., to Pittsburg. This will complete his great continental system from tidewater to tidewater. The line, therefore, will consist of the following roads: Western Maryland, from Baltimore to Pittsburg; Wheeling and Lake Erie, from Toledo to St. Louis; Missouri Pacific, from St. Louis to Pueblo; Denver and Rio Grande, from Pueblo to Grand Junction; Rio Grande Western, from Grand Junction to Ogden; and Central Pacific, from Ogden to San Francisco.

What Mr. Gould most desires now is an entrance into New York. It is generally believed that he has his eye on Reading, and that J. P. Morgan, notwithstanding his ostensible friendship for Pennsylvania interests, would be more than willing to sell Reading to Mr. Gould if he could get his price. Reading is the natural outlet for the Gould system into the metropolis. The Gould roads could easily tap it at Harrisburg, Pa., which is not far from the lines of the Western Maryland system at Hagerstown.

BUFFALO BILL'S WILD WEST SHOW IS COMING

One of the Finest of Exhibitions Will be Given Early in the Month of October.

The genuine, original and only real Wild West, organized and conducted by Colonel W. F. Cody (Buffalo Bill) is announced to appear here on Friday, October 10.

Colonel Cody is universally known and very highly regarded for the splendidly effective and heroic work he did, not only as the chief of scouts with the army in various Indian campaigns, but for his energy, courage, versatility, fertility of resource and trustworthiness in practically every phase of life necessarily experienced by the frontiersman in the days when savagery was struggling against civilization all along the Western border. He has had the genius and ability to perfect an accurate presentation of the salient features of that life, employing in it several hundred men, red and white, all having had personal knowledge of the conditions of existence they re-enacted before the public. With these he has combined a great number of other typical representatives of the "Rough Riders" of Europe and this country, whose uniforms, accomplishments and exhibitions are very interesting, "life-savers" who make a thrillingly realistic exhibit, and much more that makes it altogether the finest of all shows.

In the assembling of Buffalo Bill's array of Rough Riders in the vast arena of the Wild West, the first to appear on the scene are a great number Sioux and Ogalalla Indians in holiday paint and feathers. Band by band, they gallop in, each following its chief. When they are all lined up in place a queer little procession enters—Indian squaws and children, some lads proud of their ability to ride small ponies, others as papooses strapped to their mothers' backs. Their horses go at a walk and the squaws sing a strange shrill, monotonous Indian song. The red warriors' faces light up with smiles and their voices rise in a very din of sharp yelps, expressive of pleasure and greeting. It is a pretty bit of business and perfectly natural.

The session of the city council Friday night was one of much interest to its members, and the result of their deliberations was, as well of interest to the citizens. Questions involving thousands of dollars were temporarily disposed of, necessitating nearly three hours' discussion. All the members were present except Messrs. Lehane and Newby who are out of the city. Those of the most importance were the decisions to establish fire stations and companies in the Seventh and Eighth wards, the sustaining of the veto of the mayor upon the settlement of a $5000 tax debt for $2000, purchasing of new and additional boilers for the waterworks department, the ordering of Main street cleaned with water at night, temporarily setting the viaduct discussion on account of delay, and last but by no means least, the action taken, upon recommendation by the health committee, with reference to the county's liability on the infectious disease question. All of these propositions are given in detail in the proceedings which follow:

Routine Proceedings

Frank Garrett was, upon recommendation of the finance committee, allowed $8.16 rebate in taxes paid.

Claims against the city amounting to $6783.22 were allowed.

Fire Insurance Schedule

The special committee appointed to readjust the insurance carried on city property reported, having attended to that duty, stating it had cut down in some and raised in some, instructing the city auditor to divide said insurance among the city agencies in so far as the best interests of the city demanded. The auditor was further instructed to renew all policies for a period of five years, thus saving two years' premium. The schedule was as follows:

- First Ward School, $5000 on building and $1000 on furniture.
- Second Ward School, $6,450 on building and $1000 on furniture.
- Third Ward School, $4,500 on building, and $1000 on furniture; colored, same amounts.
- Fourth Ward School, $5000 on building and $500 on furniture.
- Fifth Ward school, $6,500 on building and $1000 on furniture.
- Sixth Ward School, $5000 on building and $500 on furniture.
- Seventh Ward School, $7,500 on building and $500 on furniture.
- Eighth Ward School, $2000 on building and $500 on furniture.
- Ninth Ward School, $5,500 on building and $500 on furniture.
- High school, $25,000 on building and $1000 on furniture.
- City Hall, $20,000 on building and $3000 on furniture.

For New Fire Stations

The fire committee reported on Fire Chief Maddox's estimate furnished upon instructions on the cost of and establishment of two new fire companies and the removal of No. 6 station, and recommended that the city secure lots in the Eighth and Ninth wards and build stations on same immediately, also that a lot be secured in the Fifth Ward and that No. 6 station be moved south of the Texas and Pacific tracks; and that No. 6 company's wages be raised to standard pay of the department.

Mr. Waggonman opposed the report on the grounds that the city had not the money to carry out the project, arguing that there was not even money enough to repair and build school buildings necessary.

Mr. Orrick argued in favor of fire protection, saying if necessary to go in to the interest fund, which was regarded sacred, then do so, the courts would uphold the action.

Mr. Waggonman said that temporary protection, saying if necessary to go in extra expense to the city by taking the Sixth ward wagon and locating it on the line between the Seventh and Eighth wards. He said the Fifth ward could do until next year without one company, and the Ninth ward was quite well protected. "To adopt this report you will fix it so your fire department will cost $75,000 or $80,000 a year." In answer to doubts expressed over his estimate, he showed the department was already costing $82,000 a year.

worth of their money—and would not kick.

Mr. Henderson demonstrated the need of fire protection in the Seventh ward. He cared not where it was decided to locate a station, so long as it was certainly located where it could give the best and quickest service.

Mr. Moreland moved to cut out the words "immediately," and adopt the report. Lost 4 to 3. The report was then adopted as read.

Fined for Violating Rules
Fire Chief Maddox reported the following fines for July. Gus Dudley and M. Riley of Engine Company No. 1, five days' pay for violating rules; J. W. Beahners, No. 8, two days' pay for leaving station without permission of captain.

Health Officer's July Report
The health officer's report for July was received and filed. It showed health conditions to be quite satisfactory, with no epidemics. Medicines and cost of treatment amounted to $35.96; births 41; seven of which were colored; deaths 47, of these 14 were colored.

Water Works Report
The prayer of the Y. M. C. A. for free lawn sprinkling privileges was denied.

Lilly street residents were allowed extension of water pipes at their cost, to be rebated in water rents.

The waterworks superintendent reported the absolute need of two new boilers for the waterworks plant, the necessity being brought about by the anticipated water supply to be furnished by Mr. Mead, and to put in use while the old ones are being cleaned and overhauled. The boilers were ordered purchased, Mr. Waggonman voting "no," arguing that the matter go over for investigation. The estimated cost is $5350.

To Change a Street Name
The street and alley committee reported favorably upon the petition of citizens to have Sandidge avenue changed to Henderson street, the former being only an extension of the latter. The city attorney will draw up an ordinance.

Paving of Houston Street
The street and alley committee reported:

First, "We have received answers from about one-third of the property owners on Houston street, to whom cards had been addressed, asking for an expression of preference as to paving materials.

Second, "Of the 140 cards sent out, 47 were answered, some of whom had no property on the street, and 36 were returned unclaimed.

Third, "Property owners of 2300 feet expressed a preference for asphalt; 300 feet no preference; 572 feet for brick. In addition to the 572 feet for brick 200 feet have been paved with brick, 450 feet have been contracted for to be paved with brick; 175 feet for brick expressed privately. Total for brick about 1575 feet.

Fourth, "We therefore feel that it is impossible for us to make any definite recommendations to the council on materials. There is a percentage of property, not including crossings, of 6500 feet. It will thus be seen that not more than one-half of the frontage has given expression of preference.

Fifth, "We feel that the street should be paved at once, and it seems impracticable to get a unanimous expression. It is impossible to lay asphalt in sections; therefore it seems wise, and the committee suggests that those desiring asphalt either take it upon themselves to get a unanimous expression or else join with those who are willing to pave with brick, which can be laid in sections. Paving in sections is very undesirable, but it is far better than nothing or what we now have."

Legal Opinion on Viaduct

City Attorney Williams submitted an opinion to the question of allowing further estimates on the viaduct construction and material until Mr. Leversedge, the contractor, had made further progress. In substance he said that Mr. Leversedge was not entitled to receive payment of his estimates unless free from default; there was little question on this score, but he did not know how much Mr. Leversedge was holding. It would not be advisable to pay additional estimates unless the sureties on the contractor's bond consented. Their consent was a sufficient waiver and it had been obtained, and now the council could pay the estimates if it should see fit to do so. The consent of the general agent of the American Bonding and Trust company to the same was attached.

At this point estimate No. 10 1/2 for work done on the viaduct and material furnished was submitted. Messrs. Waggonman and Moreland opposed allowing the estimates until some showing was made on the part of Mr. Leversedge to finish up the work. Mr. Orrick favored allowing the estimates. The mayor said that if the council failed to pay the estimates, and still then the city would default on its contract, for the estimates were for material on the ground and for work done. He favored enforcing the penalty on the bond, but urged the council to be cautious lest the contract be violated. Mr. Leversedge explained, apparently to the satisfaction of the council the causes of the delay in receiving the material, and showed wherein he had cause to believe the work could be finished up by the early part of October. Finally the estimate was allowed. Mr. Waggonman alone voting against it.

A report from the city attorney that defects existed in the titles of the lots recently ordered bought in the Eighth ward for school purposes, went over two weeks at the request of Mr. Orrick, who wished to investigate on his own account.

Estimate No. 1, for work done in adding two rooms to the Third ward school was submitted by R. L. Brown, and was ordered paid.

The city engineer reported $17 collected for building permits.

Concerning Inspection Charges
By suspension of the rules the following ordinance was put upon its final passage. It is a considerable cut down from former charges authorized by the lengthy electrical ordinance and Mr. Henderson spoke in support of Mr. Moreland facetiously inquired if it could not be substituted for the other ordinance, or at least get the permission of the insurance people to adopt it.

Laughter.

"Be it resolved by the city council of the city of Fort Worth:

"Section 1. That section 32 of ordinance No. 843, of the city of Fort Worth, passed June 14, 1902, entitled as stated in the caption hereof, shall be and the same is hereby amended to read as follows, to-wit: "Section 32. There shall be collected by the city electrician and paid to the city collector the following fees, to-wit: (1) For inspecting incandescent lights, where the wiring is concealed, twenty (20) cents per outlet for the first ten (10) outlets and 10 (10) cents per outlet for each outlet over ten (10) and up to fifty (50), and five (5) cents per outlet for each outlet over fifty (50) in number, included in a single inspection.

(2) For inspecting open work, twenty (20) cents per outlet for the first ten (10) outlets, and ten (10) cents per outlet for each outlet over ten (10) and up to fifty (50), and five (5) cents per outlet for each outlet over fifty (50) in number, included in a single inspection. But no inspection of incandescent light wiring, whether the work be open or concealed, shall be made for less than fifty (50) cents. (3) For inspecting each arc light and its connections, fifty (50) cents. (4) For inspecting each electrical horse power of 746 watts, used for mechanical or other purposes than those above mentioned, fifty (50) cents, but the maximum fee to be charged for such inspection shall not exceed two dollars and fifty cents ($2.50). (5) For inspecting each service connection for lights or power, fifty (50) cents, and for electric fans, fifty cents. (6) For inspecting temporary installations for show windows, exhibitions, conventions and the like, there shall be charged a fee of fifty (50) cents for each hour or fraction thereof. (7) For reinspecting any overhead, underground or interior wire or apparatus there shall be charged and collected for the use of the city one-half of the fees prescribed above.

