

SHOT AT A SOVEREIGN

THREE EFFORTS FAIL TO KILL KING OF BELGIUM

ITALIAN IS THE ASSAILANT

Leopold Was on His Way to the Cathedral at Brussels to Be Present at the Singing of a Te Deum in Memory of the Late Queen, Marie Henrietta

(By Associated Press.)
Brussels, Nov. 15.—Three shots were fired at king of Belgium as he was proceeding to the cathedral to attend a Te Deum in memory of the late Queen Marie Henrietta. He was not hit. The man who fired the shots is an Italian. He stood in front of the Bank of Brussels on Rue Royale. Other chambers in the revolver proved to be blank, so it is presumed that those fired were equally harmless.

The man was immediately arrested and the police had some difficulty in rescuing him from the hands of the crowd. He gave name of Robini.

The royal cortège consisted of several carriages besides, that of the king, containing the Count and Countess of Flanders, Prince and Princess Albert of Flanders, Princess Clementine and aides de camp and ladies of honor.

TEXAS TOO GOOD FOR NASHVILLE

LATTER'S FOOTBALL TEAM GOES DOWN IN DEFEAT

THE SCORE IS 11 TO 5

A Hard Fought Battle From Start to Finish and Anybody's Game Till the Whistle Last Sounds—Texas Wins on Line Bucking and Nashville's Fumbles

(Special to The Telegram.)
NASHVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 15.—In a stoutly contested game the University of Texas defeated the University of Nashville here today by a score of 11 to 5.

Texas won on touchdowns in the first half, Nashville improving as the game progressed and having the best of the argument in the latter half.

The score might have been different but for Nashville's costly fumbles. Texas' play consisted in line bucking and mass formations.

The scrimmages were among the prettiest seen here this season. Jackson was Texas' bright particular star.

OUT PEELS MONT PELEE

GUATEMALA VOLCANO DESTROYS HUNDREDS OF LIVES

THE ERUPTIONS CONTINUE

All the Estates in the Vicinity Are Buried Under Ashes—Coffee Plantations Ruined, the Owners of Which Are for the Most Part From the United States

(By Associated Press.)
NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—Astonishing revelations of great loss of life and property caused by the eruption of the Santa Maria volcano are being made daily, says a cablegram to the Herald from Guatemala City under date of Nov. 9, transmitted by way of San Salvador. Eruptions continue. Many hundreds of human beings perished and the destruction of property is considered greater than in the island of Martinique during the eruptions of Mont Pelee.

All the estates in the neighborhood of the volcano are buried under volcanic ashes which reach to the tops of houses. The richest coffee estates are completely ruined. The principal losers are the large coffee planters, mostly United States citizens and Germans, whose properties are ruined.

Two or three new craters have been formed on the side of the volcano. There were no eruptions from the summit.

Pumice and ashes were carried chiefly in the southern and western directions. The sea has a coating of volcanic material extending for many miles.

The loss of the coffee crop, which is Guatemala's principal export, has completely demoralized commerce and the government finances generally.

MOTION FOR A NEW TRIAL OVERRULED

Millionaire Butler Cannot Have Another Trial, but an Appeal to Supreme Court Is Made

(By Associated Press.)
COLUMBIA, Mo., Nov. 15.—A motion for a new trial in the Butler case was overruled.

When asked by Judge Hickaday if he had any reason to offer why sentence should not be passed on him, Edward Butler said:

"I have nothing to say, your honor, further than that I am not guilty of the charge preferred against me."

"The jury has passed on that question, Mr. Butler," was Judge Hockaday's reply.

"In accordance with the verdict I sentence you to imprisonment in the state penitentiary for a term of three years."

The filing of an appeal to the state supreme court followed. Judge Hockaday fixed Butler's bond at $10,000, which was signed by a number of prominent citizens of Columbia.

FINANCIAL STATEMENT

REPORT OF LABOR COMMITTEE IS APPROVED

ASK NATIONAL INSURANCE

The Enactment of Laws Sought for to Provide for Working People Who Are Disabled by Payment of Governmental Insurance—Seek to Abolish Money Fines

(By Associated Press.)
New Orleans, Nov. 15.—As usual the committee on credentials had the floor when the convention of the American Federation of Labor opened this morning.

Its report was that of John R. O'Leary of the Core-makers of Denver and E. A. Bassette of the Denver Trades and Labor Assembly be seated. The report of the committee was adopted.

The auditing committee reported following financial condition of the organization:

Balance on hand at the opening of the last fiscal year, $8,814; total receipts, $144,398; total cash received during the year, $153,312; expenditures, $119,086; balance on hand, $34,226. It was approved.

Committee on labels reported that various applications for labels had been approved. Adopted.

Chairman Tanguary of the executive council reported that various reports submitted to the council belonged to other committees and asked they be referred where they belonged, in order that there might be but one report upon one subject. His suggestion was adopted.

The most suggestions submitted were as follows:

That the good offices of the incoming executive council be asked to secure the enactment of national laws for disabled working people and to provide a system of national insurance for their assistance during enforced idleness.

That the American Federation of Labor appeal to congress to submit to the legislatures of the several states a proposition for an amendment to the federal constitution which shall prohibit money fines in court and "put administration of justice to rich and poor upon same footing."

Status of Non-Union Miners.

Saratoga, Pa., Nov. 15.—During the hearing before the anthracite strike commission John T. Lenahan, one of the attorneys for the non-union men, made an address. He asked what would be the status before the commission of the non-union men who worked during the strike. Judge Gray, chairman, said the commission could not give a decision until it had carefully considered the matter.

The miners have a number of witnesses, as have also the operators.

SEVEN MEN PRISONERS ON TIBURON ISLAND

It Is Thought the Indians on Island in Gulf of California Have Killed and Eaten Several White Men

(By Associated Press.)
LOS ANGELES, Nov. 15.—James McCuen of Hermosillo, Mex., who is now visiting friends at Los Angeles, says that recently Seri Indians, a mainland tribe, who are employed on his cattle ranch, told him there were seven white men held prisoners on Tiburon island. It is believed by those who heard the story of the prisoners among the latter Lieutenant R. E. L. Robinson and his partner, Mr. Logan, of Cleveland, O., who went to the island ten years ago and never returned, and Captain Porter Sanborn, that these parties had been massacred and eaten by the Indians.

MISSION TO END THIS EVENING

BISHOP COLEMAN OF DELAWARE WILL CONCLUDE WORK HERE

SERVICES OF YESTERDAY

Closing Sermons at St. Andrew's Parish House Attract Large Audiences

Tonight ends the ten days' mission at St. Andrew's Parish House, conducted by Bishop Leighton R. Coleman, D. D., L.L.D., of Delaware.

Services today are as follows: Holy communion at 7 a. m.; prayer, litany and sermon at 11 a. m.; children's service at 4 p. m.; quiet hour for men exclusively, at 5 p. m.; concluding evening sermon at 8 p. m.

Last night, despite the rain, Bishop Coleman spoke to a good-sized audience from the text, "Wherefore, O King Akrippa, I was not disobedient to the Heavenly vision."

Yesterday morning Bishop Coleman held a meditation on the "Holy Communion," discussing the requirements as given in the catechism, i. e., self-examination, repentance, faith, a steadfast purpose to lead a better life, and charity.

At 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, Bishop Coleman addressed the children on the importance of doing one's best at all times and following in the steps of our Lord instead of walking in a path of our own, which always has the element of danger.

Friday evening Bishop Coleman gave an address on "Temperance Reform From the Church's Standpoint."

It was remarkable for its breadth and justice, emphasizing the need of charity to all temperance workers, whether they be total abstainers or not. He emphasized the distinctions between Sin, "a violation of God's law;" crime, "a violation of man's law;" and Vice, "a violation of nature's law."

At the close of the service many of the congregation remained for an informal discussion of temperance and a conference with the bishop.

MEMBERSHIP DOUBLED BY ONE DAY'S WORK

PERSISTENT EFFORT ON THE PART OF THE BOARD OF TRADE SOLICITING COMMITTEE RAISES TOTAL NUMBER OF MEMBERS FROM 107 TO 214—DIRECTORS ARE NOW JUBILANT OVER OUTLOOK

"167 names." "Who could have believed it?" "I'd like to see the man who said a committee couldn't go out and get members for the Board of Trade."

The members of the committee of five which has broken the record for one day's work in soliciting new members for the Fort Worth Board of Trade are more than jubilant over the result. One hundred and seven names, new names, just exactly the number on the roll when they started out to work at 10 o'clock this morning, were added to the membership lists before they quit work at 5 o'clock this afternoon.

At the meeting of the board last Tuesday evening there were a few enthusiastic ones who believed that 200 members could be secured if five committees of five members each worked for two weeks.

Now only two of the five committees have been at work, and for two days. The membership roll is already over 200.

The members of the committee who have established the record for the week so far are as follows: Paul Waples, W. T. Maddox, Jacob Washer, J. Z. Wheat, B. B. Paddock. They started to work at 10 o'clock and by 3 this afternoon had fifty-three names, of whom forty were new ones. The other fifty-four names were secured between the hours of 3 and 5 o'clock.

Twenty-five names an hour was the rate at which men joined the board this afternoon. When the first day's work of sixty names was turned in it was estimated that at least 300 members could be secured instead of 200. Now from indications, 500 or 600 will undoubtedly be on the roll when the canvass ends.

Today's work wasn't in the busiest district either. Houston street was well canvassed and some of Main, but the territory hasn't been half touched, say the workers.

This week the canvass will be begun harder than ever. The first two committees have set a high mark, but those who will follow will endeavor to establish a still better record.

FORT WORTH'S GROWTH FOR THE PAST YEAR

BEER KEGS FLOAT ON THE CITY STREETS

Startling as it may seem, beer kegs floated about the streets of the city at a late hour last night.

The heavy rain and thunder storm, starting at 7 o'clock in the evening, lasted nearly all night. By midnight the water was running even with the curbs and in some cases went even higher. It was at one of these places a number of beer kegs were floated away from the side of a saloon and went merrily sailing down Main street.

Houston street was a river a greater part of last night and large quantities of gravel and mud were washed away by the rushing waters.

The prediction is that last night's thunderstorm will be followed by the first frost of the season which is due to arrive tonight. Rosebuds may be nipped but a heavy frost is not expected.

SERMON ON COMMANDMENTS

Rev. J. W. Gillon Will Begin Series at Broadway Baptist Church

Rev. J. W. Gillon will, this evening, at the Broadway Baptist church, begin a series of twelve sermons on the ten commandments. The first sermon was to have been preached two weeks ago, but owing to rain on that evening and the absence of the pastor last Sabbath evening, the series has been postponed until tonight. All are invited to attend these evening services.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS

Sealed proposals will be received by the mayor and street and alley committee of the city council of the city of Fort Worth, Texas, until 3 p. m. 21st day of November, 1902, as follows:

For furnishing all the materials and labor necessary for paving Houston street in said city, between the court house and Texas and Pacific railway reservation, with sheet asphalt, or brick, or some combination of said materials.

The work to be done will comprise approximately 25,000 square yards. Complete plans and specifications, with forms of proposal and contract, will be ready for the examination of bidders on or before the first day of November, 1902.

A certified check, on some Fort Worth bank, for $2,000, payable to Thomas J. Powell, mayor of the city of Fort Worth, Texas, must accompany each proposal.

In the letting of a contract for the contemplated work, the financial responsibility of the bidders, and their experience in this particular line of work, together with their equipments of implements and machinery will be considered by the committee.

Persons acting as agents, must file with the proposal, documents showing their authority to act for their principals.

The city reserves the right to waive informalities, and to reject any and all bids.

Dated, Fort Worth, Texas, Nov. 1, 1902. B. L. Waggaman, Q. T. Moreland, E. C. Orrick, committee; Thomas J. Powell, mayor; John B. Hawley, city engineer.

ORDINANCE NO. 852

An Ordinance to Require the Railroads Crossing East Seventeenth Street, in the City of Fort Worth, to Keep Watchmen at Their Said Crossings Both Day and Night

Be it ordained by the city council of the city of Fort Worth:

Section 1. That each railroad company having a track or tracks crossing East Seventeenth street between Jones street and the east line of Terry street shall be, and the same is hereby required at its own cost and expense to keep a watchman at the said crossing at all hours both day and night. Provided, however, that only one watchman at a time need be kept to watch over several contiguous tracks, which are in such close proximity that they can be safely guarded by a single person.

Section 2. That any railroad company having a track or tracks crossing the said street within the limits named in the preceding section of this ordinance, and failing or refusing to keep a watchman at the said crossing at any hour of any day or night, shall be adjudged guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be fined not less than one dollar and not more than fifty dollars.

Section 3. Each and every day of which default shall be made by any railroad company which shall fail to keep a watchman at said crossing as

SUFFERED WITH CATARRH ALL MY LIFE

Miss Crowe Says: "I Have Had Catarrh Ever Since I Can Remember—Pe-ru-na Cured Me."

MISS NELLIE CROWE

MISS Nellie Crow, 1114 Edith Place, Memphis, Tenn., writes: "As I was cured of a chronic case of catarrh of the head, I have had more or less catarrh ever since I can remember, and have tried numerous remedies and doctors' prescriptions, and while some things would help me for the time being, it is to Peru-na that I owe a perfect cure."

Catarrh is a Disease That Does Not Cure Itself.

There are a vast multitude of people who can subscribe to the above statement. In the first place, catarrh is a life-long disease unless cured. Catarrh is a disease that does not cure itself, and is not easily cured by the best of remedies. The doctors all try to treat catarrh. Their remedies generally fail to cure. The people first go to a doctor and give him a faithful trial. After they have tried one doctor, they generally try another. Sometimes three or four. As a rule, however, they are generally obliged to resort to Peru-na at last. In Peru-na they find what they have been seeking—a perfect cure. A cure that lasts. A host of people have spent thousands of dollars to get rid of catarrh and afterwards were cured by a half dozen bottles of Peru-na.

Many Have Catarrh and Don't Know It. Catarrh is almost a national curse. Nearly everybody has had it more or less. A majority of people who have catarrh in its incipient stage don't know it. Catarrh will produce so many different conditions that it is no wonder that it is so often not recognized.

Catarrh will produce deafness. Will affect the eyesight. Catarrh will enlarge the tonsils and will make the throat sore.

Catarrh will cause consumption, dyspepsia, kidney disease and so many other maladies that it is no wonder that doctors fail to recognize it. Peru-na cures catarrh wherever located. Peru-na cures catarrh in whatever form. Accept no substitute for Peru-na. Peru-na is the only systemic remedy for catarrh yet devised. If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peru-na, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis. Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, O.

Female Catarrh Very Common Among Women—Pe-ru-na Cures Catarrh Wherever Located.

Mrs. M. E. Jenkins, President Victoria Lodge, Queen's Daughters, in a letter from 133 Goyean Street, Windsor, Ont., Can., writes:

"I heartily endorse Peru-na as an excellent tonic for a weak and broken down woman, for such I was before I began taking Peru-na and it really worked wonders with my system. My health is excellent now, and whenever I feel languid or nervous I take a few doses of Peru-na and it goes right to the spot. A number of my friends have taken it and are universal in its praise."—Mrs. M. E. Jenkins.

DRAUGHON'S Practical Business College, At 300 Main St.

Board of Trade building, corner Seventh and Houston, is not only one of the leading educational institutions in the city, but in the South. It is strongly endorsed by business men, local and elsewhere.

It gives a superior course of instruction and employs competent and high-salaried teachers. It has special facilities for securing positions, and makes no claim that its records will not sustain. While Professor Draughon is proprietor of business colleges located in eight cities, and conducts an employment department at an expense of thousands of dollars annually, he does not charge his students for securing positions. The college is open day and night. For a limited time he will admit a few students from each postoffice who cannot conveniently pay cash, and with the exception of a small cash payment, as a guarantee of good faith, the balance may be paid out of salary without interest, and without security, after course is completed and position secured.

For catalogue and "application blank A," call or address Draughon's Practical Business College, Board of Trade building, corner Seventh and Houston streets.

The Black Vipers played to a top-heavy gallery, middle-weight balcony, and slender downstairs at Greenwall's last night. The plot centers in one of the most notorious of Chicago's Halstead street saloons, and save for ingenious instruments of torture used in the third act, fails to rise above the common-place. The acting was ordinary, its only virtue being in the fact that the words were spoken intelligibly.

MISS EVA OLMSTEAD OF SAVANNAH GEORGIA.

A Weak and Nervous Young Woman made Strong and Well by WINE OF CARDUI.

11-15 Drayton Street, SAVANNAH, GA., May 19, 1902. Wine of Cardui has certainly been of great benefit to me. A few months ago I was badly run down, weak and nervous and unable to sleep. I had been irregular for months and my general health was poor. By the advice of a friend I began taking Wine of Cardui while I must admit I had little faith in it. But I soon became convinced that I was not taking an ordinary medicine, but something of extraordinary value. At least it seemed admirably suited to my case. My appetite soon returned and I found restful sleep. My general health began to improve and I became regular, suffering no pains but enjoying perfect health.

Eva Olmstead

FEMALE TROUBLES are responsible for the thousands of weak and nervous girls there are in the world. The trouble is they do not come into womanhood in the natural and healthy way. It is important that the regular functions be properly established at the coming of womanhood. If they are not, irregular menses soon make invalids of girls. This is a fact worthy of every mother's serious consideration. Mothers do not give their daughters' health the attention they should. But there is not another living who could not give her suffering daughter the same health Miss Olmstead enjoys.

The letter from this cured girl shows every mother and daughter how perfect health can be secured by taking Wine of Cardui. That Wine of Cardui cured Eva Olmstead is in itself a guaranty that this successful remedy will do the same for you. This sincere grateful letter tells its own story of the cure that Wine of Cardui effected in making a weak, nervous girl strong and healthy and nothing can be said to make it stronger. If you want such an experience take Wine of Cardui. This great remedy is needed at every trying crisis in a woman's life. All druggists sell $1.00 bottles of Wine of Cardui.

ASPHALT PAVING HAS ADVOCATES

FRIENDS OF CLEANER STREETS FOR CITY SING ITS PRAISES

REPLACING OTHER KINDS

In Some Cities of the East Even Granite Blocks Are Being Taken Out And Asphalt is Being Used to Replace Them - Style of Pavement Favored in Some of Largest Towns

A prominent attorney of the city who has recently returned from an extended visit in the East has come back an enthusiastic advocate of asphalt for Houston street.

"I visited all of the principal cities of the Eastern states and everywhere I went I learned that asphalt for paving is growing in favor.

"I not only heard it but saw evidences that this is true," says the attorney. "In Washington, D. C. I even saw where they were taking up old granite blocks and replacing them with the newer, less noisy and cleaner style of paving. In Baltimore and even in New York where the traffic is unusually heavy, the asphalt is being put down, not by the block but by the mile.

"One argument I heard in the East, which does not seem to have been brought out here, is that asphalt is the most healthful pavement used.

You may wonder what the city's pavement has to do with its health, but I assure you I laughed too, until I heard the earnest advocates of asphalt present their arguments.

"They tell me that in the big cities where the dust and dirt is full of disease germs of all kinds, the dust catches in the crevices between the bricks in the form of mud whenever an attempt is made to wash the brick pavement off, and as soon as the pavement dries the disease-bearing dust is flying again. On the other hand the surface of the asphalt presents no place for the dust to lodge and consequently when it is washed off as is done in all the larger cities of the East, the street is left perfectly clean and practically free from bacteria-bearing dust. It's a novel argument to me, I'll admit," says the attorney in discussing the question.

"But it seems to me that in some of our Texas cities where there is a prevalence of pulmonary diseases which are usually spread by the germs attached to the flying dust, the idea is undoubtedly one worth trying. As you know, many people affected with lung trouble expirator on the streets, if not on the sidewalks, and this spectrum reeking with disease germs soon dries and mingles with the dust. I think asphalt paving from a sanitary standpoint is a question worth looking into."

AN EASY WAY

To Keep Well

It is easy to keep well if we would only observe each day a few simple rules of health. The most important thing is to keep the stomach right and to do this it is not necessary to diet or to follow a set rule or bill of fare. Such pampering simply makes a capricious appetite and a feeling that certain favorite articles of food must be avoided.

Prof. Wiechold gives pretty good advice on this subject; he says: "I am 68 years old and have never had a serious illness, and at the same time my life has been largely an indoor one. I early discovered that the way to keep healthy was to keep a healthy stomach, not by eating bran or crackers or dieting of any sort; on the contrary I always eat what my appetite craves, but daily for the past eight years I have made it a practice to take one or two of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets after each meal and I attribute my robust health for a man of my age to the regular daily use of Stuart's Tablets.

My physician first advised me to use them because he said they were perfectly harmless and were not a secret patent medicine, but contained only natural digestive, peptones and diastase, and after using them a few weeks I have never ceased to thank him for his advice.

I honestly believe the habit of taking Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets after meals is the real health habit, because their use brings health to the sick and ailing and preserves health to the well and strong."

Men and women past 50 years of age need a safe digestive after meals to insure a perfect digestion and to ward off disease, and the safest, best known and most widely used is Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

They are found in every well regulated household from Maine to California and in Great Britain and Australia are rapidly pushing their way into popular favor.

All druggists sell Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, full sized packages at 50 cents, and for a weak stomach a fifty cent package will often do fifty dollars worth of good.

Allow me to say a few words in praise of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I had a very severe cough and cold and feared I would get pneumonia, but after taking the second dose of this medicine I felt better, three bottles of it cured my cold and the pains in my chest disappeared entirely. I am most respectfully yours for health, Ralph S. Meyers, 64 Thirtieth St., Wheeling, W. Va. For sale by N. E. Grammer, druggist.

THE CIGARETTE FIENDS ALARMED

TWO INOFFENSIVE POLICEMEN CAUSE CONSTERNATION

CALLED AT OPERA HOUSE

They "Meant No Harm" But Simply Wanted to Investigate a Suspect's Alleged Bank Account - Two Arrests Followed, Also Two Pleas of Guilty

Quite a little curiosity was occasioned among the cigarette "Willies" who congregated about the opera house lobby between acts Friday night when Policemen Speight and Rolston rode up and asked Chief Usher Bondurant to call out W. A. Edrington of the Traders' National bank.

Mr. Edrington came out and after a whispered conversation with the big policemen the bunch waiked over to the bank. Mr. Edrington unlocked the door and he and Speight went inside.

The cigarettes made the "Willies" brains imagine all sorts of things, no doubt, for they clamored over to the bank and "rubbered" and puffed cigarette smoke and said silly nothings to each other. Finally Mr. Edrington and the policemen came out; Mr. Edrington locked the door, the policemen mounted their horses and rode away. Mr. Edrington walked quietly back to the opera house and as quietly took a seat. The "Willies" clamored in, the third act had begun, the "Willies" rustled down the aisles and stumbled over dainty toes and delicate drapery and fell into their seats annoying the singers and those who were there to hear them.

But then they are just "Willies" and who can blame them? These same "Willies" gather on the narrow sidewalk in front of the opera house when a play is over and crowd and jostle ladies and all others as they come out, puff cigarette smoke in their faces and "rubber."

Why can't Chief Rea and Manager Greenwall issue orders to have them disperse? They are a nuisance and blockade the sidewalk. The blockading of a sidewalk is a violation of the city ordinances.

But About the Story To return to the thread of the story: Mr. Edrington was wanted in order to find out if one C. P. Funk had money to his credit in the bank. Mr. Funk's name did not appear upon the big book of the bank. Hence Mr. Funk had no balance.

The reason given by the police for wanting to ascertain this information was that a check for $10 had been presented to a saloonkeeper named Walters. To this check was attached a signature purporting to be that of C. P. Funk.

The man presenting this check is said to have been one B. Edwards. Edwards also presented a piece of paper on which was written in green pencil, a note saying, "C. P. Funk is all right." This note had a signature. This signature was alleged to be that of H. C. Renfro. Mr. Walters knew Mr. Renfro to be a reputable citizen and on the strength of this note cashed the check, taking out a small bill which Edwards had contracted.

An investigation followed which resulted in both Funk and Edwards being arrested. Officer Biberback made the arrest. Funk claimed he knew nothing of the check; had signed no check, and had never claimed to have money in the bank.

It was up to Edwards. It later developed that Funk and Edwards had been seen together and that an attempt was made in a downtown saloon to get the check cashed. Biberback escorted the two men to the city prison and yesterday morning took them before County Attorney Lattimore.

Two Pleas of Guilty James Edwards and C. P. Funk were yesterday morning taken before County Judge Harris and each pleaded guilty to theft. They were fined $20 each and sentenced to ten days in jail.

The Renfro endorsement was a fraud, the same as the check. Mr. Renfro knowing nothing of the men or the order.

Generous Response MADE TO REQUESTS Holders of Library Cards Come Forward To Aid of The Library Board in Buying New Books

Mrs. D. B. Keeler reports that out of 6,552 holders of cards to the Carnegie library, eighty-one have made their contribution.

The donation of fifty cents was asked of card-holders to aid the library committee in purchasing new books and in repairing the old ones. Out of a possible $3,276 to be raised by the call for help in the matter of funds, $40.50 is in sight.

The call for donations has appeared two consecutive Sundays in local papers, but appears not to have been generally read. The need for books is urgent and the members of the library board would like to begin purchasing before the new year.

