Packing Houses Must Follow Swift and Armour Into This Field

Armour and Swift are doubling the killing capacities of their Fort Worth

They have found Fort Worth, even at this early stage, to be a far better market than they anticipated when they built here. It has been found that about 600 head of cattle per day is the limit of the Armour plant; the plant was built so that within six weeks the killing capacity could be doubled and the work of doubling the capacity is now in progress. Early in June Armour will be able to handle 1,200 head