(8) For inspecting pole and line work, twenty-five (25) cents per pole, provided no such inspection shall be made for less than one dollar ($1.00). "Section 2. That this ordinance shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage."

Mayor's Veto Sustained

The mayor's veto of the proposition to settle a $5000 tax debt by the Icard heirs for $2000, was sustained.

The mayor also announced that he had appointed Attorney W. W. Wilkinson to act as corporation judge during his absence of Judge W. W. Stewart.

To Cleanse Main Street

A resolution by Mr. Ward to have Main street cleaned with water at night, and to have the day force of laborers do the work, was adopted.

Wants to Know About Wires

A resolution of Mr. Henderson was adopted instructing the city electrician to report at the next meeting of the council the number of telephone, telegraph, electric light, power, trolley and messenger service wires now on the city's poles, also the character, size, etc., of the wires, and as to whether any of the poles are abnormally loaded by reason of the number of wires attached to them.

Don't Want a Street Car Line

Property owners on Summit avenue protested against the council granting any application for a line of street railway to be erected or operated on Summit avenue. Referred.

Tax Petitions Referred

A number of tax petitions for rebates, overcharges, etc., were referred to proper committees for report at next meeting.

Want to Locate Graves

City Sexton F. V. Terry petitioned the council to have the records of the city cemetery put in such shape that a person could find where people have been buried. It went over to the public grounds committee.

Wants to Locate Health Committee

The health committee uttered a war whoop and flourished its tomahawks in a set of resolutions presented to the council, and the members of the council could hardly wait until the secretary had finished reading it. Even the mayor indicated satisfaction by nodding his head approvingly as the secretary read.

The resolutions set forth the following:

"Whereas, under the law, it is the duty of the county of Tarrant, at its own cost, to take care of, quarantine against and suppress all infectious and contagious epidemic diseases throughout its limits, as well in incorporated towns and cities as in the country portions of said county.

"And whereas, this construction of the law has been adopted by the state officers charged with supervisory duties in maintaining public health within the state, but the said officers are not enabled, under the law, to enforce the said duty against the said county.

"And whereas, the commissioners of the county of Tarrant county has for a long time persistently refused, and still refuses, to discharge its legal and sworn duty in this respect, and has fixed about the city of Fort Worth an arbitrary line and boundary, and has refused and does now refuse to protect those people living within the said boundary, but exposes them to small-pox and other loathsome epidemic diseases, while protecting from the same those people who live outside of the line they have fixed.

"And whereas, the city of Fort Worth, though not by law bound to do so, has been unwilling to suffer people who were so unfortunate as to live within its limits to remain defenseless against such diseases, and in protecting them therefrom, has spent large sums of money, which it raised by taxing the said people.

"And whereas, the said system operates as double taxation upon all persons and property within the said city wherein taxes are paid first to the county for a protection which they are deliberately denied, and next to the city in order that it may supply what the county gives to its other citizens, and should of right give to those living within the city limits of Fort Worth.

"And whereas, by reason of the default of said commissioners and their discrimination against the inhabitants of the city, the said city was compelled to agree with the county, and did agree with it, and did do all the quarantine work, maintain the pest houses, furnish medicines and a physician and health officers, and assume other burdens, and under said agreement the county was to pay for provisions needed at the said pest house.

"And whereas, the county now refuses to carry even that small part of its rightful burdens which remained upon its shoulders under the said agreement, and refuses to pay for said provisions.

"Therefore, be it resolved, that the city cannot further tax its people to obtain the protection for which they have already paid, and with great reluctance, is compelled to refuse to take further part in maintaining quarantines in any part of Tarrant county, and in suppressing smallpox and other contagious epidemic diseases therein, and advises any and all persons who are injured for the want of that care to which, under the law, they are entitled, to have recourse upon the property of those officers whose discrimination and refusal occasion the injury.

The resolutions were unanimously adopted.
The council then adjourned.

BATTLE AND DEATH

Sam Bass The Bandit

By J. E. Gillett, Ex-State Ranger, Co. "E," Frontier Battalion, in the El Paso Herald:

SINCE the death of ex-United States Marshal R. C. Ware in Fort Worth, I have seen numerous accounts of the capture and death of that chief of train robbers, Sam Bass. As those are mostly far from correct, being written by parties not acquainted with the facts, I, as an ex-ranger of company E, frontier battalion, who was present at the capture and death of Bass, feel disposed to give to your many readers what I think to be a true report of this memorable fight.

Jim Murphy, a former member of the Bass gang, had been arrested and was being held in the El Paso jail. The authorities that if allowed to go he would rejoin the Bass gang and then give them away. Murphy was admitted to bail and when court came on he failed to show up. It was then given out that Jim Murphy had jumped his bond. This was done to make the play good, and Murphy was soon back with the robbers.

Bass had some good friends on the outside and they sent him word to kill Jim Murphy, saying, "he is a spy in your camp." Bass and Barnes contacted Murphy with those reports and said:

"Jim, you must die." Murphy of course denied the reports and begged for his life, offering to take the lead in the next hold up. Still Bass was not satisfied, and it seemed for awhile that there would be a murder in camp. Finally Frank Jackson, Bass's able lieutenant, came to Murphy's relief and said, "Sam, I have known Jim Murphy all of my life; I am sure he is no traitor. You cannot kill him without first killing me."

Plan to Hold Up Waco. This settled it. Murphy was allowed to continue with the band, but I was told by Murphy himself that on the way down from Denton county to Waco, that Bass and Barnes rode together and scarcely spoke a dozen words to him and Jackson.

The household was thus divided and this was the beginning of the end. At Waco they looked over the town and Jackson was enthusiastic. He thought they could take in any bank in the place, but Bass, more careful, considered the undertaking too hazardous. He concluded to go south and try the bank at Round Rock. Murphy was getting anxious. He was under suspicion and closely watched. General Jones sitting in his office at Austin was wondering what had become of the Bass gang and Murphy.

At Belton, Bell county, Texas, Bass said a pony and while arranging the bill of sale, Murphy slipped out for a minute, and mailed a letter to General Jones, saying: "We are on our way to rob the Round Rock bank, for God's sake be there to prevent it."

This letter came to General Jones like a flash of lightning from an undimmed sky. He was expecting to hear of the Bass gang in far-away northern Texas, and here they were marching straight on the capitol. General Jones, the Napoleon of Texas, though taken by surprise, saw that there was not a moment to be lost—that he must quickly concentrate his forces at Round Rock. At that time there was camped in the capitol yard a detachment of company E, frontier battalion, consisting of Corporal Vernon C. Wilson, Privates Dick Ware, Chris Conner and George Harold. General Jones called Corporal Wilson to him and said:

Horse Killed in Wild Ride. "Sam Bass is at Round Rock to rob the bank. We must prevent it if possible. I want you to carry orders to Lieutenant N. O. Reynolds, at San Saba, Texas, to march on Round Rock as fast as possible. Corporal, I expect you to save neither yourself or horse. You know the importance of the mission." (At that time, 1878, there was no telegraph to San Saba).

The general then ordered Ware, Conner and Harold to proceed to Round Rock, put their horses in the livery stable, and they themselves to keep from view as much as possible. The general then, having everything in motion, hurried by rail to Round Rock, with Morris Moore, a deputy sheriff of Travis county.

Corporal Wilson, true to instructions, made the ride of his life. He killed his horse in the ride to Lampasas, sixty-five miles, but was enabled to catch the out-going San Saba stage and landed at Lieutenant Reynolds' camp on the San Saba river at 7:30 p. m. Well does the writer remember that bright July evening, nearly twenty-five years ago. The boys in camp had just finished supper, and had tied up their horses for the night. Wilson's arrival in camp caused great excitement. We all knew something was up.

Lieutenant Reynolds, that king of the rangers, called Sergeant C. L. Nevill to his tent and said: "Bass is at Round Rock. We must be there as early as possible tomorrow. Make a detail of eight men, and select those that have horses the best able to make a fast run, and you with them report here at my tent ready to ride in thirty minutes."

And so just at night we started on that long ride of 110 miles, and what a ride it was. The first rays of the rising sun caught us at the crossing on North Gabrol. We had ridden sixty miles on that short summer night. A halt was made and we had breakfast of black coffee, bread and bacon, and as he raised his pistol to fire Dick jumped behind a hitching post not from fear, but by instinct, for he was as brave as courage itself. The ball from Bass's pistol split the top of the post within an inch or two of Ware's head. This only seemed to fire Dick up, for he went at them with a rush, and for a while fought the three outlaws single-handed. General into the brush north of Round Rock. Bass by this time was so sick and blind from the loss of blood that he could go no further. Jackson pleaded most piteously to be allowed to stay with Bass—said he was a match for them all. "No, Frank," said Bass, "I am done for," and finally prevailed on him to go; although it has been twenty-four

EVOLUTION OF THE

Women of The South

The following paper was read Tuesday at the Monticello, Tenn., assembly by Mrs. T. J. Latham of Memphis: In painting the portrait of the women of the early South, I would dip my brush in the blue of sincerity, the white of purity, and then blending in rainbow tints the environments of her life, I would paint her as I found her—sweet, lovable, gentle, clinging in confidence to those of her family and with a deep trust in her friends. A heart open to mother and father; a woman to give her whole heart to her husband, and one at once worthy to become the head of a household; the mother of well born children and a wife of whom it may be said, "The heart of her husband doth trust in her."

Nowhere existed a purer and loftier type of refined and cultured womanhood than in the early South, and the hospitality and social intercourse of our grandmothers and their friends was highly cultured and refined. Their modesty was womanly and native. They were unaccustomed to the gaze of the world and shrank from publicity. Men were the breadwinners, women the home-keepers. The graces in which the Southern women excelled and which I would fain paint on my canvas were neatness, grace, beauty of person, ease and freedom without boldness of manner, mind innately refined and cultivated, brilliant in gay wit and repartee, with thought and character spotless and pure; a laudable pride of the family, and an untiring devotion to home, friends, kindred and loved ones.

When finished I would drape this picture in soft white stuff of cobweb texture, such as we see in dreams, and I would call it "A Type of the Sweet Long Ago." Then I would set me another easel, another canvas ready for paints and brushes. But this time palette must needs have the crimson tints of war, tubes of black for many heart sorrows, and all those colors that por-they have petitioned for voice in the making of laws, against licensed liquor, and for many other highly salutary enactments. They have knocked at the doors of state universities and been admitted; they have been the moving spirit in the establishment of industrial and reform schools for girls; they have caused able women to be placed on boards of public institutions; they have taken an interest in municipal affairs, with the result of public libraries, public drinking fountains for man and beast, police matrons, public parks and clean streets. In Colorado they have an organization for the consumption of home products, and by pledging themselves to purchase all the articles made in Colorado in preference to the foreign made goods, provided the quality and price are the same; they have given an impetus to all lines of work from the market gardener to extensive manufacturer. This is worthy of emulation by the women of every state in the Union.

Education—Education to day is broader, and every woman is free to develop her own personality. We boast that any American boy may become president of the United States; so also may we add that any American girl may become mistress of and grace the White House. Our free school systems are becoming more perfect day by day; industrial schools are being built, and in dustrial departments are being added to our free school courses. In the Sophia Necomb annex of the Tulane University, New Orleans, is given instruction in decorative art. Virginia has the Miller Manual Labor school in Albemarle county; in Washington, D. C., in Maryland, West Virginia, Kentucky, Missouri, Tennessee, Texas, Mississippi and others. These industrial courses have been opened to girls mainly through the efforts of Southern women.

Cooking is now considered a fine art, and our girls are gratified to be able to say they have taken a thorough course in the intricacies of the culinary art.

Literature—It has been said that there are many more literary women now than formerly, yet I doubt not that among the papers and old letters safely hid away in grandmother's trunk, may be found sweet thoughts couched in pretty verse and bright literary flower pressed between the leaves of a prayer-book or hymnal. We readily see hereditary genius in the grand-daughter burning all the brighter in that literary fire in grandmother was smothered.