Open for business Monday morning, a Mexican curio store, Front street, near Texas and Pacific depot, corner Main.

That house you've been looking for is advertised in the Classified Columns.

THE CHILDREN ENJOY

Life out of doors and out of the games which they play and the enjoyment which they receive and the efforts which they make, comes the greater part of that healthful development which is so essential to their happiness when grown. When a laxative is needed the remedy which is given to them to cleanse and sweeten and strengthen the internal organs on which it acts, should be such as physicians would sanction, because its component parts are known to be wholesome and the remedy itself free from every objectionable quality. The one remedy which physicians and parents, well-informed, approve and recommend and which the little ones enjoy, because of its pleasant flavor, its gentle action and its beneficial effects, is—Syrup of Figs—and for the same reason it is the only laxative which should be used by fathers and mothers.

Syrup of Figs is the only remedy which acts gently, pleasantly and naturally without griping, irritating, or nauseating and which cleanses the system effectually, without producing that constipated habit which results from the use of the old-time cathartics and modern imitations, and against which the children should be so carefully guarded. If you would have them grow to manhood and womanhood, strong, healthy and happy, do not give them medicines, when medicines are not needed, and when nature needs assistance in the way of a laxative, give them only the simple, pleasant and gentle—Syrup of Figs.

Its quality is due not only to the excellence of the combination of the laxative principles of plants with pleasant aromatic syrups and juices, but also to our original method of manufacture and as you value the health of the little ones, do not accept any of the substitutes which unscrupulous dealers sometimes offer to increase their profits. The genuine article may be bought anywhere of all reliable druggists at fifty cents per bottle. Please to remember, the full name of the Company— CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO.— is printed on the front of every package. In order to get its beneficial effects it is always necessary to buy the genuine only.

MAIN STREET PROPOSITIONS FINDING CASH BUYERS.

OTHER DEALS ARE PENDING

Awaiting Decision of City Council to Pave or Not to Pave—Delaware to Be Remodeled for European Plan—South Side Riverside Lots.

In addition to the Hotel Worth deal reported in Friday's Telegram, there are some others of equal note reported. While none of these are as yet a matter of record, they are virtually closed, and run up into the thousands of dollars.

Among them is a deal made by Mr. Otho Houston, a banker of Stephenville. Mr. Houston had already invested heavily in Fort Worth business and residence property, and as a business man with money is demonstrating his faith in the town.

His latest purchase is the Prince building, located on the west side of Main street, between Eighth and Ninth streets. Mr. Houston it is said, paid $29,000 for the building. A part of this building will be occupied by the International and Great Northern offices, and another part by a mercantile company, yet to be announced. Mr. Houston has no less than $100,000 invested in Fort Worth.

Another Main Street Deal A lot on the west side of Main street, between Ninth and Tenth streets, has been sold by J. C. Harrison to George Reynolds for $8,000.

Some lots in the Page addition, South Side, have also been disposed of to parties whose names the realty agents have not yet made public. Ten thousand dollars was the price paid and it is the purpose of the purchasers to erect substantial rent cottages thereon.

To Remodel the Delaware The Delaware Hotel property has again changed hands. This applies only to the hotel privileges and not the ownership of the building. Messrs. J. W. Bicknell, the present manager, and Mr. D. Watson, at present proprietor of the McClellan Hotel, Waco, are to be the new managers of the new Delaware, and the hotel is to be run on the European plan. The improvements contemplated involve the expenditure of $15,000 or $18,000. The present dining room on the west end, second floor of the building, will be converted into rooms, and the entire south side, first floor, will be converted into a commodious cafe. It is Messrs. Bicknell and Watson's purpose to have the necessary changes made by Christmas day—at any rate by the new year. Mr. Watson, who has been in the city for a few days, has returned to Waco to wind up his affairs preparatory to removing his family here by January 1st.

Real estate men and rental agents say that there are a number of really big deals pending, and which will be closed up by the opening of the new year. They further say that some very important deals are tied up pending the decision of the city council to pave or not to pave Houston street. They further assert that upon the determination of the council and property owners to pave with either material in question, simultaneously with this announcement, they, as representatives of the parties concerned, will announce the closing up of some deals involving considerable money.

The Baptists of North Fort Worth

have determined to erect a handsome church edifice, one to cost between $3,000 and $5,000. The congregation has already called a pastor, Rev. Dr. W. T. Hillsman of Hubbard City. Dr. Hillsman is here now. Funds sufficient to warrant a start are in sight, and there'll be no delay in the commencement of the construction. The remaining necessary amount to complete the proposition will be raised in time to insure the contractors, so there will be no let up in the work when once commenced.

WILL OPERATE ONLY LIGHTLY J. W. Nicholson is a Texan Who Cut Out Wholesale Stock

(Special to The Telegram.) KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 15.—J. W. Nicholson, of Sanger, Texas, who marketed the top quarantine steers at $4.10, is following a system of farming and feeding which has made a lot of Texas farmers rich since they have begun to find out how it is done.

Mr. Nicholson has a little farm and a little pasture down in Denton county. He plants his field to corn, grain and forage crops, but always lays out a big patch for potatoes, cabbage, onions and all kinds of garden truck for home use. Then he raises a few cattle and a few hogs. He confines his feeding operations to just the number of cattle and hogs for which he has feed and can give his personal attention. He usually markets about five cars of steers and three cars of hogs each year, and they are always the tops.

It will be observed that the Texas farmers who have quit monkeying with cotton and turned their attention to raising everything they need to eat, raising a few stock and feeding a small bunch of cattle and hogs, are the ones who are living in comfort and have bank accounts of large sums out on loans at good interest.

REPORT OF CITY SCHOOLS

Superintendent Hogg makes suggestions for good of Teachers and Scholars

There is a great improvement in the attendance this week over last week. The tardy list and "dismissed too early" are still too great, especially the latter. Parents should understand that the study period is just as important as the recitation.

Two important meetings were held—a meeting of the principals and superintendent, laying out the work for the second quarter, and a meeting of the grade teachers and the superintendent with a view to striving for the essentials—thoroughness and an accurate knowledge of the subject in hand. The teachers were admonished that going over books is not going through them.

A director for the teachers has been selected to give instruction in callisthenics. ALEX. HOGG.

ANNIVERSARY SERMON TODAY

Special Services This Morning at the Broadway Presbyterian Church. Special observance of the twelfth anniversary of the pastorate of Rev. J. P. French, D.D., will occupy the morning services at the Broadway Presbyterian church, corner of Broadway and St. Louis avenue, this morning at 11 a. m. In addition to the anniversary sermon by the pastor, the program includes a solo by W. G. Armstrong, a solo with violin obligato by Miss Downing, and several anthems. Interesting statistics of the work during the twelve years of his pastorate will be given by Dr. French in connection with his sermon.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until a few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They cure, and prevent, for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O. Sold by druggists, 75c. Hall's Family Pills are the best.

Sickness in the Family is always an unpleasant thing. Often the patient needs a stimulant. The physician says: "Give him some pure whisky." Then you are in doubt what to get and where to buy it. LIGHTNING AND WATER

STOCKYARDS INN SHOCKED BY ELECTRICITY

THREE MEN KNOCKED DOWN

Marine Creek Out of Its Banks and Twenty-Five or Thirty Families Endangered—Water Up in the Cottages Caused People to Rush Out in the Downpour.

The heavy rain and lightning of last night caused trouble in North Fort Worth.

When the electrical display was at its height the west end of the stockyards inn was struck, tearing a hole in the roof several feet square—or nearly square. Several people in the inn were shocked slightly, but only three seriously. The head chef and assistant chef were knocked down and rolled about on the floor, and a brick mason named Frank Harvin was knocked out of his bed. The shock to these three men was painful.

Marine Creek on Rampage

Marine creek, which courses from east to west through North Fort Worth, and crosses under the wooden bridge over which the trolley cars pass was reported at 12:30 to be on a rampage, out of banks and several feet deep over the valley.

In the bottom and along the street running west from the Herodford cottages, all occupied by families, these houses are elevated several feet from the ground, still water coursed through some of them one and two feet deep.

At 1 a. m., though the rainfall had ceased, there was no perceptible receding of the water, and some of the families were cut off from land, and the current was reported as dangerously swift.

No lives had been reported lost at 1:30 a. m., but several families had been removed to high ground and efforts were making to get others out who had tarried too long.

It was not thought the current was swift enough to damage the houses, unless a very much greater rise followed. The water was running over the bridge approaches on which the trolley cars cross, but several men had ventured over the bridge, wading, to reach the hotel.

During the electrical display two of the big trolley cars were disabled by being burned out.

At 1:30 a. m. no damage from either lightning or water had been reported in any part of the city proper, but the mounted police phoned in to police headquarters that all the smaller streams about the city were on a spree.

Report at 2 a. m.

At 2 a. m. the report from the stockyards inn was that twelve or fifteen families had been gotten out of the bottom by a rescuing party headed by Messrs. Steve Potts and Walter Thannish. They were taken to the hotel and provided with dry clothing, wraps and bunks. Fires were ordered lighted in spare rooms and the main office, and Manager Stewart did all he could to make the refugees comfortable.

While it is not positively known that anyone was lost in the raging waters, some alarm was created by the report that a voice was heard calling for help, growing fainter and fainter as if some unfortunate was being washed down stream.

Quite a quantity of property in the valley was lost, and it is feared the damage will develop to be quite heavy when the light of day reveals the true situation.

MRS. BURTON GIVES ADDRESS

INTERESTING TALK ON MINERVA GIUSTINIANI AT CARNEGIE

TO THE CHILDREN'S LEAGUE

Relates History of the Famous Statue and Gives Sketch of Mythological History of the Greek's Goddess of Wisdom—Purpose of the Series

To an attentive audience of young people Mrs. William Burton gave the second of a series of talks on Greek Art to the Children's League at Carnegie free public library yesterday morning. The purpose of this series is to inculcate in the children of the city a love of the beautiful and of the classical in art and literature by becoming familiar with the most famous examples. Previous to the description of the statue, Mrs. Burton gave an entertaining story of Minerva and her deas as related in mythology.

VIADUCT IS NOT READY YET

Apparent Discrimination Regarding Foot Passengers Necessary

Contractor L. S. Leversedge said yesterday that there had been complaint regarding the apparent discrimination in not allowing foot passengers to walk across the viaduct while the street cars are allowed to run. Mr. Leversedge says that to walk across the viaduct while the concrete is still soft would seriously injure the pavement and no one will be permitted to do so, unless in case of a severe rain storm. In that case planks will be laid across the concrete so that the public may use the overhead crossing. This will probably be done tomorrow.

THE FAMOUS

709 HOUSTON ST. THE FAMOUS SHOE STORE, FORT WORTH

THIS IS A REPRESENTATIVE LIST OF THOSE WHO ARE HELPING TO PROMOTE THE BUSINESS INTERESTS OF FORT WORTH, TEX.

FORT WORTH, TEX.

Her Industrial Advantages, Material Development and Progress

Together With Some of the Elements Which Contribute to Its Importance, Both Manufacturing and Commercial.

A Comprehensive and Carefully Prepared Index of Representative Houses in Their Several Lines.

The list of enterprises mentioned in this Index might be still further extended, but without any attempt to more fully particularize individual branches, it may be said that in all elements of progressiveness and productive achievement Fort Worth holds a place among the leading and most active industrial communities in the South—and with the new era of prosperity inaugurated by Armour & Co. and Swift & Co. in erecting immense packing plants Fort Worth is destined to become a great commercial center, the live stock market of the great southwest. It is estimated that the packing companies, the stock yards and the railway connections which have to be made and the belt line railway needed for stock yards connections will require an expenditure of over five million dollars. Another important factor in the development of the city has been the railways which center here, no other city in Texas being better supplied.

The improvements made by the Northern Traction company's interurban and city street railway lines are of great importance to the city. Another thing that the observer notices here is the amount of building going on; houses are going up in every direction, and they are all in the main, specimens of architectural beauty, of which the citizens may justly feel proud. But in order that such a becoming display shall exist and continue towards increased development, it is necessary that there should be architects to design, and builders of skill and experience to carry out such designs. Fort Worth has both—so the building goes on, and just where expansion will cease it is hard to predict. Certainly there is no indication at present of any retrenchment.

It has been well said by some philosopher that the history of prosperous banking institutions is the history of prosperous communities, and the more closely the axiom is examined the more clearly evident becomes its soundness, for the abundant evidence offered to this effect here in Fort Worth proves it to be true. Our stores of all sorts will compare favorably with those of other and much larger cities, and the merchants are noted for liberality, enterprise and fair dealing. The young business men are all on the alert and their pushing spirit has exerted its influence upon the older houses. The city has 35,000 people within its borders, and it needs no prophet to predict that the time is not far distant when the number will be doubled, and when Fort Worth will be one of the leading industrial and commercial cities of the Southwest.

To conclude the establishment of large industrial plants is not the sole feature of this prosperous city; its reputation would be assured thereby, but let it not be forgotten that the less prominent worker with a much smaller outlay, is equally as desirable as the citizen, and may himself be the forerunner in the race of material development. The rich foliage of a single flower, or the luscious fruit of a single tree, may give prominence to a given locality, but that were a tiresome landscape where the solitary flowers bloom, and satiety would soon follow where the luscious fruit could alone offer food. The capitalist and millionaire are welcome here to this thriving community—so also is the man of small means, for he grows with the growth of the city, and becomes an important factor in its up-building. Every element has contributed to make this place the center of all the advantages to unite and reward enterprise in all lines of trade and industry; and particular attention is called to the houses herein mentioned as being, as the heading indicates, representative ones in their special fields of endeavor.

GETTING READY FOR VISITORS

DAUGHTERS OF THE CONFEDERACY ACTIVELY AT WORK

WILL ENTERTAIN ROYALLY

Indications Favor a Large Attendance of Delegates and Other Visiting Daughters for the Annual State Meeting to Be Held During First Week in December.

The Daughters of the Confederacy held a most interesting business meeting Friday afternoon at the court house, from 3 to 5 o'clock. Aside from the regular routine business, the purpose of the meeting was to hear from the various committees appointed to look after details connected with the coming state gathering of the Daughters to convene for a three-days' session December 2d.

Miss Mattie Melton, secretary, read the constitution and by-laws of the chapter in order to settle a question of representation at said convention, after which the entire membership of the chapter was named as delegates to the meeting.

A letter was read from Mrs. Eades, state secretary, Marshall, in which she predicted an attendance of 250 authorized delegates, besides a large number of other daughters not delegates.

The badge committee reported. The badges are to be of white satin ribbon with red letters. In the center of the badge will be a fac-simile of the seal of the order, around which will encircle a wreath of green. The report was adopted.

A committee of ladies, it was decided, should meet the incoming trains at the two union stations on the opening day and night, to receive the delegates and visitors. A committee of fifteen Sons of Veterans from the local camp will be "drafted" to escort this committee of ladies and do their bidding.

Mrs. W. P. Lane was appointed to take charge of the dinner tickets for dinner to be served in the basement of the Tabernacle church during the three days of the session. Only officers and delegates will be entitled to these tickets free. All others must pay 35c.

Mrs. F. L. Jordan, first vice-president of the local chapter, read a letter of invitation to be extended to Major-General VanZandt and staff of the Texas division of Veterans to be present on the opening night, Tuesday, December 2, in full uniform. Mrs. Jordan also stated that invitations had been sent to various other veterans, daughters of state and national reputation, the entire list of which was printed in last Monday's Telegram, including Governors Bailey and Culberson.

The homes for delegates committee reported. Quite a number of homes have been thrown open for the visiting Daughters, but more are needed, and all who can accommodate such delegates, and will be urged to notify Miss Melton, secretary, by Friday of this week.

In addition to the list of addresses to be made on the opening night, and which list appeared in last Monday's Telegram, Mrs. Clayton, president, will deliver an address of welcome on behalf of the local chapter.

Ordinance No. 851. An ordinance amending Section 122 of the revised ordinances of the city of Fort Worth, fixing the credit for days work of all persons fined in the corporation court and compelled to do public work for the city.

Be it ordained by the city council of the city of Fort Worth, Section 1. That section 122 of the revised ordinances of the city of Fort Worth, known as the Riley and Adams revision, be amended so as to read as follows to-wit: All male persons who shall be compelled to work upon the streets, alleys, public grounds, or public buildings of the city, or in the city's workhouse, shall be entitled to a credit on such fine, etc., of fifty cents for each day, or portion thereof that such male person may so labor, and if on account of the inclemency of the weather, or for any other cause it shall be impracticable for the male prisoners to be placed at work, then each male prisoner shall be entitled to a credit of fifty cents for each day such male person may be confined in the city prison or workhouse.

Section 2. All ordinances or parts of ordinances in conflict herewith, be and are hereby repealed.

Section 3. This ordinance shall be in force and effect after ten days publication required by law. Filed Nov. 7, 1902.

JOHN T. MONTGOMERY, City Secretary. Passed under suspension of the rules, Nov. 7, 1902.

JOHN T. MONTGOMERY, City Secretary. Recorded in ordinance book, "D" page 625. Nov. 13, 1902.

JOHN T. MONTGOMERY, City Secretary. This ordinance not having been approved nor disapproved by the mayor within three days after its passage as required by the charter, takes effect the same as if approved.

JOHN T. MONTGOMERY, City Secretary. Beautiful Clear Skies. Herbine exerts a direct influence on the bowels, liver and kidneys, purifying and strengthening these organs, and maintaining them in a normal condition of health; thus removing a common cause of yellow, mothy, greasy skin and more or less of pimples, blotches and blackheads. 50c at H. JUDGE CLANCY

Of Hornellsville, N. Y., Hands Down An Important Decision.

In the case of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy against Blood and Liver trouble, Judge James H. Clancy of Hornellsville, N. Y., and one of the most prominent members of the bar in that historic town, decided recently that as against Blood and Liver troubles, Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy was worthy of the highest praise. He says: "I have used Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy and strongly recommend it for its good effect in my case for liver trouble and blood disorder. It built me right up and I improved greatly in health."

Geo. H. Tift, of 878 River street, Troy, N. Y., suffered from liver trouble and his blood was all out of order and after using "Favorite Remedy," has this to say: "From any one suffering from that run down or tired out feeling, caused by blood or liver trouble, Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is the best medicine you can buy. I have used it and I know."

The one sure cure for diseases of the kidneys, liver, bladder and blood, rheumatism, dyspepsia and chronic constipation, is Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. It has cured in many cases where all else has failed.

It matters not how sick you are, how long you have suffered, or how many physicians have failed to help you, Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy will cure you if a cure is possible.

All druggists sell Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy in the new 50 cent size and the regular $1.00 size bottles. Sample bottles—enough for trial, free by mail. Dr. David Kennedy Corporation, Rondout, N. Y.

IS ILL AT BEEVILLE

Rev. W. Y. Taylor, Formerly Pastor of First Christian Church Here. Sam H. Taylor yesterday received a telephone message from a brother at Beeville, Texas, announcing the serious illness of their father, Rev. W. Y. Taylor. Rev. Taylor is sixty-two years of age and was from 1876 to 1879 pastor of the First Christian church in this city, having dedicated that church. He is well remembered by the old timers here and the announcement of his illness will be read with deep regret. The message said he was suffering from slow fever. Sam arranged to go at once to his father's bedside.

AN OLD-TIME OFFENDER IN THE TOILS AGAIN

At 3:55 o'clock Friday afternoon Detective Thomson locked up an old offender, Robert Booker, a darkey, who was run out of town about two years ago. Robert is known to have returned to his old haunts about ten days ago, and located in a shack in "Hogan's Alley." The fact of his being here was sufficient evidence for the officer to act.

A search was made of Robert's shack, and in it were found two huge dry goods boxes and a monster trunk—all three filled to their capacity with every conceivable article of wearing apparel that finds its way to a clothes line. Not only wearing apparel, but bed clothing, table clothes, napkins,

HEREFORDS AVERAGE EXCELLENT PRICES

Sale of Fine Stock at North Fort Worth Concluded Friday — Heifer Sells For $900. The sale of fine stock at the new stockyards ended Friday afternoon. Over sixty Herefords were sold, the cattle contributed being by the following stockmen: B. C. Rhone, Fort Worth, twenty head; J. R. Lewis, Sweetwater, five head; Ellis Richardson, Albany, five head; C. W. Martin, Decatur, three head; W. S. and J. E. Ikard, Henrietta, ten head; Hovenkamp & McNatt, Fort Worth, eight head; Campbell Russell, Bennett, I. T., six head; Wangerman & Krueger, Beeville, Texas, one head; Ed Beck, Sulphur Springs, one head; J. B. Salinger, Jonah, two head; M. H. Hovenkamp, Fort Worth, two head; Riverside Hereford Cattle company, two head. The average price brought by the cattle offered was $181. The average price paid for the Shorthorns was $167. The highest price for any Hereford was $900 for Ikard Beauty, a heifer entered by W. S. & J. E. Ikard on Henrietta. The shipment of the cattle sold at the two days' sale gave a good deal of work at the union stockyards yesterday afternoon.

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL

Few People Know How Useful it is in Preserving Health and Beauty. Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, drinking or after eating onions and other odorous vegetables. Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powdered Willow charcoal, and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is, that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but on the contrary, great benefit.

A Buffalo physician in speaking of the benefits of Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in the stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat; I also believe the liver is greatly benefited by the daily use of them; they cost but twenty-five cents a box at drug stores, and although in some sense a patent preparation, yet I believe I get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges than in any ordinary charcoal tablet.

FORT WORTH PLAYERS WIN FOOTBALL GAME

Contrary even to their own expectations, a Fort Worth eleven easily defeated the Texas Pacific lightweights of Dallas at a football game played yesterday afternoon at Haines park by a score of 10 to 5. Two twenty minute halves were played in which the Fort Worth players, by rapid rushing and dodging resistance to the attempts of the Dallas line, made two touchdowns and failed to kick goals in both cases.

John Connelley made the first touchdown for Fort Worth within the first four minutes of play. Pulliam made the second touchdown in the second half. The game was witnessed by a small crowd, which was enthusiastic after the game began and Fort Worth's unexpected strength was shown: The line-ups were as follows: Fort Worth, Joe Connelley, right end; Taylor, right tackle; Lea, right guard; Patterson, center; Edwards, left guard; Gutzman, left tackle; Evans, left end; Lemarch, quarterback; Jno. Connelley, right halfback; Pulliam, left halfback; Hull (captain) fullback.

A DWARF TRAMP.

He Blew Into Town and Was Footed Out Again

Jesse Dougherty, a genuine specimen of the dwarf, blew into town Friday. During the night he was found sleeping in a public place and run in on a charge of trespassing.

Dougherty claims to be 48 years of age, is very small, and has every necessary requisite for a "rounder." He claims to have at one time been a justice of the peace out in Reeves county. He had credentials showing he had during the past year or so acted as night caller for railway crews at Toyah, Tex.

Dougherty claimed to be on his way to visit his father in Indian Territory. For some reason or other he was minus a hat, but a copper presented him with an old discarded helmet, which came down over his ears. Judge Stewart allowed him to go on a promise to leave.

REMARKABLE SUCCESS

Of a New Catarrh Cure

A large and constantly increasing majority of the American people are catarrh sufferers. This is not entirely the result of our changeable climate, but because modern investigation has clearly proven that many diseases, known by other names, are really catarrh. Formerly the name catarrh was applied almost exclusively to the common nasal catarrh, but the throat, stomach, liver, bladder, kidneys and intestines are subject to catarrhal diseases as well as the nasal passages.

In fact, wherever there is mucous membrane there is a feeding ground for catarrh.

The usual remedies, inhalers, sprays, douches or powders, have been practically failures, as far as anything more than temporary relief was concerned, because they simply dry up the mucous secretions, without having the remotest effect upon the blood and liver, which are the real sources of catarrhal diseases.

It has been known for some years that the radical cure of catarrh could never come from local applications, but from an internal remedy, acting on the blood and expelling the catarrhal poison from the system.

A new internal preparation which has been on the market only a short time, has met with remarkable success as a genuine, radical cure for catarrh.

It may be found in any drug store, sold under the name of Stuart's Catarrh Tablets, large pleasant tasting lozenges, composed principally of antiseptic ingredients. Bloodroot, Red Gum and similar catarrh specifics.

Dr. Ainslie in speaking of the new catarrh cure says: "I have tried the new catarrh remedy, Stuart's Catarrh Tablets, upon 30 or 40 patients with remarkable satisfactory results. They clear the head and throat more effectually and lastingly than any douche or inhaler that I have ever seen, and although they are what is called a patent medicine and sold by druggists, I do not hesitate to recommend them as I know them to be free from cocaine and opiates, and that even a little child may use them with entire safety."

Any sufferer from nasal catarrh, throat or bronchial trouble, catarrh of the stomach, liver or bladder will find Stuart's Catarrh Tablets remarkably effective, pleasant and convenient, and your druggist will tell you they are absolutely free from any injurious drug.

SOCIETY

The week at hand promises to be another gala affair in Fort Worth society.

The following are some of the events which will take place.

