THE BOMBARDMENT OF PORTO CABELLO

(Correspondence of Associated Press.) LA GUAYRA, Venezuela, Dec. 28.—The British Commodore Montgomerie, who directed the operations at Porto Cabello on Dec. 14, gives the following account of the operations. After explaining that not a single person was killed or wounded by the bombardment, he continues to say: "Considerable damage was done to the town of the Charabalis of the Royal navy, and the Villa of the Imperial German navy, at Porto Cabello. A British merchant ship, the Toraja, which was being pulled up at an anchor in the harbor, was hoisted on its side by the shells, and the crew, in their night shirts, were hurled ashore. I noticed that the shells did not burst into a tuffly prison, where they were not without effect on water. They left behind a general feeling of dread, and a few were killed and a number of wounded. After being hoisted on its side, the Toraja was very good prey, and was taken and a guard was landed and took possession of the fort, receiving the surrender of the general and his men. They were immediately paroled. The principal prisoners were held apart and were responsible for the occupation lasted but a short time and the party returned to the ship. The Villa participated in the bombardment. Instead of a number of persons being killed, only two were injured and they broke their thigh bones on attempting to escape from the fort."

TEXAS SENATOR INTRODUCES A BILL IN CONGRESS

TO REMOVE DUTY ON COAL

Asks for Immediate Consideration of Measure — Another Resolution by Jones of Arkansas Recites Charge That There Is Illegal Combination Among Railroads to Restrict Coal Shipments

(By Associated Press.)

Washington, Jan. 6.—When the senate reconvened Monday after the holiday recess, few senators were absent. Almost immediately a discussion began regarding the coal situation. Mr. Lodge prefaced his introduction of a bill suspending for ninety days the duty on coal with the statement that in New England there was much distress owing to the scarcity of coal, and that unless relief was afforded at once a number of factories would have to shut down. He was aware, he said, that such a bill should originate in the house of representatives, but it was his intention to call the attention of the finance committee to the state of affairs. Mr. Culbertson followed with a resolution providing for the removal of the duty on coal, and asked its immediate consideration. Mr. Platt (Conn.) objected, saying it was his understanding that there was no duty on anthracite coal. Mr. Vest took exception to this statement, and said that the board of general appraisers and President Roosevelt had decided that such a duty is imposed. Mr. Vest also introduced a resolution on the subject.

Another resolution bearing on the subject of coal, introduced by Mr. Jones (Ark.), recited the charge of W. R. Hearst that there was an illegal combination among certain railroads to control the shipment of anthracite coal, and called on the attorney general for the evidence which it was allowed had been secured by him. It caused a lively debate, in which several Republican senators vigorously resented what they thought was a reflection on the attorney general. The discussion continued until 2 o'clock, when the resolution went over, being displaced by the omnibus statehood bill. Mr. Nelson (Minn.) addressed the senate in opposition to the bill, and favored single statehood for Oklahoma and Indian Territory.

ALL EUROPE IN A GLOOM

NOT SATISFIED WITH THE TRIED LOOK FOR 1903

EVERY NATION AFFECTED

Ordinary Conditions of Life Did Not Improve During the Year Just Closed—On the Contrary the Cost of Living Increased Almost Without Exception—Have Envy for the United States

LONDON, Jan. 6.—New Year cheerfulness and optimism in Europe seem to be of a negative character. The old world recognizes with only mild satisfaction that well nigh universal peace prevails and that no war cloud threatens.

The ordinary conditions of life in all the countries of Europe did not improve during the year 1902. On the contrary, the cost of living distinctly increased almost without exception, and the outlook for the new year hardly justifies the expectation of better things in the near future. It would be going too far to say that any general popular discontent prevails in the principal nations. There has been no great augmentation of public distress and suffering, but, on the other hand, the contrast between conditions in America, which the cables from the United States described this week, are strongly marked throughout Europe. The envy resulting from this jealousy of America's good fortune largely accounts for the adverse comment in London and on the continent upon the stability of American prosperity.

"LUCKY" BALDWIN IS A VERY SICK MAN

Famous California Millionaire Sporting Man and Horseman Is Threatened With Death by Cancer

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Jan. 6.—With death from cancer threatening him E. J. Baldwin, better known as "Lucky" Baldwin, is lying in a private room at Stevenson and Third streets. He has been there ever since the day after Christmas, but his identity has been hidden under the assumed name of Edward Jackson. His family and immediate friends have been calling on him daily, but no hint as to his illness has been allowed to escape to the general public.

The one-time millionaire is suffering from cancer, there being no less than three distinct growths developing on him. One of these, the most serious of them, is in the middle of the lower lip and the others are under the chin. Possibly a sensitiveness over his affliction may have caused Mr. Baldwin to have sought complete privacy, for even the doctor who is attending him was not aware who his patient was. Dr. S. R. Chamley has the case in hand, his offices adjoining the room in which "Lucky" Baldwin now lies ill. He would not admit that his patient was the well-known speculator, but said that he only knew him as "Jackson." "Mr. Jackson, as I know him," said the doctor, "came the day after Christmas and took the room here so that he could be under my immediate observation."