A laudable ambition in some instances; necessity in others, induces many capable women to exchange the retirement of domestic life for the more active field of literature. Whatever the incentive, we bless the good fortune that brought us in touch with such writers as: Miss Murfree (Chas. Egbert Craddock), Will Allen Druggoole, Ruth McHenry Stewart, Mary Johnston, Sara Beaumont Kennedy, Anna Robertson Watson, Mrs. McKinney of Knoxville.

Art, Music, Drama—In art we know that Caroline Brooks, whose Vanderbilt Group at the World's Columbian Exposition, created such favorable comment, and whose bust of Admiral Dewey was presented to him during his visit to St. Louis, is a Southern woman. In Helena, Ark., she began her career, and as she expressed it, "found her fortune in her churn." She has become the world's greatest moulder in butter, her work having been a special feature at the Omaha Exposition. Mrs. Brooks works out all her own conceptions in butter before beginning her marble work. A visit to her cold storage rooms is one of much interest. Among the many other artists, I mention: Mesdames Herrick, Ross and Shurtleff of California, who excel in ceramic art, producing equal to Sevres. Mrs. Cora Whitmore of Memphis, who excels in china; figure work is her specialty; Misses Yandell and Pattie Thum of Kentucky; Mrs. Newman of Murrefreesboro, whose painting "Breaking Bread," had honorable mention at the Paris Salon. Matilda Lotz of Knoxville, whose skill was appreciated by Rose Bonheur and when that famous artist died, willed her nearly all her property; Sarah Ward Conolly of Nashville designed the beautiful Woman's Building at the Tennessee Centennial; Mrs. Fannie May Longman and Mrs. Annie Stephenson Morgan of Memphis, whose abilities are recognized as the finest in the state; Misses Martha Day Fenner of Jackson, Anthony of Brownsville, Mary Solari, Margaret Ash, Minnie Lanier Rains, Fannie Gober and Mrs. Carrington Mason, all of Memphis, are gifted artists.

In music Southern women have taken high rank, and those who can stir the noblest impulses by sweet harmony of sound are indeed benefactors of the human race. Miss Lillian Cheweth is a gifted Mississippi girl, who since her solo at the McKinley Memorial at Washington, is so much in demand it is impossible to fill dates offered her.

Mrs. Joseph Reynolds of Memphis was president and instructor of a band of music when only eleven years old, and is a most proficient teacher and performer. Margaret Freeling, known as "Mad Nori," of Jackson, Tenn., created a sensation in Italy with her wonderful voice; Mrs. C. F. J. Mooney and Mrs. E. C. Latta are and our horses a bundle of oats each. In twenty-five minutes we were again riding and at 1 p. m. we reached the outskirts of old Round Rock, made camp in a little clump of bushes while Lieutenant Reynolds rode into Round Rock to report his arrival to General Jones.

Bandits Rubbed Against Ranger.

The robbers hitched their horses in an alley just back of Hightower's livery stable, passed up the alley out on to Main street by the bank and on to the corner store. At this moment Dick Ware crossed the street from the livery stable to a barber shop. He said afterwards that he almost touched the bandits as he entered the shop, not dreaming for a moment that he was within a foot of the most daring outlaws that ever operated in Texas. As Bass and his men passed into the building, Morris Moore, always on the lookout, remarked to Mr. Grimes, a deputy sheriff of Williamson county: "I think one of those men has a pistol."

"I'll go in and see," said Grimes. Walking up to Bass he said: "You have a pistol," and the battle was on. "Yes," said Bass, and at the same time he and his men pulled their pistols and began firing. As they ad-

Jones, coming up from the I. & G. N. telegraph office, joined with Ware in the fight, as did a one-armed man by the name of Stubbs, who had picked up Grimes' pistol and entered the fight. It was now three to three with the officers rapidly advancing on the robbers, they retreating slowly towards their horses.

Lay in Wait With Rifles.

Harold and Conner could tell from the sound of the guns that the robbers were coming down the alley to try and reach their horses. Those two rangers took positions in the back of the stable yard and when the outlaws came to view opened on them with Winchester at close range. At the back gate of this yard was hitched a little gray pony. Bass tried to mount him and George Harold now a member of the El Paso police force, claimed that he shouted to Bass not to get on the pony and as the latter backed off Harold says he shot him in the lower part of the breast.

Jackson's Fight for His Chief.

By this time every citizen in town that could secure a gun or pistol had joined in the battle. Bass and his men were now at their horses, and knowing that their situation was critical, they fought with the courage of despair, and if an outlaw can be a hero it is here that this boy Jackson (for he was only twenty years old at the time) showed himself to be one. Barnes was dead at his feet. His chief, years since that night, Jackson has never been captured.

Who Killed Sam Bass? The rest of the story is short. Sergeant C. L. Nevill, with the scout that came down from San Saba captured Bass the next day in a dying condition near where Jackson had left him. He was taken into Round Rock and died the following day. We now come to the point—Who Killed Sam Bass?

Bass on his death bed said he was shot in the back soon after leaving the store and long before he reached the horses. The doctors who examined and probed the wound claimed he was shot in the back—that the ball had hit a cartridge in his belt and

CO-OPERATION IN GERMANY.

German co-operation societies and associations can look back upon half a century of successful activity. At present the self-aided trades and industrial co-operative societies number altogether upward of 17,000 local societies, of which about 9,000 are agri-split, and a part came out near the groin, the other half remaining in the body.

This statement of the doctors, together with that of Bass, led every member of company E to think that Dick Ware had fired the fatal shot, because he was known to be a fine pistol shot, cool and steady under fire, and for a while after leaving the store he was fighting them alone. Yet no man ever heard Dick Ware say that he killed Sam Bass. Of all the rangers I ever knew he was the least boastful, and cared less for notoriety than anybody.

At the inquest over the dead body of Bass the question was asked, "Mr. Ware, did you shoot Sam Bass?" His reply was, "No, sir, not that I know of."

George Harold was then put on the stand and swore that he had killed Bass, so it is written in history.

Other Rangers in Town.

I have not mentioned Captain Lee Hall, because his company operated separately from the frontier battalion on this occasion. I don't know from whence he came, but he and some of his men were there and as I was afterwards told, they too, had been riding hard and not expecting a battle on that day, were resting at the hotel. The shooting brought them out, and they mounted and gave chase; but I don't think the Captain or any of his men fired a shot in that fight.

There is a stone over the grave of Sam Bass at Round Rock. This, I believe, is a kind and heartfelt memento from his sister. The inscription on this granite monument is sculptured appropriately in brief in the following sentences:

SAMUEL BASS, Born July 21, 1851; Died July 21, 1878. A Brave Man Reposes in Death Here. Why Was He Not True?

cultural, and include more than 1,000,000 peasants. Fourteen thousand co-operative societies are comprised in twenty-nine unions.

THOUGHTS TO CARRY THROUGH THE WEEK

Sunday—

We praise God at intervals with our words, but our whole life should be a ceaseless song of praise.—Saint Augustine.

Monday—

If we are happy we must hold the lamp of our happiness so that its beams will fall upon the shadowed heart. If we have no burden it is our duty to put our shoulder under the load of others. Selfishness must die or else our own heart's life must be frozen within us.—Rev. J. R. Miller, D. D.

Tuesday—

'Tis very good for strength, To know that some one needs you to be strong.

Wednesday—

There is many a thing that the world calls disappointment; but there is no such word in the dictionary of faith. What to others are disappointments are to believers intimations of the will of God.

Thursday—

He who is false to duty breaks a thread in the loom, and will find the flaw when he may have forgotten the cause.—Henry Ward Beecher.

Friday—

It is not life to live for one's self alone. Let us help one another.—Meander.

Saturday

Make it a rule, and pray God to help you to keep it, never, if possible, to lie down at night without being able to say, "I have made one human being, at least, a little wiser, a little happier, or a little better this day."—Charles Kingsley.

MAJ. GEN. SAMUEL B. M. YOUNG.

The rapid shooting brought Dick Ware with a jump from the barber shop to the street. Grimes was dead and Moore down. Bass then turned, a short run from town took them

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

Lawn tennis is still the most interesting game on the association grounds. The court is improving with use and the number of players is increasing daily. The convenience of the bath after exercise makes the court doubly popular. The punching bag will be in place next week and it will make another attractive feature for the gymnasium. Hand ball courts will also be arranged this week both in the gymnasium and on the lawn and indoor base ball will be added. The first term of the Bible training classes of the Y. M. C. A. closed last week with the regular examinations. There were three classes in progress since June, having an enrollment of 27. Another class was organized Friday evening. Young men, whether members of the association or not, will be received in this class this week, or they may enter either of the old classes as the latter will begin a new course of study. An effort is being made to make the department number 50 before Sept. 1, at which time the international studies will be taken up and the members will participate in the international examinations. This afternoon at 4 o'clock, Rev. J. W. Gillon will address men only in a short "heart-to-heart" talk at the Y. M. C. A., rooms. All men are invited. The advertisement for the coming year is being received daily. As soon as it is all here it will be bound into a portfolio for the patrons so that each may have a complete volume of the press comments of each attraction. The course will be given in the city hall where 1037 seats will be provided for the patrons. The course goes back to the city hall this year because of the improved acoustics of the hall and the fact that it will accommodate 200 more people than last season. Following is a list of the attractions: Boston Ladies' Symphony Orchestra Gov. Bob Taylor. Hon. George R. Wendling. Hawthorne Musical Club. John Dewitt Miller. Dr. D. E. Fox. Mrs. Bertha K. Baker. Hinton White, (illustrated). Charles Lane, humorist. Westlmann String Quartet. W. J. Clarke, (wireless telegraphy). CONSUMPTION THREATENED. "I was troubled with a hacking cough for a year and I thought I had consumption," says C. Unger, 211 Maple St., Champaign, Ill. "I tried a great many remedies and I was under the care of physicians for several months. I used one bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar. It cured me, and I have not been troubled since." Sold by Reeves' Pharmacy, Ward's Pharmacy, Arlington Drug Co. CASH REBATE Under the Rebate Coupon Plan Adopted by Draughon's Practical Business College, Every Student May Secure Tuition Free—Plan Originated and Adopted by Professor Draughon The following article taken from the Daily American is self-explanatory. Draughon's Practical Business College located in Board of Trade building, corner Seventh and Houston streets, this city is one of Professor Draughon's famous institutions. Prof. J. F. Draughon, president of Draughon's Practical Business colleges, has adopted a plan which gives each student an opportunity to secure enough cash rebates to pay for his education. We will suppose that you purchase a $40.00 scholarship in one of Draughon's Practical Colleges. The College will at once issue to you $40 of these rebate coupons (ten) each coupon to be redeemed in cash by either said colleges, you may transfer following conditions. When you know of any one going to attend one of Draughon's Colleges, or if you can induce a friend to attend one of Draughon's Colleges, you may transfer to that prospective student one of your rebate coupons and when the new student enters and presents said coupon to the college, the college will take up the coupon and pay the new student $1 in cash, and will at once send you its check for $1. You may continue to transfer these coupons to new prospective students, one to each until you have transferred ten, as above explained. This would give you a total cash rebate of $40, the full amount you paid to the college for tuition. Thus you see you would get your tuition free in the end. If you pay the College more or less than $40 for tuition, rebate coupon will be issued accordingly—to equal the amount paid. You are at liberty to begin to transfer your coupons as soon as you enter college, and a provision is made in the coupons that they are not to become void under twenty-five years after they are issued. Prof. Draughon informs us that his colleges are sending out on an average from $10 to $25 per day, as cash rebates, to former students. While Prof. Draughon was explaining to a representative of the American the advantages of his rebate coupon plan that he has, during the past few months sent checks to his former students aggregating about $1500, as cash rebates, as a result of his rebate coupon plan. The mere fact that every student who enters one of Draughon's colleges may secure enough cash rebates to equal the amount paid for tuition, which means tuition free in the end, and the further fact that Draughon's colleges have special facilities for securing positions that give a superior course of instruction, should be a sufficient inducement for one to enter one of Draughon's colleges in preference to any other. SHORTAGE IN OIL EQUIPMENT