On Monday afternoon the second meeting of the Monday Book club, at the home of Mrs. R. E. Buchanan;

Monday afternoon the meeting of the Texas History club, at the residence of Mrs. H. W. Williams on East Belknap street;

Monday afternoon the regular session of the '93 club at the Third Christian church; Wednesday afternoon a literary and musical program by the Anna Lee Carter Chapter of the Children of the Confederacy at the camp rooms, in the basement of the court house; Wednesday afternoon the regular weekly meeting of the Women's Wednesday club at the Carnegie public library; Wednesday afternoon the weekly meeting of the Current Literature club, at the home of Mrs. Oates; Wednesday evening, at 8:30 o'clock, the marriage of Miss Annie Josephine Watkins to Clayton J. Howell will be solemnized at the residence of J. G. Watkins on West Second street; on Thursday afternoon the Marguerites will play whist with Miss Nell Barnhardt on the South Side; Friday afternoon the meeting of the Merry Wives Whist club at the residence of Mrs. J. D. Collett, the game to start promptly at 2:30 p. m.; Saturday afternoon the bi-monthly session of the Literary Twelve at the residence of Miss Ethel Evans, at which meeting the study of Hawthorne will be taken up and discussed. Beginning next Tuesday evening and extending through the evening of November 26, the Elks will give their Charity Fair at the halls on Throckmorton street and for each and every night of the fair some special feature has been planned for the entertainment of the visitors.

Those who fail to attend the fair will miss more than they think for, for it will be one round of pleasure from start to finish and enjoyment for all who attend and take part. The hall has been beautifully decorated for the event and the booths of the various clubs and orders prettily adorned with gala colors; and there will also be pretty girls at each and every booth to supply the wants of the crowds.

Mesdames Samuel H. Ransom and Addison Lea gave an informal "At Home," Thursday afternoon, complimentary to Mrs. Boyd Harwood, of Kansas City, at the home of the last named on El Paso street, from 4 until 6 p. m. In the hall the visitors were greeted as they entered by Mesdames George T. Reynolds, David W. Humphreys, H. W. Williams, and J. F. Waller. In the parlor stood first in line the hostess, Mesdames Samuel H. Ransom and Addison Lea, and then the guest of honor, Mrs. Boyd Harwood, and Mesdames W. R. Thompson, Irbly Dunklin, Joseph B. Gogins, Sam B. Canjey and Charles L. Ware. In the punch room the guests were entertained by Mesdames W. V. Galbraith, Edgar Wallace, Charles Murdoch and the visitors' wants at the punch bowl were attended to by Misses Lucille White, Mary Waller, Kate Humphreys and Bessie White.

The dining-room was the last place where the visitors were taken, and Mesdames Jere F. Ellis and W. P. McLean Jr. served at the table, and Mrs. Oscar R. Menefee presided at the coffee urn. The other ladies who assisted in this room were: Mesdames W. A. Haden, J. W. Hoover and Misses Mabel Horsley, Florence Smith, Boland, Ethel Watkins and Lucy Slinger.

The decorations throughout were very tasty and beautiful, the reception hall being decorated with palms and chrysanthemums. The parlor was bedecked with pink American Beauty roses, palms and ferns, the candelabra being of pink to correspond. The punch room was adorned with red American Beauty roses and ferns. The dining-room was very prettily decorated with pink flowers, white chrysanthemums, ferns and smilax, and upon the center of the dining-room table was a large basket of white chrysanthemums, upon the handle of which was tied a huge bow of pink ribbon. About one hundred and seventy-five ladies called and left cards during the afternoon.

The members of the Enterpean Musical club held their second meeting of the winter season at the home of Mrs. F. L. Jaccard, on the South Side, yesterday afternoon and the following program was rendered:

- 1—"My Love is Like a Red, Red Rose," Miss Sallie Spencer
- 2—"At Parting," Mrs. Huntoon
- 3—"Pierre and Pierrette,"
- 4—"Sleep, Dream, Little One," Mrs. L. Gross

The Gibson Girls met Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Robert H. Beckham on the West Side and spent the time with whist. After the contest was over it was discovered that Miss Mildred Bennett had the most points to her credit and for her skill she was awarded a pretty Venetian vase.

Those present included the following: Misses Grace Fuller of Memphis, Tenn. Elois White, Madeline Orrick, Bernice Newlin, Laura Hogsett, Joe Hornby, Ella Hogsett, Tom Montgomery, Alberta Triplett, Mary Waller, Hyman, Donnie Lee Carter, Mabel Hershey and Edgington. Mesdames Harvey Cole, John Burke, Edward Burns, Rozelle and James D. Davis.

On account of the Elks Charity Fair the Gibson girls will not hold a meeting this week but will be entertained on Wednesday afternoon, November 26, at the home of Mrs. John Burke.

A jolly party were those who surprised Miss Mildred Bennett at her home on Samuels avenue last night with a chaffing dish party and the evening was certainly hugely enjoyed by those in attendance.

Those who planned this pleasant affair for Miss Bennett were: Misses Bernice Newlin Ethel Teachout of St. Louis Minnie Nash and Ted Edgington, Messrs. Parker, Ed. Collett, Robert Pollock, E. Loving and Henry W. Williams, Jr.

The Merry Wives Whist club did not meet last Friday afternoon with Mrs. J. B. Hawley on account of the serious illness of her sister, Mrs. Alex. W. Terrell at Waxahachie, at whose bedside Mrs. Hawley is in attendance.

The Marguerites were entertained on last Wednesday afternoon by Miss Annabelle Pendleton, West Seventh street, with whist. Both trophies of the afternoon, burnt wood picture frames, were won by Miss Laura Robertson of Sulphur Springs and Mrs. G. Rozelle. Those present included Misses Lucille White, Josephine Watkins, Bessie White, Madeline Callaway, Mae Larimer, Cora Daggett, Annie Binyon, Elizabeth Tartton, Laura Robertson of Sulphur Springs and Mesdames Hugh T. Pangburn, J. C. Van Zandt, G. Rozelle and Fred Martin.

The Current Literature club held their regular weekly meeting last Wednesday afternoon at the home of Miss Lizzie Magruder, on East Weatherford street, and devoted the time to the study of the elder Dumas. The members answered roll call by giving a quotation from that author. The next session will be held on next Wednesday afternoon, at the home of Mrs. Oates.

Fort Worth society turned out in goodly numbers last week to witness the four magnificent productions which were given at Greenwall's opera house. There was fine attendance at each and every performance; that is at the Mrs. Brune, Gordon Shay Opera company; Marguerita Sylva in the Strollers, and the Princess Chic Opera company; and every play, from the enthusiastic applause, was thoroughly enjoyed by all present.

The annual meeting of the Texas Federation of Women's clubs at Beaumont this week is attracting much interest in Fort Worth, where clubs are so strong. On November 17, in the afternoon, the following program will be given, that is especially of interest here:

Library Session—2:30 P. M. Presided over by Mrs. J. C. Terrell, Fort Worth, chairman library committee.

Report of library committee—Mrs. J. C. Terrell.

Discussion.

The library and the children—Mrs. Charles Scheuber, Fort Worth.

Discussion.

Value of the trained librarian—Mr. Benjamin Wyche, State University, Austin.

How to interest the community in the library—Mrs. Henry F. Ring, Houston.

Needed legislation—Mrs. Elizabeth Herndon Potter, Tyler.

Discussion.

Adjournment.

Informal reception at the house of Mrs. John N. Gilbert.

The members of the Woman's Wednesday club met last Wednesday afternoon in their rooms at the Carnegie public library. The following were those who answered to roll call: Mesdames W. J. Bailey, M. M. Barnes, L. H. Burney, S. B. Burnett, R. L. Carlock, E. H. Carter, C. W. Connery, J. B. Collins, Ben Harris, J. P. King, T. A. McDowell, W. P. McLean, Jr., E. C. Orrick, B. B. Paddock, D. S. Ross, W. C. Stripling, John F. Swayne, Sam Ward, H. W. Williams and T. T. D. Andrews.

Before the regular program was participated in a parliamentary drill was given the members, under the directorship of the parliamentarian, Mrs. John F. Swayne. Owing to the absence from the city of Mrs. J. C. Terrell, Mrs. Ben Herris was the director for the meeting held Wednesday. The following was the program as rendered:

- 1. Puritan and Pilgrim.
- 2. First Settlements.
- 3. Laws and Characteristics.
- 4. Charter Troubles, Religious Dissensions.
- 5. King Phillip's War.
- 6. Historic Boston.
- 7. Connecticut—First Political Constitution.
- 8. Rhode Island.

During the afternoon a very interesting paper was read by Mrs. C. W. Connery upon the subject of Boston, which was very much enjoyed by all the members. It was learned with regret at this meeting that one of the old members of the club, Mrs. W. F. Faulkner, is very dangerously ill.

Mrs. V. S. Wardlaw was the hostess of the Kensington Sewing club members at her residence on East Belknap street, last Thursday afternoon. There were a number of special invited guests present. The usual sewing or rather fancy knitting was rather slighted, the time being spent principally in conversation. During the afternoon an elegant two course luncheon was served. It was decided at this meeting not to hold another session of the Kensington's until the first Thursday after Thanksgiving.

Those who enjoyed Mrs. Wardlaw's hospitality were the following members: Mesdames Newton H. Lassiter, L. J. Clayton, Homer A. Judd, J. J. Melfon, F. L. Jordan, J. D. Covert, J. M. Moore, W. D. Williams, Darnell, J. S. Fielding, G. S. Tart and Miss Melton; the guests present were Mesdames J. Thornton, M. A. Chamberlain, Ira W. Dixon George Clayton, Nicholas Lamonache and Misses Ethel Teachout of St. Louis and Frances Walker of Chicago, and Mesdames A. W. Scoble, W. E. Butler, Marvin E. Singleton, Hulbert, McDearman, J. T. Williams and Miss Alice Lathrop.

Mrs. R. E. L. Miller entertained about thirty-six of her friends with an afternoon whist party last Thursday at her home on Fifth avenue. She was assisted in receiving by Mesdames J. E. Mitchell, Lebonitz and H. E. Gray, who also officiated as scorers during the contest.

The prize, a hand painted tray in the shape of a heart, was captured by Mrs. A. A. Hunt. Hearts were chosen as trump for the afternoon and in fact hearts were the scheme for the entire event, the ice cream and cake being served in that shape. The decorations throughout were chrysanthemums; the reception hall being decorated with the red flowers, the parlor with yellow, and the dining-room in white chrysanthemums, with smilax intermingled.

Among those present were: Misses Elois White, Lottie Bartells, Mary Waller, Alberta Triplett, Bernice Newlin, Edgington, Ella Hogsett, Grace Hollingsworth, Laura Hogsett, Nita Hollingsworth, Joe Hornby, Cornelia Vogel, Elizabeth Tartton, Louisa Vogel, Gertrude and Mary Byers and Mesdames J. J. Parker, Thomas W. Hoote, E. E. Hoffman, J. E. Mitchell, Lebonitz, H. E. Gray, Hilliter, C. W. Connery and David B. Keeler.

One of the prominent events in Fort Worth society the past week was the wedding of Miss Carrie E. Hornby to Dr. W. G. Cook last Wednesday evening at 7:30 o'clock p. m., at the home of the bride on Fifth avenue. Rev.

Bartow B. Ramage of St. Andrew's parish, performed the ceremony before about 150 guests.

The bride was attired in a gown of white wash chiffon, with accordin plaited flounces, the veil being of duchesse lace.

Before the ceremony Mrs. J. C. Scott played Mendelssohn's wedding march, accompanied by Mrs. Goodrich Y. Morton, on the violin, and while Miss Hornby and Dr. Cook were being pronounced man and wife a selection appropriate for the occasion entitled, "Call Me Thine Own" was rendered, and while the bride and groom were receiving hearty congratulations, "Lohengrin" was played by Mesdames Scott and Morton.

Miss Jo Hornby was maid of honor and William Elgas acted as best man. Misses Bernice Newlin, Mary Waller, Alberta Triplett and Ted Edgington were the bridesmaids, and each carried a bouquet of asparagus ferns. All of the young women attendants were attired in gowns of white organdie.

While the bride and groom were making ready to depart the guests in attendance were served to a course of salad, crackers, coffee and olives.

Dr. and Mrs. William G. Cook immediately after the ceremony left for San Antonio, to be absent from Fort Worth for a week or ten days, returning to this city to make Fort Worth their home.

Miss Forrest Croom entertained a number of her young gentlemen and young lady friends at an evening whist party Monday night. The gentlemen's trophy, a cigar and match case of burnt leather, cut for by Messrs. Bert Winfrey and Fred Adams, was awarded to the last named. The prize for the young ladies, a hand painted afternoon cup and saucer, with souvenir spoon, was won by Miss Mary Swayne. After the contest was over the following were served to a three-course luncheon: Messrs. Clyde Maddox, A. D. Smith, Fred Adams, Scott Kretz, J. N. Clements, James Offutt, Bert Winfrey, F. G. Oxshier, Arty Bailey, R. C. Armstrong, D. E. Lydick, Paul Bishop and Marshal Spoons. Misses Christina Beggs, Annie Binyon, Annabelle Pendleton, Cora Daggett, Mary Swayne, Sallie Spencer, Hendricks, Beale Oxshier, Fannie Lang, Nita Hollingsworth.

The members of the Monday History club met in regular session last Monday afternoon at the home of the director, Mrs. H. W. Williams on East Belknap street, and the study of Texas history was again taken up. The subject for the meeting being "The Establishment of Missions." Those who were present and took active interest in the meeting were: Misses Varner Beall, Mabelle Slaughter, May Larimer, Lucille White, Lou Blair, Bessie White and Kate Boland. The next meeting of this club will be held on Monday afternoon beginning at 2:30 o'clock at the home of the director as usual.

The '93 club members met in regular weekly session last Monday afternoon in the parlors of the Third Christian church on Throckmorton street. This was the largest attended meeting of the winter season, the club being represented by very nearly the entire membership. The following answered to roll call: Madames John M. Adams, S. T. Bibb, F. D. Boyd, R. F. Butts, W. H. Callaway, J. T. Clements, L. B. Comer, J. D. Covert, F. T. Crittenden, Irbly Dunklin, T. O. Edwards, C. C. French, L. Gross, George C. Hudgins, S. M. Hudson, A. L. Jackson, L. A. Kilne, Newt A. Lassiter, F. C. Merrill, Robert S. Moffett, B. C. Rhome, Thomas Stewart, Edward Vincent, J. T. Burgher and A. J. Lawrence, and Misses Annie Matlock, Rose Howard, Mary Adelaide Roe and Lottie Tomlinson. At this meeting the study of English history was begun under the directorship of Miss Adelaide Roe, with Mrs. S. T. Bibb as alternate.

Before the regular program was carried out, a short business session was held. Matters pertaining to the booth of the '93 club at the coming Elks fair were discussed. A vote of thanks was tendered to Mr. W. P. Calhoun, who agreed to furnish to the '93 club free of all expense all the cakes to be sold at their counter during the carnival.

The following is the program as rendered: Roll call. Tributes to England Parliamentary law. Amendments Union of England and Ireland.

Mrs. W. H. Callaway Talk, English in India.

Mrs. B. C. Rhome Questions, War of 1812, George IV., William IV. Club.

On next Monday afternoon the members will answer roll call by each giving a quotation from Carlyle's "French Revolution."

The Yozolia German club members held an important business meeting Monday night. Over two-thirds of the young men who belong to the society were in attendance. Much interest was displayed in the welfare of their club. The most important matter brought up for discussion was the date and place for the coming full dress german. It was decided to give an elaborate dance on the evening of December 26 at Hotel Vitor.

A committee was appointed for the purpose of getting up a design for the invitation, and as one of the members expressed it yesterday the club intends to spare no expense in making the invitation, like the affair as a whole, the swellest, ever issued for a similar event in the state of Texas.

The following were elected to membership in the Yozolia club Monday night: Messrs. Lewis Tewksbury, Jim Walton and James Offutt.

The Monday Book club members met for the first time this winter, at the residence of Mrs. Robert E. Beck-

The guests at the meeting were Miss Grace Fuller and Mesdames George Payne and Cox.

The study of Egyptian history was taken up preparatory to the subject of Anthony and Cleopatra.

Two very interesting papers were heard, one being that of Mrs. E. L. Stephens on "Egypt" and the other written by Miss Maggie McLean on "The Promises," which was read by Miss Donna Lee Carter, owing to the absence of Miss McLean from the city. This club will hold a meeting each Monday afternoon from now until the month of May.

Mrs. Robert Henderson Beckham's informal tea, taking on the appearance of a more brilliant afternoon reception than of a tea, which was given last Tuesday afternoon from the hours of 4 until 6, was largely attended. Over 150 ladies left cards during the afternoon.

The visitors' cards were taken at the door by Master Joe Godwin and Miss Sula Gardner, and the guests were then met in the reception hall by Mrs. Robert H. Beckham, Mrs. David B. Keeler, Mrs. Ira W. Dixon, Mrs. M. E. Berney, Mrs. J. P. Moore, Mrs. E. Edward Burns and Mrs. Hyde Jennings.

SEASON OPENED BY HORSE SHOW

NEW YORK'S STELLAR ATTRACTION AT HAND

TO BE GREATER THAN EVER

Following the Horse Show Comes the Opera—Nordica and Melba Added This Year—Republican Party has Become "Top Heavy" and is Ready to Fall in the East

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—The beginning of the social season in New York is marked by the opening of the Horse show, for all society flocks to town for this auspicious national event, which usually takes place the third week in November. The exhibition this year will excel that of all other seasons, both from the social and "horse" standpoint, for the number of distinguished out-of-town visitors will be much larger and there will be more entries. Something of the importance of this affair may be imagined when it is stated that $850 was paid for a single box this year. This price exceeds any in the history of the show, last year's record standing at $635. Visitors, however, are sure to see the grandest display of beauty and the best ever witnessed, and since it is not often that society, as it is spelled with a big "S" turns out en masse, one is not supposed to let such a trifle as money stand in the way of an attendance at the Horse show.

THE GRAND OPERA
Following the Horse show is the grand opera which begins November 24, and continues for seventeen weeks. Two additions have been made to the list of sopranos this season which were missed last season in the persons of Mmes. Nordica and Melba.

REPUBLICAN POLITICS
There are likely to be interesting developments in Republican politics in this state during the next two years. The party has become "top-heavy," so to speak. Six years of power in the nation and eight years of power in the state have resulted in a condition which may be described as "political dyspepsia," the consequence of over-feeding on official patronage. This is no mere word picture. Those who are able to look behind the scenes can see readily enough what is going on. They see the clash of personal ambitions, the contests of factions, the workings of revenge and even some of the evidences of corruption. There is reason to believe that Albany are no better than Tammany in New York. There are Roosevelt and anti-Roosevelt factions in this state. Friends of the president are numerous and strong, but his enemies are exceedingly bitter, and they will strike at him whenever they can do so without danger from his popularity, which has been even increased since the recent election. Republicanism in Brooklyn is in a bad shape. There are two or three factions in this city, and altogether there is danger at any time of a bad explosion. Senator Platt himself admitted after the election that the reduced Republican majority was a warning to the dissenting factions in the party. Only the most skillful engineering on his part can prevent the threatened catastrophe.

JANUARY PREDICTIONS
Tammany politicians are predicting that they will be able to hold the whip over the newly elected legislature and compel Republicans to treat the minority with more consideration than they obtained last year and the year before. They are pointing out that the Republicans no longer have a two-thirds majority in each branch of the legislature, and Tammany leaders expect to put a check on Republican legislation respecting New York City by withholding their assent to Republican measures carrying an appropriation of public money.

MORGAN'S SHIP COMBINE
Every day or two some new rumor regarding Mr. Morgan's Atlantic Ship Combine, officially known as the International Merchant Marine company, crops out. It is now understood that there will soon be a consolidation to all the passenger offices of the steamship lines in the combine.

COAL SITUATION STILL ACUTE
Despite the fact that the coal strike has been settled, the situation in New York city is acute and it is hardly possible that Mayor Low will be able to enforce the smoke-nuisance ordinance after today, as was originally planned. It is certain that the normal supply of anthracite will not be on hand in New York for sometime yet. A fair idea of the present state of the coal market may be obtained from the following story: The president of one of the largest coal-carrying roads who lives in this city, asked his dealer a few days ago to send him five tons of furnace coal. The dealer replied that he could only give him one ton, as he did not feel that he could spare more than that amount for one customer. "Very good," said the president, "I'll have to be content with what you can let me have." The railroads are doing their best to get the coal here, but the output of the mines for the year is from twenty to twenty-five million tons less than it was in 1901, and the situation is difficult. It is the poor who will suffer the most under the present circumstances.

GARDENERS HAVE THEIR DAY
These are proud days for the gardeners of the wealthy. The season of flower shows is at its height and exhibitions are following each other closely in the various fashionable hotels and reception halls. From the most attractive exhibits come from the

Best Liniment on Earth
I. M. McHany, Greenville, Tex., writes, Nov. 2, 1900: "I had rheumatism last winter, was down in bed six weeks, tried everything, but got no relief, till a friend gave me a part of a bottle of Ballard's Snow Liniment. I used it, and got two more bottles. It cured me and I haven't felt any rheumatism since. I can recommend Snow Liniment to be the best liniment on earth for rheumatism." The THEATRE

Patrons of Greenwall's last week had at least a variety. The range from Mrs. Brune, in serious and classic Unorna, to last night's production, Black Vipers, is sufficient for any one of ordinary tastes.

In musical productions, Trovatore and Faust were succeeded by "The Strollers," and it must be confessed the audience appeared to like the latter the best. The Princess Chic stands in a class by itself when compared with the other productions of the week, and while not best attended, was easily the best in those things which make comic operas popular.

One thing was noticeable in the three evening musical performances of the week. In no case did the principal male role satisfy the audience so well as some other character. "Faust" in Faust was weak and uncertain, while Mephisto stands out as easily the best male member of the Gordon-Shay cast. August Lump in The Strollers, will be forgotten, when the gods of the gallery are still striving to imitate the mirth-provoking antics of the Prince De Bomsky (D. I. Don); and in Friday night's production, The Princess Chic, the finished and careful work of Walter Lawrence as Charles the Bold, is passed by to give place to Joseph Miron's swaggering braggadocio in "Brevet," soldier of fortune.

It was a satisfying week; the best, so far, of the season. But it came and Wednesday nights, matinee each day, Nov. 18-19. His latest success, "A Stranger in New York," will be the attraction Tuesday, Nov. 18, matinee and night, and his ever popular, "A Trip to Chinatown," will be the bill Wednesday, Nov. 19, matinee and night.

Somehow there seems to be a peculiar attraction in the Hoyt trade-mark which appeals to the most fashionable as well as to the masses. This fact is very forcibly demonstrated by the large audiences which always greet the presentation of a Hoyt play.

Scenes From "A Trip to Chinatown." The Manchester (Va.) Evening Ledger says:

"The company which produced the 'Stranger' here, and which will be seen matinee and night at the Academy in 'A Trip to Chinatown,' another Hoyt play, is a good company—good in every sense. The plays are both well known here, and the crowds were not half worthy of the performance."

"Without going into the play it will be well to sum up this way:
"Mr. Campbell, great.
"Mr. Mack, great.
"Miss Saylor, magnificent (to look at).
"Miss Katherine Wells, a dream of loveliness, clever.
"Miss Miller, excellent dancer.
"And for Miss Sylvia Starr, she is the prettiest woman I have ever seen Old Cross Roads," which was presented by Arthur C. Alston's company at the Crescent, there is yet enough of the possible, and enough of the real, to commend it to the critical judgment and to assure it a reasonable stage tenure. The story is intensely dramatic. Based upon an unhappy social condition, peculiar to the South, and turning upon climaxes that are of uncertain import and which might easily offend, it required most scrupulous delicacy and tact of no mean order for the author to avoid the pitfalls. With the interpreter the situation is more serious, the responsibility much graver. Color and life must be given to the dead symbols, the paper-characters must be energized, put in action and given all the attributes of the real men and women in life's real drama.

"Lord Strathmore"
The play of "Lord Strathmore" which comes to us at Greenwall's opera house Saturday, matinee and night, Nov. 22, is one of the most complete examples of literary ability brought out in the last decade. There is a depth of feeling in this play that few writers can bring out. The cast is one of the best that will come to Fort Worth this season.

Plays Coming Here

Cheridah Simpson, the junoesque Piola of "King Dodo," which Mr. Henry W. Savage will present here early this season, is obviously the most statuesque figure among comic opera prima donnas of today. Her im-tor and Jules Murry has supplied an excellent production and a remarkably clever company to support him.

Mr. Hanford is no novice in comedy roles, and his Petruccio last night was a brilliant success, full of bustle, animation and action in the fantastical extravagances of a madness that had a well defined vein of method all through it. It was an ideal interpretation and won a most enthusiastic recognition. And the same and more may be said of Miss Drofna as Katherine. She held the mirror up to nature in every gesture, look and tone.—Petersburg Index Appeal.

A few years ago Dan Quinlan, the minstrel manager, who, with Jimmy Wall is going to put a swell minstrel company on the road next season, was saved from being burned to death by a pet monkey that was given him by Carl Hagenback. The monkey is a very smart one, and after saving its master's life was taught to make balloon ascensions and parachute drops. Last evening the celebrated monkey arrived in this city and is now in charge of Doc Waddell, Mr. Quinlan's business manager. When the minstrel company takes the road the monkey will accompany the daily street parade and undoubtedly will attract much attention. Just before the parade starts the monkey will make a trip above the clouds, thus informing the people to be on the lookout for the procession.

