JURY HOLDS FRISCO YARDS AND ROUNDHOUSE A NUISANCE

A BIG INJUNCTION SUIT

IS NOW FOR JUDGE SMITH IN THE SEVENTEENTH DISTRICT COURT TO DECIDE

HE MAY ACT TOMORROW

Property Owner at Adams and Jarvis Streets Seeking Relief by Court Procedure—Decision Will be of Un-usual Importance to City

Before Judge M. E. Smith in the Seventeenth district court yesterday, S. D. Rainey scored a partial victory in his injunction suit against the Red River, Texas and Southern railroad and the Fort Worth and Rio Grande railroad, to stop those roads, comprising the Frisco system in Texas, from operating and maintaining switch yards, round house, machine and repair shops, water tanks, etc., in the vicinity of his home, which is located at Jarvis and Adams streets.

JUDGE'S CHARGE

Judge Smith in his charge to the jury instructed it in substance, as follows: "If you find and believe that by reason of the switching, coaling, watering, etc., of engines at the point indicated, plaintiff's property is rendered less valuable for the purposes for which it is adapted and used, and that such damage is not suffered by the community at large, then you will find for the plaintiff."

A. & M. COLLEGE STEERS SHOW SMALL PROFIT

J. W. Carson, superintendent of the live stock experimental station of the Agricultural and Mechanical College, stationed at College Station, was on the Fort Worth market Friday with a car of choice heavy fed 1 and 2-year-old steers. There were nine of the 3-year-olds which averaged 1,184 pounds and sold to Swift & Co. at $4.35. These steers have been on feed one hundred and twenty days and the approximate cost of feed per day was 15 cents, making the cost of feeding about $15 per head. They originally cost Mr. Carson $27 per head, and when they were sold Friday they netted him $50.25, leaving him a profit of from $3 to $5 per head. The feeding was done in small lots, with five-eight tests. The steers which did best were those placed on meal, hulls and molasses. While Mr. Carson did not say so, the experiment shows that the steers fed on meal, hulls, alfalfa, corn and molasses were put in better shape quicker than those fed on rice products.

Swift & Co. will keep exact tab on the killing out of each steer and the result will be published by the Agricultural and Mechanical College about the first of August, in their regular bulletin.

THE STOCK MARKET HAS TIRED FEELING

NEW YORK, June 20.—The stock market has grown dull and sluggish as fluctuations grow less following last week's sharp recovery from the prolonged decline. The uncertainty over gold exports, anxiety for the crops, especially the corn and cotton crops, the effects upon earnings of railroads of the southwestern floods, the unstable condition in the iron and steel trade, a reaction in coffee, the discussion in connection with the United States Ship Building organization, the testimony by the president of the Metropolitan Street Railway Company that the company had not been earning its dividends and the doubts occasioned by the upset in the labor world have served to depress speculative activity in stocks. The recent pressure to liquidation, however, has been suspended.

DESPERATE BATTLE BETWEEN CATTLEMEN

HOLBROOK, Ariz., June 20.—News has reached here of a desperate battle between cattlemen on the Apache Indian reservation in which Henry Barrett was killed and Prime Coleman was probably fatally wounded. Both are prominent cattlemen. The men became involved in a dispute over their respective grazing permits on the reservation, which are only issued at certain times in the year and are of considerable value. A duel with revolvers followed, in which Barrett received three wounds in the abdomen from which he died within a few minutes. Coleman was shot through both thighs and was also badly bruised about the head by blows from Barrett's revolver.

At the First Christian church, corner Sixth and Throckmorton streets, R. R. Hamlin, who is conducting a very successful revival, will speak this morning at 11 o'clock on "The Model Church" and at 8 o'clock this evening on the subject "If a Man Goes to Hell From Fort Worth, Who Is to Blame?" Services are announced for each evening this week and although nearly fifty new members have been added to the church during the revival the interest continues.

That is dyspepsia. It makes life miserable. Its sufferers eat not because they want to, but simply because they must. They know they are irritable and fretful; but they cannot be otherwise. The effective remedy, proved by permanent cures of thousands of severe cases, is Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Young Man on Trial Charged With Killing His Mother

BEAUMONT, Texas, June 20.—The trial of Leo Boudreaux, charged with murdering his mother by administering poison to her several years ago, is on in the district court here, and will probably be completed late tonight. It is alleged that Boudreaux killed his mother accidentally, intending to poison someone else.

LAWYER YOUNG KIDNAPS CHILD

NEW YORK, June 20.—Lawyer Alexander Young of this city, former company attorney of the Hudson Company of New Jersey, who has been fighting in the courts for more than a year with his divorced wife, Mrs. E. McAlister, has kidnapped his 4-year-old child, Louise, four years old, from the custody of his wife's father, and by quick connection on trolleys and trains he managed to escape the police net set for him after the alarm was given. His whereabouts are now unknown. Following a court decree, giving Mrs. Jongers, who is now on the ocean on a honeymoon moon trip with her artist husband, absolute control of the child, the little one has been with her maternal step-grandmother, Mrs. E. McAlister. On Thursday last the lawyer attempted to serve his newly married former wife with a writ of habeas corpus for the child just as she was stepping on the plank of the French liner L'Albatros. She contemptuously threw the writ aside and sailed.

NEW THINGS STRANGE & CURIOUS

TREE DESECRATES A TOMB.

In a long-since-closed cemetery in Hanover, Germany, one may see a curious prank played by nature.

One Johannes Rubling, the last of his line, feeling, in 1782, that his days were numbered, left word that his inscription be cut on the family tombstone.

"This burial place, bought for all time, shall never again be opened nor disturbed." Three heavy blocks of stone, clamped with iron, mark the grave. Marble carved to look like overhanging drapery covers the top stone, among the folds of which drapery one reads the curt command.

Not long afterward some bird, perhaps, coming irreverently to bathe in the holy water basin at the grave's foot, dropped the embryo of a birch tree among the rugged gray stones guarding the dead Rubling's. The seed sprouted and grew, pushing its way up to the light from under the oppression of its mighty burden. Slowly and surely it burst the stones asunder and snatched the iron bars, in steady defiance of the command on the marble drapery. Today, six score or more years later, the birch is a state tree, and its roots have opened and bent and rest the tomb out of all symmetry. Little did old Johannes Rubling believe that his command would be scorned and his tomb violated by the result of a bird's carelessness at breakfast.

ELECTRICITY AND WINE

Italian wine merchants have reason to congratulate themselves on the introduction of the electrical process for the aging of wines in the wine-producing provinces of Italy.

The process is said to render possible extraordinary modifications in the bouquet and body of the vintage, and the suggestion has been made that it might be employed with advantage also in the correction of faults frequently apparent in California wines arising from the richness of the soil on which the grapes have grown.