PER DIEM SYSTEM NOT HURRYING CARS TO BEAUMONT

SOME ARE UP EAST

Many of Responsible Companies Will Not Make Long Time Contracts Unless Oil Is Accepted at Track Side—Prices Low

Much interest centers around the Beaumont oil field where, it is said, the producers are experiencing another heavy shortage in transportation equipment, and that in face of a large increased demand for the fuel. The per diem system in handling cars recently adopted by Texas and western roads had a good effect on the shortage for about thirty days, and has been lingering for weeks on the return trips. Now, however, the foreign roads do not seem to be in much of a hurry to deliver oil hauling equipment to initial lines. Some of the Texas equipment has been heard from in Pennsylvania. In view of this situation many of the responsible Beaumont companies will not take long-time contracts for furnishing oil unless the purchaser agrees to accept delivery at the track side in Beaumont. While the demand is somewhat greater now as the winter season approaches, it is also said the probability of getting the oil away from the field to supply the from-day-to-day demand has caused many of the large institutions to arrange for returning to their first love—coal. The packing houses in North Fort Worth, which had arranged to use large quantities of fuel oil, are now considering the advisability of remaining with coal, and in any event will be equipped to use either kind of fuel, switching from one to the other on an hour's notice. Oil Costs Practically Nothing While some of the larger companies in Beaumont are maintaining a good price for the oil, it is charged that the market has been cut to pieces, and the output is selling anywhere from 1-2 to 4 cents per barrel. The ruinous price is charged as being due to lack of transportation. Recently it was found that a steady market could be found for large quantities of this oil along the Mississippi river, in the vicinity of New Orleans, at prices ranging from 60 to 80 cents per barrel. But water transportation was necessary. As a result of these investigations a transportation company was organized by some of the best known oil men in the Texas oil field, among whom are ex-Governor Hogg, Judge R. E. Brooks, H. Masterson, Colonel E. F. Mundy, William T. Campbell, E. J. Marshall, Captain Charles Clark, Jr., James W. Swayne of Fort Worth, and Judge James T. Hobbit of Lincoln, Ill., also Robert P. Clark and Charles Clark. It is known as the Texas Oil and Transit company, and its facilities contemplate handling 200,000 barrels per month from Port Arthur. SPECIAL NOTICE. WOMEN OF THE SOUTH

gifted singers. Many others deserve mention, but I must hasten on. In drama we need not go further than our own loved Tennessee to find talented women who have achieved enviable success. Among those prominent are: Maud Jeffries, Marcia Van Dresser, Mrs. Tim Murphy (Saunders), Maud Ford, Miss Florence Kahn, Bessie Miller of Memphis and Kate Cheatham of Nashville. Self-Support—Self-support is laudable, and many of our most popular women in society are self-supporting. There are successful doctors, merchants, inventors, farmers, editors, lawyers, trained nurses, miners, educators, stock raisers, financiers, etc. In fact, when we see the success Mrs. Editch has attained with her botanical and zoological gardens, the skill with which Mrs. Goodnight of Texas manages her ranch, with its magnificent herd of buffaloes; Mrs. Cosgrove, one of the most successful dealers of real estate of Joplin, Mo.; Mrs. H. W. R. Story, known as the woman fruit-grower of Southern California, and who has the largest walnut groves in the world, we cease to believe there are limitations to the aspirations and achievements of Southern women. For the Southern woman the years have blended the environments and conditions as the artist blends his colors. Now, I would that I could blend my colors and paint my second picture in "The Evolution of the Woman of the South," portraying the transition from "A Type of Sweet Long Ago" to "A Southern Woman of Today." Under the inspiration of such representative women as are assembled here, leaders in literature, art, club life, music and every field of culture and utility. If I were a painter I would trace on canvas fair a woman's face—well, ladies, frankly, I know not better how to make that picture perfect than to produce a composite portrait of the faces I see before me. ALL WERE SAVED. "For years I suffered such untold misery from Bronchitis," writes J. H. Johnson, of Broughton, Ga., "that often I was unable to work. Then, when everything else failed, I was wholly cured by Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. My wife suffered intensely from Asthma, till it cured her, and all our experience goes to show it is the best cough medicine in the world." A trial will convince you it is unrivaled for Throat and Lung diseases. Guaranteed bottles 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free at Guthrie & Guthrie's, 502 Main street. Notice to Taxpayers. The City Assessor's books are now ready and the Board of Equalization will convene on Monday, June 23d, in the City Assessor's office in the City Hall and continue in session every day thereafter, excepting Sunday, from 10 to 12 o'clock in the forenoon and from 2 to 4 o'clock in the afternoon. All owners of real estate are requested to bring descriptions of their property with them when coming to inquire values. It is very important that all owners of real estate should appear before the Board of Equalization as a great many changes in values have been made since last year. Many improvements have been made since Jan. 1st, last, that may possibly appear on the tax rolls for this year and all mistakes of this or any other character will be corrected by the Board of Equalization on application of the owners. Be sure and bring descriptions of your real estate with you. G. H. DAY, City Tax Assessor and Collector. PHYSICIAN AND DRUGGISTS. Ford & Sturgeon, a prominent drug firm at Rocky Hill Station, Ky., write: "We are requested by Dr. G. B. Snigley to send for Herbine for the benefit of our customers. We ordered three dozen in December, and are glad to say, Herbine has given such great satisfaction that we have duplicated this order three times, and today we gave your salesman another order. R. W. TIPTON, C. P. & T. A. Hotel Worth. To My Friends It is with joy I tell you what Kodol did for me. I was troubled with my stomach for several months. Upon being advised to use Kodol, I did so, and words cannot tell the good it has done me. A neighbor had dyspepsia so that he had tried most everything. I told him to use Kodol. Words of gratitude have come to me from him because I recommended it.—Geo. W. Fry, Viola, Iowa. Health and strength, of mind and body, depend on the stomach, and normal activity of the digestive organs. Kodol, the great reconstructive tonic, cures all stomach and bowel troubles, indigestion, dyspepsia. Kodol digests any good food you eat. Take a dose after meals.—Smallwood & Anderson, Anderson & Smallwood.

Kodol Digests what you Eat Dyspepsia Cure

There is one certain way of curing indigestion and stomach troubles, that is: give your stomach a rest but still eat plenty of good food to keep up the nourishment for your body. You can do this by using KODOL DYSPEPSIA CURE because it is the one preparation which digests what you eat without aid from the stomach. Nature will then repair your worn out digestive organs and restore them to healthy condition. It relieves that feeling of fullness, belching and distress after eating. I suffered with dyspepsia a great many years. I tried many remedies without relief until I used KODOL DYSPEPSIA CURE. My health has improved and I now feel like a new man. S. J. Flemming, Murray, Neb.

"My skin. Ha! ha! ha!" They both enjoyed the big animal's little joke and then Google-I said: "Talking about skin reminds me of the Hippopotamus. Did I ever tell you the story of How the Hippopotamus Got His 14 Ply Epidermis? I didn't. Then you shall hear it now..."

Well, on this particular day, while old Google-I was in his cave warming his horny hands over some burning fatogs, the entrance to his dingy old home was darkened by the huge form of Joboken, the oldest and biggest elephant in the jungle.

All the freaks connected with the show had made up their minds to win the money, and that day their brains were diligently trying to concoct successful schemes by which the colored liquid could be stopped, but each wanted to do it before the other.

But there was no time to be lost, not even a moment, so with a lightning-like dart he flew down, seized the snake by the back of its head with his strong beak, and, flying up in the air, let it drop to the ground.

"Your skin is not what it is cracked up to be," smilingly remarked Google-I, referring to the peculiar condition of the elephant's covering.

How To Make An Egg Shell Arch.

BY MEREDITH NUGENT.

If you boys and girls want to have lots of fun just save all the eggshells you can and make an eggshell arch. This is not a little bit of a toy arch, as perhaps some of you might imagine...

of the pasteboard framework is completely covered. By sorting your eggshells in the first place into heaps of light and dark shells you will be enabled without any delay to make rows of different colors, which will greatly lighten the effect.

Now that you have the front of your arch all finished, attach shells to the sides of it in the same way as in the front; also at intervals use some large shells, so that these will project beyond the others, and thus add very much to the architecture of the whole.

When this part of your work is concluded begin to make the eggshell eagle, as follows: First fasten on the top and in the center of the arch two half eggshells for the eagle to stand upon. Then take two more half shells and fasten together, so that these will look like a whole eggshell. Now to the lower end of this fasten two pieces of burned matches to serve as the eagle's legs. LEND A HAND TO FORT WORTH

THE way to make Fort Worth a great city is for everybody who has the honor of being numbered among its citizens to turn in and lend a hand.

It costs nothing to lend a hand and in time will do wonders. To lend a hand means really to lend a tongue.

What Fort Worth wants is advertising. Advertising from everybody who steps out of the limits of the city, be it for ever so short a time or ever so long a period.

Every place you go talk Fort Worth. Everybody you meet away from home talk Fort Worth.

Tell it out that we have a dozen big railroad lines running in and out of Fort Worth. Make it clear that there are sixty-five passenger trains that make their entrance and exit into and out of the town every twenty-four hours.

Figure it out what it means in the way of travel to make it a paying investment for our railroads to run that many passenger trains into and out of Fort Worth.

Tell strangers that we have grown into a city of 35,000 people since about 1880.

Tell them about our packing house and what they mean for Fort Worth and the contiguous territory.

Talk about the 4,000 men who will be employed in these great plants.

Tell them about our paved streets (if they have never been in the town).

There's the Carnegie library to talk about and one of the finest city halls in the state of Texas, and few towns double the size in the north, have as good.

Talk about Texas' finest county court house in the state that is located right here in this town.

ADVERTISE FORT WORTH. ADVERTISE FORT WORTH.

After a nice long snooze on Sunday morning, a fine bath, a clean shave, fresh wearing apparel and a good morning meal before you, you only need the Sunday Telegram to complete the Sunday morning picture of ideal satisfaction. Take it regularly.

PUNISHING SCHOOL CHILDREN

FORT Worth children will have to be good during the coming year's school hours. The school board has decided to go back to the old time theory of "Spare the rod is to spoil the child." There is a great difference of opinion among parents as to the advisability of the strenuous punishment of school children, most opponents of the idea holding that if there is to be any punishment due a pupil for disobedience or serious infraction of the rules, it is the place of a parent to do the administering and not a stranger. There is argument enough on both sides to fill columns. The school board is elected for the purpose of operating the schools on the best possible basis. Its opinion on matters should be final, at least until time proves an error of judgment. The vote on the reestablishment of corporal punishment in the board was three to two in favor with one member absent. It will be remembered that this feature of school life was abolished at the close of the school year twelve months ago. At the last meeting of the board it was the opinion of the majority of those present that the innovation had been unsuccessful and consequently the old time punishment rule was renewed. It is claimed by those who favor this return to corporal punishment that year's experiment has been a failure.

Almost every day sees the preliminary work accomplished on some new residence in Fort Worth. The 100,000 mark that we are going after is so nearly within reach that we can now almost touch it on tip-toe. Watch Fort Worth grow from now on.