The production of "Wizard" which is coming here this season, will surpass anything in scenic opera line ever seen in this city. This opera was presented at the New York casino in New York nearly three years to record breaking houses, and was the talk of all New York. A re-high and was just a little too heavy on the purse of the average theatergoer.

Princess Chic
A great many producers of comic opera seem to forget that the quality which really makes the opera "go" is the music. Equally important is a plot, not very heavy, but sufficiently dignified to allow it to be labeled as opera. Then to take well, it must be amusing.

When Kirke La Shelle and Julian Edwards got together over the "Princess Chic," Edwards did the better work, for it is the music of the opera that constitutes its chief charm. Some of the "Book" is weak, very weak, but the music never drivels, as it often does in The Strollers. At the close of the second act of the Princess Chic, there is a genuine musical climax that stands out as the best thing in the production.

Stage settings and costumes in good taste, but most of all, performers who appreciate all the delicate "business" necessary to lure the audience off of its shell of reserve and make it applaud even the most ridiculous work, help the music in creating the impression that the Princess Chic was the best musical production of the season.

Christine Hudson as the Princess Chic, makes a very dainty princess. She has a clear, sweet voice of great purity for the higher notes. One could not ask a prima donna's volume or power from a princess, and this she does not have. But she is eminently satisfying, and more will be heard from her next season. Walter Lawrence as Charles the Bold, has a fine voice and good stage presence.

Adele Stoneman as Lorraine, page to the princess, is one of the most pleasing performers of the entire cast. She has a sweet voice, is perfectly at home in whatever corner of the stage she may be placed, and has a faculty of looking pretty at all times.

The chorus work was good. The quartet singing was also excellent. "How are we to know?" bringing no less than four encores. Edna Floyd as Estelle, daughter of the Chamberlain, sang "The Love Light in Your Eyes," and responded to an encore. The only prominent member of the cast who deserves criticism was Albert Mahar, as the Duke's Chamberlain, and much of his difficulty was due to the words he had to say. Taken as a whole, The Princess Chic will be the basis of comparison for coming comic operas.

"A Stranger in New York."
Two of the late Charles Hoyt's most successful comedies will be produced at Greenwall's opera house Tuesday on the stage. She is tall, very tall, has a magnificent figure and gorgeous hair. Poems might be written about that hair. You look at it once and then you don't care what happens. There is much new matter in the performance, and the chorus is excellent.

"At the Old Cross Roads."
Arthur C. Alston's company in "At the Old Cross Roads," will be the attraction at Greenwall's opera house Friday night, Nov. 21. The New Orleans Times-Democrat has the following to say of play and players:

Whatever may be said of the improbabilities which the author has allowed to creep into the story "At the posing presence at the head of the Amazon March in "Dodo" recalls the best of the old style of comic opera theme which is rejuvenated in the new Pixley and Luders' work.

Paul Gilmore will present Haddon Chambers' amusing comedy, "The Tyranny of Tears," in this city soon. The play has enjoyed prolonged runs in London and New York. Gilmore is known as a talented, and discreet ac-production of the same will be given here—with special scenery which is said to be something gorgeous, it being specially designed and painted for this season's production of "The Wizard," and its models from photographs of the city of Egypt. The decorations and stage settings will be such as are only seen in the large cities.

The wide range of society covered by the plot of the new Russo-Siberian play, "For Her Sake," ought to furnish exceptional opportunity for scenic effect, and it is said that the Carpenter company, who produced the piece, did not fail to profit by their chance. The company, it is stated, carries a carload of special scenery, all of which was painted by artists who made a study of the scenes which it was aimed to reproduce. The piece is in four acts.

Again the theatergoers of this city will have the pleasure of witnessing the greatest of high class artists ever brought together in America. With hand playing and banners flying the William H. West Big Minstrel Jubilee will soon be with us, which means that all classes will journey to the theater to see West's famous singers, jolly comedians and extraordinary specialties, knowing full well that they will witness an artistic, clean and brilliant performance.

An amusement attraction of exceptional merit will be presented in this city soon. William Bonelli and Rose Stahl's special production of Paul Leicester Ford's and Edward E. Rose's dramatic version of the former widely read Revolutionary romance, "Janice Meredith." The title role of Janice will be played by Miss Stahl. It will be remembered that "Janice Meredith" was one of the most popular and successful attractions presented in New York last season, making a run of over three months at Wallack's theater. The story on which it is founded is one of the most widely read published in America in ten years. "Janice Meredith" is a play which possesses supreme patriotic interest, as it presents the only realistic stage pictures of important events in the Revolutionary war that have ever been seen in an American theater.

A Dangerous Month
This is the month of coughs, colds and acute catarrh. Do you catch cold easily? Find yourself hoarse, with a tickling in your throat and an annoying cough at night? Then, you should always have handy, a bottle of Ballard's Horehound Syrup. J. A. Anderson, 354 West Fifth street, Salt Lake City, writes: "We use Ballard's Horehound Syrup for coughs and colds. It gives immediate relief. We know it's the best remedy for these troubles. I write this to induce other people to try this pleasant and efficient remedy." 25c, 50c and $1 at H. T. PANGBURN & CO'S.

One Day to Birmingham and Atlanta
The Missouri, Kansas and Texas railway inaugurated in September a new train to run between Dallas and Shreveport.

The service was so popular that connections have placed in service additional trains, whereby passengers can use the new "Katy" route and make sure connections for Meridian, Birmingham and intermediate points. By this means passengers will be able to start from Dallas, Tex., at 9 p. m.; Greenville, 11 p. m.; arrive at Shreveport, 6 a. m.; Meridian, 6:10 p. m.; Birmingham, 11:15 p. m.; arriving Atlanta at 6:30 a. m. Corresponding close connections can be made returning. Pullman sleepers and chair cars Dallas to Shreveport and Birmingham to Atlanta.

A Violent Attack of Croup Cured.
"Last winter an infant child of mine had croup in a violent form," says Elder John W. Rogers, a Christian Evangelist, of Filley, Mo. "I gave her a few doses of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and in a short time all danger was past and the child recovered." This remedy not only cures croup, but when given as soon as the first symptoms appear, will prevent the attack. It contains no opium or other harmful substance and may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. For sale by N. E. Grammer, druggist.

WATCH!
The Telegram will shortly announce the name of a new serial story that will be run in this paper. The story is to be one of the latest copyright books—the season's success. Telegram readers will have the opportunity of reading a story that would cost $1.50 in book form. Watch for the announcement.

FORT WORTH, TEXAS, NOVEMBER 16, 1902.

SELFISHNESS.

If people were not selfish this world would be pretty nearly perfect as a place to live in. It already offers everything to delight the senses and provides fully for every need and desire of the mind and body.

Why the Creator arranged the world this way, instead of making everything perfect for us in the beginning, is known only to Him. The answer will be found when the whole tremendous problem of our existence has been solved and the scheme of the universe is known.

By eliminating selfishness from human nature, human misery would have been practically done away with. But it was not done; and here we are: all more or less selfish according to our endowments and our surroundings and our opportunities; all striving for happiness, and in the race for it little considering the interests of anyone except ourselves.

And it is here that we defeat the very end for which we strive. For history does not relate, nor any philosophy uphold, that any one ever was happy who had regard only for himself. This is a fact that has been known ever since people began to account for anything in this world; it is a truth that has been preached for ages, and pretty much ineffectually, too, it seems.

How many times have you stopped to think what a world ours would be, if everyone would look first to the interests of his neighbor and then to his own. There would be no stealing, for the incentive for it would be gone; there would be no lying, for what could be the object of deception? There would be no vain glorying, for no one would care to appear at a better advantage than his neighbor.

One can figure the subject out in detail, the picture of what would follow grows more beautiful the farther you carry it. But that would do little good. All the people that analyze the condition and then only preach about it, are not worth the one that actually puts the theory into practice. It has always been so, the man that does is worth a myriad of the man that only thinks and plans and talks.

One of our Texas exchanges is in trouble with the city council of its town because the paper saw fit to call some of the aldermen down for seemingly dereliction of duty. If the newspapers did not roast the officeholders once in a while, how on earth could it be expected that some of them ever would get done.

THE NATIONAL GUARD.

An effort is going to be made to provide more effectively for the National guard. The state militia at present, while a source of tremendous reserve strength for war, is not as well equipped, trained and disciplined as it should be, considering its importance.

The subject of improving the state troops has had the attention of nearly every President from Washington to Roosevelt, and it now seems possible that finally a law will be passed by Congress that will greatly increase its efficiency.

The guard is the second line of defense for the country, and is certain to be called into action for any war of any importance that the country should be plunged into; for the standing army is not of sufficient strength to cover much territory. Therefore it is all together fitting that it should be prepared in all particulars for warfare.

The guard should not be a plaything for young men, but a powerful fighting machine. Those who are members of it should be armed and equipped just as the regular army is armed and equipped, and they should have the same discipline and instruction so far as possible in the limited time that can be given for that purpose. State troops should go to camp under conditions as nearly as possible approximating those of actual war. State troops and regular troops should be camped together, so that the former may have the benefit of the experience and skill of the latter.

Officers should be examined as to physical and mental qualifications, and the standard should be uniform throughout the country. Those not fit to serve should not retain their commissions, but they should be afforded opportunities for improvement and making themselves qualified to serve by being permitted to go to regular army schools for instruction, with their expenses paid. Annual inspections by officers of the regular army should test the efficiency of the guard, and the pro rata allotment due each State from the annual appropriations of Congress should be given to States whose National Guard is efficiently armed, uniformed and equipped for active duty in the field.

The present National Guard of the States and Territories aggregates about 115,000 officers and men. With liberal appropriations by Congress, and a system of Federal control and instruction, the States also will be induced to accord more liberal treatment, and this force will in a short time doubtless reach 200,000. Of this number it is believed at least 150,000 would respond to a call of duty. This would be amply sufficient under all contingencies which may reasonably be expected, for the second line of defense, and would give the country breathing time within which to organize and equip its vast unorganized military resources.

With a volunteer force of this size, so equipped and disciplined that it could take the field at once, it would be possible to even further reduce the size of our regular army. It would be a body which would inspire the respect of other nations, and make them hesitate to wantonly attack us. The country would be far better prepared for war while at a minimum of expense we would be able to secure to the country a maximum of our military strength in times of great emergency.

The Republicans will probably revise the tariff, according to before election promises, but when it is all over it will be found that they revised it up instead of down.

THE FORT WORTH COUNTRY CLUB.

The Country Club is to be congratulated on its announced intention to build a $17,000 club house. It is to be located out in the Arlington Heights district. It is taken for granted that the purpose of the club is to promote outdoor life and sports. That is the end of most country clubs—hence the name.

Some there are, however, that seem to be organized for another purpose. They furnish loading and drinking places for the rich and idle. Palatial club houses are built and luxuriously fitted out with every appliance for the comfort and ease of their habitués. Sideboards and cellars are stocked till they groan and white-coated waiters are kept on the go. Outdoor sports are limited to driving to and from the club house, with social diversions as the main feature. They are country clubs in name only. It is to be hoped that Fort Worth's is not to be of this character.

A country club should be a country club. It should have as its intent the promotion of the health and pleasure of its members by sports. There should be golf, tennis and croquet—the first three are essential. And if any be so inclined, polo, baseball and football fields should be provided. The latter are sports that take a great deal of time and for one, polo, a pocketbook of extraordinary dimensions and fullness.

Within the last few years a remarkable impetus has been given to the establishment of country clubs by the game of golf. It is, in fact, the main stay of most of them; the one game that men and women, old and young, may play. It not only furnishes the outdoor exercise and diversion desired, but is as well the one topic of conversation within the club houses and wherever players meet. It takes an extraordinary hold of everyone who essays it and never lets go until the player passes to that land where the bunker is known not.

Golf is a good old-fashioned Scotch game, that looks unutterably silly to one who has never played it. But let him or her grasp a driver or a brassie and send the little white gutta percha ball skimming over the ground for a couple of hundred yards and one scoffer is silenced.

For some reason Fort Worth hasn't a golf course. The game is played in Austin, San Antonio, Houston, Galveston and elsewhere in the state, and has done much to promote the joy of living in these cities. The Fort Worth Country club can make no move that will add more to the pleasure and health of its members than the construction of a well-planned nine-hole golf course.

If Uncle Joe Cannon should be elected to the Speakership, who on earth will take care of the United States treasury and guard its interests from the Republican Congressmen who seem to believe that the big cash box has no bottom and that the dollars extend all the way down?

NO CITY NEEDS FLATS.

A Memphis paper states that that city needs flats very badly and that anyone who builds them will launch both a profitable and philanthropic venture. Part of that statement may be true. Possibly flats in Memphis would pay a certain goodly per cent on the investment. But to say that the building of them would be a philanthropic enterprise is wide of the truth.

Flats are the creation of the devil. They were first instituted in order to break up the love of the higher enjoyments and the more enduring things of life. Living in them comprehends no green grass and beds of blooming flowers; no twining vines and latticed windows; no broad porches or trees, with swinging hammocks and soft chairs; no back yards or modest gardens; no dogs or cats or anything. Just the dreary monotony of small rooms with red and green wall paper and imitation Turkish rugs. Just public stairs with red carpet or the more public elevator. Just air shafts for light and air, which serve principally for the exchange of inter-family news and views. Unearthly smells and hideous noises. All these are what life in a series of ill ventilated closets, otherwise known as flats, means.

There are some compensations, no doubt, in flats; but at what a cost! The life is unutterably superficial and that it has its effect on the character and moral nature is just as sure as that shallowness, selfishness and misery exist.

Think of raising children in such an environment. What kind of memories of childhood will they have? They'll have few indeed that were not better forgotten. And they will grow up, not with the fresh air of the suburbs or country in their lungs, the sight of flowers in their eyes, and the sound of birds in their ears; but instead with the mingled tones of Miss O'Shaughnessy and the milkman always within hearing, as they are wafted up the air shaft. Their eyes will feast only on uninteresting brick walls and their playground will be the paved street with its Bedlam of noises and multitude of dangers.

The Standard Oil company has captured Germany. Kaiser Wilhelm's people seem to have capitivated without dying in the last ditch. The army and navy of our great and glorious country will have to hustle if they want to keep within distance of our captains of industry and kings of commerce.

The papers the other day talked up a big find of pure gold nuggets as big as hen's eggs. Of course the man who struck this rich deposit had no relations with the fellow who discovered a pocket of opium just previous to the gold find.

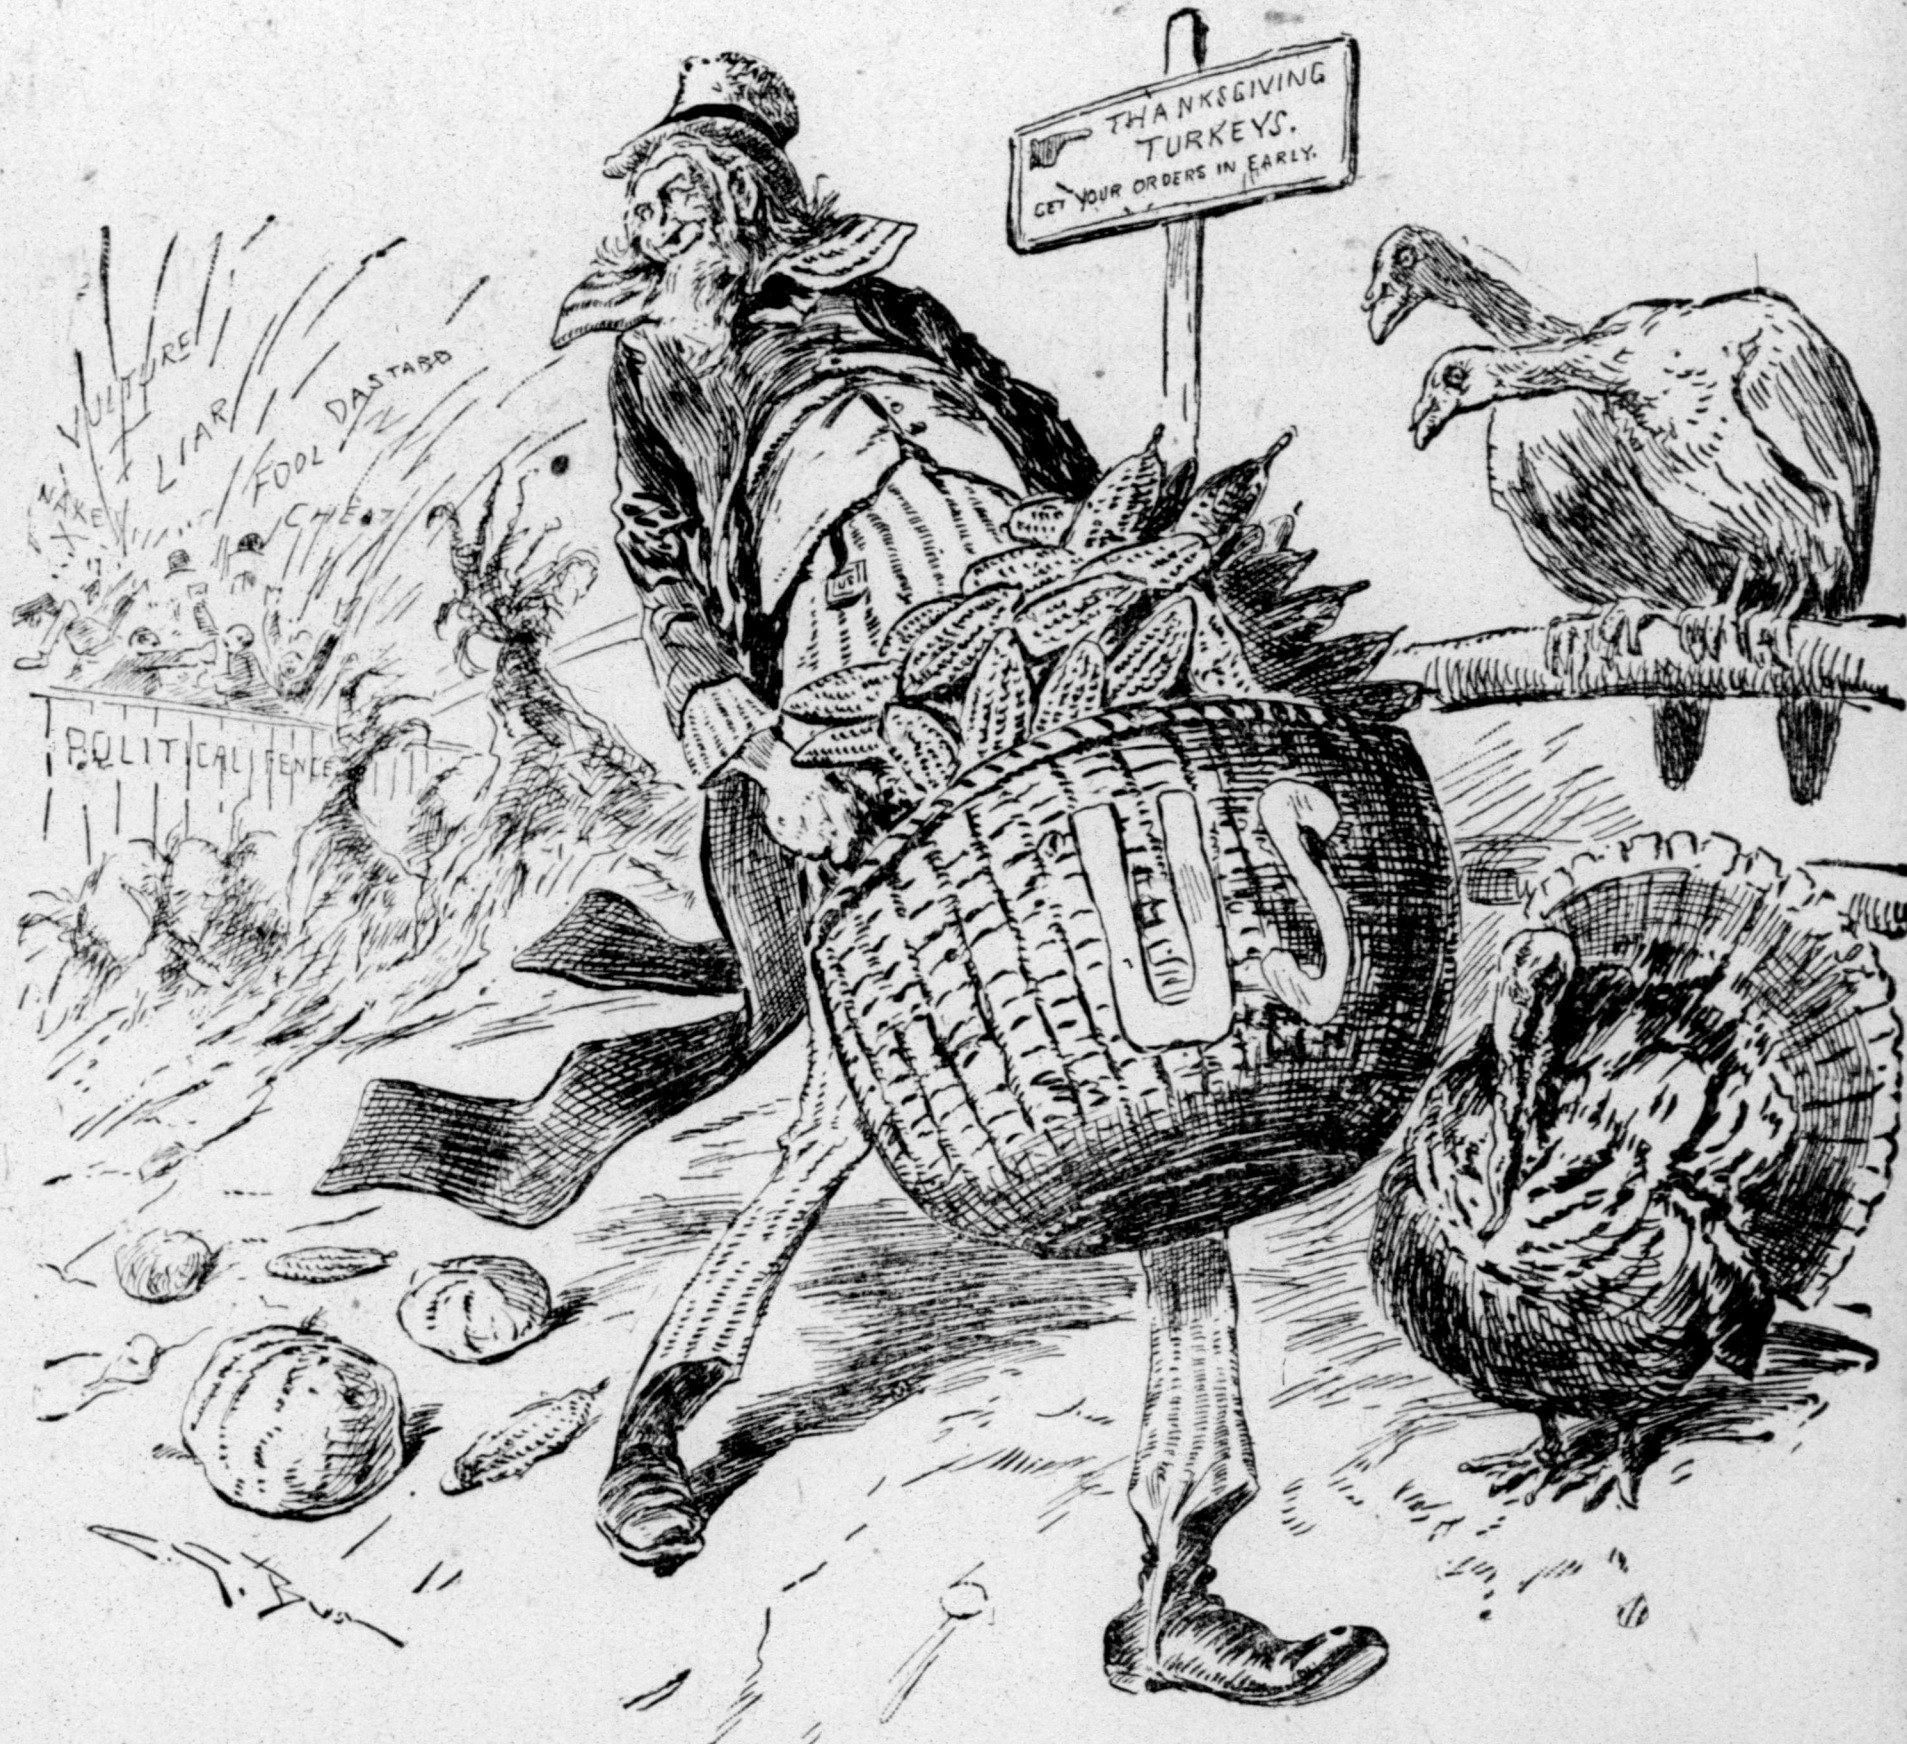

The coal barons are not running any chances in the matter of the price of their commodity and the decision of the commissioners. The coal trust's conscience will never keep it from doing other people at the old stand.

There is more talk of a bigger furniture trust. If that trust isn't any stronger than most of the kind of furniture sold on the installment plan it wouldn't be a very difficult job to smash it.