But the tempering of wine is only one of many uses to which electricity is now put in the wine-producing industry. In an establishment in Algeria, where the Arab labor was uncertain and unsatisfactory, a generating plant has been erected for doing the whole work.

The current from the dynamo is utilized for lighting purposes and for the operation of seven electric motors ranging from 2 to 10 effective horsepower. One motor drives a one-ton crane, which lifts boxes of grapes from the ground floor to the heating room, three motors operate the beaters and presses, and the remaining three are coupled direct to centrifugal pumps, which keep the must moving in the tuns.

ICE CAVE OF BESANCON.

In several parts of the world there are caves in which ice is found in the middle of summer. In some of them the ice lasts only until August or September, and is renewed during the winter, but in other caves ice is found all the year round. One of the most celebrated and remarkable of ice caves is situated near Besancon, in France, in a hill about 500 feet high. The roof of the cave is 80 feet high, and the floor is strewn with great ice stalagmites of such fantastic forms that they are frequently likened to human and animal figures.

The cave has been known for centuries, and in 1727 the Duc de Loni, who was in command of an army encamped in the vicinity, made an attempt to discover the secret of the ice formation. He had all the ice removed from the cave in order to determine how soon it would reappear, if at all. It was found that new ice formed and accumulated very slowly. Sixteen years after the ice had been removed the floor of the cave was again completely covered, and there were oddly shaped pillars six feet in height. The amount of ice in ice caves is found to vary from year to year, in accordance with fluctuations in the climate outside.

Miss M. E. Shackford, of Troy, N. Y., writes: "In a recent issue of your paper I saw a picture which the article accompanying it said was considered by many photographers and others to be a very remarkable example of the quickness of the camera in catching a moving object. The picture I send, I think, is still more wonderful, inasmuch as the camera, as will be seen, actually caught the moving objects in mid-air at the time of passing. My cousins were playing with their Indian clubs on the lawn at their summer home, Holland Cottage, West Sandhills, N. Y., and after watching them a while I wondered whether I could get a picture of the clubs as they were being thrown back and forth. I made a snapshot, not dreaming of such a success as catching the clubs as they were passing in mid-air.

FREAK OF A RAILROAD COLLISION.

This is a photograph of a railroad collision, which occurred at Danbury, Ct., some time ago. It was a "head-on" collision. The demolished locomotive is known as the "hard switcher," and was violently struck by a huge freight engine.

The force of the blow caused the tank portion of the tender to completely telescope the adjoining box car, at the same time hoisting the locomotive wholly upon the trucks of the tender as if by the aid of a derrick. Although this portion of the wreck advanced nearly 200 yards before stopping, there was not one truck derailed. The first life insurance society was started in London in 1658 and another in 1700. Neither was successful.

Two-Legged Cat.

Hooker is a gray cat, the property of a family living in Dunkirk, N. Y. He was born with only two legs seven years ago. His hind legs are perfectly natural in development, but he is without the least vestige of forelegs. There is no unnatural formation or growth in place of the missing members, and the handsome gray fur grows as thickly over the shoulders to which the forelegs should be attached as upon other parts of his body.

There is nothing in his appearance except the absence of forelegs differing from that replace Hooker first, although after he grew up to cat hood she paid no special attention to him. But, then, Hooker was not so helpless as one would suppose him to be. He managed to get along with only half as many legs as the ordinary cat, and as for tricks and pugacity he was the equal of any of his fellows and a terror to stray dogs. He has been taught to do many odd things and his accomplishments are the wonder of visitors to the home of this wonderful cat.

Two Armenians.

Some time ago an Armenian bazaar was opened in Marseilles, and the proprietor, who claimed to be an Armenian and who wore the Armenian costume, attracted much attention on account of the extraordinary stories which he told of his travels and adventures in distant countries. French he spoke well, and he gave his neighbors to understand that he knew several other languages, including, of course, Armenian.

Now it happened that another Armenian was recently arrested in Marseilles on some grave charge, and, as he could not speak a word of French, the proprietor of the bazaar was requested to act as interpreter. Very unwillingly he complied with this request, and for the excellent reason that, in spite of all his pretensions, he really did not understand a word of Armenian. In the courtroom, however, a happy inspiration came to him. With a solemn face he listened attentively to the prisoner as he told his story in Armenian and explained clearly how, impossible it was that he could have committed the crime with which he was charged, and then turned to the judge and said in doleful tone:

"The prisoner has confessed everything and only asks that Your Honor will deal leniently with him."

The judge thereupon thanked the wily interpreter for his services and the next moment imposed a heavy sentence on the unfortunate prisoner.

Pope And Cigars.

Pope Leo XIII. does not smoke; nevertheless he enjoys the odor of a good Havana cigar, and frequently he asks one of his attendants to smoke one in his chamber. "On such occasions," says a Roman writer, "His Holiness sits comfortably in his armchair and a benign smile is on his face as he watches the blue smoke ascend into the air."

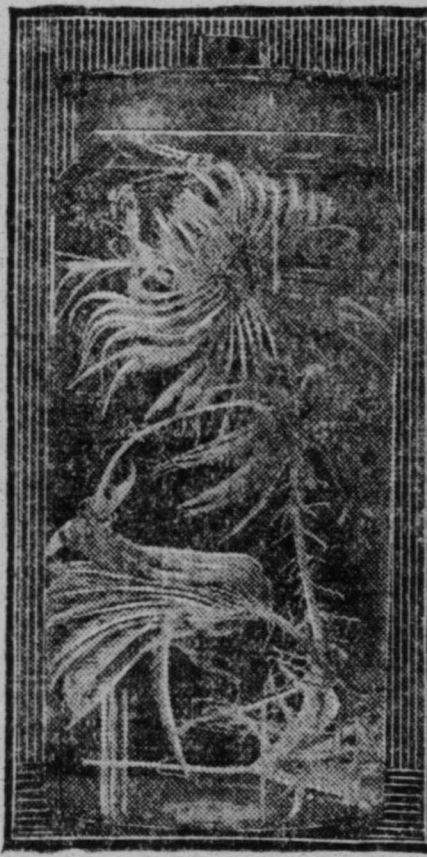

The Pope takes sometimes a pinch of snuff from a large wooden box, in which there is always a goodly supply, and by deftly using a red silk handkerchief he prevents the slightest stain from appearing on his garments. However, even if a stain were to appear it would very soon be noticed by Chamberlain Centra, one of whose duties is to see that His Holiness' raiment shall be immaculate whenever he appears in public.

A Notable Congress.

The fourteenth International Congress of Medicine will be held in Madrid, from April 23 to April 30. For several weeks the central executive committee has been at work making the necessary preparations, and has been aided by forty committees in the Spanish provinces and thirty-two in foreign countries. Up to the present four thousand Spanish physicians and fifteen hundred foreign ones have announced their intention of attending the congress, and it is believed that the total number of those present will exceed 6,000. Among them will be delegates from the leading universities and medical societies in all civilized countries.