HATS OFF TO THE FARMER

THE richest individuals in the United States are not farmers, but the richest class, according to the latest census bulletin, is the farming class. This bulletin gives the statistics for 1899, the latest available, and according to these figures the lands, buildings, implements and live-stock of the farmers in the United States are worth over twenty billions of dollars. In comparison with this the total manufacturing capital in the country, from the steel trust to the smallest factory, is a little less than ten billions, and the total value of the railroads, counting bonds and stock capitalization, is a little less than twelve billions. The farmers, therefore, are worth almost as much as the manufacturers and the railroad magnates combined. Bradstreet's notes that the manufacturing products, however, outvalue the farm products in the nation of $3,000,000 to $5,000,000,000, and notes that "every dollar of manufacturing capital produces $1.20 worth of product, while agricultural capital produces less than 25 cents' worth." How the profits compare is not stated. Comparing the farming industry with the railroads, it is not difficult to reckon that the farmer is better off than the railroad magnate.

The farmer, so far as actual wealth is concerned, is the capitalist of the United States. The census bureau report on the value of farming property of the country issued last week, estimates that the 8,739,857 farms of the United States are worth $16,674,690,247. Of this amount $3,560,198, 191, or 21.4 per cent., represents the value of building, and $13,114,492,056, or 87.6 per cent., the value of land and improvements. Farm implements and machinery are worth $761,261,550, and live stock $3,078,050,941, making the total farming wealth over 20,514 millions of dollars.

This is undoubtedly a very low estimate, but accepting it as correct, other forms of industry pale beside it in comparison. The value of the railway systems of the United States, approximating 200,000 miles, is about 11,800 million dollars, counting bonds and stock capitalization, or but little over half the farming wealth. The railroads, in fact, constitute the only single industry which approaches even remotely the stupendous totals revealed by the census enumeration of farming wealth. It is impossible, of course, to compare the operations of these two important divisions of industry, for the simple reason that they are distinct in their results, and the items which enter into one are not found in another. Still, it is not without interest to classify as far as possible the operating totals, with the idea of affording a rough approximation, at least, of income yield on investment, etc.

The railway systems of the United States in 1900 reported gross earnings of $1,501,695,378, or a little more than 12.6 per cent. on the total stock and bond capitalization. The gross farm income in 1899 was $3,764,177,706, and the percentage of gross income upon investment was 18.3 per cent. It will be seen that the farming industry made out better than the railroads. The net earnings of the farmer can not be calculated, but assuming the railway averages as applying equally to both, the expense of operation ranges somewhere around 70 per cent. Hats off to the American Farmer.

Pistol totin' opponents have an excellent argument in the recent death of Captain Dunoivant at the hands of Mr. Eldridge on an Aransas train a few days ago. The two men for many years were warm friends. A year ago Mr. Eldridge indulged in some felicitations over the fact that "two plain farmers," one of them Captain Dunoivant, had succeeded in building the Cane Belt railroad into Wharton. Both gentlemen state in positive terms that Captain Dunoivant became incensed at the interview; that he declared he was not a "plain farmer," but a planter; that a "plain farmer" was a man who walked between the plough handles. From this incident the trouble grew rapidly until its final culmination. This is not the only sad ending that will yet come to Texans who flash a gun with every rising temper. Though the state law prohibits the carrying of a revolver the statute is a dead one. Public sentiment has never aroused itself sufficiently to cause the law to be carried out. As long as this sentiment is continued, just so long will the pistol be toted and just so long will the lives of innocent bystanders, witnesses to quarrels, be in danger.

THE MEN WHO LOSE

JOHN W. GATES is credited with having made $3,000,000 in a recent corner. The men who lost get no credit. This is the story succinctly told in a newspaper paragraph.

From time far removed along with the grimness of "The survival of the fittest" has been handed down the assertion, "To the victor belongs the praise." John W. Gates is one of those who have survived a critical time, and he is now getting his share of the plaudits of his fellows. It is not the purpose of this article to tell how Gates got his eight millions, nor to moralize on the manner of the getting. Every philosopher, real or otherwise, in the country, has presented the moral side of finance times enough.

The plea instead, is for the men who lost. The men whose tens, hundreds, thousands, went to make Gates' millions. Why is it that the men who win, honestly or otherwise, get at the same time, the attention and interest, if not the esteem of their fellows? The men who fall are lost sight of. Bandit Tracy is the last example of notoriety given to outlawry. But outlawry was not the reason for big headlines and long editorials in the papers. The reason was the public's interest. As much space was given to the missionary, Ellen M. Stone, as was allotted Harry Tracy because people have inexhaustible interest for the unique, the strange, the unusual thing. Many a train robber has gone for years in his career without even a single printed line, and missionaries without number have battled against fearful odds and then died leaving the record of their life's struggle forgotten. In statistical figures of some musty church records, because the public was not interested in them.

What people appear to be interested in, that they read and talk about. What they are really interested in, is oftentimes hidden from their most intimate companions. The story of the "lost cause" is dearer to the Sunny South today than is the story of the triumphs of its progress, since the reconstruction. And after all, where the heart is, there the true interest lies, and the interest in the extraordinary is but a shallow one at best.

There is good to be gotten from interest in the men who lose. Every reader of the Telegram has some one he or she meets often, who is struggling along and maybe being slowly drawn beneath by the undertow of failure.

In such it will pay you to interest yourself and forget for a little time, the people who have succeeded. Encourage the unfortunate ones and assure them of your friendship. John W. Gates cares no more for your opinion of his "corners" than does the solitary buzzard poised above in the blue expanse. But your neighbor may need your interest and your praise. Words of encouragement to those who need them are a gift every one can give. To withhold them is selfishness, and selfishness is the basis of all false success. Help others succeed and you will find success coming your way, not because you have helped them, but because you will have achieved man's greatest victory—the forgetting of self.

Who got the money? That's a query that is sorely puzzling all the readers of the serial story, Case 113, now running in the Telegram. A bank in Paris is robbed of 350,000 francs. The money was put in the bank at night by the cashier. When he unlocked it in the morning the money was gone. The lock to the vault was unimpaired and the doors showed no signs of having been tampered with. Only two persons had the combination to the lock. These were the president and the cashier. Now, who got the money? The installment printed in today's issue of the Telegram carries the reader of the story farther and farther into the maze of the plot and to attempt a solution at this time is next to impossible. Emile Gaborian is one of the most fascinating of all detective story writers and in this story he is at his best. The Telegram is fortunate indeed to have been able to secure this excellent story, a story that is clean in every detail and one which can not fail to point a healthy moral.

Texas Populists are surely now to be credited with being knockers. They have a Mallett to use.

Good morning! Do you read the Sunday morning Telegram regularly?

"Do With Thy Might"

Whatever Thy Hand Findeth to Do.

A DAILY CHAPTER FROM THE BIBLE.

FOR all this I considered in my heart even to declare all this that the righteous, and the wise, and their works, are in the hand of God; no man knoweth either love or hatred by all that is before them.

All things come alike to all; there is one event to the righteous, and to the wicked; to the good and to the clean, and to the unclean; to him that sacrificeth, and to him that sacrificeth not; as is the good, so is the sinner; and he that feareth an oath.

This is an evil among all things that are done under the sun, that there is one event unto all; yea, also the heart of the sons of men is full of evil, and madness is in their heart while they live, and after that they go to the dead.

For to him that is joined to all the living there is hope; for a living dog is better than a dead lion.

For the living know that they shall die; but the dead know not anything, neither have they any more reward; for the memory of them is forgotten. Also their love, and their hatred, and their envy, is now perished; neither have they any more a portion for ever in any thing that is done under the sun.

Go thy way, eat thy bread with joy, and drink thy wine with a merry heart; for God now accepteth thy works. Let thy garments be always white; and let thy head lack no ointment. Live joyfully with the wife whom thou lovest all the days of the life of thy vanity, which he hath given thee under the sun, all the days of thy vanity; for that is thy portion in this life, and in thy labor which thou takest under the sun.

Whatever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might; for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom in the grave, whither thou goest. I returned and saw under the sun, that the race is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong, neither yet bread to the wise, nor yet riches to men of understanding, nor yet favor to men of skill; but time and chance happeneth to them all.

For man also knoweth not his time: as the fishes that are taken in an evil net, and as the birds that are caught in the snare; so are the sons of men ensared in an evil time, when it falleth suddenly upon them.

This wisdom have I also under the sun, and it seemed great unto me. There was a little city, and few men within it; and there came a great king against it, and besieged it, and built great bulwarks against it.

Now there was found in it a poor wise man, and he by his wisdom delivered the city; yet no man remembered that same poor man.

Then said I, Wisdom is better than strength; nevertheless the poor man's wisdom is despised, and his words are not heard.

The words of wise men are heard in quiet more than the cry of him that ruleth among fools. Wisdom is better than weapons of war; but one sinner destroyeth much good. Ecclesiastes 9: 1-18.

SCISSORETTES

Arlington Journal: Most of the unbroken stubble has on it a luxuriant growth of tickle grass absolutely clear of weeds, and many of the farmers are having it mowed and baled. Some of it has been on the streets this week and one never saw prettier hay. And while the value of it is unknown to most of our people still those who have tried it say it is equal to or better than prairie hay. It is at least worth trying and many fields will yield over a ton per acre.

Chicago Drover's Journal: The $9 mark for cattle has been reached at last. Two lots of prime cattle sold for that price today, which makes a record for more than twenty years and is the highest price ever paid in the month of August by a margin of a dollar. The top prices have been gradually creeping up to this point for many months.

THE IDLER'S NOTE BOOK

The worldly hope men set their hearts upon

Turns ashes—or it prospers; and anon, Like glow upon the desert's dusty face, Lighting a little hour or two—is gone. —Omar Khayyam.

How true! How good to know that in those dark days of the far distant past some souls saw as clearly as do any in this enlightened age! How comforting to feel that the great lessons of life are not circumscribed by even the broad bounds of the world's religious — that they transcend creed and canon, and like the sun, which shines for all, and the rain, which falls alike on the just and the unjust, in harmony among many men of many minds. And this of the Rubaiyat is as true today as it was when penned in Persia centuries ago, or as it would have been had it come out of Eden in the beginning.

Like snow—what a simile! The whitened tears of heaven do transform the earth with their softness and purity. They cover up the rough spots and smooth all the wrinkles in the old world's brow—for a little hour; then they turn against all they have clothed in beauty and mar what they have made. So it is with the transient hopes of humanity. For a while they gleam like true standards, and the eye, charmed, calls to the heart, and the heart often follows where the eye leads. But at length, when the way has been long and the scene has grown less lovely—when the snow is just beginning to melt—and the eye is blurred and the heart heavy, the hand stretches forth to grasp that standard, but in vain! Then often when it is too late to make amends, do we realize the hopelessness of our cause. And the hour in which hope is shaken is the earthquake of the soul.

There is only one way to avoid the pain, the suffering. That is to place our hopes above mere materialism, to lift them a little closer to the Infinite. None is so low in life that this is denied him. Some of the surest ways to the heights lie in the lowlands, and on by gradual ascent can we any of us really rise. What do riches and position and place count if they be had at the expense of character, at a cost of charity? Who is more poor than he whose purse is long and his heart lacking? Think you that souls shall be asked to pay coin at the gates of the hereafter?

For today a crust and some crumbs of character; for today a mite and a measure of mind; for today the striving and the longing; for tomorrow the fulfillment and the ability to enjoy. It is only on the desert that the snow is sown gone. There are snows everlasting on the heights.

THE CASE OF TINY

(Original.)

"Tell me, doctor, how it is that you are working into such a splendid practice. Is it natural adaptability for the medical profession, scientific attainments or hard work?"

"It is neither of these. My start came from the faculty of adapting myself to my surroundings."

"Explain."

"On being graduated from the medical college I found it advisable to act for a time as house surgeon in a prominent hospital. I applied for a vacant position of this kind where the examination was said to be very severe and several young doctors had failed. I was told that they all knew too little about medicine to satisfy the committee. I made up my mind that they knew too much. When called before a lot of gray heads, instead of telling them about new discoveries of which they were ignorant I confined myself to the regime of thirty years before. The result was that I passed with flying colors."