Some time ago a vegetarian won a walking match in Berlin and broke a noted record at the same time. He never had any rainy-day Houston streets to cross.

It really looks as though the Houston street paving had almost gnawed in two the bars of its cell.

That's Over, Now for Turkey

THE IDLER'S NOTE BOOK

I went to the opera the other night. Several other people went and no evil consequences resulted, but in my case it was different. It is always so. Once at school, a long time ago, all the pupils got the measles but me. Now, to the ordinary guesser, it would seem that I was lucky in not taking the measles, but that only goes to show how bad my luck really is. I didn't take the measles till twenty years afterwards, when I was working at a job that netted me $14 a week. I took the measles and was down three weeks. I lost my job and have never had so good a one since, besides getting my eyes crossed while I was getting over them.

That's why I had bad luck when I went to the opera. It was grand opera and the play was "Faust." Maybe you heard about it. I was fascinated by it, thrilled, enraptured, literally rejuvenated just like "Faust" was. I had always thought before that "Faust" was a kind of coffee just like Omar Khayyam is one of Swift's smoked products, but I got disillusioned all over.

As I said I was enraptured. I wanted to hug, embrace, I mean, the heroine, Marguerite, was a daisy and that's no pun either. Even Mephisto was good, though he didn't look like the kind I have in a certain copy of the Pilgrim's Progress at home.

I sat pinned to my seat through the whole five acts and chewed coffee in ecstasy.

Going home I hummed snatches of Gounod, intermingled with ractime melodies till my head was in a whirl. It was hitting me bad. I had to take a cheese lunch to steady my nerves.

But I got to my room all right and somehow got to bed and to sleep. I dreamed "Faust" all night. I thought I was the—I mean Mephisto—and then all of a sudden I discovered that I was Valentine and that somebody had plunked me in the ribs and I was about to die. That was where the cheese I had eaten got in its work.

I uttered a fierce yell, and then woke up. It was 8 o'clock and the November sun was shining brightly in my window. I could hear my femme de chambre busily at work in the next room, but I lay in lazy luxury half-awake, half-dreaming of the pleasures of the night before.

Suddenly I sat up in bed. I had an inspiration. I don't have a bad voice. Why couldn't I sing a little "Faust" myself? I knew a few bits of the melody, for instance, that grand march which has been so beautifully worded: "No-o, sir, I'll never get drunk any more."

No-o, sir, I'll never get drunk any more. If you always will treat, whenever we meet, I never will kick up a row on the street."

And then a sudden pain of doubt filled me. How could I sing "Faust" without a proper costume. The real "Faust" had worn blue tights with purple trunks, and a red plush doublet. I didn't have any of those things, and was in temporary despair.

Then my quick inspirations that have always saved me and anon plunged me into still deeper grief, came to my aid. I didn't have the tights and doublets—but I did have—Never mind, I don't use the Onetta brand.

I jumped out of bed quickly, donned the necessary garments, and then, striking a truly operatic pose before my cracked looking glass, began

OUR LOCAL PORTRAIT GALLERY

HON. GEORGE W. CLARK.

The subject of this sketch, Hon. George W. Clark, was reared and educated in Old Kentucky. He came to Texas in 1878, was charmed with the magnificent prospects of the Lone Star state, and declares he has never desired a home elsewhere. He is now fifty-one years old, but is in the prime of life, of course. At the close of the war with the states it fell to his lot to care for a widowed mother. His is the old, old story of the desolation which followed that great conflict in the South, and like the host of Southern boys who have become exemplars of noble manhood scarcely less than their fathers who were slain in the cause which was loved and lost, he began working out his destiny with the fortitude and patience which were their best inheritance from their ancestors, and his were among the most distinguished in his native state. He made his way through all obstacles, and by his own exertions secured the means to complete his education in the best college in Kentucky. He is one of those whom nature has endowed with the rare gifts of heart and mind which combine to make the true orator. The spirit of eloquence appears to dwell in his very being. Much of his time has been given to the work of education, though for the last ten years he has been in the insurance business. But no business, however engrossing, can prevent him from pursuing his favorite work—that of public speaking. He loves humanity, and the real ambition of his life has been to benefit and elevate his fellow beings, which gives tone and inspiration to his speeches.

Mr. Clark is now supreme president of the United Benevolent association. He was elected last year without opposition. Under his leadership the order, which is purely a Texas institution, has grown rapidly in public favor and usefulness, with a bright future before it. During his residence in Fort Worth he has made many warm personal friends, and with the admiration of Fort Worth people generally by the good of the city. His travels over the state are general and no doubt he addresses more audiences among the better class of people than any other man in the state before the public. He never addresses an audience but that Fort Worth's colors are unfurled. He is an ardent worker in the federation of Sons of Confederate Veterans, holding the honored position in the national body of First Assistant Judge Advocate General on the staff of Commander-in-Chief Stone; also Inspector General on the staff of Division Commander John M. Adams, and is also lieutenant commander of the local camp of Sons, the banner camp, in point of membership, in all the confederation. "No-o-o, sir (hic), I'll never get drunk, etc. As my basso profundo notes echoed through every corner of my six by eight apartments, I became filled with a wonderful sense of my great and magnificent voice. I straddled my legs apart, threw my chest back and, with my eyes fixed on the ceiling, began bellowing out the second verse. I did not hear the door of my room open softly or see my femme de chambre enter. My femme de chambre's name is O'Shaughnessy. It didn't take me long to find out she was there.

"Howly mother av Moses, an' me a dacint single woman. O-oh-oh, o-oh-oh, o-oh-oh," and with a shriek of terror she turned and fled down the hall. As her heavy footsteps died away, I could hear her crying, "Little did I, Bridget O'Shaughnessy, ever think I'd be insulted and my dacency ravished by such an unhowly sight."

I shut the door gently and then lay down on the floor and rolled in the agony of mirth. But I didn't laugh fifteen minutes later.

My landlord appeared with blazing countenance, demanding, "What's this I hear about your appearing in an indecent costume?" he shouted.

"No, I won't listen to you, you can leave at once. I don't care if your rent is paid in advance, if you say anything more, I'll have you arrested."

And that is why I am today with my trunk in the back end of the office and no room in which to indulge in my taste for classical grand opera. Alas, such is life in Texas.

THE IDLER.

AMONG EXCHANGES

Winsboro Wide-Awake: Hon. M. D. Carlock, aside from taking extensive stock in politics this year, has experimented some along agricultural lines. On July 3 he planted five acres in kaffir corn on land that had previously produced a good crop of oats this year. The corn was worked only one time and the yield will be at least from thirty-five to forty-five bushels per acre, besides a world of nice forage. Mr. Carlock will cut the corn after frost and proposes to give every farmer who will agree to plant them a peck of seed absolutely free. He desires the farmers to see this field of kaffir corn and invites all to come and learn just what our land will do in the production of kaffir. It is certainly marvelous and solves the forage question if our farmers will take hold of it.

Baltimore After Texas Terrapin

Rockport Enterprise: Mr. L. Coburn is in receipt of a letter from a Baltimore firm in regard to Texas terrapin. The writer states that there is an unprecedented demand for these toothsome creatures and the supply sadly deficient. Prices are tempting, and as the writer says, terrapin fishing now is far better than the banking business, from a money making standpoint. Terrapin are plentiful in these waters, and no doubt Rockport's fame as a terrapin producer will soon be world-wide. The raising of terrapin offers tempting inducements and here is a good field for someone who understands the business.

Oldest Voter in Texas

Austin Tribune: The oldest voter in Texas, if not in the United States, to cast his vote yesterday was Antonio Lopez, who cast his ballot at Eanes school house. He was born in Mexico 106 years ago, so he figures, and has lived in Travis county since the old capitol was built. He came to Texas after the Mexican war and has lived continuously in the state since then. For such an old man, he is well preserved and retains his memory well, conversing with ease about events long since passed into history, in which he took an active part.

Music

Jacob Schreiner.

Man's honest convictions are immortal. If he allows his fate as a man or an artist to depend upon the convictions of others who labor under the erroneous impression that such a mind can be fed upon mere existence, and who are not interested enough in art for the beautiful, or for art's sake, his progress will be retarded materially, or if he is not at all inconstant, he is regarded as obstinate and pertinacious. The honest and truthful convictions will predominate against overwhelming odds which can only be proven in time to come. Conditions and environments might be created within the radius of a few seconds which will appear to force the individual from his equilibrium, but one without a temperament, "cast him aside." The beauty of truth and loyalty will always clear the channel of all obstacles in the final outcome, which shows the artist to be a man or the man an artist. An artist without the man has never existed as well as the manly man can not exist without the truth. He should be judged by his actions and works of art and not by what he has said, as such a thing as losing art or principle in the right person is impossible, and if it is once imbedded in the heart it can never be eliminated. Man's honest convictions are immortal.

R. H. Algeyer gave evidence of his ability as a fine accompanist in his work with Van Eweyk and the chorus at the Arion concert Tuesday evening.

Madam Fletcher-Copp will finish her class for teachers in musical kindergarten the latter part of the present week.

Miss Nadine Spoons played the first movement of the DeBeriot Ninth Concerto for violin, at the Baptist church, Friday evening.

Fort Worth has been fortunate in having three first-class musical attractions during the past week, the Hall-Butler recital, Van Eweyk-Arion concert and the Gordon-Shay Grand opera Co. In the Hall-Butler recital, quite a lengthy program was given, which was to the disadvantage of the tenor, Mr. Hall. His voice certainly does not improve with acquaintance, lacking the sonorous quality which always brands an artist at once. His lighter numbers were given in a clear, concise manner, which showed careful study and application. Of the violinist, he has a wonderful technique and under excellent control; his intonation being perfect, but no warmth of temperament was there. He was by far the better of the two soloists.

The Arions have improved wonderfully since last season in volume and precision under the direction of Mr. Bauer and by the end of the present season no doubt the progress will be much more marked.

In the "Yearning," by Nevin, the ensemble was extremely good, which showed careful training. In the (a) and (b) numbers of Hawley and Nevin, correct intonation was lacking, which was possibly due to the rapid tempo. The Bedouin song, by Arthur Voete, was by far the best of their numbers on the program, which showed that the attention of the chorus was with the conductor, therefore was given in a masterly style. Arthur Van Eweyk, the baritone soloist, is an artist of the first-class. He opened the program with "Edward," by Carl Loewe, and by request sang "Honor and Arms," by Handel, which showed at once the capabilities of an artist. His attack and precision at once predominated and the interpretation was purely Handel, which is quite contrary to the usual style in which this masterpiece is given. Voices of finer quality are quite frequently heard among artists, but more finish and perfect command than he possessed is not easily found. He is an artist of great versatility, singing Schumann, Handel, Nevin and Hawley with ease, both from the German and the English. The "Two Grenadiers," by Schumann, given as an encore to his last group of songs, was sung only as it could be by a musician of his caliber.

Being unable to attend the matinee performance of "Il Trovatore," no comment can be made, but "Faust" was given in the evening at a great disadvantage as far as the opera proper is concerned. An orchestra that contributes "cues" and music to all sorts of dramatic productions, can not be expected to do justice to an opera score; however, they would have done much better if more time had been allowed for rehearsals. The company carried with them a cellist, clarinetist, violinist and a conductor-pianist.

Of the cast, Miss Rose Shay gave a fine reading of Marguerite, such as is rarely heard from an artist of her years. She showed to the best advantage in the third act, garden scene, with a possible exception of the finale of the last act. She is an American product pure and simple, having received her vocal training at Cincinnati, under Madame Tecla Vigné. Her voice is beautiful, of a mezzo-soprano quality, which she has well under control. A few years previously she was considered a deep contralto. Her dramatic qualities were displayed to a good advantage in the Jewel scene. Much more will be heard of her in a few years yet to come. Her Faust was quite to the contrary, lacking both dramatic and executive ability. His voice being void of any warmth and his love-making in the third and fifth act showed at once his veritable need of sagacity, which is necessary to make an ideal Faust. He needs experience.

John Dunsmore was a fine Mephisto, especially from a vocal standpoint. He being in the best of voice and his strenuous effort to keep life into the whole performance was well rewarded. Alberti as Valentine, whose voice shows the experience of disipation, but whose acting would be a credit to any production, was at his best. His dying scene was indeed wonderfully given. Of the chorus, He needs experience.

Secretary Reeves, of the Y. M. C. A., has closed a contract with the matinee for the next month or six weeks, agreement of the Theo. Thomas orchestra association of Chicago for a matinee program by that famous orchestra, to be given April. This organization is by far the best in America, and is considered by some of the best authorities, to be equal to any orchestra in the foreign countries. It includes probably sixty-five musicians.

Mrs. J. S. Ritch, violinist of Jennings, La., is in the city to continue her violin studies.

Abraham Mendelssohn, the father of the great composer, was the son of Moses Mendelssohn, the great Jewish philosopher.

He used to describe his position by saying: "Formerly I was the son of my father, now I am the father of my son."

Fort Worth is badly in need of a conservatory. There is a large field surrounding the city which could be drawn from, and with the local patronage it undoubtedly would be a success financially. With a competent corps of teachers of high attainments, pupils would come from all the surrounding states. Some of our citizens should take active steps in securing a building for that purpose.

Pietro Mascagni, the Italian composer, whose opera company came to grief here last week, was arrested today on a civil suit and held a prisoner at the Hotel Touraine. The plaintiffs, Mittenhall Bros., who brought him and his company to this country, caused his arrest by alleging that he was indebted to them, and was about to leave the state. The suit arises from the trouble of the composer, his company and managers. The contract called for $4000 per week in advance. This was paid, the managers say. Now the managers sue the composer, alleging that he has received money from them and has failed to do as he agreed to. They also allege that they have been put to great loss by Mascagni's failure to keep his contract. Mascagni sought his release on habeas corpus. Judge Sheldon holding court in his house, the first time this was ever done in the state. The application was refused, and Mascagni finally obtained liberty on furnishing $10,000 bail.

The above was dated Boston, Nov. 12th, and later dispatches say he has resumed his tour throughout America. His company is booked for Dallas, Dec. 18th, and therefore we will be fortunate in having an opportunity of hearing, possibly, his own opera, "Cavalleria Rusticana" under the composers' personal direction.

A student of dedication has discovered that of all Bach's works, only three are dedicated to great men, one being to Frederick the Great. Beethoven dedicated most of his to kings and princes, and some to Goethe and Hayden. Brahms dedicated some of his to his colleagues in art, Loncavallo to his wife, Mascagni dedicated "Le Maschere" to himself, "with the highest esteem and unchanging affection."

There will be a violin solo given at the Cumberland Presbyterian church this morning.

Among the new singers engaged by Mr. Grau for the coming opera season at the Metropolitan Opera House, are Emil Gerhauer and George Anthes. There has been doubt expressed in some quarters as to whether the latter will come, as it will be necessary for him to break his contract with the Dresden Opera in order to do so. This, as is well known, would put him on the black list of the German opera managers. Both Anthes and Gerhauer have become prominent in German opera, especially in Wagnerian roles.

Victor Herbert has been acquitted on the charge of plagiarism, brought against him by another comic opera writer of some note in America. Because a man harmonizes the C scale in the same manner as did Bach or Beethoven, is not sufficient grounds for the charge above referred to.

The Bostelmann string quartet will be the next attraction of the Y. M. C. A. lecture course, appearing Nov. 20th.

A musical program was given at the Broadway Presbyterian church Friday evening.

BIG HARDWARE CONSOLIDATION

Wm. Henry & Co. of This City and the R. E. Bell Co. of Weatherford One of the business enterprises which deserves special mention at this time is the recent incorporation of the William Henry and R. E. Bell Hardware companies, a consolidation of William Henry & Co. of Fort Worth and the R. E. Bell Hardware company of Weatherford, both old concerns to the trade.

The former has conducted a business here under the management of J. B. Burnside for the past eighteen years and under his management has gained for that firm a reputation for good and an upright business methods that will prove of great value to the new company in retaining their old trade and securing new.

The latter firm has been doing a wholesale and retail business in Weatherford for the past thirty years and have made this change to place them in a better position to reach their trade, which had grown to such an extent that it covers a wide scope of country that was not of easy access from Weatherford.

It seems to be the unanimous prediction that this concern will prove of inestimable value to Fort Worth, as it is their purpose to carry a very much larger stock than ever has been carried here before and to handle the business in such a way as to enable them to very greatly increase the business done by the two firms which they have succeeded. The personnel of the new firm is that of the two old ones and the liberal policy which both of the old firms adhered to will be continued.

The retail house occupied by William Henry & Co. on Fifth and Houston street, will be occupied and a business conducted there as usual. The new concern will also have very spacious quarters at 1215 Main street, where they will occupy a building especially erected for them, with a floor space of 50x200 feet, three stories high.

The bulk of their stock will be carried here, but they will retail and wholesale from both locations. The consolidation of the two stocks gives them a much more varied line than that carried by the old firms; yet it is stated they will add new lines until their stock will comprise an assortment that will enable the dealers and purchasers generally to find nearly anything wanted. The excellent buying facilities of the new firm will place them in a decidedly advantageous position; this, in connection with the advantages which they have by way of cheaper freight rates than any of the competing towns, will add greatly to their position as competitors.

OPERETTA SYNOPSIS
"TRIUMPH OF LOVE"

Story of Play to be Given for the Benefit of All Saints' Hospital this Week

From the programs for the Operetta "Triumph of Love," to be produced by local talent next Thursday night at Greenwalls, the following synopsis is taken. It gives some idea of the elaborate work necessary to the production.

ACT I. Court of the Queen of the Universe, opening chorus "All Hail!" Chorus of Fairies. They beg the Queen of the Universe to choose for them a Sovereign, Virtue's plan: "A mortal dear to me has been led astray by evil spirits. Let Honor, Wealth and Love bestow their best gifts on this fallen man, and she who reclaims him shall be the Fairy Queen!" Solo "Nocturne," Chorus "Lo, Night Approaches," Vesper Hymn. Tableau.

ACT II.—Evil spirits and demons. Chorus. Mephisto and his followers boast of what they can do. The Duke of Burgundy is lured to his ruin. The Bogle Man. Ascensu the Magician specialties. Tableau.

ACT III.—Leporello the valet, who is always hungry. Remorse of the duke. "My fortune gone, deserted by my friends, forsaken by heaven itself. I am indeed most wretched." Princess Rosalie, with song and dance. Chorus of Fairies. Solo, "My Dream of You." Fairies bestow the gifts of Honor upon the duke. Farewell chorus. Tableau.

ACT IV.—Despair of the duke. Saved. Chorus of Fairies, with rose dance. Shower of gold. Leporello gets a square meal at last. Solo, "I Dream." Youth, Beauty and Pleasure. "Fair they well." Chorus and tableau.

ACT V.—Leporello tells how his master lost his wealth. The demons exult over the ruin they have wrought. Demon's dance. Goddess of Love and Cupid. Solo, "Ever More." Cupid plants true love in the mortal's heart. Solo, "Power of Love." Love's Triumph Duet, "Love Shall Guide You." Cupid's tricks. Leporello adds his Evelina. Song and dance.

ACT VI.—Vulcan and Hercules. Mephisto is sentenced to everlasting banishment. Crowning scene. Love, the Queen of the Fairies.

GRAND FINALE—TABLEAU!

DENTON COUNTY HAS SOME CLAIMS TO MAKE

Insists That It Furnish The Candidate For Congress in The Thirteenth District

DENTON, Texas, Nov. 14.—Since the recent election there has been considerable gossip in political circles concerning who is to be the Democratic candidate for the Fifty-ninth congress from the Thirteenth congressional district of Texas. The Denton county Democrats are going to claim, and persistently claim, that it is Denton county's time to furnish the candidate for two years from now. Next to the Sixteenth district the Thirteenth embraces more counties—forty-seven—and more area than any other district in the state, and probably in the United States, and Denton is about the most populous county in the district, being inhabited mostly by cattle. The Denton Democrats say that this county was entitled to furnish the candidate in the old district before the state was redistricted. Denton has some excellent congressional timber, among which are Col. Alvin C. Owsley, Dr. James P. Blount and Hon. Emory C. Smith. All of these gentlemen are worthy, patriotic men and have unquestioned ability.

Startling, But True.

"If every one knew what a grand medicine Dr. King's New Life Pills is," writes D. H. Turner, Dempseytown, Pa., "you'd sell all you have in a day. Two weeks' use has made a new man of me." Infallible for constipation, stomach and liver troubles. 25c at W. J. Fisher, 502 Main street and 413 Houston street.

Sixteen thousand emigrants left Norway this year, chiefly for North America. Last year's total was 11,000.

Kodol Digests what you Eat Dyspepsia Cure

There is one certain way of curing indigestion and stomach troubles, that is; give your stomach a rest, but still eat plenty of good food to keep up the nourishment for your body. You can do this by using KODOL DYSPEPSIA CURE because it is the one preparation which digests what you eat without aid from the stomach. Nature will then repair your worn out digestive organs and restore them to healthy condition. It relieves that feeling of fullness, belching and distress after eating. "I suffered with dyspepsia a great many years. I tried many remedies without relief until I used KODOL DYSPEPSIA CURE. My health has improved and I now feel like a new man. S. J. Flemming, Murray, Neb."

It can't help but do you good

Prepared by E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago. The $1. bottle contains 2 1/2 times the 50c. size.

When you need a soothing and healing application for piles, and skin diseases, use DeWitt's Witch Hazel SALVE. Beware of counterfeits.

FOR SALE BY Smallwood & Anderson, 712 Main Street, Anderson & Smallwood, 1604 Main Street.

ONE OF JOHN MORGAN'S MEN, NOW THE MOST FAMOUS DISTILLER WEST OF THE MISSISSIPPI RIVER.

Mr. Geo. H. Shawhan, president of the Shawhan Distillery Company, belongs to the fourth generation of a famous family of distillers. His great-grandfather, Daniel Shawhan, having settled in Bourbon county, Ky., shortly after the revolutionary war, set up and operated there the first distillery in the state, and was the first to give to his product the name of "Bourbon" whiskey. The formula, skill and care used in making Shawhan whiskey in those early times are still used today.

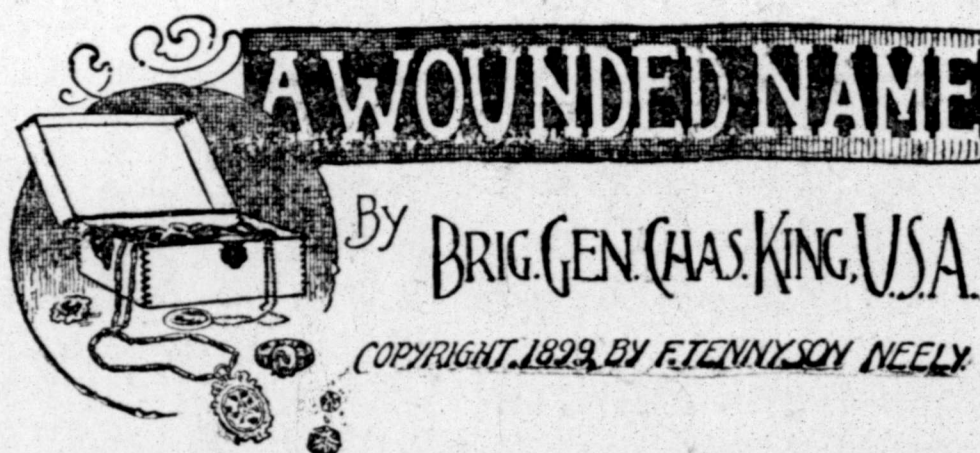

It may be of interest to our readers to know that Mr. Shawhan was one of John Morgan's men in the civil war. Physically, he is of herculean type, well proportioned, weighing 275 pounds and standing six feet four inches. In one of Morgan's raids Mr. Shawhan rode and slept in his saddle for eighteen consecutive days. He is still strong and active. He took the first prize at the Chicago World's Fair for the best butter-producer from his herd of Jersey cattle. His son, Lee, was the famous football player at the Missouri State University. No one who ever looked at the honest face of George Shawhan could doubt for a moment that he makes honest whiskey.

To make a long story short and to give Shawhan Whiskey a wide introduction where its merits will be appreciated, we make the following offer:

SEND US $3.20 and we will prepay express and send you in plain box, 4 Full Quarts of ten-year-old SHAWHAN WHISKEY.

A pure, unadulterated, old-fashioned, honest whiskey, made out of the best grain, with pure, soft, cold spring water from the famous Holiday Springs in Platte county, Mo. Aged in a bonded warehouse. Straight Goods—Straight from an Actual Distillery to You. No marks on box to indicate contents. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Write us and let us send you a beautiful calendar for 1903 and an illustrated book on Shawhan Whiskey.

Events succeeded each other with marvelous rapidity. Folsom's visit was early the morning after the capture, and by noon he was howling along on a 70 mile ride to the ranch in the Laramie valley, hurried thither by the news that Birdsell's gang had run off many of his son's best horses and that Hal Folsom himself was missing.

Loring galloped by the side of the ambulance several miles, conferring with the old frontiersman all the way, then turned back to resume his work at the depot. Eagerly he wired dispatches to the general, which were forwarded from Cheyenne to the Platte, telling of his important capture, smiling quietly as he wrote.