Ocean Lilies.

These beautiful "flowers," preserved in a bottle, are sea lilies. Great areas of the ocean bottom, at great depths, are fairly carpeted with them. But they are not really flowers; they are animals. Where they dwell there is no plant life at all, but only the interminable desert of the sea floor, over which browse monstrous carnivorous fishes and strange crabs of brilliant scarlet and orange hues.

WORLD'S LARGEST FEAST DISH.

What is considered the largest feast dish probably in the world will shortly be on exhibition at the American Museum of Natural History. It was formerly used by the Kwakiutl tribe of Indians, of British Columbia and Vancouver Island. These Indians from remote times have occupied isolated territory and have almost entirely kept aloof from civilization influences, consequently they developed and practiced many peculiar customs. Their habits and mythology have been studied extensively by Dr. Franz Boas, who has contributed much valuable information in regard to these people. The huge dish here pictured is nearly twelve feet long by three in width. It was used by a big chief in one of their leading ceremonies, known as "The Potlatch," or the Feast of the Distribution of Property. It is carved out of a solid section of cedar tree and represents the body of "The Little Wild Girl of the Woods," a legendary personage. The dish was placed in the center of the room, and the long compartment was heaped up with a sort of biscuit consumed in great quantities on this occasion.

BIG JOURNEY IN A SMALL BOAT.

Capt. Howard Blackburn has the record of making longer voyages in a small boat than any other sailor in the world. He has just returned from a trip in which he traveled several thousand miles over the inland waters of the United States. The route he took was, indeed, interesting. He sailed around Cape Cod and through Long Island Sound, and then down the Jersey coast as far as Atlantic City and Cape May. Then he went to New York and up the Hudson to the Erie Canal, and through to Buffalo. He kept on through the lake to Detroit, and then to Chicago. He was in Chicago the latter part of August, and after a stay of about two weeks went down through the old Illinois and Michigan Canal to the Illinois River and to the Mississippi. He kept on the latter river to Columbus, reaching there in November. From Columbus he went by rail to Mobile, Ala., and thence through the Gulf of Mexico to St. Joseph Bay, Pensacola, Tampa and Key West. From Key West he started for Miami, but in the Biscayne Bay he went ashore, and later decided to sell his boat. John R. Strong, of Cambridge, a summer resident of Gloucester, gave him a rowboat, which he named the Laura R. Strong, after Mrs. Strong. In this he rowed up the creek, canals and the Indian River as far as Titusville, where he landed across to Sale Lake, on the St. Johns River, and from there went to Jacksonville, where he sold the rowboat and took a Clyde steamer for New York.

The first boat used by Mr. Blackburn was the same in which he left Gloucester, Mass., a few years ago, crossing the Atlantic Ocean and returning safely. He considers the inland trip recently completed far more difficult and almost as dangerous. The boat which he used is a little craft which is less than 20 feet in length. Mr. Blackburn is known as the "fingerless navigator," as a number of years ago he lost all the fingers of one hand in an accident.

ly smile, and have been photographed in the act, but the armored animal is a melancholy animal and rarely laughs. That he does so once in a while, however, is here made manifest.

Edict Against Cats.

There is much excitement in the village of Beaumont-sur-Oise, in France, owing to a curious edict against cats which has been issued by the Mayor. "Cats," says the edict, "must not be allowed at large for the next six weeks, and any householder who allows a cat to roam through the streets during that period will be heavily fined."

The Mayor explains that the reason why he issued the edict was because two persons were recently bitten by a mad cat. The good women of Beaumont-sur-Oise who keep cats reply that they are perfectly willing to obey the Mayor, but that they do not see how they can compel their cats to obey him.

Gilyak Cradle.

The Gilyaks, who live on the Amoor River, in Siberia, have a curious cradle or cradle board. It is made of two pieces of bass-wood; the back and bottom are fitted with pieces of matting secured with thongs of leather. When indoors it is suspended from the rafters, but in summer it is attached to a slender sapling that sways with the gentle motion in the breeze, thus literally rocking a baby in the tree-top.

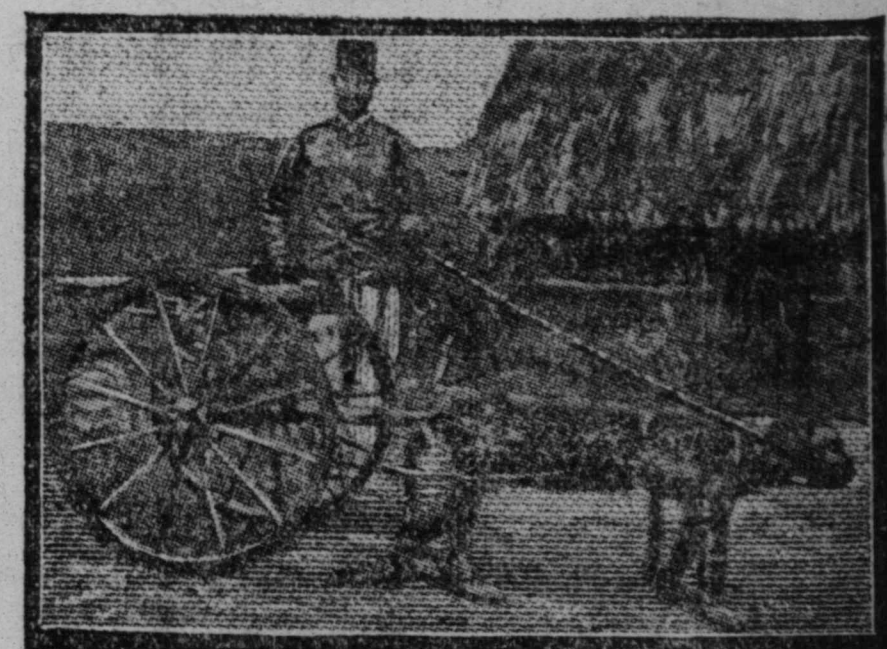

In certain parts of Russia a similar cradle is used, and the one that Peter the Great was rocking was made of material like this.

but it was round like a sieve, and had no hood.

Egypt has 1,211 medical men to look after the health of over 8,000,000 people. Six hundred and four are European doctors.

LEOPARDS FOR HAULING CANNON.