The doctor expressed the belief that he would be able to let the patient go to his home in about a week.

SILK FLAG FOR MRS. MCKINLEY

SENT BY A CONFEDERATE SOLDIER FROM ARKANSAS

COL. CLOPTON OF HELENA

Forms a Beautiful Design, and, It Is Suggested, Is an Improvement on the Starry Emblem Now in Use, Sent to the Widow of Martyred President, With Appropriate Message

HELENA, Ark., Jan. 6.—With a desire to do something to perpetuate the memory of the lamented President William McKinley, a Helena citizen has designed a new flag, combining all the features of the present national colors, with several added features, and recently presented a very handsome banner of the new design to Mrs. Ida S. McKinley, widow of the martyred chief executive. The flag was originated by Col. Hoggatt Clifton, a prominent planter and banker of this city, and all who have seen it pronounce it to be a thing of beauty. One day during the past summer Col. Clifton was lying ill in his room, and looking through the open window, could see the graceful colors of the nation floating from the flagstaff upon the government building.

Then and there he began to develop in his mind a long-cherished plan looking to an improvement of the United States flag. Col. Clifton had traveled extensively in Europe and had noted and commented upon the fact that all the old world nations had their national emblem upon their national flag, and he made up his mind that some day he would rearrange the whole thing. Col. Clifton's illness continued for some weeks, and thinking of the plan day after day, he finally had the details completed in his mind. Then a local artist was sent for, and, under the direction of Col. Clifton, painted a miniature banner after the model he had arranged.

It contained in the upper left-hand corner, now occupied by a blue background for the forty-five stars, the national representative bird of America, the bald eagle, on a background of red. In the beak of the eagle was a white streamer, bearing in blue the inscription "E Pluribus Unum," while just behind the bird's head was the motto: "In God We Trust." Upon the bird's breast was painted a shield, with thirteen white stars on the blue upper half and thirteen red and white stripes on the lower portion, to represent the thirteen original states of the union. In the eagle's talons were thirteen arrows, further representing the original state. In the extreme lower right-hand corner of this red space were thirteen stars of a deeper red, as a graceful compliment to the thirteen states of the Confederacy, for which the originator of the flag was a brave and loyal fighter. The lower left-hand corner of the flag was of blue bearing the regulation forty-five white stars to represent the reunited states as they stand today. The remaining two-thirds of the flag is the same as the national colors.

In Helena and in the north and east Col. Clifton has been urged to present to the United States congress his idea of the reconstructed flag, with a view of having the aquions incorporated into the national colors, but persists in his refusal to take so much upon himself, feeling that it would be a presumption in any man to ask the government of this country to make any kind of a change in the flag that has waved over its people for more than a century as the symbol of freedom.

BIG MONEY TO LIVE IN WASHINGTON

It Costs Something to Live in the National Capital, Even for a Brief Time. INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 6.—The man who says you can live in Washington as cheaply as in Indianapolis, evidently never lived in either place, says the correspondent of a local newspaper. There are two things in Washington that can be done as cheaply here as anywhere else. A man can buy a glass of whisky for 15 cents (it is said) and he can have his trunk moved for a quarter. In other respects Washington comes high. An Indiana congressman recently remarked: "Washington is the dearest city and at the same time the cheapest city in the world." Being pressed for an explanation of the somewhat paradoxical assertion, he said: "It is dear because you have to pay more for what you get than you do anywhere else, and it is cheap because you get less for what you pay."

One who lives there a short time and attempts to learn what is going on finds a rather inconsistent state of affairs existing regarding the moral tone of the place. On Sundays Washington is known as a "closed town," but it has never been styled a temperance town.

One Sunday night recently some Indians walked into the cafe of a prominent hotel and sat down. The French waiter evinced no little astonishment, not to say horror, when one of the men coolly ordered a couple of "Kinz Williams" and a glass of rye whisky for the party. The waiter explained that drinks were not sold in Washington on Sunday, except where something to eat was ordered. "But we are not hungry," said one of the Indians. The waiter said he was sorry, but they must get hungry if they desired liquors. "Oh, bring some cheese and crackers," said another of the party, but the waiter said that nothing short of a regular order of substantial would bring the desired liquor. The young man who had invited the others to drink with him then ordered blue points all around, and the liquor was forthcoming. Thus the hotel was able to keep within the limits of the law.

THE MISTLETOE HAS GONE OUT

LONDON, Jan. 6.—Young men moving in the best society wore a disappointed look on the days following Christmas, which has an interesting explanation that probably will be received with alarm by young men, and possibly some young women, in the United States. The terrible truth is that mistletoe has received its coup de grace. Youths too timid to find other excuses for saluting their fair friends looked in vain for the talismanic bit of green. There was no kissing—at least, in public—and the tradesmen who had laid in large stocks of the vine are figuring them almost a total loss.