Had he not promised to produce the mysterious Newhall himself? Admirable service, indeed, had the young engineer rendered. The testimony of Folsom, Loring, Jimmy Peters and one or two wakeful citizens all proved that there must have been a dozen of Birdsell's gang in town that night.

There could be only one explanation, for a price was on the head of every man. They had come with "Newhall" and the key straight from some distant lair in the Black Hills of Wyoming, the big shouldered range that stretches from the Laramie near its junction with the Platte southward to Colorado. They were bent on a sudden rush upon the corral in the dead of night, the forcing of the gate and the office door, then with "Newhall" to unlock the safe they would be up and away like the wind, with money enough to keep them all in clover—and whisky—until the last dollar was gambled or guzzled.

Loring's suspicions had proved exactly correct. Loring's precautions in having the office brightly lighted and a show of armed men about had held the would be robbers at bay during the early hours of the night, and then his prompt action in hurling himself on the mysterious stranger who came stealthily in at Folsom's back gate had finally and totally blocked the game.

But, just in proportion as Loring turned out to be right, old Pecksniff turned out to be wrong, for he had refused a guard for the depot, and therefore was it now Pecksniff's bounden duty to himself to poohpooh the precautions of the engineer and belittle the danger. Not for a moment would he admit that armed desperadoes had come at Nevins' back. As for the key in his possession, with all respect to the statements of Mr. Loring, the story of the unfortunate captain was just as plausible, and that key should have been delivered to him, the commander at Fort Emory, instead of being taken possession of by the engineer.

True, Nevins had been dismissed in disgrace, and in a question of veracity between the two men there was little doubt that Loring's would prevail. But a very peppy, fidgety, unhappy old man was Colonel Stevens for many days, prating about this independence of action of stripling officers right under his nose.

But the worst came on the day when the little troop of cavalry at Fort Emory was still further depleted by the detachment of a sergeant, two corporals and eight troopers, ordered to report with pack mule and ten days' rations to Lieutenant Loring of the engineers, and Colonel Stevens had not been consulted again.

The senior colonel in the department, he had seen his command cut down company by company until only a bare squad, said he, remained to guard the most important post in Wyoming. (Which it wasn't by any means, but he had been led to think so.) And now young whippersnappers just out of West Point were running away with his men right under his nose.

But Loring's orders came to him direct from Omaha. He had need of every precaution. He was now going on a mission that demanded the utmost secrecy, and the colonel could no more conceal a movement than a sieve could water.

Quitting the quartermaster's depot one summer night at 12, the little detachment rode silently out across the southward prairie, swung round to the east when the dim lights of town were a mile behind, took the trot over the hard, bounding turf, and at dawn were heading straight for the breaks of the Laramie. Halting for rest and coffee when the sun was an hour high, they again pushed on until noon, when they unsaddled in a grove of leafy cottonwoods in a little fork of the Medicine Bow, watered the weary horses and gave them a hearty feed and themselves as hearty a dinner, and then picketing and hopping their steeds, who were glad enough to roll and sprawl in the sand, all hands managed to get some hours of sound sleep before the sun was sinking to the edge of the Sweetwater range.

Then came the careful grooming of their mounts, then a dip in the cool waters, the smoking tins of soldier coffee and sizzling slips of bacon. Then again the saddle and the silent trail, with the moon looking down from the zenith on their warlike array. Heavily armed was every man, each, even the lieutenant, with carbine and brace of Colts, and on they rode through the still, soft night air, chatting in low tones, no man knowing but every one believing that the taciturn, blue-eyed young officer in the lead was heading there for a lair of the Birdsell gang. It was too far south just then for Sioux. Another moon and they had crossed during the dark hours the broad plains of the Laramie and were winding up among the hills. Another rest and spurting from the rear there overtook them a bronzed, weather beaten frontiersman whom Mr. Loring greeted without show of surprise, and when again they moved on it was he who rode at the lieutenant's left, up, up a winding trail among the frowning heights until just as every man was wondering when on earth they could hope for a bit of the noiseless signal to halt was given, while the leaders dismounted and peered over a shoulder of bluff ahead, held brief consultation, then down the ravine to the left rode the stranger, and back to his men came Loring, his eyes kindling.

"There is a camp half a mile ahead where I have to make an arrest," said he quietly. "Keep close at my heels. We'll have to gallop when we get in view. Draw pistol. Don't fire unless they do. They probably won't."

And they didn't. Half a dozen startled men, gambling about a blanket; two or three sleeping off a drunk and one hunted, haunted wretch nervously pacing up and down among the pines were no match for the dash of a dozen bluejackets coming thundering into view. There was no thought of fight. Those who could catch their horses threw themselves astride bareback and shot for the heart of the hills; two or three scrambled off afoot and were quickly run down; one, a heavily built, haggard, hollow eyed man, shook from head to foot as the lieutenant reined up his panting and excited horse and coolly said:

"You are my prisoner, Burleigh."

Nor was there attempt at rescue. Mounting his four captives on their horses, their feet lashed to the stirrups, their hands bound, all the abandoned arms, ammunition and provisions destroyed and the camp burned, Loring led promptly away up the range toward the north until clear of the timber, then down the westward slope toward the Laramie valley once more, searching for a secure place to bivouac. Far to the north the grand old peak loomed against the blue gray of the Wyoming skies. Off to their left front, uplifting a shaggy crest from its surrounding hills, a bold butte towered fully 20 miles away, and toward that jagged landmark Loring saw his sergeant peering time and again with hand shaded eyes.

"What do you see?" he presently asked.

"Smoke, sir, I think. Will the lieutenant look with his glass?"

Silently Loring unslung his binocular and gazed. His eyes were keen, but untrained. "Take it yourself, sergeant," he said. And the veteran trooper reined out to one side and peered long and steadily, then came trotting up to the head of column, doubt and suppressed excitement mingling on his weather beaten face.

"I couldn't be sure, sir, but—it looked for a minute like smoke."

"And that means—"

"Indian signals, sir. That's Eagle butte, only a couple of miles from Hal Folsom's ranch."

Loring pondered. It was long since, in any force, the Sioux had ventured south of the Platte, but now, after their victory at Warrior Gap and the tremendous

There to the northward, black bear... with its growth of pine, the rays of the rising sun just glinting on the topmost crags, towered Eagle butte, a plume of smoke puffs even at the moment beginning to soar slowly aloft. There, not a mile away, straight ahead, was the steep ridge that, hiding Folsom's from view, stretched down from the northward foothills to the very bank of the lapping Laramie. There south of the stream the gradual slope of the black range, studded here and there with boulders that seemed to have rolled down from the precipitous cliffs under which they were now moving, two seasoned old dragoons 300 yards out to the front, covering the cautious advance.

All the broad sweep of rolling landscape far to the west just lighting up in the slant of the summer sunshine, not a living thing in sight save their own little band, yet beyond that ridge only two miles away lay the ranch, all seemingly peaceful and secure, yet over that jagged water tower to the north the war signals of the Sioux were flaunting, and every hand seemed to seek the small of the gunstock, even two of the prisoners pleading for "a show in the fight" if there was to be one, and, not five minutes later, it came. Borne on the still, breathless air there rose throbbing from the west the spiteful crack, crack of rifles, the distant clamor of taunting yells and yell. Back from the front came one of the troopers at mad gallop, his eyes popping almost from his head.

"My God, lieutenant, Folsom's ranch is afire, and the valley's thick with Sioux!"

Even then, when every carbine seemed to leap from its socket, men remembered the groan of despair that rose from Burleigh's lips.

A SOURCE OF SURPRISE

To Physician and Patient Alike

Dr. Redmond, a specialist in the study and treatment of piles and rectal diseases, recently stated that the Pyramid Pile Cure, the new discovery for the cure of piles, was the most remarkable remedy he had ever seen or tried in one respect; and that was the instant relief experienced in all cases, no matter how severe, from the moment the remedy was applied; this was the more surprising to him, because he had carefully analyzed the preparation and no trace of opium, cocaine or similar poison could be detected.

Physicians look with great favor upon the Pyramid Pile Cure, because it is rapidly taking the place of surgical operations and because it is so simple, so easily applied, and contains no mineral or other poisons so commonly used in pile cures.

Dr. Esterbrook reports that the Pyramid Pile Cure not only cures the various forms of piles, but never fails to give immediate relief on the first application, no matter how severe the pain or discomfort may be.

People who have suffered from piles for years are often astonished at the instant relief experienced from the first application. Another important advantage is the fact that anyone can use the remedy without detention from business or interference with daily occupation.

Mr. J. W. Rollins, of Sweet Springs, Mo., writes: "I consider the Pyramid Pile Cure without an equal; it cured me in less than 30 days. I waited 15 days or more to be sure I was fully cured before writing you; I can now say I am cured and I shall recommend the Pyramid Pile Cure at every possible opportunity because it deserves it. The popularity of this remedy is such that all druggists now sell it at fifty cents a package, and its sales exceed those of all similar remedies combined."

Write Pyramid Drug Co., Marshall, Mich., for their book on cause and cure of piles.

Light and Shadow in the Police Court

Three of the Ananias Club. The members of the Ananias club held a "called" meeting in the corporation court Friday morning. A policeman had "called" them there the night before. The copper told the story to His Honor, and with much detail declared that the three thirteenth members of the Ananias club had been on his beat attending a very hard session. While meandering they had met a wayfarer. "Let's make him stand treat," said one. "Second the motion," voiced the other two. "Carried," declared the putter of the motion. And so it was that they informed the wayfarer that he was "it." But he would not treat. He protested vehemently. It was then that the three husky members smote him, and he fell prone where they are talking of putting asphalt. They stood upon his neck and made stumpy speeches to each other. "Why did you three do this?" stormed Judge Stewart. The three Ananias members shook their heads, sadly. "We did not do as you copper has said," (trying to show that the copper was eligible to membership to their club.) "But the officer saw you," retorted the judge. "Caught you in the very act." "We did not do it." "Two dollars and costs, each," said the court. Then he added, "I might have been lenient had you tried to explain it any other way; but you--since you deliberately lie, lie--falsify your oath--I assure you that I will snow no mercy!" They did not have the price, and the club would not stand for it. Cowboy from 'om Green. Officer Maddox was loitering along Jennings avenue the other night. There was nothing doing, and Sebe was getting ennui in the worst form. "Wish something would break out," he said, "this is too slow for your Uncle Sebe." But it was not destined to remain slow. Suddenly the officer's attention was attracted to a young fellow who was acting in a manner rather unusual. He seemed determined to butt his head against a trolley pole; then, again, he would try to do the spread-eagle act without any skates. However, he did have a "skate," and a beautiful, too! "Looks like something doing," chuckled Sebe, and he started in the direction of the eccentric gent, who was telling himself stories and having an excellent few minutes of it. Before Maddox could reach the young fellow, however, the latter had disappeared inside of a rooming house near. When the officer reached the place the young man in charge was in a state of turmoil; he informed the officer that the eccentric youth was in another room flourishing a revolver and singing all kinds of comical ditties. Maddox became alarmed at the eccentric youth's actions, alarmed for his safety. "What if this semi-melancholy youth from Tom Green county should be contemplating suicide?"--It was indeed a horrible thought. Maddox plunged into the next room, and there saw the young man with a revolver, seemingly pointed under his chin. "Hold!" shouted Maddox, and then wrenched the weapon away. "Wizzer mazzor?" asked the youth. Then he went to sleep in the officer's arms. Scene No. 2 was enacted in the corporation court the next morning. "It's just another case of bad whisky, your honor," said Maddox in response to the court's inquiry. "He was trying to commit suicide." "I was not trying to commit suicide, your honor. I think I was just trying to take the shells from my gun. We all carry guns up in Tom Green county--I'm a cowboy, your honor, up there. I am not a bum, your honor. See here--" He slipped over a bit of paper the night clerk at the station had overlooked. The court looked somewhat surprised, and regarded the young man with a certain kind of awe. The paper was a certified check for $1,000. "I guess you are all right," said Judge Stewart. "Fort Worth is not Tom Green county; so stop luging a Gatling gun with you." "I wasn't luging it, your honor. I had left it in the room and had just gone in after it. I'll be honest with you, judge; I think I was in the act of 'luging' when you feller butted in--it was a narrow escape." "Your explanation saves you, young man. Now let me give you a piece of advice: You take that money and place it in a bank. I was lucky for you that you fell into good hands. You might not be so fortunate next time. You may go."

A DISASTROUS MIX-UP He was a badly used-up gent with a sorrowful droop to his mouth and an impressionistic painting done in blue and purple under his left eye. From the witness stand he warbled: "This man has been persecuting me, yer honor." The defendant bobbed up in the dock to offer argument in defense, saying: "It's all a mistake, yer honor," and his voice sounded as if he was suffering from a very, very bad cold. A little more argument was indulged in by both sides, when Judge Stewart butted in. "Why did you not avoid him?" asked the court of the plaintiff. "I did, yer honor; I turned out of my way." "So did I," declared the defendant from the dock, and every time he spoke he held up his right hand, sometimes both. "I turned a block out of my way to keep from meeting you man." "Ah, you both turned out of your way, to avoid meeting, and yet you met--a most remarkable statement, most remarkable," declared Judge Stewart. The defendant sidled along the seat in the dock uneasily, keeping a little black shiny faced darkey on the jump to keep out of his way, the defendant apparently not noticing that he had company on the seat. He seemed to not exactly interpret the court's point. The court adjusted his eye-glasses, looked over in the dock, and uttered an expression of recognition. "I think we've had you here before, have we not?" "Yes, yer honor," retorted the defendant, springing to his feet and elevating his right hand. With this the defendant's attorney, one of the young disciples of Blackstone practicing in the corporation court, posed before the court, and got in some soul-stirring pleas for clemency for his client, promising among other things, that his client would forever after be good; that he would walk in the straight and narrow way; that for the remaining days of his life people could point to him on the streets of Fort Worth--as he would never think of residing elsewhere, not even in North Fort Worth--and say "There goes a model man; what a pity the world holds so few like him," and after his death the papers would talk of him as a man among men; that the coming generations would perpetuate his memory by naming their babes for him. The court was wiping his eye-glasses with a silk handkerchief, and would occasionally mop his forehead and rest his eyes from the incandescent light that hangs before them. The attorney mistook this as a demonstration of feeling brought about by his words, and drew close to the stand, continuing his remarks and pounding the table with his left fist and pointing his right hand toward the dock. The defendant again stood up, right hand elevated. The court adjusted his glasses, and broke in: "My dear sir, the evidence so far is damaging to your client; let me hear again from the officer who made the arrest--Mr. Logan, what was this man doing when you arrested him?" "Well, your honor, he was battling the plaintiff pretty lively. I am inclined to think my arrival prevented a more serious tragedy." "Do you hear that--do you hear that, sir? Now this officer is a truthful man, a truthful man." "I know, but your honor," broke in the attorney, "this man--" "I'll fine him $5 and costs. Call the next case, Mr. Clerk." The defendant dropped with a suddenness that was surprising to the little negro in the dock, and when the latter wiggled from under he stood in one corner of the dock looking appealingly at the crowd, which was convulsed with laughter. ASLEEP AMID FLAMES. A WONDERFUL WORK. To be a man who can excel one hundred thousand men in any one line is good; to be one in a million is better; but to be the only living man in the world, who has written the history of the human race, is a feat that has never been accomplished. This is the story of the life of the author and illustrator of "The Capital of the World," a book that has done more for the world than any other book in its class. It is a masterpiece of art and science, and is a must for every man who wishes to know the truth about the world. The book is available in a special edition for $1.00. FORT WORTH IN AN EARLY DAY

TEXAS RANGER WRITES INTERESTINGLY OF PAST HISTORY

FIGHTS WITH THE INDIANS

Tells of Many Hair-Raising Struggles in This Vicinity and of Life in the Panhandle at a Later Day — Fort Worth in 1871, Was but a Handful of Houses.

A. J. Sowell in the Houston Post: Not long since I had occasion to make a trip from Fort Worth, on the Fort Worth and Denver road, through the Panhandle country to Texline, the extreme northwest border of the state of Texas, as the name of Texline indicates. Fort Worth is a fine, fast growing city, and its rapid growth, from a frontier village, in so short a time (as it seems to the writer) is marvelous. I was here in 1871 with a scout of Texas rangers and the fort then was but a scattered border village with but one small plank house, if I remember right, on the west side of the square. The other blocks, fronting the square, had more houses and some of them better ones, but nothing to compare with what we see now.

The house in question, on the west side, was a saloon and grocery combined, and here the rangers dismounted and tied their horses to the rack, staying here from 10 o'clock in the morning until late in the evening. We had been in a fight with the Indians about thirty miles north of Fort Worth and had shields, bows, quivers, lance ornaments, head dresses and many other trophies of the battle tied to our saddles, which soon attracted quite a crowd around our horses. We had seen some hard service on the plains that summer and the winter before, and now we gave ourselves up to a few hours of rest and enjoyment. We ate, drank and sang, and it seemed to me that nearly half the men and boys in the village collected there. One man came with a violin and played stirring airs for our especial edification.

Any one who reads this article and was present there that day will remember the man with long, black hair, dressed in buckskin, and who danced with his spurs on to the tune of the "Arkansas Traveler." That one was the writer. Don't be snickered, gentle reader, our dancing days are over, and these gay young rangers, in after years, made good, quiet citizens, many of them becoming strict members of the various churches in the locality where they resided.

The distance from Fort Worth to Texline is 453 miles, and it is a very interesting country to travel through. The writer was surprised to see the thick settlements and large towns. Deatur in Wise county was a flourishing looking place as seen from the train. I remember it as a small village where the rangers often stopped for supplies and where on one occasion the good people gave us a fine dinner and ball at night in appreciation of the fact that our scouts defeated a large band of Kiowas and Comanches in their country. Colonel E. B. Fickett was one of the prime movers in getting up the celebration and made us a speech on the occasion. In the cross timbers where I had trailed Indians, many places being recognized, large farms and towns were seen. Many orchards were no-

SEEN AT YESTERDAY'S YALE-PRINCETON GAME.

Yale Kicking off. Yale Entering Field.

A Princeton Formation. Princeton "Subs" Waiting.

The above snapshot shows interesting and characteristic scenes at the great Yale-Princeton Football Game which took place at Princeton yesterday. A report of the game will be found elsewhere in this paper. The contest between the Dark Blue eleven and the yellow and black team, is reported as the big event of the intercollegiate football year. All over the country the telegraphic news of yesterday's desperate struggle was followed with bated breath and keen interest. At Princeton a crowd numbering thousands of husky grads and undergrads, and charming feminine admirers, cheered these young giants to the echo.

teed and the trees looked strong and healthy in this deep, sandy soil. The town of Bowie, named for Colonel Jas. Bowie, who was killed in the Alamo, seemed to be a live business place. These, of course, were hasty observations as the train sped by.

The Van Dorn Fight
There are many historic places along the route where the old-time rangers, before our time, fought desperate battles with the Comanche Indians. The first one of which was the Wichita river, where Major Earl Van Dorn, on the 1st day of October, 1858, fought his great battle with the Comanche Indians. This was far out beyond the line of frontier and Van Dorn had mounted them to their stronghold. The white force consisted of between 200 and 300 men, regulars, rangers and friendly Delaware and Cadoo Indians.

The Comanches numbered 400 warriors, as near as could be estimated. The place where they fought was called the Wichita village, but the exact spot cannot be located by the writer. The Indians met Van Dorn's charge with great bravery and it was more than an hour before they could be routed, many had to hand combat taking place. They finally fled and scattered, leaving fifty-six of their braves dead on the field and many more wounded. Most of the latter escaping on their horses. Many were supposed to have died of those wounded in the surrounding hills and ravines. Some gallant men among the whites were killed and wounded, among the latter being Major Van Dorn and Captain Sul. Ross, both severely. Captain Ross led the friendly Indians in the fight and was wounded in a hand to hand combat. The white men on this occasion were sixteen hours in the saddle without halting, including the charge, fight and pursuit.

In the vicinity of Wichita Falls is a fine farming country and from the numerous straw stacks in sight from the train, small grain is one of the chief products, as far as the farming interest is concerned, but raising stock must be the chief industry.

In Goodnight's pasture a few buffalo can be seen which he is raising, and in other places along the route wild antelope, prairie chickens and coyotes occasionally come into view. The prairie dogs still hold their own, despite the many devices to destroy them which have been tried by farmers and stockmen to save their grass and crops. Thousands can be seen on both sides of the track, as saucy as ever, standing on their hind feet on the little mounds around their holes and chirping a kind of squirrel bark, accompanied by a rapid shaking of their little short tails as the monster engine goes puffing by them. If they had been called prairie squirrels instead of dogs their numbers would have been decreased more rapidly, for they are fat and well tasting, nearly if not as good as a fox squirrel, which they resemble, only they are larger. They live on grass, weeds, roots, etc. The rangers often eat them when short of provisions on a scout.

The next place of interest to old-time rangers was Peace river. In 1869 Governor Sam Houston commissioned Captain Sul. Ross to raise a company of sixty men to operate against the Comanches, who, notwithstanding their terrible defeat by Major Van Dorn, still raided the exposed settlements, having their stronghold now further west on Peace river. In December Captain Ross set out with his command from Fort Belknap to find the Comanches. His force, besides the rangers, was twenty regulars from Camp Cooper and some volunteers from Bosque county.

while the command was marching up Peace river, Captain Ross was of the opinion that Indians were in the vicinity on account of the great number of buffalo that came running from the north towards them. The Indians were soon discerned in large force on a small creek near the river and a fierce battle was fought. The Indians were surprised by the rangers, whose presence in the vicinity was not discovered on account of a sand storm which hid them from view until they were close on them. The Comanche chief, Peta Nacona, when the battle went against him, tried to make his escape with his squaw and four children across the prairie. Captain Ross pursued him and when within range fired with his pistol and killed a 15-year-old girl who was riding behind the chief. Ross thought she was a man; she rode like a man and only the top of her head could be seen above a buffalo skin which she had around her. When she fell she pulled the chief off with her, but he lit on his feet and commenced a battle with Captain Ross, using his bow, while the captain defended himself with a navy revolver. It was a close fight, but the chief was killed, but not before he had wounded the captain and his horse. Another ranger came up and captured the squaw and another little girl.

As soon as Captain Ross saw the captive he said she was not an Indian, as he never saw one that had blue eyes. This prisoner was the famous Cynthia Ann Parker, captured when a little girl at the massacre of Fort Parker in 1836. Now, after an association of twenty-five years with the Indians and wife of the chief, she was to all intents and purposes an Indian. She had two sons, both of whom escaped the battle. Quanah, the oldest, hid himself in the tall grass while the fight was going on and witnessed the terrible slaughter of his people (along the banks of Peace river), in which his father was killed and his mother, Preloch, as she was called by the Indians, was captured.

After the rangers had gone back from the pursuit, Quanah left his hiding place and followed the scattered and retreating Indians across the plains for 100 miles or more, and finally came up with a remnant of them who had gotten together, and then went on to the head of the Arkansas river. His mother was carried back to her people and died and was buried in the Parker family burying ground in 1864. Her little girl, who was called "Prairie Flower" in the Indian tongue, Le-ni-Le-oti, died the same year. Quanah became the chief of his tribe and is now on the reservation in the Territory and goes by the name of Quanah Parker. A station on this road is named for him. James McMahan, now of Del Rio, was at the battle of Peace river.

Indians at Peace River
On the 18th day of December, 1869, Colonel Ford's Fight
The South Canadian river is also an historic place. On this stream the 11th day of May, 1858, Colonel John S. Ford fought his great battle with the fierce Comanche warriors led by their noted chief, Iron Jacket, who was killed in the fight. Ford had several companies of rangers, besides some friendly Anadaro and Tenkaway Indians. The Anadaroes were led by their chief, Jim Rockmark, and the Tonks by old Placido. The battle was fierce and bloody, but the rangers gained the victory. Iron Jacket fell early in the action. His horse was killed and fell on him and he became an easy prey, being fired at by rangers and Anadaro Indians, who crowded around him. His Indian name was Po-he-bits Quasho, or Iron Jacket, from a Spanish coat of mail which he wore. This armor was brought to Austin by Colonel Ford and placed in the capitol, where the writer saw and examined it in 1871. It was, no doubt, an old Spanish coat of mail, made of iron scales fastened to some kind of thick, strong cloth, the scales overlapping like those of a fish. It would turn buckshot or navy pistol balls or arrows. It was not long, fitting up close to the neck and coming down to the hips. It had the appearance of great age. This valuable relic of frontier days was destroyed when the old capitol burned.

After crossing South Canadian in a wild-looking place among serious-looking rocky hills, the country has no variation, being far out on the great plains beyond the timber line. What sense herds of buffaloes once roamed over these vast plains, often chased for many miles by the wild Comanche, the hoofs of the big game striking the hard prairie soil by thousands caused a rushing roar like an approaching cyclone on the desert. Very little sign of their existence can be discovered now. Occasionally a horn is picked up that has escaped the ravages of time and fire.