Leopards have been used with good results for hauling light cannon in several recent African campaigns. For all hauling purposes they are said to rival the famous mule for patience and all round utility. The leopard was first introduced for draft work in Upogora, in German East Africa, but they have proved so valuable that their use is likely to spread widely. A single able bodied leopard, properly broken, it is said, will haul an ordinary mountain or field piece, or a similar weight of ammunition or provisions for a campaign. They are not particular about their food and will work all day with but one meal. In the jungle marches this is, of course, a great advantage. The leopards are broken to harness when very young. The difficulties of taming a full grown leopard to such work are too great to make them of any practical value. The leopard cubs are usually broken by the natives. After a few months' work in harness they become remarkably docile, minding the rein and stopping or starting at the word of command. They are usually hitched up in a simple leather harness, and do not carry a bit, but a tight band about the mouth enables one to guide them readily. They are sold to the soldiers for money or in exchange for clothing, beads, glass or similar trifles. Properly harnessed, it is said that a leopard could no more run a way than he could change his spots.

Anything selected from our elaborate line of Cut Glass and Hand Painted China WOULD BE IN FAULTLESS TASTE.

It would be creditable alike to the discernment and refinement of the purchaser, and a delicate recognition of the cultivation and gentility of the recipient.

RUSSIAN SOLDIERS AT EVENING PRAYER

FRENCH OFFICER RELATES INCIDENT OF THE CAMPAIGN IN CHINA THAT CONTRASTS WITH STORIES OF THEIR CRUELTY

BY PAUL VILLIERS. (Copyright, 1903, by W. R. Hearst.) PARIS, June 20.—(Special Cable.)—The minds of the French people are very busy arranging plans for President Loubet's intended visit to King Edward.

A Parisian mechanic has just written to the president that he has invented what he thinks would be a very fitting present for President Loubet to give to Queen Alexandra, and he says he should feel very badly if his suggestion is not adopted.

The present is nothing less than a musical bell. As soon as its happy owner lies down in it the weight of his or her body starts the music, which may be selected according to taste.

The inventor thinks that the queen might appreciate Godard's "Berceuse" from "Jocelyn."

This wonderful bell will do still more for you—it will not only sing you to sleep, but will also wake you at any time you may prefer with another piece of select music, as "God Save the Queen," or any other appropriate tune; and as the queen is rather hard of hearing it might be well to select a Wagnerian overture for reveille.

I am sorry to say that the president has not yet decided whether he will take the bell or not, but sincerely hope he will.

It does seem strange that Providence at times should act in a way to break down the faith of those who in these days of atheism cling to the blind faith of olden days.

A few days ago a very heavy thunderstorm passed over the little village of Condorec, and firmly believing that she could avert all possible danger from the village, a woman, known for her religious tendencies, went into the chapel to toll the bell to keep lightning away.

Now you would naturally think that if the lightning was bound to strike some one it might have chosen one of the wicked persons of the village, as for instance some old drunkard, who refused to reform.

But no, it just went for the very church bell, ran down the wire rope that the woman was pulling and killed her and a little baby she carried on her arm.

I do sometimes think that Providence at times is rather unwise or absent-minded.

So many false stories have been told about the cruelties committed by Russian troops in China at the time of the Boxer revolution, and during the march of allied troops against Peking that I think it might not be out of place to relate the following little anecdote just told by Colonel de Pelaco, who commanded the French troops:

"I shall never forget," said the colonel, "one ceremony which was repeated every night in the Russian camp, and which I saw one evening when I had been to a council of war with the Russian General Linevitch."

"It was just after sundown when I heard the peal of a bell and suddenly saw the Russian soldiers gather around their colors, then kneel down and with one voice recite the Lord's Prayer."

"Then there was a deep silence followed by the impressive tones of the Russian national hymn."

"No man who had ever seen the expression of devotion in the faces of these 4,000 simple soldiers could ever believe one word of the falsehoods which have been told and printed about them."

"A number of French soldiers who had gathered near the Russian camp were moved almost to tears, and when the last tone of the anthem had died away they burst out with a heartfelt 'Vive la Russie.'"

"Whereupon the Russian band immediately played the 'Marseillaise,' and the Russian general, taking hold of both of my hands, said to me: 'Colonel, I wish you would report to your government how French and Russian soldiers, on the eve of the battle of Pei Tsang, met in prayer for our common success.'"

If any enterprising American manufacturer of patent medicine has a good obesity cure there is a splendid opportunity for him to make his fortune in Sweden.

The wise legislators of that far-off country are seriously considering to put a special tax on fat people.

Personally I think that the burdens of fat people should not be made heavier, but the members of the Swedish Riksdag argue that when a man is above a certain weight he is in a well-fed and prosperous condition, and so in a position to contribute easily to the public funds.

There may be something in this, and as it will probably cause the heavyweights to go in for all kinds of athletic sports to evade the tax, it may, after all, be for the benefit of the race.

When you think of a French archbishop, the picture of a good-natured, easy-going, rather stout person, not apt to perform feats of physical strength and courage, presents itself to your mind.

Monsieur Sonnois, archbishop of Cambrès, is, however, a prelate of a very different type.

A few days ago he was on his way to confirm the children of the parish of Saint Etol.

The distance not being great, he had decided to walk and, accompanied by his valet, Abbe Lobbelez, and two other clerics, he set out to perform a new statue of Jean Bart when he saw a runaway horse, attached to a light carriage in which were seated a lady and a child, coming toward him "à toute vitesse."

Though hampered by his clerical robes, the archbishop made a quick jump on the head of the horse, and by sheer force threw it down. Having done this and seen the lady and child were unharmed, he quietly continued his walk as if nothing had happened.

But Saint Etol is very proud of its archbishop.

Monsieur Edouard Drumont, the noted automobilist, has a suggestion to make to Andrew Carnegie that may help him from the disgrace of dying rich.

He said at the Automobile club the other day: "I have heard that Mr. Carnegie cannot spend his money fast enough giving away libraries, and I do not see why he should not spend some of it in building transcontinental roads exclusively for automobiles."

"Of course, I would like to see him begin here in France, where, so far, he has not invested any of his surplus, but even should he prefer to build the roads in the United States, I am cosmopolitan enough to feel thankful to him."

The Russian government may be corrupt and absolutistic and do many things which we do not approve of on general principles, but it certainly at times shows a very fatherly interest in even its humblest subjects that deserves to be imitated elsewhere.

On one of the main railroads, and in Russia these all belong to the government, a traveling bath has been built and put into use for the workmen and their families.

The bath consists of two vestibuled cars, in one car are a number of baths, while the second is the dressing room.

At a stated hour of a certain day the bath will arrive at each station on the line and remain a number of hours, during which time all the employes and their families will be obliged to take their weekly ablution.

They say here that when the Emperor and Empress of Russia paid their religious visit last year to Moscow they were advised to proceed to Tainhoff to obtain the benediction of Father Seraphim, and to ask him to pray for a czarévitch in the direct line.

Should Seraphim's prayers not prevail the order of succession to the throne established by Paul the Insensate will be repealed and the old order reverted to.

The czar in that event would be invested with the power of appointment, which Peter the Great used in favor of Catherine I.