"Just as I was about to leave the hospital for general practice I was called one day to go at once to the house of a maiden lady who took great interest in the hospital and was on the board of managers. The lady met me in the hall with the exclamation: 'I fear she's gone.'"

"The patient is—"

"Tiny. Come quick.' And she led the way upstairs to a bedroom and to a crib in a corner. I love children and have made their ailments my specialty. Therefore I was pleased to have an opportunity to help a child. Miss Murchison went to the crib, turned down the clothing and exposed—a puddle!

"Overcoming my disappointment and a repulsion I have always felt at seeing a dog treated as a child, I held the poodle's paw, took out my watch and looked dubious."

"Oh, doctor, is there any hope?" "Tiny is suffering from a tuberculosis of the left ventricle of the intestines. Formerly she must have died. Under the present methods she may be saved, but I must take her to my office and perform an operation."

"Can't it be done here?" "On no account. All my instruments are there and all my appointments."

"I will send her at once by my man."

"I would not permit any one but myself to carry her. The heart is weak, and she must not suffer any shock."

"Oh, doctor, how good you are! Will you send me daily bulletins?" "Every few hours till Tiny is out of danger."

"I took Tiny to my office and in an hour sent word to Miss Murchison that she was out of danger. This was the truth, for the dog was dead."

"Patients calling on me the next day were told that I had an important case on hand and would not likely be at the office till evening. I was hunting a dog that looked so much like Tiny that Miss Murchison would not know the difference. I left my practice for three days to go to the dogs, but did not find a mate for the deceased till the afternoon of the third. She was a fat little beast, and it would never do to send her home after so serious an operation in so sleek a condition, so I put her on quarter rations till her bones looked for all the world like 'the ribbed sea sand.' Then I sent word to Miss Murchison that she was quite recovered and as soon as I could get a little flesh on her bones I would send her home. A request came back to send her at once, so I took her myself."

"Miss Murchison shed tears over Tiny's condition. The dog's appearance indicated clearly that I had had a hard struggle to save her life. I dreaded lest the lady should discover some difference between the old and the new, and she did."

"Why, doctor," she exclaimed, "how came that black spot on her stomach where it was pure white?"

"That," I said, taking out a magnifying glass to gain time, "Oh I see! That's where the incision was made. The skin was removed at that point, and frequently after such removal the hair grows again in a different color."

"But that tan on the end of her tail—did that come in the same way?"

"I pretended not to hear. When the question was repeated, I had solved the medical problem upon which my answer depended."

"Tiny's orain has had a very severe shock, and the brain and spinal column are one and the same. In nervous depression human beings are liable to a soreness of the coccyx, though we do not usually find it in dogs. But Tiny, you know, is so like a human—"

"She is, doctor, and your appreciation of this fact must have been of great advantage in her treatment."

"One disappointment is in store for you," I hurried on to divert her attention from any more difference, or, rather, to prepare for another inevitable one. "Tiny's memory has been impaired, and it will be a week or so in righting itself. I fear she will not remember her name. Try her."

"Tiny, Tiny, come here!" "The dog paid no attention to the call. 'You are right, doctor. How skillful you are! How long did you say it would be before her memory?'"

"Only a few weeks. Give her plenty of food and rest, and she will come out all right."

"Miss Murchison's appreciation of my skill has given me my start. She has talked of me incessantly to her friends, calls for me to come to her at least once a week, and with this aid I am working into a good practice. Meanwhile I am doing all I can to deserve the confidence of my patients and the public."

CARE OF THE TEETH.

A Profitable Investment In Beauty And Health.

When a woman laughs she is either pretty or homely. No matter how exquisitely shaped her front teeth may be in repose, the minute they separate in a smile and the two rows of incisors are exposed to view her looks are made or marred.

Of course, a woman who has by nature uneven and discolored teeth can hope for little in the way of making them resemble the much desired rows of gleaming pearls, but with the aid of a good dentist she may overcome many of the defects. It seems almost needless to mention the necessity for constantly watching the teeth, for nearly every man, woman and child has learned the value of visiting a dentist semi-annually, or perhaps oftener. It is really the only way to keep the teeth in excellent condition.

However, this alone is not sufficient. Science has proved to us that disintegration is going on constantly, and the only method of preventing decay is to care for them every day.

The value of sound and beautiful teeth is incalculable, and it is a well known fact that their appearance is an indication of the general health of the individual. Those who suffer from dyspepsia or any gastric ailment will necessarily display indications of the ailment in their teeth. A man or woman possessing straight, even rows of clear white incisors will invariably present an example of almost perfect health.

There is no part of the physical organization that will more quickly show the effects of ill health than the teeth, and conversely they are extremely susceptible to good treatment.

A careful overhauling by the dentist every six months, or even four times a year, is not enough. There are unseen and insidious agents constantly seeking the destruction of all teeth, and the only way to prevent them from accomplishing their work is to care for the mouth daily. It is very good advice to say "keep them clean," but even this is not enough to successfully wage warfare against the multitude of germs lying in wait to accomplish their end.

The teeth should be brushed thoroughly night and morning, and there is more in this act of cleaning than the average person realizes. In the first place, the toothbrush should be selected with the utmost care; this should fit the mouth and the bristles must not be too stiff.

This is a mistake frequently made by even the most intelligent persons, for they are so desirous of removing every bit of foreign substance from the molars and incisors that they use bristles so stiff that in a short time the enamel of the teeth shows a decided wearing. Of course a brush that has rather unpleasing bristles does cleanse the teeth more rapidly and successfully than one of flexible hairs, but the result will, in the end, be far more satisfactory with the latter.

A good and pleasant tooth paste is invaluable in helping to keep the teeth in the condition, and the main thing to avoid when selecting a paste or powder is a grittiness. Unless the powder is extremely fine and smooth the enamel will very soon show signs of wear. Strong washes also destroy the coating, though they frequently impart an unnatural and temporary whiteness that seems rather attractive at first.

It is never a good idea to use powder or paste oftener than once a day, but the mouth and teeth should be rinsed as frequently as is convenient.

In addition to this care, that is in general practice, it is not only beneficial but almost imperative to use a good antiseptic. The following will be found a very excellent one:

Crete Pre'p.
Formaline.
Menthol.
Iris Florentina.
Eucalyptol.
Thymol.

These in combination with glycerine and agreeable aromatics.

If the mouth is washed daily with some good antiseptic and the teeth are brushed with a preparation made from the foregoing, the whiteness and firmness will be preserved for a remarkably long time.

pared and sliced peaches, three eggs, one pint of milk, three-quarters of a cup of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of flour, salt, spoonful of salt, generous half teaspoonful extract of vanilla.

Heat the milk in a double boiler. Beat the eggs, sugar, flour and salt well together. Pour a little of the hot milk on this mixture. When well blended, return all to the double boiler. Let it cool about ten minutes, stirring frequently. Remove it from the fire, strain into a bowl, add the vanilla and set away to cool.

Place the peaches in a deep dish, and when the cream mixture becomes cool mix together and set it in the refrigerator for three hours or more to chill it thoroughly.

Peach and Rice Fudding.—One dozen large peaches, scant half cupful of rice, two and a half cupfuls of milk, one cup of sugar, cup and a half of cold water, scant half a teaspoonful of salt.

Wash the rice and soak it for two and a half hours in the cold water; drain off the water and put the mill and rice in the double boiler and cook for two hours; then add the salt and cook for 30 minutes. Put the peaches in a wire basket and plunge them into boiling water for two minutes. Rub off the skins and cut the peaches in halves.

Break six of the peach stones; put them in the saucepan with the sugar and water and simmer them for half an hour. Remove

"I suppose you've been through a good many trials in your life?"

"Yes, but it wasn't so much the trials that I minded as the verdicts."

Opinion Of An Expert.

"How do you like my new green and white hat?" asked the little blonde, "and don't you think it is immensely becoming?"

"I like it awfully well," replied the tall brunette, "and it is extremely becoming. But do you really think you should wear green, and isn't the white rather trying?"

I think I should like it better if the roses were on the back instead of the front, and it might be improved by raising the brim a little on the left side. If I were you I should make the milliner give me a better grade of ribbon for the bows—that is, if you paid a fair price for it and got it of a milliner who knows good materials when she sees them.

"Do you think the shape is quite suitable for you? And, maybe, that is not an imperfect place in the crown, but it looks like it sits on your back hair. Some milliners have no conscience about telling you that a hat sits properly on your head when it doesn't at all."

"What do you think about the straw? Wouldn't it have been better, if not quite as cheap, to get a nice fancy braid instead of a Neapolitan, which will become limp at the least bit of dampness?"

"And, by the way, they have been wearing ornaments like that pearl one for over a year, to my certain knowledge. I saw them on the bargain tables the beginning of last winter. I could have bought you one for a song then if I had thought you would wear it. But perhaps you got it that way yourself. No? What a pity that you were cheated."

"Yes, I like the hat immensely—if only it wasn't white and you had not selected green for the trimmings; also if you had had the roses in the proper place and if the shape were a bit different. Be sure to look at the back of it when you get home and see if you really like the way it rests on your back hair. Goodbye, dear, goodbye."

"Goodness, what would she have said if she hadn't really liked it and had failed to think it becoming?" said the little blonde.

as she furtively tried to see the back of her head in the nearest mirror.

"I suppose you've been through a good many trials in your life?"

"Yes, but it wasn't so much the trials that I minded as the verdicts."

Possibilities Of The Peach.

Peaches are in their prime this month and surely this is one of the fruits that find favor in many a household. It is a fruit that makes a good beginning of breakfast or is a satisfactory ending to the evening meal.

Here are some tempting dishes to show the possibilities of the peach.

Peach Bavarian Cream.—Ten fresh peaches, half a pint of cold water, one pint of cream, half a box of gelatine.

Cover the gelatine with cold water and let it soak for one hour. If canned peaches are used, they may be pressed through a colander, but if the fresh fruit is used it should be first stewed and sweetened. Place the gelatine over boiling water until dissolved. Whip the cream. Add the gelatine to the fruit, mix and turn into a large bowl; place this in a pan of cracked ice and heat until it begins to thicken. Then add the whipped cream, stir carefully until well mixed; turn into a wet mould and set it in a cold place to stiffen; turn out and garnish with whipped cream.

Peach Fritters.—Either the fresh or canned peaches may be used. They should be cooked in deep fat, which should be hot enough to brown a small piece of bread in 30 seconds.

Fresh or canned peaches, rum or brandy, sugar, grated lemon peel.

Peel, stone and halve the peaches. Sprinkle well with sugar, rum and grated lemon peel. Let them stand for ten minutes. To make the batter, take one heaping cupful of flour, two eggs, one tablespoonful of olive oil, one or two tablespoonfuls of rum or brandy and a little cold water. The rum or brandy may be omitted if preferred, substituting lemon juice, wine or fruit juice.

Mix the yolks with the flour, then add the oil and liquor, thin with water to the consistency of thick cream. Add the white of the eggs, beaten to a very stiff froth. Dip the fruit in this and fry in the hot lard. The batter should be thick enough to coat the fruit thoroughly. Cook the peaches piece by piece. When golden brown place on brown paper and keep them warm in the oven, and let them dry. Sift powdered sugar over them and serve hot.

Peach Mousse.—Use very ripe fruit. Peel and slice enough to make a quart. Rub them through a strainer, add a pint of sugar and mix well. Add also two quarts of whipped cream. It is quite an improvement to add two tablespoonfuls of wine or maraschino. Wet a three-quart mould in cold water and heap the mousse in lightly. Pack in salt and ice and let it remain for four hours.

Simple Peach Pudding.—Line a deep glass dish with thick slices of sponge cake soaked in sherry. Then fill the dish with fresh peaches, peeled and sliced and well sprinkled with sugar. Pie whipped cream on the top. Stand on the ice to become very cold before serving.