The writer received a warm welcome at Texline from a dear sister (wife of ex-Sheriff A. C. Abbott), whom I had not seen for nearly twelve years. A windmill can be seen north of the town, which is the highest point in Texas, being 4,700 feet above sea level. The line of Texas and New Mexico is one mile west of the station. Eight miles north is the line of Oklahoma Territory and ten miles beyond is Buffalo Springs, by which the old Santa Fe trail ran to St. Jo, Mo. Shortly after arriving in Texline court was in session, and among the lawyers present was Hon. Temple Houston (son of General Sam Houston), to whom I was introduced. Judge Houston is a large man, somewhat after the build of his father, and the cast of his features has a striking resemblance to the hero of San Jacinto. His home is in Woodward, O. T.

Gossip About Wall Street Men

NEW YORK NEWS LETTER

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—There has been a great deal of talk lately about the possibility of Mr. Keene turning bear again. Monstrous thought! Throughout the great bull market he has been the foremost operating figure. He has necessarily come into possession of the innermost secrets of the bull tribe. No man better than Keene knows what stocks are vulnerable and what bulls are most exposed. Those who know the man cannot doubt that he has carefully calculated this information. For him to turn bear now knowing all these things. Here is a prospect that even J. Pierpont Morgan might dread to contemplate. When Keene was the bear freebooter of the stock market none was too big or rich to fear him.

Thomas W. Lawson is Literary

Thomas W. Lawson is the most prolific literary person in the stock market world. He writes as he speculates—like a house afire. He wrote his famous calendar—a ticker saying for every day in the year—in twenty-four hours. He dictated it, of course, and much of it is rubbish, but the idea of a man undertaking on a hanker, as he did, to perform such a task is enough to indicate the literary equipment of the man. Lawson used to be a messenger boy, paid $5 a week for the use of his legs. He came to Wall Street once to turn it upside down and was handsomely trimmed by the people with whom he associated himself. He went back to Boston, then and has ever since been sour on the Wall Street community. He injects himself into its affairs as often as he sees an opening and Wall Street has had frequent occasion to be thankful that he was as far away even as Boston. More is likely to be heard of Lawson and amalgamated copper during the coming month.

Everything Laid to "Gates Crowd"

Whenever anything happens in the market these days for which there is no apparent explanation the critics lay it down to the "Gates crowd." If stocks suddenly take an upward whirl for no reason apparent on the surface, it is the doings of John W. Gates and his party. If stocks developed extreme weakness equally without plausible account, then that also is the work of the Gates people—selling stocks. It is almost adage, too, that the Gates crowd is losing money. As a matter of fact, nobody in Wall Street is competent to say what the Gates party is doing in the market at any stated time. Sooner or later the truth comes out and is admitted, but while the work is on these Gates people can cover their tracks about as skillfully as any coterie of manipulating interests that ever came into the market. No doubt the Gates party has taken some hard knocks at one time or another and certainly it has made some smillingly and its profits without boasting. One not abiding in the Wall Street atmosphere cannot quite appreciate what a scape-goat is made of these unasked but inordinately successful western operators. Anything that goes wrong in the market is at once laid to their door. If there is a rumor around that some big house is in trouble or that some operators have been forced by the banks to scale down their speculative lines nobody seems to think further than the Gates party. Quite nine-tenths that is said and written about this group is purely imaginative. One of these days, no doubt, John W. Gates and his associates will be accepted into the sacred inner circle, but such recognition comes grudgingly in Wall Street. Their capville railroad from Louisville and Nashville of the directors was as pretty a play as has ever been seen in the stock market, paralleled, indeed, by only a few of the master strokes of the greatest manipulators the "street" has ever known. The best that is said about it today is that the Gates people had a keener appreciation of the value of Louisville and Nashville than some others had.

Gates is Not Exclusive

John W. Gates is the only big operator in the "street," who makes no pretense of being exclusive. Keene hides himself away and guards his presence with a code of mysterious signals. Washington Connor, while more approachable, still is away beyond the gaze of him who runs, Henry M. Rogers, young Gould, young Rockefeller, Harry Well and the rest of them are rarely seen around the "street." But Mr. Gates sits openly in the public office of Harris, Gates & Co., mingling socially with customers who trade perhaps in only two or three hundred shares of stock. Anybody who has business with Mr. Gates has only to walk up to him and state it.

It May Affect Jurors, Also

Corpus Christi Crony: To vote hereafter in Texas each voter must have paid his poll tax on or before the 1st day of February preceding the election at which he offers to vote. This added qualification is expected to limit the quantity and improve the quality of votes cast in future elections. It will do another thing. It will improve the juries in Texas courts. To be a qualified juror a man must be a qualified voter under the constitution and laws of Texas. A man delinquent on the poll tax list will, therefore, not be qualified to serve as a juror. And it goes without saying that an otherwise qualified juror, who disregards his duty and privilege of contributing to the support of his government, would be an inferior sort of a person to assist in the administration of his government's laws. As Governor Lanham told us, the adopted amendment is a good thing.

FADIS MODES GROW MORE ELABORATE

To choose a satisfactory wardrobe this season requires good health, a clear brain and a steady head, for, in addition to the plain, ordinary, everyday clothes that decency requires, there are a thousand and one extras that have to be well chosen and that are as necessary to a woman's smart appearance as the gown itself. Then, too, fashion has been unkind enough to decree that there shall be a different style of dress for almost every hour of the day, and if a woman goes in for being gowned in the latest fashion she must be possessed not only of a large income but also of unlimited space in which to hang her clothes, for so gorgeous are most of them that no ordinary wardrobe or trunk can contain them. There is a great deal said about the impossibility of copying the elaborate fashions in simpler materials and making them up less expensively, but it is just as well for the fact to be faced and realized that the really up-to-date gowns and fashions of the moment are of necessity costly. It is well known one must have one's clothes original—that is to say, the patterns and the materials must be more or less exclusive, and nothing costs more than exclusiveness in clothes.

To start the day there is the morning, more elaborate garment trimmed with yards and yards of lace, or, if it is of a more demure nature, of lace or silk, but if cotton, or the crepe order, and if silk, of such or India. There are petticoats made especially to wear with these negliges, and they are as variously fitted to the figure as gowns. They are made of satin silk or India silk, with a deep shaped flounce, covered with one flounce of extra-deux-matin edged with lace, and with smaller ruffles underneath the large flounce of silk or on Broadway; knots of ribbon fasten the embroidered flounce to the petticoat, for there is one such point in this elaborate skirt, that the flounce can be taken off and laundered, or, if the skirt itself is of the same material, it can be cleaned or laundered. The silk flounce underneath the elaborate is put on with buttons and buttonholes, so that it can be removed when the petticoat is to be laundered. The mere item of petticoats amounts to more than many women and it necessary to spend on their clothes for an entire season, but no woman who likes pretty clothes could possibly resist the temptations of the present moment. The long ones to wear with the long gowns for the house and the short ones for the street and the very short and petticoats are each and every one of them works of art, with exquisite hand embroidery, real lace and ribbon trimming.

The ordinary bath wrapper is an elaborate garment made of a material that looks like old-fashioned damask or metalasse, in fascinating shades of light blue, pink or yellow. It is lined with the softest of eiderdown, flannel and silken cloth, finished with a plain satin ribbon border and a cord and tassels, or it is of white crepe or crepon, trimmed with fur, for fur is used on indoor gowns as well as outdoor ones, although the fashion for trimming bath wrappers and even tea gowns with fur is not likely to last, unless in a city where the houses are not thoroughly heated. As a rule, the houses are so warm that that a heavy gown or trimming is so uncomfortable that the style is bound to be merely a passing one.

The India silk wrappers, with quantities of extra-deux-matin and lace, are lined only with India silk and around the upper part of the wrapper is a thin flannel lining or one of albatross cloth.

The gowns are on elaborate lines and are made not only in thin materials like silk, but of velvet and satin, while the entire are tea gown is a perfect dream of beauty and at the same time a sinking fund, so far as money is concerned. There are some new models in tea gowns of batiste, so covered with heavy, rich lace that little of the original batiste shows. These have the straight stone fronts of lace, the deep cape of lace and a band of lace at the upper part of the sleeve; the lower part of the sleeve is of batiste, chiffon, or of whatever material the gown is composed. White is considered the smartest color, but the pale blue on the lines of those worn last year is also a favorite.

The lace one, of the pattern of imitation Venetian point, covered with heavy silk embroidery or shaded blue flowers, the embroidery in fine gold and silver beads, is an elaborate model that is a great favorite. It has a Watteau plait in the back that starts from below a deep embroidered lace bertha. Conservative individuals and lace connoisseurs object strongly to any lace being embroidered, but the work on this is so exquisite that the model has proved most popular. It was used last year and has appeared again this season, with only enough variation to make it possible to class it as one of this year's styles.

Evening cloaks are so elaborate as to even be far handsomer than the gowns over which they are worn, and in this department of dress also there is a tremendous expense this season. The elaborately made fur of lace trimmed cloth coat is an exquisite garment and a fashionable one; at the same time it does not in the least take the place of the opera cloak, so called, which is a marvelous combination of rich broad, heavy lace and fine embroidery on the fur side. There are both coats and cloaks among the opera cloaks; the coats have very wide sleeves and the cloaks are so large as entirely to conceal the figure. A model that is decidedly new is of a blue brocade with silver threads through it. This is trimmed with lace and is cut out around the bottom in squares to show the flounces of lace beneath. There is a deep lace cape with long ends in front; a smart model, though not becoming, to every style of figure. The truth is that it is absolutely necessary to choose the opera cloak with reference to the figure just as much as it is to choose a hat that is becoming to the profile. The indiscriminate buying of opera cloaks simply because they are of the latest design is a mistake, for many of the new designs are so eccentric as to be becoming only to a chosen few. Heavy corded silks and satins, in pale blue, yellow and, above all, in white, are trimmed with sable and ermine and lined throughout with white fox fur.

It is the fashion of the moment to line the evening coats and cloaks with fur, and sensible idea it is, although the complaint, as much as it is to choose a hat that is becoming to the profile. Some New York Fancies.

Perfect pictures of domestic contentment are Mrs. R. T. Wilson's cat and dog. They sit in the fireplace of the reception-room in her town house, No. 511 Fifth avenue, and are the most useful animals of their kind to be found in New York. This is probably because they are of brass, highly polished, and do duty as andirons. They sit on their hind legs as stiff and prim as though they had received military training—paws with their all curled over her paws in front, doggy with his ears pricked up as though on the alert for some intruder around the hearth.

Jeweled crescents are again in vogue—not the slender little ones that were used a few years ago, but enormous affairs, which if worn as brooches attract almost from every ear, and if as an ornament cover half the breast of the bodice. Mrs. Vanderbilt has a crescent made up of enormous pearls, and the size of one's thumb nail, which covers the entire front of her collar. Mrs. Percy R. Turnure wears one of diamonds, enormous solitaires, pinned on one side of her bodice below the neck, and extending almost as low as the ordinary yoke.

Sunbursts have had their day, although those who have handsome ones, like Mrs. H. Drexel, are not willing to part with them, and are having them reset in other designs. Mrs. Drexel has a collection of them of various sizes, and wears them lined across the front of her evening gown diagonally, from her belt on the right side to her left shoulder. The end suns are comparatively small, but they increase in size toward the middle of the line.

Mrs. W. Pierson Hamilton has a quaint and novel umbrella handle. It is of unvarnished light brown wood, about the shade of a cigar box, and instead of a knob, it is finished with a cat's head, exquisitely carved. Not a detail is missing, even to a tuft of whiskers. Miss Tabble has an intellectual look, produced by silver eyeglasses. Her dainty little pince-nez has a slender silver chain, like ordinary eyeglasses, which fastens it to her broad collar of chased silver.

Mrs. Howard Gould has a leather-handled umbrella—that is to say, the stick is covered with a dull-finished brown kid. This is ornamented with oxidized silver nail heads, tufted with amethysts, and a large round mystic finished the top.

Mrs. Jack Gouraud wears a daisy brooch of pearls. The petals are made of long fresh-water pearls perfectly matched, which radiate from a center of gold.

In the large oak-paneled hall of Mrs. W. Howard Webb's town house are many trophies of the chase to remind her of her country home in Vermont. A row of deer heads forms a unique frieze—probably the least one can find in New York.

Mrs. Astor has a set of service plates which cost $100 apiece. They are of silver, and each represents a different scene in the Bois de Boulogne.

Miss Florence Coppell wears a long chain of dull-finished beads around her neck. The loops it up at the waist, where a small square cut silver cross is attached to it. As she is in deep mourning, the cross stands out in bold relief and is the only bit of color seen about her.

There is not much to be said in describing the gold handkerchief bags which women are carrying, for about the only difference in them is their mesh. Mrs. Jules Baehle, however, has one that differs from most bags in its framework. This is of dull-finished gold, about an inch wide, and is in the form of waves. Each wave is encrusted with a jewel. The center one, higher than the others, has an enormous sapphire. Its neighbor on each side has a large diamond embedded in it, and the end ones are set with sapphires.

Miss Clarence Godfrey McDevitt, who was

Miss Edith Lanterbach, has among her wedding gifts a quaint set of Turkish coffee cups. They were presented to her by Senator Platt, and are of the finest eggshell china. Each little porcelain bowl is set in a framework of carved silver, of foliated design.

In the drawing room of Mrs. Benjamin S. Church's residence, No. 36 West Twelfth street, is an old Venetian mirror. Its dim gold frame rests against a drape of old gold silk, which harmonizes with it admirably, and is of the dull but seldom seen in modern fabrics. The mirror itself is also lusterless from time, and its surface is decorated with diamondlike carvings.

Two large dragons of majolica guard the silver on Mrs. Frederic Neilson's sideboard in the dining room of her town house, in Fifth avenue. They are enormous creatures, about three feet high, colored as vividly as a South American parrot, and hold clusters of raffles, doing duty at dinner time as candelabra, not on the table, of course, but to light the buffet.

Only a girl as slender as Miss Daisy Letter can wear with impunity as she does a broad belt of silver. Miss Letter's belt is about three inches wide, a solid band of chased silver, and looks exceedingly smart with a dark cloth dress.

With certain types of beauty the quaint old-fashioned hoop earrings are wonderfully attractive. Miss Nancy Letter wears a pair on some occasions that add a charm and piquancy to her face which earrings of another variety would fail to impart. They are of plain dull finished gold and in circumference are about the size of a quarter.

Mrs. Clement C. Moore has a little curio cabinet in her drawing room. It is of glass, standing on slender gilt legs, and seems to be set in a framework, or rather, cage, of gold, as its surface is mottled with narrow stripes of gilded wood.

Both buns and Grecian coils are again coming into favor in hair-dressing. Mrs. Frederick W. Vanderbilt arranges her hair in a sort of bun effect, low at the back of her neck, and ornaments it with half moons of amber. Two crescents appear on each side, one above the other, the lower ones projecting beyond the upper. The effect is startling, but becoming, and a bit suggestive of Japanese modes. With the prevalence of kimono, both as house gowns and street coats, one cannot help wondering whether this new style may not be a forerunner of fans and tufts of flowers back of the ears, like those worn in the land of the Mikado.

To Keep Departed Loved Ones With Us.

"No reason exists," says a foreign journal, "why persons should not keep their beloved ones with them after death, since their bodies can easily be unimpaired. The ancient Egyptians," it continues, "were experts at this art, and a close study of some of their mummies shows how they did the work.

The body is placed in a boiler, which contains chloride of calcium and which is heated to 125 degrees, and, after remaining there for a certain time, is taken out and steeped for 24 hours in a cold solution of sulphate of sodium. By that time it is transformed into a perfect mummy and the mourning relatives or friends can safely take it home and install it in a place of honor.

A few experiments of this kind were recently made in Europe and they satisfied all who witnessed them, though one man pointed out that a mummy was rather a cheerless object and suggested the use of a simple mechanism which would enable a mummy to say "Papa," "Mamma" or other familiar words whenever a button was will not in the least interfere with the beauty of the garment. Batiste coats and coats of ermine trimmed with sable are everywhere, for the pieces asked are rather overwhelming. The pale corded silks and heavy brocade satins with a band of ermine, an ermine stole and a wide band of the same fur over the sleeves, are charming in coloring and cost enough to suit the most extravagant individuals and are far more becoming than entire garments made of ermine. But yellow satin or brocade, trimmed with sable or with black lynx, is a beautiful garment, and this year is made rather on the lines of the saque coat, but shaped in at the sides. A large storm collar of fur and revers of the fur seen in old contrast to the pale yellow, but the contrast is striking and the coat is one of the favorite models.

Making Use Of Left Overs.

The question of what to do with scraps of meat, fish and bread left over from the meal is one which confronts the economical housewife and may be solved by making them into appetizing, tempting dishes. These require care and time in the preparation, but they will repay one for it. Here are some recipes which may be suggestive.

Savory Souffles.
A delicious luncheon dish may be made from three small lamb chops left from breakfast. The meat is cut from the bone and about an inch of bologna sausage are chopped and added to the lamb as flavoring. Bread crumbs are added in sufficient quantity to make up the mixture. A little white sauce is prepared in the proportion of one cup of milk to one tablespoonful of butter and one tablespoonful of flour. This is stirred while hot into the mixture of bread and meat. When cold the yolks of two eggs are added, then the whites beaten stiff. The whole is covered with crumbs and baked in a buttered baking dish.

In making souffles, pork chops, veal or ends of beef may serve equally well. The matter of flavors and seasoning is an important one. A bit of bologna sausage adds amazingly to the tastiness of many forms of hash. A slice of ham or tongue has somewhat the same effect when chopped and added to any dry meat. Onion does not please all tastes unless disguised. The touch of garlic in bologna gives a satisfactory flavor to hash or a soufflé.

Ragout With Rice.
Another appetizing dish is made by lining a buttered baking dish with hot boiled rice and then filling the dish with a ragout or stewed meat and vegetables. Cover the top with rice and bake until brown. Turn into a platter and cover with tomato sauce. Curry may be used if desired.

Croquettes.
Delicious croquettes may be made of the fragments of meat left on a small roasted chicken. The meat is chopped very fine and placed out with bits of lamb. An egg, some of sweet marjoram which may be left over, a little of lemon juice and chopped parsley gives a delicate flavor. The croquettes are rolled in cracker dust before frying and served with a hot, thick sauce. A touch of sweet marjoram may be used, if desired.

Veal Loaf.
Take two cupfuls of chopped veal and one cup of rolled crackers. Add one egg, butter the size of an egg, salt and pepper, with a bit of grated nutmeg, moisten this mixture thoroughly with a generous amount of gravy. When thick enough to mould, shape it into a loaf. Place on top bits of butter and siftings of cracker dust. Bake, covering the loaf for a time at first, and baste often.

An Appetizing Meat Pie.
It is well sometimes to vary the monotony of the ordinary meat pie by omitting the bits of potato and the pastry crust, substituting a potato crust instead. In this, as in all meat pies, care must be taken to boll the bits of meat until they are perfectly tender. A flavoring of onion, browned in a pan with a little butter, or of celery salt, is an addition. When the meat, moistened with a thickened broth, is in the baking dish, lay on top a thick crust of mashed potatoes and bake.

Egg Baskets.
A dainty breakfast dish is prepared of the remnants of the chicken, turkey or other fowl, and eggs. Shell and cut into halves several hard-boiled eggs, remove the yolks and mix them with a little butter, pepper and salt; add to this the finely minced meat and the cold fowl, moistening, if necessary, with a little more melted butter; fill the whites of the eggs with the prepared yolk; place them on a platter and pour over them a hot cream sauce or some of the gravy left from the fowl.

Another attractive way of serving the egg baskets is to surround them with hot boiled rice salted and covered with a cream sauce. If preferred, the baskets may be eaten with a mayonnaise or French dressing, instead of the sauce, in which case they may be served on lettuce leaves.

Scalloped Fish.
The remainder of the boiled fish served for Friday's dinner may be turned to good account next day for luncheon. Pull the fish into shreds, prepare cracker crumbs and fill a buttered baking dish with alternate layers of fish and crumbs, adding bits of butter, and on top moistening well with milk. Bake until brown. Use plenty of milk for the scalloped fish; it will be a failure if too dry. Season with pepper and salt according to taste.

Bread and Cake Ends.
The economical woman will use even her bread crumbs. She will heat the crumbs in the oven until crisp, then roll and put them away until needed in a glass jar. The possibilities in bits of bread are by no means confined to the familiar bread pudding.

Simple Apple Pudding.
A favorite pudding for children is compounded of alternate layers of chopped apple and dried cranberries. Moisten the layers with scattered bits of butter, cover the top with crumbs and after baking serve with cream or with custard sauce.

To Utilize Stale Cake.
Slices of stale cake have been made into a good pudding. Lay the slices in a deep dish and pour over them a custard containing a quart of milk, the yolks of four eggs and the whites of one egg. Beat the remaining whites stiff with a little sugar, and lay them over the top of the custard. Put dabs of currant jelly here and there over this frosting and set in the oven a few minutes to brown.

"Jug" Medicine.

Up in a little Vermont town they tell a story of an old nurse. She was the kind of an "old nurse" to be found in small towns who comes, after much urging, to "read a case" and who has many Salsey Gamt peculiarities.

"Miss Sally," as she was called, was induced to come to the house by the doctor, who, after much urging, to "read a case" and who has many Salsey Gamt peculiarities.

After the good creature had seen the case through, she said to the doctor, "Doc, kin I take my toll?"

"What's that, Sally?" asked the visiting physician, who had come from the capital city and was amused and a little irritated by the old woman's ways.

"I mean the medicine," said the nurse, complacently.

"The medicine?" exclaimed the doctor, "what on earth do you want with the medicine?"

"No fifth wheel to a wagon was ever more redundant than left-over medicines. 'Well, puts it in me jug,'" replied the old woman, slowly, "and then I gives it out occasionally when ther ain't no doctor nigh."

The visiting physician roared with laughter, but when he had calmed down, he asked "Old Sally's" "jug" medicine was explained to him. That there were not more victims to her unique methods of cure was a

EXERCISES AND DIET FOR THE THIN GIRL

By Ella Adelia Fletcher.

The thin, pale, anaemic women who have worn out their nerves in most cases more by needless tension than by the strain of actual use are the world's burden-bearers, and worry more over the troubles that never come than over those they are compelled to face. When not victims of acute dyspepsia their digestions are commonly weak, and they have stomachs whose whims demand consideration. The reason for this is that the stomach is so sympathetically affected by the brain that the slightest mental depression checks the flow of the gastric juices and delays or arrests digestion.

It is at such times folly to force food upon a reluctant stomach. The want of appetite should be respected as nature's hint that the organ is for the time being out of commission. The anxious efforts to tempt the appetite should be turned to the alleviation of the mental state. When the current of thought can be made cheerful and hopeful the whole body will respond with an unlooked buoyancy that, especially to the victim of chronic depression and melancholia, will seem like new life, and no organ will respond more promptly to the resulting exhilaration than the stomach. The cunningest French chef has never yet concocted a sauce which equals cheerfulness as an appetizer.

Loose Petty Worries in Large Interest. Therefore, if you would gain flesh to round out sharp angles and fill up wrinkles and be gratified with most of the foods denied purulent persons. Bisque and cream soups, cereals and all the starchy vegetables, as fish and sweet potatoes, corn, beans and peas, together with appetizing preparations of macaroni and spaghetti, produce fat, while greens and salads promote the digestion of these foods, rich in starch and sugar, and also furnish valuable salts required in the physical economy. Those who aim to foster a good complexion will also avoid pickles, pleurast, hot fresh breads, highly spiced foods and overindulgence in sweets, which clog the appetite, taking away the relish for more substantial things, besides causing fermentations that disturb digestion.

Should there be no serious indigestion to retard the assimilation of food, many women, on relinquishing their chronic worries and taking sufficient exercise and rest, will gain all the flesh they desire by drinking hot milk and chocolate freely and eating peaches, grapes, prunes and preserved figs, with some of the ready-to-eat cereals. If there is no trouble with the digestion, and the appetite continues dainty and fickle, it should be tempted with variety and unexpectedness. The diet is the same for the young girl who inclines to be thin and angular, but she must be cautioned against eating sweets between meals. If she is spending she needs an abundance of the flesh and bone making foods, and if she is as much in the open air as she should be she requires sugar; but it special attention. Just as you can contract, hoist or relax the abdominal muscles by directing the will power to the action, so can you expand and contract those of the bust. An exercise which helps to give this control is to move the shoulders back and forth with energy. The backward movements pull the elbows in close to the waist, and you will impart greater force to it by clenching the fists with the backward thrust. Open the hand with the forward movement. Do not confound this with the inflated chest of deep breathing. To distinguish the difference go through the exercise once with held breath.

Another simple exercise that strengthens the breast muscles is to extend the arms in front, palms together, and, keeping them high, throw the arms as far back as possible, aiming to touch the fingers back to back.

To fill out the hollows in the throat and neck, no exercise brings quicker improvement than to inhale deeply and throw the breath against the throat with force, holding it while you count from five to twenty. Rise on your toes as you inhale and drop to your heels as you expel the breath, which puts the whole body into slight tension and hastens results. Stand before a mirror when taking the exercise, to be sure it is done correctly. The held breath should fill out every hollow.

Stride-Sitting Strengthens Back and Abdominal Muscles.

In order to uphold, muscles must not be exhausted in the use, but there is a certain point of fatigue that is healthful. Don't be discouraged if there is a little soreness in dormant muscles. It is caused by their lack of elasticity and contractile power, and will soon give place to a delightful sense of nutriment resulting from these muscular contractions is taken up even more by the nerves than by the muscles, which is the secret of the beneficent influence upon her nervous system which every woman derives from physical exercise.