The law of primogeniture is by no means regarded as sacred in Russia. The reported intention of the czar to have his oldest daughter succeed him is rather favorably looked upon by the Russian people, and will cause no dissension. Russians do not plunge into civil war for the sake of an heir.

A Little Mother would perhaps even be more popular than a Little Father. Nicholas busies himself with the education of his oldest daughter in a way which bodes no good to the present male heirs.

He wants her to get the best education possible, as he freely feels the disadvantage he is at from being entirely educated by medicocritics just good enough to serve as repeaters at a French Lycee.

King Leopold of Belgium is one of our most frequent, if not most respected, guests, and as he spends considerable money here, we are ready to forgive him a good many of his sins and shortcomings, but I should not advise him to enter the Jockey club for some time to come.

The king rarely comes to this city without taking at least one dinner in this famous club, whose culinary products are admitted by every gourmet in Paris.

Among the many dishes composed here "canard aux navets" easily surpasses all the others, and the chef, who is the only person in Europe who knows how to prepare it, is paid almost his weight in gold in yearly salary.

When King Leopold visited the club last he was of course had the famous dish served, and was so enthusiastic over it that he sent what was thought to be a note of thanks to the chef.

But the next day the chef resigned, and nothing was heard of his until it was found out that he was at King Leopold's palace at Laeken, and that Leopold was feasting upon "canard aux navets" every day.

The members of the Jockey club are shaking their fists and swear they will have revenge on the wily gourmet when he returns to this.

Parisians, who have been rather envious of Berlin, because Miss Isadora Duncan, the famous American barefoot dancer, selected that city for her triumphs in her novel dances, are delighted to hear that she has made up her mind to leave Germany.

She is shortly expected here and has made arrangements to take the beautiful little "Theater de Sarah Bernhardt" as little as the "Dammation de Faust" is concluded.

It is said that she has come to an agreement with Otero and Liane de Pauly in regard to forming a partnership, which will practically be a "dancers' trust."

The idea of seeing these three famous beauties on one stage has set the Parisians fairly delirious with delight, and if the theater were to perform a triumph in her novel dances, are delighted to hear that she has made up her mind to leave Germany.

performed by Rev. R. C. Armstrong at 9 o'clock, and immediately after the bride and groom left for the summer resorts of Maine. After Sept. 1 they will be at home at 100 Greensboro street, Boston.

The bridesmaids were Miss Little McCammon and Miss Nannie Pauline Lusher and the flower girls Miss Mary Willie Lusher and Miss Annie May. The ring bearer was a namesake of the bride, little Flossie Hindman. Mrs. Charles Bowman was the matron of honor and Charles Bowman the groomsman. All the ladies of the wedding party were in white, the bride looking specially beautiful in a gown of Paris muslin with trimmings of Mechlin lace and elaborate handwork.

The bride has been not only admired for her great musical gifts, but she has been loved for many years of mind and heart. She carries to her new home and new life the sincerest good wishes of a wide circle of friends. Dr. Thomas is a prominent Boston physician and among his friends he enjoys a professional and social esteem equal to that of his bride.

Miss Rose T. Howard will entertain her music pupils and their friends at the residence of Mrs. John T. Lofton, on Cooper avenue, next Monday afternoon from 4 to 6. There will be a musical program of excellence and the hours promise very great pleasure.

Miss Jessie Yeates entertained informally with finch last Friday evening. There were no prizes, but the fun was just as great as if there had been a dozen. A luncheon whereat the guests were twenty dainty little maidens was the form of entertainment offered by Miss Charlie Matterson at her home at Arlington Heights yesterday afternoon. The fragrant cape jasmine and maidenhair fern furnished beautiful decorations for the dining-room and table, the centerpiece being a basket filled with dozens of the jasmine. Soup and crackers, sherbet and bread and butter sandwiches, ice cream and cake, was the menu and it pleased the young folks quite as well as it would have done guests of maturer age. In the afternoon there was a vegetable contest, May Wilson winning a basket of cape jasmines and Elizabeth Wells, Della Doughty, Mildred Pollock, Nannie Sanguinet, Mary Montgomery and Irma Hosmer.

The guests were Misses Virginia and Belle Bunting, Margaret Mitchell, Elizabeth Wells, Marguerite Cante, Martha Cante, Elizabeth Hovenkamp, Edna Lewis, Alice Van Zandt, Gladys Grammer, Jeannie Marie Roe, Adelaide Roe, Clara Crowley, Margaret Wells, Della Doughty, Mildred Pollock, Nannie Sanguinet, Mary Montgomery and Irma Hosmer.

Miss Nell Wheat entertained with finch Friday morning in honor of her guest, Miss Lily Bell of Dallas. The guests did not play for prizes, but each received a dainty souvenir of the occasion, the place cards being water-color studies of a hill decorated with sheafs of wheat. There were soups of peas, of sweet peas, of fruit nectar and a salad luncheon to close.

Those present were Beale Wombwell, Minnie Thompson, Marguerite Cante, Martha Cante, Louise Norvell, Mildred Pollock, Marguerite Adams, Camilla Labatt, Daisy Kline, Madge Hosmer, Elizabeth Wells, Marion Mitchell, Alice Davidson, May Wilson, Helen Cowan and Lucille Norvell.

Miss Margaret Berner, Miss Hattie Mae Anderson and Miss Mary Swayne spent Wednesday in Dallas.

Dr. L. C. Chase attended the meeting of the medical association at Waxahachie Wednesday.

Dr. R. E. L. Miller will be in Waxahachie last week for the medical association that met there.

Fry and Myrtle Davenport; Messrs Lewis, Winters, Crow, James Montgomery, Campbell, Wyatt, Drs. Williams and Dunlap.

A most pleasant afternoon was spent at the home of Mrs. Everett Wyatt, where Mrs. Franklin J. Carter entertained at cards. The decorations and refreshments were cleverly carried out in pink and green. The punch bowl was presided over by Miss Belle Colston and the score was kept by little Adelle O'Neill of Clarksville. The first prize, a beautiful potted plant, was won by Miss Roy, and the consolation fell to Mrs. James Anderson.

The guests included the following ladies: Mesdames Everett Wyatt, Walter McArthur, Oliver Colston, Turpin, George Begg, James Anderson, Robert Coombs, Edward Vincent, R. E. Buchanan, Wm. Orr, Robert Tipton, Bronquist, Randall; Misses Christina Begg, Roy, Pauline Laneri, Anita Laneri, Edna Birchell, Chase and Emily Colston.

Mrs. Collett entertained with bridge whist Wednesday morning, this most fascinating of all games being played by Mesdames Menefee, Jere Ellis, R. L. Van Zandt, Conrad, Beyer, Barron, Stephens; Misses Hornby, White, Newlin, Carter and Ferrell.