Peach Ice-cream.—Use one generous pint of ripe peaches, peeled, mashed and strained; quarter of a teaspoonful of almond extract; one quart of cream; a cup and a half of sugar.

Mix the strained peaches and sugar together, add the cream, a quarter of it at a time, mixing thoroughly. Last add the almond extract and freeze.

Peach Cream Pudding.—One quart of the stones and put the peaches in the syrup. Cook slowly for 15 minutes.

When the fruit is cooked spread half of the rice on a flat dish, having the layer about half an inch thick. Save 15 of the best halves of the peaches, and spread 4 of the remaining pieces on the rice; put another layer of rice on top of the fruit, shaping it into a tapering mould. On the top layer put 4 more pieces of peach and cover with the remaining rice, which should be heaped to a point. Arrange the pieces held in reserve around the base of the mould. To the syrup add the juice of an orange, and either one tablespoonful of maraschino or a couple of tablespoonfuls of wine. Pour this syrup very carefully over the rice and peaches and also serve cream with the pudding. Serve cold.

Branded Peaches.—Select white peaches that are not too ripe. Smoek's white death or Morris whites are considered the best for this purpose. Peel carefully. Meit in an azule or porcelain-lined kettle 2 pounds of granulated sugar in 3 quarts of water. Weigh the fruit, then put in the peaches, a few at a time, to scald. When they are boiled so they can be pierced with a broom straw lay them on a platter. When all are scalded make the following syrup: Take one-half the weight of peaches in sugar. Allow one gill of the first syrup to every pound of fresh sugar. Put it into the kettle and bring it slowly to a boil. Then put it at one side to settle. Skim at this stage—not sooner. Bring it to a boil again. Put the fruit into this syrup, a little at a time. Scald for about five minutes and remove the jars.

When all the peaches are cooked boil down the syrup 15 or 20 minutes, or until very thick, using care not to let it get scorched. Skim again. Drain the syrup from the jars. Fill the jars one-third with the rich syrup. Fill to the top with best brandy. Cover and set away.

Peach Marmalade.—Place the peaches in a wire basket and plunge them into boiling water for two minutes. Rub off the skin, cut the peaches in half and take out the stones. Measure the fruit and place it in the preserving kettle. For six quarts of peaches use one quart of water. Cover and cook for an hour; then add three quarts of granulated sugar and cook for an hour longer, stirring often. The marmalade should be smooth, thick and rather glossy at the end of that time. Put in small jars or glasses. When cold cover with pieces of paper wet in brandy and then sealed, or with metal covers.

Thoughts Between Waves.

Some persons seem to think their unkindness is written upon a slate, and that the moist sponge of forgiveness should ever be at hand to wipe it out.

The man who cannot be in the company of a woman for 15 moments without quoting poetry, should never have a serious place in her life.

When you adopt an original trend of thought remember that you cannot walk against the crowd without having your elbows roughly jostled at times.

The only way to manage an arrogant man is to pitch your duel for life in a key with which he is quite unfamiliar.

Money, after all, is but the corkscrew for pleasure.

Men should never flirt with the woman who writes her love affairs in indelible ink. It is the man with an inexhaustible supply of profanity who objects to women using slang.

For ages man has held the old maid up to ridicule because she would not submit to his tyranny.

If some man would spend half an hour thinking up a fresh set of compliments his increased popularity would bring ample reward.

The real compliment in a man's flattery is in the wish to please which prompts the nonsense.

Little sorrows in the hearts of some people

Some Interesting Facts.

The rivers of England carry away about nine gallons out of every sixteen gallons of rain that fall on the land.

St. Swinburn was Bishop of Winchester from 852 to 862. He is the Jupiter Pluvius in the calendar of England. At his request he was buried in the open churchyard, and a century afterward, when the monks out of respect wanted to bury him in the choir of the church, a rainstorm set in on the day fixed—July 15—and continued for 40 days. He was left in the yard and a chapel was built over him. Hence the belief that as the weather is on July 15 so will it be for 40 days.

There are women who seem to consider a worshipper at their shrine as important an adjunct to their public appearance as their bodies or boots.

If you want a man to think you are very clever show unbounded appreciation of his achievements.

Many a man has asked some woman to let him take care of her in order to get her to take care of him.

Men do not understand that it is not because a woman cannot take aim that she does not hit things, but because she is too soft-hearted.

Love should be called the ether of life, those under its influence seem so insensible to outside joy or pain.

Some persons who have been "crossed in love" always give the impression of having just hit their "funny bone."

The much-vaunted mantle of charity is often rendered quite useless by rents from the sword of strict justice.

Disaffection with one's condition in life is the match that has started many a spark of genius which has later illumined the world.

So few women realize the vital difference between being part of a man's happiness and merely a part of his pleasure.

Short Sermon to the Lonely.

You are lonely, my dear friend. I would fain wander with you in the lonely path and show you some of the hidden beauties that linger where the feet of other pilgrims have so bravely trod.

You are looking over yonder, where the skies seem brighter and where the voices of mother, father, sister, brother, wife and child mingle in sweet and discordant harmony. You are alone, or, at least, you feel that you are.

Let us see; we will rest for a moment on this green bank of the wayside and pluck the violets at our feet. I have a book with me as a companion. In it are reminders of my mother's garden.

Here is a grape leaf and tendrils, which bring a picture of purple clusters, climbing, climbing, climbing. Now we find a half blown rose, which holds its apple blossom color, and our memories repeat the wonderful words of the poet:

"Every Rose is an Autograph of Almighty God."

And thus, by the wayside, we behold His writing.

A faint breath stirs the grasses at our feet, and we seem to hear the rustle of a white garment by our side.

Let us read a few words from the book: "He shall give His angels charge concerning thee."

O words of comfort, O words of cheer—From my eyelids there falls the answering tear.

My heart is strengthened, I will trust Him today.

By my side walks the Angel, to allow me the way.

ALICE S. MITCHELL

Autobiography Of A Fad.

I was born in Paris, springing, Mirrevalle, full-fledged from the brain of my creator—a French actress. I came across the Atlantic in a trunk, was dragged out to daylight by a profane customs officer, entered in a book, paid exorbitant rates for and sprung upon an unsuspecting public on Broadway.

I traveled extensively, having been seen on a Montana ranch, a Mexican hacienda and a New England village at the same time. Then I met a monster named Benjamin Fanny, which destroyed me, and wiped my race from the face of the earth. It was the same power which had given me birth, so I had "no kick coming."

I, who had ruled palaces and loved alike, died because I died, there has never been any other reason for my demise known to bacteriologists—the fact alone is yet beyond human ken. I was buried with my countless forefathers in the Potter's Field of oblivion. But we lie content, knowing that we shall soon in form be exhumed from the depths of some future day—for there is transmigration and far more surely than for human souls.

And so above us it is well written, "Femine Fads of the Ages." They rise from their Lazars, Rejuvenate in Face."

When a woman laughs she is either pretty or homely. No matter how exquisitely shaped her front teeth may be in repose, the minute they separate in a smile and the two rows of incisors are exposed to view her looks are made or marred.

Of course, a woman who has by nature uneven and discolored teeth can hope for little in the way of making them resemble the much desired rows of gleaming pearls, but with the aid of a good dentist she may overcome many of the defects. It seems almost needless to mention the necessity for constantly watching the teeth, for nearly every man, woman and child has learned the value of visiting a dentist semi-annually, or perhaps oftener. It is really the only way to keep the teeth in excellent condition.

However, this alone is not sufficient. Science has proved to us that disintegration is going on constantly, and the only method of preventing decay is to care for them every day.

The value of sound and beautiful teeth is incalculable, and it is a well known fact that their appearance is an indication of the general health of the individual. Those who suffer from dyspepsia or any gastric ailment will necessarily display indications of the ailment in their teeth. A man or woman possessing straight, even rows of clear white incisors will invariably present an example of almost perfect health.

There is no part of the physical organization that will more quickly show the effects of ill health than the teeth, and conversely they are extremely susceptible to good treatment.

A careful overhauling by the dentist every six months, or even four times a year, is not enough. There are unseen and insidious agents constantly seeking the destruction of all teeth, and the only way to prevent them from accomplishing their work is to care for the mouth daily. It is very good advice to say "keep them clean," but even this is not enough to successfully wage warfare against the multitude of germs lying in wait to accomplish their end.

The teeth should be brushed thoroughly night and morning, and there is more in this act of cleaning than the average person realizes. In the first place, the toothbrush should be selected with the utmost care; this should fit the mouth and the bristles must not be too stiff.

This is a mistake frequently made by even the most intelligent persons, for they are so desirous of removing every bit of foreign substance from the molars and incisors that they use bristles so stiff that in a short time the enamel of the teeth shows a decided wearing. Of course a brush that has rather unpleasing bristles does cleanse the teeth more rapidly and successfully than one of flexible hairs, but the result will, in the end, as she furtively tried to see the back of her head in the nearest mirror.

Synopsis of Case No. 113

300,000 francs, ($70,000) is mysteriously stolen from the safe in the banking house of M. Fauvel. The cashier, Prosper Bertomy, is accused of the robbery as he alone, with M. Fauvel, knows the secret word of the safe's combination. Bertomy is arrested. He writes to M. Nina Gipsy, telling her of his disgrace. The note gets into the possession of M. Fanferlot, a detective employed on the case, and it is used as evidence against Bertomy in his trial, where it develops that Bertomy has been intimate with a young man, Raoul Lagors, who is rich but not. Neither Lagors, nor the office boy who slept in the room beside the safe the night of the robbery, can be found as witnesses for the trial. It also transpires that the secret word of the combination, the night the money was stolen, was "Gipsy." At his trial, Bertomy admits he spent 50,000 francs for living during the previous year. The night before the robbery, he went to the country home of M. Lagors. The judge in charge asks Bertomy why he suddenly ceased attention to a young lady, whose attentions he had previously sought, and when the judge intimates that M. Gipsy was the cause, Bertomy strenuously denies it.

"I had reasons which I cannot reveal," answered Prosper in a trembling voice.

The judge breathed freely. At last he had discovered a vulnerable point in the prisoner's armor.

"Did Mlle. Madeleine dislodge you?" Prosper was silent. He was visibly agitated.

"Speak," said M. Patrigent. "I warn you that this circumstance is one of the most important in your case."

"Whatever be the cost, I am compelled to keep silence."

"Beware of what you do. Justice will not be satisfied with scruples of conscience."

M. Patrigent waited for an answer. No answer came. Prosper was buried in thought.

"Monsieur," he finally said, "there is one detail I have forgotten to mention. It may be of importance in my defense."

"Explain."

"The messenger I sent to the bank was with me when I put the bills in the safe. At any rate, I left the office before he did."

"Very well. He shall be examined. Now you can return to your cell."

M. Patrigent thus abruptly dismissed Prosper because he wished to immediately act upon this last piece of information.

"Sigault," said he to his secretary as soon as Prosper had left the room, "is not this Antonin the man who was excused from testifying because he sent a doctor's certificate declaring him too ill to appear?"

"Yes, monsieur."

"Where does he live?"

"He is not at his home. Fanferlot says he was so ill that he was taken to the hospital—the Dubois hospital."

"Very well. I am going to examine him today—this very hour. Take writing materials and send for a carriage."

Would Antonin be able to answer? It was doubtful. The director of the hospital said that, although the man suffered horribly from a broken knee, his mind was perfectly clear.

"That being the case, monsieur," said the judge, "I wish to examine him and desire that no one be admitted while he makes his deposition."

"Oh, no one will disturb you, monsieur. His room contains four beds, but they are just now unoccupied."

"Very well. Come on."

When Antonin saw the judge enter, followed by a little lean man with the portfolio of an advocate, he at once knew that they had come to take his deposition.

"Ah," he said, "monsieur comes to see me about M. Bertomy's case?"

"Precisely."