A Lay Sermon On The Unselfishness Of Mothers.

Of late there have been written an unusual number of stories, slightly didactic in intention, and of essays plainly moral, to the effect that the lot of the mother with grown but unmarried daughters was a hard one. The unselfish mother—and for the purposes of argument might be as well to concede that this term embraces all mothers—is represented in this literature as a much imposed upon being, unless, indeed, she is a virtuous person. She washes the dishes after the tea parties when her hospitable offspring give; she makes the dresses in which they slip about wearing her own meantime anything but distinguished looking garments, and so on.

Now, it frequently happens that traits and disposition descend from parents to their children. Therefore, it is not an absolutely unknown thing that the daughter of a devoted mother should have in her own make-up some of the elements of unselfishness. She grows up sufficiently like her mother not to be entirely self-centered. She even has an affection for the woman whose acts of service bring her into such disrepute.

She grows up, though this is the first place where the unselfish mother balks. The unselfish mother will concede, when she has to, that her daughter is 35 or 40, but the concession is merely a verbal one. The mother is in the habit of waiting up for the young girls of her household. She waits up as determinedly for the elderly spinster. Imagine the feeling of a woman over 30 years who comes in from the theater and an after theater supper party to find her unselfish mother waiting for her.

The unselfish mother sits opposite her daughters at breakfast and treats them to eat the last slice of toast and the last egg. There is no scarcity of food in the house and no scarcity of delicacies. dream" which some didactic souls have had concerning the selfishness and brutality of the present generation of daughters. And in so far as she does exist, she is the beloved home of her daughters' existence, the dear thorn in their sides, whose vagaries, persisted in despite their rages and their labors, give them an exceedingly and undeservedly bad name in the community. For no mother loving and unselfish enough to care to perform all these toils for her children ever bore children blindly selfish and brutally unloving enough to accept the sacrifices.

To Use an Old Silk Skirt. To make a pretty and comfortable petticoat, cut the skirt about a quarter of a yard shorter than walking length. Make it the same length all around. Sew this on the machine. Sew on the hem a pleated silk ruffle, cut on the straight of the material, about six inches deep. On the edge of the pleated ruffle sew a narrow bias ruffle about two inches deep. Do not set the ruffles on the skirt proper, as the skirt is easier to walk in, wears better and rustles more if the ruffles are set on the bottom. Small pleats are prettier than large ones.

For Suppleness of Shoulders and General Elasticity.

Polse, raise right foot five times, then left one; the unemployed hand rests on the hip, but in beginning can be used to steady your self when necessary. The lightest touch on a chairback will suffice.

For suppleness of shoulders inhale a deep breath as you rise on toes, exhaling as you drop to heels. This can be extended to a walk around the room on your toes, which is fine for trim ankles.

Prone lying, raise the chest from floor five to ten times. When there is bowel torpidity alternate with lying on your back, arms extended by the sides, and lift the trunk to a sitting posture without touching anything, then raise the legs straight up, first alternately, then together. All these movements are also admirable for the obesity sufferer.

Revolution In Coiffures.

The low coiffure, with its promise of pretty profile and quaint effect, has gained a way to the heart of fair femininity, and the long established high dressing is almost a thing of the past.

Even the problem of whether or not the new style is becoming, or if a woman has a sufficient quantity of hair to enable her to make a good showing, presents no difficulties. Why should it? Isn't a woman always equal to every occasion, every new demand of fashion? A low coiffure means the reverse of high, but not all low coiffures are alike. On the contrary, there is a greater variety offered by the new mode than by the former, and so long as a woman has her hair dressed below the crown of her head she may configure eight is to be made, then the back hair is fluffed in the same manner as the front, although done all in one section; then loosely twisted, so that the ends of the front hair are well tucked in, and a double loop in the opposite way from that of the twist is laid low on the neck and pinned in place. Usually there is a bit of cord that needs hiding, so the ends from the low coil are brought up and around this daintily object.

It is a good idea to follow this style in such a way that the loop comes well up on the back of the head, and then two or three small curls may drop below the knot. It is desirable to have the figure eight narrow and rather small, so that the curls are not overshadowed by it. Another style of doing the hair which is low in comparison with previous modes is a knot arranged on the crown of the head. An added length is secured by means of tiny curls which seem to peep from beneath the twist.

Having arranged the pompadour in the fashion here given, with the sides rolled up and the ends caught in with the tied part of the hair, it is a pretty and very youthful way of dressing the hair to plait the remaining section in a loose and broad braid. The strands of the braid should be so loose that they seem more like loops than braids, and this entire portion of the hair should be drawn up and pinned to the back of the head. A woman who possesses thick, short hair will find this fashion well suited to the disposing of her short locks.

A low black ribbon, a rose or a pretty hair ornament may be tucked in among the strands of hair in an effective way. It is far easier to secure a quaint and picturesque effect with a low coiffure than with a high one, but there are some women who do not find this artistic and really artistic fashion becoming. They desire to keep away from anything suggestive of the frowzy, and yet since it is the mode to dress the hair low they must follow the dictates of fashion. Such women cannot do better than to adopt a half high style, that is, one that starts rather high and gives to the head a long, narrow and graceful appearance.

On the other hand, there are some women who find it desirable to suggest breadth in the manner of wearing their hair, and so they choose to dispense entirely with the popular figure eight, using instead a series of loops and puffs, which extend across the nape of the neck in an up and down arrangement. When not exaggerated, this is a very attractive style, but, of course, only to suit der heads. Occasionally a really high coiffure is noticed and the soft, flat knot of hair that rests in the center of a rounded pompadour is placed just in front of the crown of the head. The style may be considered almost the same as that worn last year, the only difference being in the position of the knot. Unless a woman possesses a pretty neck and a fairly good profile she is much wiser to decide upon an inconspicuous knot rather than to attempt any of the rambling down ones. She may dress her hair in a becoming style ever so little under the crown of the head, and while the effect conforms to all the requirements of fashion she is by no means destroying lines in a way to invite unfavorable comment.

There are certain styles of low coiffures which have a remarkable way of imparting youthfulness to a face, and if a woman can arrive at that mode she will do well to cling to it through the rise and fall of fashions. Curiously enough, it is the low dressing which suggests youth, and the low one, too, that nestles in the graceful hollow of the prettily rounded neck.

flabby, defacing folds of half-filled skin, learn first to sink your worries and daily pin pricks of petty annoyances in the large and wholesome interests of life, which give too broad an outlook for the trifling disturbances of daily friction to arrest your serious attention.

Given cheerfulness as a basis to work upon, all else will be easy, for you will have furnished nature with the elixir of life, lifting yourself up into the full current of health vibrations. These surround us at all times, but pass us by when we are not in harmony with them. The law of life seeks like is invariable. Joy, hope and cheerfulness are organizers, inspirers and builders; fear, worry and anxiety are disorganizers, destroyers, and hence vibrate with disease.

Never attempt to flog a disordered stomach with medicaments. It is the extreme sensitiveness of this organ which is the skilled physician's greatest stumbling block in his efforts to alleviate critical physical disturbances; for the remedies which are recognized, peculiar for the disease often rather than the acute suffering and disorder in the stomach. Cheerfulness, aided by a hygienic regimen of exercise, rest, light and fresh air, will soon accomplish a reformation in the order of things.

When the appetite becomes normal it may should be taken in the form of rich maple syrup or genuine New Orleans molasses and pure honey, together with cakes and ginger bread made of whole wheat flour. When breakfast is an early meal a mid-morning drink of hot milk will also benefit the army of flesh workers, old and young, and another glass just before going to bed will add the good work as well as foster refreshing sleep.

But diet is only one part of the flesh making and development regimen. When making do with diet there will be no flat chested women. Nature provides the charm of a full chest and well developed bust for every woman, and the natural method to secure this is to provide the young girl with the proper exercise in a sedate and sane building food. But there is also help for the grown woman. So long as the functions of life are vigorous the body is casting out old and taking up new materials. The better the materials we furnish it and the more we stimulate the process of change the fuller the life and the stronger and better developed the body. Muscles that are used by exercise must improve, and if their inherent quality is to expand they will do it when they have a chance.

OVER MOVING FOLKS

WESTERN BEES IN A SOUTHERN HIVE.

BY A. FAIRSWORTH DREW.

CHAPTER VI.

It was there! The yellow gold! Down at the bottom of the pan that Bonnie had been dipping with her fingers, movement, as though she was sifting flour, was a shining golden sediment mingled with a powdery sand. No miner ever excited over his new-found treasure more enthusiastically than our B's. Bonnie was so excited that she executed a war dance and hugged Betty hysterically. Betty wanted to write to the Colonel, to go and tell Miss Astor, to commend in Katy, to do something at once, but Bonnie held back the more impulsive B.

"They wouldn't even listen to us; we must wait till papa comes," she carefully put the shining sediment in a box, locked it in her trunk, and when she had gathered the refuse sand into the bag again she took it out and snuffed it on the ground. Then they tried to study—tried to study geography and history with their minds in a haze of airy castles.

"What am I doing?" asked Aunt Maria, as she smiled the emptied sand by the doorway the next morning. She called Ole Jacob and pointed to it significantly. "What am I doing?" she repeated.

"Lor, Lor! It am dem hoodooes again, day in, no doubt about it. I member I seed her (Bonnie) las' night come out here and empty sumpen."

Ole Jacob called Aunt Maria. The council of three decided that something must be done without delay. To go to Miss Astor was out of the question. They knew by experience that she would only shrug her shoulders at the whole trouble. There was only one thing to do—make life such a burden for the B's that they would leave the school of their own accord. Then began a series of small persecutions and neglect. But the B's didn't mind a bit—not they. They were too much occupied with the prospect of playing fairy godmothers to mind much of anything just then. When they found the water pitcher empty they filled it. When the small boy failed to appear to make their fire in the morning they made their own fire, or if there was no wood they dressed without. Seeing that they

of the general air of mystery hovering over the school, but they looked upon it as part and parcel of these unknown and incomprehensible people, the blacks. They were in disgrace with the teachers, too, for so encroached were they in their gold mine that they were absent minded in class and even missed altogether.

Miss Astor sent for them. She tried her best to be kind, but 15 years spent in the necessarily severe routine of seminary life had left its impress, and in her most gentle moments she was austere. Only Katy knew how to find the soft, loving spot in her heart, and she made good use of her power in interfering for her friends, upon whose charms she was ever dilating. Miss Astor's father had also talked to her, praising the warm hearts and originality of the girls.

"Bonnie and Elizabeth," she said, when they were brought before her, "I utterly fail to understand you. Just as I had begun to think that you were improving in your manners you fall short in a new line. Miss Astor (the teacher) tells me that you are no longer alert and attentive in your class, and that three times this week you have failed utterly. Now, what is the cause of this?" Bonnie hung her head and said nothing, while Betty bit her lips to keep back the indignation.

Miss Astor did not insist upon an answer, but dismissed them with a word of warning. "Mean old thing," said Betty, when the door was closed. "I just can't bear her, and to think that she will share our gold mine!" "After all, she was right," said the more thoughtful Bonnie. "We have missed our lessons and it's silly to miss a thing so easy to learn. I am going to try to do better."

But trying to do anything was hard for these restless little busy B's, and hardest of all was it to close their lips and wait for their father. With the little ones alone did they find any of the affection for which their young hearts ached. There had been the pets of all around them their whole lives—indeed, were somewhat spoiled—and to meet everywhere in teachers, pupils and servants the old, repellent wall was depressing beyond measure. One alone would have been wretched, but they were naturally happy had a good cry. Feeling the animosity all around them, the B's were nervous, and finally downright unhappy, so when Mr. Astor arrived to take the trio home with him they gave a sigh of relief at leaving it all behind them for two days at least.

How comfortable seemed the old house, how bright the fire and how like an angel of goodness Mrs. Astor looked, behind the tea table in the spacious hall! Rover greeted them with such cordiality as to almost knock them down, and even the tea kettle steamed a song of welcome. The B's had no desire to talk, but only to bask in all this sunshine and to draw deep breaths of freer air. Bonnie curled herself in a easy chair and tucked her feet under her, in an attitude Miss Astor never would have allowed. Rover stretched himself out on the hearth rug and Betty leaned against him, using his broad back for a cushion.

"What are you thinking about, gipsies, so quietly?" asked Mrs. Astor, as she headed a tea cup to Katy, who carried it safely to Bonnie and returned promptly for another. "I was just thinkin' how lovely and sweet and quiet—everything was up here."

"Quiet? Why, I thought these energetic little Western girls did not care much about quiet." Mrs. Astor smiled lovingly down at them.

"I am beginning to think I do," replied and swollen arm. A doctor must be had as soon as possible. The quickest way would be to take Bonnie back to Gainesville. Could she stand the ride? Bonnie was sure that she could, so one seal was taken out of the carriage and an amateur ambulance arranged. The Colonel driving, Betty and Jo went ahead in a light buggy to prepare Miss Astor and to summon the doctor. With the girl that in Western camps amounts to a great deal, Bonnie returned not a moon the whole way, and to the Colonel's surprise was added the expectation that he would have given a good soldier.

The doctor and Mrs. Astor were waiting and Bonnie, now too exhausted to walk, was carried up stairs.

In the upper hall were huddled the girls in groups, with Aunt Maria in the back ground. "Aunt Maria," said Miss Astor, "come with me, for we shall probably require your services."

Now, Aunt Maria, when she was in a sane state of mind, was a famous nurse, but since she was not a physician,

Why The Muskrats Went To War.

BY W. S. WALLACE.

There was constant anxiety in those days in the family of the white-tailed muskrat, "Old White Tip," as the farmers called him, was well known as the most wary muskrat along the river. There were other "tragedy" muskrats, of course, and altogether they were a deal of trouble to the farmers in the springtime, for many reasons. They built their great nests under the banks, even under the very hay boats. Often the whole length of a carefully dyked bank would give way during a freshet, expelling hundreds of muskrats in their nests. So there was always a shotgun ready to hand in the farmhouse or the dairy shed to kill the poor muskrats. Indeed, every spring boats were gotten up to exterminate "them pesky rodents" once for all. But it is almost impossible to exterminate muskrats.

It is, therefore, not strange that "Old White Tip" was anxious. His nest was built within 10 feet of the grating of a fish house, on the river shore. The nest, to be sure, was not visible, being partly under water, partly lodged in a mass of arrowweed roots; but the farm hands knew that

A ROMAN HISTORY PUZZLE.

Here is a history puzzle for the high school boys and girls. These two old maids are saying something very clever, and you will find that without knowing it they have uttered the name of a Roman general and consul who was a bitter enemy of Sulla.

These nests were like "Old White Tip's," but smaller. Others, farther back in the marsh, were built entirely above ground, of sticks and mud, like the beavers' houses farther up stream.

This matters stood when the Black Rat came down the river. He was a very large rat and was, moreover, a "real" rat, of good old American birth and family; not a muskrat (who are not real rats) nor a foreigner from Europe, like the gray and brown rats. He knew his importance, too, and his very looks spoke of courage, experience and adventures. Around his neck was a thin gold collar, with a piece of broken chain attached; for he had escaped from a farmer for up stream and had been chased with dogs, canes and guns, his pelt was so valuable.

The Black Rat had important news for the muskrats, mink, otter and beaver; but especially for the muskrats. "Old White Tip," who usually fought with every true rat he met, welcomed this elegant stranger of the gold collar, and even admitted him to his house. Here several of the older muskrats came one dark evening, before the moon had risen, for a consultation.

The Black Rat made a speech. He declared that the farmers were preparing for a grand spring hunt, and were going to kill every rat on the river, of whatever kind, and all mink, otter and beaver, also.

The old muskrat answered that, while they didn't care an old rotten stick whether the otter and mink were exterminated utterly, they were sorry about the good, patient beaver. A general move to the interior of the Great Swamp was proposed and decided upon. "In those watery wastes," said the black rat, "you will find my relatives, the muskrats; my friends the gray squirrels, and my own people, the black rats."

"We will gather, then, by the great sweet gum tree in the swamp, and if the hunters dare follow so far let them beware the bottomless morass!"

This happened that on the third night following, "Old White Tip," with a multitude of muskrats, swarmed away down the river into the borders of the Great Swamp. They were followed by swarms of beaver and of water rats, by herds of squirrels and other animals, so that on the night which followed the farmers sought in vain for anything but mink and otter. These two kinds of animals, being fish eaters, had not received any warning, and by the rising of the sun, were nearly exterminated in that region of deserted river and empty nest. All other game had disappeared.

But when the hunt was over and the Great Swamp gave up again its swarming visitors there was consternation among the muskrats. Every nest had been destroyed, every beaver house and dam was leveled and every bite of stored up provender that had survived the winter was stolen or scattered.

The poor muskrats went to work to build again, and meanwhile the Black Rat, armed by his knowledge of the farmers' ways, told them that this was the work of the otter and the mink, not of the farmers.

"Foe," said the Black Rat one cold night to a circle of starving muskrats, "farmers let your nests alone, from inability to destroy so many; they let the beaver dams alone in order to preserve the levels of the river; hence, this is the revenge of the otter for not being warned."

Then did the muskrats declare war on the fish eaters and seek for aid among their neighbors; the beavers, fat and peaceful, refused to fight; the squirrels, whose nests were out of reach, also refused to quarrel; so that the water rats and the muskrats alone joined the muskrats in their war of retaliation.

But the mink and otter, while almost all killed in the immediate neighborhood, summoned their friends from the distant swamps, until the river was black with shrike, only beaks and wicked flat eyes swimming to the otters' settlements. Great, ferocious mink, with terrible teeth, were there, all ready for the fight.

The muskrats chose a certain night for the trial of strength; the rats preferred the daylight, but they were few in number; a moonlight night was preferred by a majority of the animals.

The fish eaters, as the enemies were called (for otter and mink live on fishes, while muskrats feed on roots and water plants), were undecided as to what to do, for they did not know on what day or night they would be attacked. Their leader, a large, ugly otter, blind in one eye, ran clumsily up and down a log, watching for the enemy. He was a mortal enemy of "Old White Tip" and had decided to fight the old muskrat to the death should they meet.

On the chosen night the one-eyed otter was running as an inch-worm runs down a twig along the log. The moon had just risen and cast a splendid beam of light on the broad, unruffled river. Not a sound was heard.

Presently his good eye caught sight of a ripple up river; then a dark line appeared on the water, and the otter knew that the muskrats were seen swimming rapidly down the silent stream. In front swam "Old White Tip," brave as ever, and behind that dark line was an unbroken phalanx of heads and tails; behind the muskrats came the black rats, who were not very good swimmers. On they came, but not a sound was heard.

The blind otter gave a loud scream of warning, and from the nearby swamp appeared the formidable mass of his army of otter and mink. In another moment the two kinds of animals had closed and the battle was begun. Not a single muskrat turned; all charged for the throats of the enemy. "Old White Tip" had seen his enemy, the blind otter, from afar, and he did not flinch from the meeting. The two animals, in the very midst of the general tumult, fought fiercely. The water was soon dyed red from their blood, and in a few moments the wily otter had grasped his enemy by the throat. Unable to breathe with his mouth open in the water, the blind otter tugged his prey to shore, where he was preparing to break his neck. But "Old White Tip" struggled still, and succeeded in getting a terrible hold on the otter's throat in his turn. Still, being an old fellow, he would have soon died had not help come. Suddenly the ferocious otter found himself attacked by a swarm of black rats, who soon killed him, in spite of his terrible struggles. Thus was "Old White Tip" saved by the black rats, who had been unable to fight in the water and had come to his rescue on the shore.

The battle was soon over. The otters had killed many of the muskrats, but had been forced back by the countless swarms of the enemy and had finally died in confusion, leaving the water dotted with their dead companions.

were so impregnable, and also that they made no audible complaint, the negroes doubted their efforts. At table the B's were the last to be served. So long did it take them to get enough to eat they sometimes left a little hungry. At this Betty protested, but to Bonnie's indignation.

"I think darkies are the worst servants in the world. Our Japs could just dance all around them."

At last Aunt Maria complained to Mary Randall, who had been three weeks in the school. "Miss Mary," she concluded, "dem Yankee gals is certain hoodooes."

"Aunt Maria, you are an old blot," replied Mary with a scorn equal to Miss Astor's. "Just the same I wish those girls had never come here. They are always creating a disturbance. If it is not one thing it is another."

Tilda was still confined to her bed. Although the doctor could do nothing tangible the matter with her, she insisted that she was too weak to move. The old women had taken the fine powdery sand and tried to breathe it. Failing in this, they pronounced it a powerful evil, and retired to the mountains to perform special ceremonies that could be carried out in the open air only, while a continuous prayer-meeting was held in Tilda's house. Then Ole Jacob felt ill. Of what? Imagination, to be sure, which is really the most dangerous illness in the world. Neither doctors nor old women had any power to ally his sufferings, and he lay and groined with the "miserly" that was nowhere, yet was all over him.

"The servants are simply unmanageable," said Miss Astor to her assistant, "and I wonder what can be the matter with them; it isn't camp-meeting time and there is no revival going on in the church. Listen!"

From the servants' quarter could be heard the "Oh, Lor! Jesus, save us! Oh, Lor! Jesus, save us!" repeated again and again by the women and in between the groans of Ole Jacob. Even the B's, enveloped in their discovery, could not be otherwise than aware little girls and together. Fortunately, their popularity with the smaller children was on the increase. Betty's fairy stories were as sunny and gorgeous as the gold mine; and uncounted treasures gathered in ages past by a band of gnomes, figured largely. Wonderful palaces, rivaling Aladdin's in splendor, came to light. Katy, huddled upon Bonnie's lap, reviled in these tales, and Bonnie laughingly confessed herself to an enjoyment of them, and told Betty that, besides being the dearest little sister in the world, she was "more fun than a barrel of monkeys."

CHAPTER VII.

Friday morning brought a letter from Mr. Kent.

"Hello, my lassies," he wrote; "now bear up and keep a stiff upper lip. It will be another week before I can arrive at Gainesville. So, my honey B's have been gathering vainly instead of wisdom, and want ribbons, hoes and feathers. I could not make out exactly what was wanted, but have bought another trunk and an filling it. Doubtless among the lot you will find the desired gew-gaws. I cannot quite picture my B's in fur-trimmed coats, and the thought makes my lump grow in my throat, for it means that my girl babies are growing up. You seem to have found good friends in the Southern hive. Auntie will buy the lace you ask for, Mrs. Astor, but between you and me presents are a pretty poor return for kindness that comes from the heart. We must put our heads together and come to some plan. Your father is a rough old fellow, and he expects his growing blossoms to think out the gracious ways of doing things, so hustle your thinkers."

"Alas! alas! bear in mind that at the first suspicion of sickness I am to be wired, for in all the world there is nothing so precious or important as Bonnie and Betty to their loving FATHER."

A whole week longer! They had been expecting him that day. With their arms around each other and cheeks together they Bonnie. But the next day they were ready to race up the mountains. The gorge attracted them with a potent fascination. Nothing could really be done until Mr. Kent arrived, but Bonnie felt that she must have one more look. As she started to climb down her foot slipped, and in another second she was lying at the bottom, too stunned to realize the sharp pain in her arm. Her hand she managed to crawl, and with Betty's help, back to the house. It was a true Mrs. Astor had cut the "dove" from the now swollen arm and suspended it in a sling.

"Does it 'ut 'em lots?" Bonnie, leading back with set teeth, nodded, and Betty sobbed softly from fright. The Colonel took one look at the white face and kept such a sharp lookout on moonlight nights that it was a marvel there were any muskrats left in the nest. Yet in spite of all his care three of his own family, to say nothing of hundreds of his colony, had died, their "pelt," or skins, being captured by their destroyers to sell.

"Old White Tip" had about decided to move down river to a place of safety, and had been for several nights busy making agreements with a neighboring colony for room in a bank to build new nests.

The nest near the fishhouse was unusually large, with five different rooms, all connected with the passage that led out beneath the surface into the river, and with another passage cleverly concealed among the arrowweed roots near shore. In front of the door into the water the broad stream swept in a curve to the southward, and just at the shallows, where the water ran more slowly than elsewhere, the colony of the rats of that neighborhood was built. Some of

One of the bones in the lower part of Bonnie's arm proved to be broken. She would take no anæsthetic, but closed her eyes and lips until it was set. Then she opened them.

"I want Betty," Betty came, red-eyed and remorseful.

"Now, my child," said Miss Astor, after she had dispersed the crowd in the hall, "tell me what this is all about."

"I don't know anything about hoodooes and things, but Bonnie has discovered a gold mine on Colonel Astor's place, and that's how she came to break her arm."

"What can you girls know about gold mines?" Miss Astor was not easy of belief.

"Bonnie does know," Betty replied, indignantly. "Bonnie knows all things." Then they told their story, and to Miss Astor, listening, there slowly came an awakening perception of much that was admirable in these little aliens. Bonnie, weak as she was, joined in the conversation, and showed much intelligence in matters of which the teacher was ignorant, and gold mine or no gold mine, their power to keep it to themselves was surprising in girls so young.

"Papa will be here tomorrow. I wired him when I was with Jo, and you'll see," Betty concluded.