The organ recital to be given by the pupils of Guy R. Pliner at the Broadway Presbyterian church on Tuesday evening, June 23, promises to be a musical treat. Organ numbers will be rendered by Mrs. Frigmore, Mrs. William Mills and Guy R. Pliner, while Miss Edgington will assist by contributing voice numbers and Mrs. G. V. Morton, violin solos.

CAPT. EDRINGTON TALKS OF FLOOD

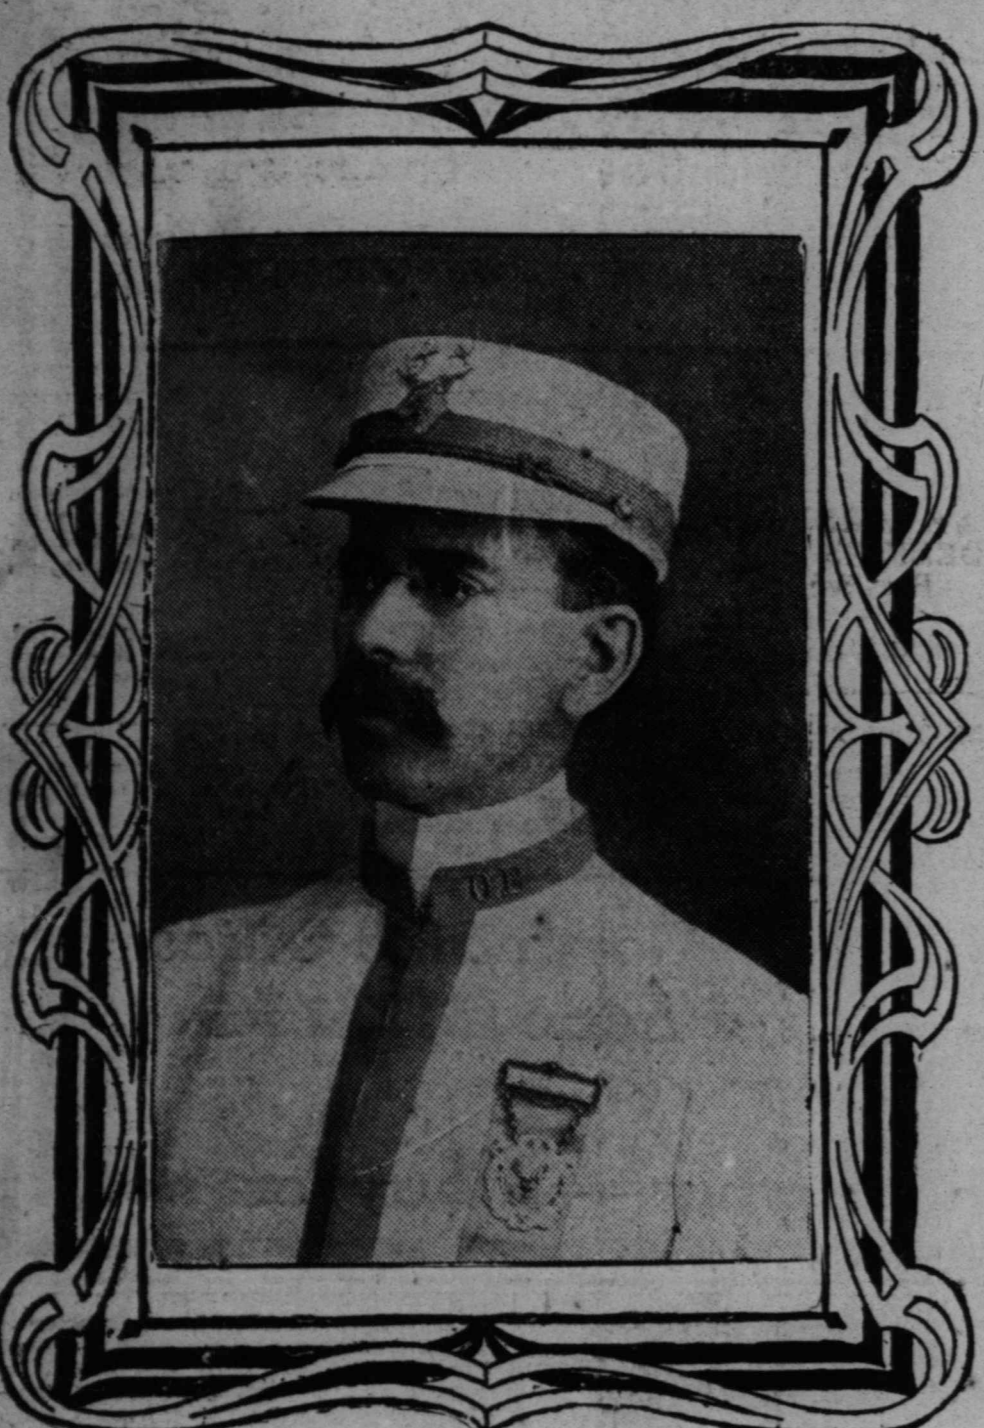

The recent floods in the Mississippi and its tributaries, and the attendant disasters along the upper courses of the streams, have called attention anew to the importance of establishing control of the waters that the great Mississippi basin must carry off.

Captain H. C. Edrington, who is an authority on the "anties," to use his own expression, of the Mississippi, gave a friendly and interesting reminiscence of its floods and advanced some valuable theories as to the means of providing against these periodic calamities.

"The denudation of the upper areas of the Mississippi basin by forest fires and lumbermen has not, in my opinion, been so disastrous as has been represented," said Captain Edrington. "In most cases these forest areas have been converted into agricultural lands and the cultivation of the soil has been, in some degree, at least, an offset to the loss of the forests. The condition of the soil after being prepared for agricultural purposes makes it ready to absorb the rainfall or melting snows.

"In 1844, the year of the great flood so often referred to by meteorologists, the destruction of the forests had scarcely begun, the levee system had not reached

HOW TO GET RID OF UNMARRIED GIRLS

"The war on the levee system began fifty years or more ago. The theory was then advanced that a system of dredging the bayous should take its place. These bayous have been leveed across, but by opening these embankments and dredging the bayous the incoming flood waters would be provided with safety valves, as it were, and all danger to life and property averted, though there might be occasional inconveniences.

"This plan was presented to Congress many years ago, but was never adopted. It may never be, but it is a scientific solution of conditions that must sooner or later, if the present levee system is continued, precipitate appalling disaster."