In answer to the usual questions the messenger swore that he was named Antonin Poche, was forty years old, born at Cadoujac (Gironde), and was unmarried.

"Now," said the judge, "are you well enough to clearly answer any questions I may put?"

"Certainly, monsieur."

"Did you on the 27th of February go to the Bank of France for the 350,000 francs that were stolen?"

"Yes, monsieur."

"At what hour did you return?"

"Five o'clock."

"Do you remember what M. Bertomy did when you handed him the money? Now, do not be in a hurry; think before you answer."

"Let me see. First he counted the notes and made four packages of them, which he put in the safe. Then, it seems to me, he locked the safe and—yes, I am not mistaken—he went out."

He uttered these last words so quickly that, forgetting his knee, he half started up, but with a cry of pain.

"Are you sure of what you say?" asked the judge.

M. Patrigent's solemn tone seemed to frighten Antonin.

CHAPTER V.

THE Archangel hotel, Mme. Gipsy's asylum, was the most elegant building on the Quai St. Michel. A person who paid her fortnight's board in advance was treated with consideration at this hotel. Mme. Alexandre, who had been a pretty woman, was now stout, tightly laced, always overdressed and fond of wearing a number of flashy gold chains, falling in cascades over her fat bosom. She had bright eyes and white teeth, but, alas, a red nose. Of all her weaknesses—and heaven knows she had indulged in every variety—only one remained; she loved a good dinner, with plenty of wine. She loved her husband, and about the time M. Patrigent was leaving the hospital she began to be worried that her "little man" had not returned to dinner. She was about to sit down without him when the hotel boy cried out:

"Here is monsieur!"

"Why, how late you are, my little man!" she cried as she dropped her knife and fork and rushed forward to embrace him.

But he received her caresses with an air of abstraction.

"I'm tired," he said. "I have been the whole day playing billiards with Evariste. M. Fauvel's valet, and allowed him to win as often as he wished. I became acquainted with him yesterday, and now I am his best friend. If I wish to enter M. Fauvel's service as a messenger, I can rely upon M. Evariste's good word."

"What, you be an office messenger?"

"Of course I would. How else am I to get into M. Fauvel's house for the purpose of studying my characters?"

"Then the valet gave you no news?"

"Nothing that I could make use of, and yet I turned him inside out like a glove. This banker is a remarkable man. Evariste says he has not a single vice, not even a little defect by which his valet could gain 10 sous. He neither smokes, drinks nor plays—in fact, he is a saint. He is worth millions and lives as respectably and quietly as a grocer. He is devoted to his wife, adores his children, is very hospitable, but seldom goes into society."

"Then his wife is young?"

"She must be about fifty."

Mme. Alexandre reflected a moment.

"Did you inquire about the other members of the family?"

"Certainly. The younger son is an officer in the army. The elder son, Lucien, lives with his parents and is as proper as a young lady."

"And this niece of whom you have spoken?"

"Evariste could tell me nothing about her."

Mme. Alexandre shrugged her shoulders.

"If you have discovered nothing, it is because there is nothing to be discovered. Still do you know what I would do if I were in your place?"

"What?"

"I would consult M. Lecoq."

At the mention of this name Fanferlot jumped up as if he had been shot.

"That's pretty advice! Do you want me to lose my place? M. Lecoq does not suspect that I have anything to do with the case except to obey his orders."

"Who told you to let him know you were investigating it on your own account? You can consult him with an air of indifference, as if you were not at all interested, and after you have got his opinion you can take advantage of it."

The detective weighed his wife's words.

"Perhaps you are right," he said. "Yet M. Lecoq is so devilishly shrewd that he might see through it all."

"Shrewd!" echoed Mme. Alexandre. "Shrewd! All of you at the police office say that so often that you have made his reputation."

"Well, I will think the matter over. But in the meantime what does the little one say?"

The "little one" was Mme. Nina Gipsy.

In taking up her abode at the Archangel the poor girl thought she was following good advice, and as Fanferlot had not shown himself, she was still under the impression that she had obeyed a friend of Prosper. When she received her summons from M. Patrigent, she admired the wonderful skill of the police in discovering her hiding place, for she had established herself at the hotel under a false or, rather, her true name, Palmyre Chocarella. Artfully questioned by her inquisitive landlady, she had without any mistrust confided her history to her.

Thus Fanferlot was able to pose before the judge as a skillful detective when he pretended to have discovered all this information from a variety of sources.

"The little one is still up stairs," answered Mme. Alexandre. "She suspects nothing. But to keep her in her present ignorance becomes daily more difficult. I don't know what the judge told her, but she came home very angry. She wanted to go and make a fuss at M. Fauvel's. Then she wrote a letter, which she told Jean to post for her. But I kept it to show you."

"What?" interrupted Fanferlot. "You have a letter and did not tell me before? Perhaps it contains the clue to the mystery. Quick! Give it to me!"

Mme. Alexandre opened a little cupboard and took out a letter, which she handed to her husband.

"Here, take it," she said, "and be satisfied."

Considering that she used to be a chambermaid, Palmyre Chocarella, since become Mme. Gipsy, wrote a good letter. It was addressed in a free, flowing hand: "M. M. L. de Clameran, Forge-Master, Hotel du Louvre. To be handed to M. Raoul de Lagors. (Very important.)"

"Oh, ho!" said Fanferlot, accompanying his explanation with a little whistle, as was his habit when he thought he had made a grand discovery. "Oh, ho!"

"Do you intend to open it?" questioned Mme. Alexandre.

"Yes," said Fanferlot as he dexterously opened the envelope.

Mme. Alexandre leaned over the shoulder of her "little man," and they both read:

M. Raoul-Prosper is in prison accused of a robbery which I know he never committed. Three days ago I wrote to you on this subject.

"What?" interrupted Fanferlot. "This silly girl wrote and I never saw the letter?"

"But, little man, she must have posted it herself the day she went to the Palais de Justice."

"Very likely," said Fanferlot, satisfied. He continued reading:

I wrote to you three days ago and have no reply. Who will help Prosper if his best friends desert him? If you don't answer this letter, I shall consider myself released from a certain promise and without scruple will tell Prosper of the conversation I overheard between you and M. de Clameran. But I can count on you, can I not? I shall expect you at the Archangel hotel day after tomorrow between 12 and 4.

Nina Gipsy.

The letter read, Fanferlot without a word proceeded to copy it.

"Well," said Mme. Alexandre, "what do you say?"

Fanferlot was delicately reexamining the copied letter when the door of the hotel office was suddenly opened, and the boy whispered:

"Hist! Hist!"

Fanferlot disappeared with marvelous celerity into a dark closet. He had barely time to close the door before Mme. Gipsy entered.

Alas, the poor girl was sadly changed. She was pale, her cheeks were hollow and her eyes were red with weeping.

On seeing her Mme. Alexandre could not repress a cry of surprise.

"Why, my child, you are not going out?"

"I am obliged to do so, madame, and I came to ask you to tell any one that may call during my absence to wait until I return."

"But where are you going at this hour, sick as you are?"

Mme. Gipsy hesitated a moment.

"Oh," she said, "you are so good to me that I am tempted to confide in you. Read this note, which a messenger just now brought to me."

"What?" cried Mme. Alexandre, perfectly aghast. "A messenger come here and go up to your room?"

"Is there anything surprising in that?"

"Oh, no."

And in a tone loud enough to be heard in the closet she read the note:

A friend of Prosper, who can neither receive you nor present himself at your house, needs to speak to you. Be in the stage office opposite the St. Jacques tower tonight at 9 precisely, and the writer will approach and tell you what he has to say to you. I have appointed this public place for the rendezvous so as to relieve you of all fear.

"And you are going to this rendezvous?" asked Mme. Alexandre.

"Certainly."

"But it is imprudent, foolish. It is a snare to trap you."

"It makes no difference," interrupted Gipsy. "I am so unfortunate already that I have nothing more to dread. Any change would be a relief."

And, without waiting to hear any more, she set out. She was not in the street before Fanferlot bounced out of the closet.

"A thousand thunders!" he cried. "Are people to walk over the Archangel as if it were a public street? Was ever such impudence heard of?"

He continued. "A messenger comes into my house and goes up stairs without being seen by anybody! And the idea of you, a sensible woman, being idiotic enough to dissuade that little viper from keeping the appointment!"

"But my dear—"

"Did you not suppose that I would follow her and discover what she is attempting to conceal? Come, make haste and help me, so that she won't recognize me."

In a few minutes Fanferlot was completely disguised by a thick beard, a wig and one of those long linen blouses worn by men who go about seeking work and at the same time hoping they may not find it.

"Have you your handkerchief?" asked the solicitous Mme. Alexandre when he was ready.

"Yes, yes. Make haste and post that letter to M. de Clameran and keep good watch."

And without listening to his wife, who cried out, "Good luck!" Fanferlot darted away.

Mme. Gipsy had ten minutes' start of him, but he ran up the street he knew she must have taken and overtook her near the Change bridge. On Clatelet place she strolled up and down several times, read the theater bills and finally took a seat on a bench and at a quarter of 9 entered the omnibus office and sat down. A moment after Fanferlot entered; but, as he feared that Mme. Gipsy might recognize him in spite of his heavy beard, he took a seat at the opposite end of the room, where it was dark.

As the Hotel de Ville clock struck 9 a man entered, walked directly up to Gipsy, bowed and took a seat beside her. He was a medium sized man, rather stout, with a crimson face and fiery red whiskers. His dress was that of a well-to-do merchant. There was nothing in his appearance to excite attention. Fanferlot watched him eagerly.

"My friend," he said to himself, "in future I shall recognize you no matter where we meet, and this very evening I will follow you and find out who you are."

Despite his intent listening he could not hear a word spoken by the stranger or Gipsy. All he could do was to judge by their actions and countenances what was the subject of their conversation. When the stout man bowed and spoke to her, the girl looked so surprised that it was evident she had never seen him before. When he sat down by her and spoke to her, she jumped up with a frightened look, as if seeking to escape. A single look caused her to resume her seat. Then as the stout man went on talking Gipsy displayed great apprehension. She positively refused to do something; then suddenly she seemed to consent. At one moment she appeared ready to weep and the next her pretty face was illumined by a bright smile. Finally she shook hands with him, as if she was confirming a promise.

"What can all that mean?" said Fanferlot to himself as he sat in his dark corner, biting his nails. "What an idiot I am to have placed myself so far off!"

He was thinking how he could manage to approach nearer without arousing their suspicions when the fat man got up, offered his arm to Mme. Gipsy, who accepted it without hesitation, and together they walked toward the door. They were so preoccupied with one another that Fanferlot thought he could follow them without risk. Reaching the door, he saw the stout man and Gipsy cross the pavement, approach a hackney coach, sent for from the omnibus office, and enter it.

"Very good," muttered Fanferlot. "I've got them now. There is no use of hurrying any more."

When the coach started, he followed at a brisk trot. The cab went up the Boulevard Sebastopol. It went pretty fast. But it was not for nothing that Fanferlot had won the name of Squirrel. With his elbows glued to his sides, he ran on. By the time he had reached the Boulevard St. Denis he began to get breathless and stiff from a pain in his side, then the cab abruptly turned into the Faubourg St. Martin. But Fanferlot, who at eight years of age had been familiar with every street in Paris, was not to be baffled. He was a man of resources. He seized the springs of the coach, raised himself up by the strength of his wrists and hung on behind, with his legs resting on the axle-tree of the rear wheels. He was certainly not comfortable, but, then, he no longer ran the risk of being distanced.

"Now," he said behind his false beard, "drive on."

The man whipped up his horses and drove rapidly along the hilly street of the Faubourg St. Martin. Finally at the old "barrier" the cab stopped in front of a winestore, and the driver jumped down from his seat and went in. The detective also left his uncomfortable post and, crouching in a doorway, waited for Gipsy and the stout man to get out, ready to follow them. Five minutes passed and they had not alighted.