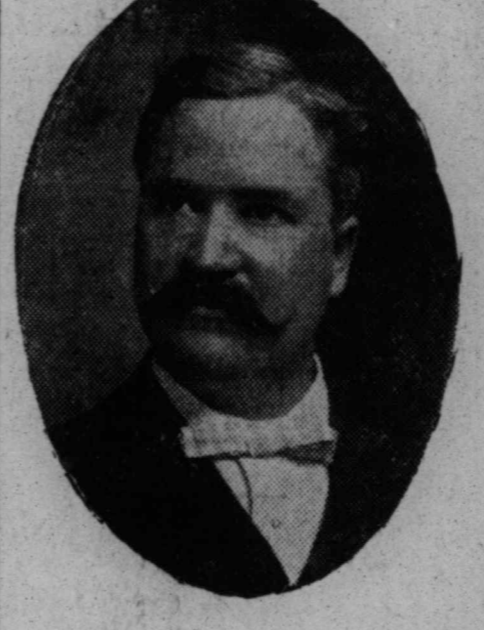

"The conversation drifted from the problem of controlling the Mississippi to boyhood reminiscences. Captain Edrington grew to manhood on the banks of the river near Vicksburg.

"My father's home was on one of these peninsulas for which the river is noted," and he drew a diagram of the river's course as it doubled back in a wondrous fashion. "It was known as 'Terrapin Neck,' and some distance below was Milligan's Point. Here was the school to which I was sent. Once a month a negro came for me in a skiff. By the river it was about twelve miles. At other times we rode, though the distance was considerably greater.

"Across the neck of this peninsula the river has now forced its way and there is an island and a lake where once was only the bend of the river, and a forest of trees has grown up in the past forty years across what was formerly the bed of the stream.

"We were so accustomed to the river's 'antics' that when the water began to rise we were ready to move all household effects upstairs, and there were always skills at hand to be used when we wanted to go abroad.

"I do not believe that the floods are as frequent or as high as formerly, but my belief may be based on vivid recollections of these watery migrations."

has been devised by the village folk. At a meeting of the town council it was decided to have every year a banquet on the first of June, at which only unmarried girls anxious for husbands were to be the guests.

The first feast of the kind took place this year in the midst of the greatest excitement, the whole village making it a holiday and unmarried girls from all the neighboring counties had been invited.

Alongside of each girl an empty chair was kept as an invitation to bachelors to choose their partner. A crowd of possible bridegrooms stood about during the banquet.

Accompanied by a band, and carrying as effective ammunition 500 copies of The Telegram's special edition, to display to Texas Elks the beauties and resources of Fort Worth, and 1,000 purple Panther City badges, to be worn by all converts they may make, the local delegation will leave at 6 o'clock this evening, to be on hand for the opening of the convention Monday morning.

The Fort Worth lodge's sponsor, Miss Edwina Crittenden, and her two maids of honor, the Misses Junita Hollingsworth and Georgia Diehl, will render effective assistance in conquering delegates who may be opposed to the Fort Worth idea. The local lodge is confident today that it has a plan of defense so irrefragable and a plan of attack so overwhelming, that when the time for selecting next year's place of meeting comes, all the delegates will surrender in favor of Fort Worth.

Allen D. Sanford, mayor of Waco. Joe Lee Jameson of Austin will respond in behalf of the visitors, and he will be followed by Hon. O. L. Stribling of Waco, who will deliver an address, entitled, "Waco, the Queen of the Brazos Valley." Mr. Stribling will be followed by Hon. W. H. Patterson of Dallas, president of the state association. An address by Grand Exalted Ruler George P. Cronk of Omaha and the election of officers, together with the selection of next year's place of meeting, will close the session.

In the evening there will be a smoker, exhibition drill and banquet. Tuesday morning there will be a parade before the commander-in-chief and his officers. In the afternoon there will be a business session and at 3 o'clock the ladies of Waco lodge will entertain the visiting ladies at the Waco Country club. In the evening there will be a ball given by the Waco lodge.

its present proportions, and yet the river rose to a height that carried destruction along its length and established a high water mark that has remained the record. It seems to me that whenever the climatic conditions are such as to produce these torrential rainfalls and cloudbursts simultaneously with the melting snows of plain and mountains, we will continue to witness losses of life and property on a colossal scale.

"Scientific men have several theories as to the best means to employ in reducing these losses to the minimum. The reservoir system, the straightening of the course of the river, and the abolishing of the levee system, substituting therefor the opening of the numerous bayous of the river, have each advocates.

"Of the reservoir system I am not sufficiently well informed to express an opinion. It occurs to me that the immense

"The plan to straighten the course of the river appears to me quite feasible. A HEBREW COLONY IN SOUTH AMERICA

A MOVEMENT FOR EMIGRATION OF PERSECUTED JEWS FROM RUSSIA TO BRAZIL IS ALREADY GAINING HEADWAY

BY MALCOLM CLARKE.
(Copyright, 1903, by W. H. Hearst.)
BERLIN, June 20.—(Special Cable.)—Throughout Germany the movement to found a Hebrew colony in Brazil, which was started almost immediately after the Kishineff massacre, is gaining impetus. Persecuted Jews in all parts of Russia, Roumania and in some parts of Austria are keeping interest in the plan active by clamoring for assistance to reach this South American haven, out of the reach of their enemies.

While this movement was started by Jewish charitable associations, it is receiving more and more aid from Christian associations and individuals. It is evident that this result was inspired by the American example. A great deal is being said and written about the prompt and generous response the people of the United States, irrespective of religion, made upon receipt of the first news of the Beasrabia outrages.

The Brazilian colony plan is not yet complete in detail. The leaders of the movement are informing themselves about the cost of transporting families and what is necessary to make them self-supporting soon after arrival. It is thought that within a few weeks these preliminaries will have been settled, and start made in sending out colonists and supplies.

Meanwhile dispatches from Russian towns multiply, telling of a renewal of panics among the Jewish people. There is no doubt that Russia has her entire Hebrew population thoroughly terrorized.

ANTI-POOL BILL IS DEAD LETTER

TEXAS BOOKMAKERS TO CONTINUE BUSINESS

MERELY CHANGE ITS FORM

WILL TRANSMIT MONEY BY WIRE TO THE VARIOUS RACE TRACKS

INT' RSTA. COMMERCE LAW

It Will Prevent Interference by the Texas Authorities With Their Operations.

Harry T. Huey Explains—Plan is on the Commission Basis

In the opinion of the best lawyers in Texas, the anti-pool bill which was enacted into a law by the last legislature and which it will be remembered, created a state-wide sensation at the time of its pendency and passage, is so far as it affects the mark aimed at—the bookmaker—a dead letter, of no more effect than if it never had been conceived. The bookmakers of the state so view it after consulting leading lawyers, and will continue to do business in Texas, although by reason of the passage of the anti-pool bill the form in which the business is done will undergo a change.

The only people hurt by the bill are the ones whom the legislators did not desire to hurt—the fair association.

"The anti-pool bill will not keep the people of Texas who feel so inclined from backing their choices in the races at the various tracks," said a leading Fort Worth lawyer yesterday.

A reporter for The Telegram at once called upon Harry T. Huey, owner of the White Elephant Turf Exchange, and asked him to explain his plans for the future in regard to his poolroom business.

MR. HUEY EXPLAINS

"There is only this to say," he said. "I will close my poolroom, in conformity with the anti-pool bill, on July 1, which is the date set for the law to become effective. However, on the advice of my lawyers, I will resume business in the near future on a commission basis. Immediately after July 1 I propose to go west and perfect arrangements to handle all the local business offering. I will not accept bets, but will handle the Texas business, as I say, on a commission basis—which means that I will place the money of local betters at eastern or northern tracks or poolrooms and charge them a commission for doing so.

"In brief, the new law will be beneficial to me, because I will be enabled by the managers of the poolrooms in Houston and San Antonio already have their plans arranged and will not close at all. They have established a telegraph system by which they will transmit all their Texas business to headquarters in Louisiana.

Mr. Huey said that he did not feel disposed at this time to take the public into his confidence further in regard to the plans of the bookmakers. It is understood, however, that under the interstate commerce law it will be impossible for the state authorities to interfere with the transmission of money from this state to other states to be placed upon races.

"We will charge a nominal sum for telegraphing the money, but the track will positively take no bets on our own accounts," said Mr. Huey.

RAILWAY MAIL CLERK IS ALSO AN AUTHOR

Homer M. Price, chief mail clerk at Dallas, is the author of the following interesting story, entitled "A Nixie Letter." The incident with which it deals came under his personal observation. It was written by Mr. Price for the Youth's Companion, in which paper it recently appeared. The Railway Mail, printed at Chicago, Ill., also published the story in the June issue.

Some strange things happen in the mail service. There was that "Nixie" letter that Mark Winston never sent to the dead letter office. It was the only time I ever knew the old man to fail to obey the regulations. He was a stickler about the rules, and when "breaking in" a new clerk—he broke in half the men in the division—he would always say, "Now, each an order may appear foolish. Well, it's no business of yours; the government is paying men big salaries to get up those rules. You follow them, no matter what the consequences."

Mark had joined the Confederate army when 18 years old, and had learned in that severe school to obey orders.

I had been his "helper" on the Southwestern Limited mail for nearly a year when he violated one of the plain regulations. True, he told the chief clerk about it as soon as he got to the end of his run, and that old fellow, being a man of the same kind as Winston, endorsed his action. But here is how it happened, and you can judge for yourself.

Mark and I were on train No. 3 that trip, and No. 3 is the hardest run in the Eleventh division of the railway mail service. It is work as hard as you can all night long, and then, half the time, turn over unworked mail to the sweet end clerks. On this trip, however, we had missed an important eastern connection, and were running light. Mark was standing in the side door of the car at Dallas after the night's run, getting a whiff of morning air while the train stopped at the Union depot.

Just before the train pulled out, a little lad, in a jaunty sailor suit, much worn but clean, came to the car door and looked up at Mark. He seemed to see something in the old man's face that encouraged him, for he fumbled in his pocket a moment, and then asked:

"Is this where you take letters?"

"This is the place, son. Have you a letter to mail?" said Mark, stooping down.

"Give it to me quick; the train's about to start."

Mark took the crumpled paper as the train started. The boy cried to him: "It's for grandpa!" Mark looked at it, and saw it was only a sheet of paper scrawled all over with a child's handwriting. When we had distributed our mail, he took it up, and adjusting his glasses, tried to read it. Presently he handed it to me, saying, "See if you can make that out. Your eyes are younger than mine."

I had hard work doing it, but finally I read aloud:

"Dear Grandpa: I want you to come and see me and mamma and bring us some money, 'cause mamma is sick, and the doctor says she won't get better unless she has something good to eat. Papa said 'fore he died that if me and mamma got into trouble for me to write to you for you had bushels of money in your bank on Canal street. I told mamma I was going to write you, and she said, 'No, no,' and just cried. I think she cries a heap when I ain't there, 'cause the pillow is just as wet, but when I ask her about it, she laughs and says I am a foolish boy to think she cries, and then she hugs me and says I am like papa. Mamma are strange, ain't they? I didn't know what to do about writing, for some said not to, but I told the doctor about it, and he said if my mamma told me to write to you before my mamma told me not to, that I must do what he said. And then papa said you was a good man, but didn't like him 'cause he took your girl, and mamma says you said you would never have anything more to do with her if she married him, and she did. But the doctor says you were just joking; and mamma lies there on the bed, so pale and pretty, and I ain't got any money to buy her any oranges, or nothing. So you come and bring lots of money and we will have a big time. I will wear a small blue ribbon so you will know I am Curtis Eastman, and you wear a big ribbon 'most ten feet long, so I will know you are Colonel Curtis. I will be at the depot every train."

From your loving,

"GRANDSON."

"That's a pretty good Nixie," I said, showing it into the box for illegible letters that we turned into the dead letter section at the end of every trip.

"Hand that to me," said Mark. "I am going to send that letter to its owner."

"How can you?" I asked. "It has neither address nor stamp. Besides, the regulations say that all matter of this class shall be 'nixied.' We must follow the regulations, no matter what the consequences. There are men—"

The old man grew impatient and stopped me with, "Is it possible you never heard of Silas Curtis, banker, Canal street, New Orleans? He's the biggest one there, and—about the regulations, why, sometimes you must use common sense—if you've got any."

"This is queer talk for you. I appeal from Winston, the whimsical, to Winston, the stickler for rules and regulations."

way, I believe the boy's letter will bring him."

In the return mail given to No. 4 at the meeting point was a letter addressed to Silas Curtis, New Orleans, Louisiana, marked "Personal," and bearing a special-delivery stamp. It contained the Nixie letter with the following note pinned to it:

"My Dear Sir: The enclosed letter was handed me at Dallas, this date, by a boy of about eight years. I have supplied the address and forward it to you. Should you be unable to come, wire me at Fort Worth. Respectfully,

"MARK WINSTON,
Railway Postal Clerk."

Going east that night, it was very dark when the train pulled into the Union depot at Dallas, and rain was falling. Through the mist and fog the lights shone murky and dismal. Few people were around the station, and few passengers entered or left the train.

Mark and I stood in the side door and looked out at the few comers and goers, just as the train was nearly ready to start, we saw the boy who had given Mark the letter that morning coming away from the coaches, carefully folding a bit of blue ribbon. His face showed great disappointment.

In an instant Mark was out of the car and at the boy's side. He put his arm around him, and then the bell sounded. I helped the old man back into the car almost out of breath.

"Children are so unreasonable!" he said. "Now that little chap expected his grandfather here within ten hours after he had written him, and on an east-bound train, at that. I thought I would tell him he was too early, that was all."

During the night I saw Mark making some figures and talking to himself.

"Yes, he can get to Dallas on our return trip, and should be on our train. I told the boy so, and if he doesn't come—but, phaw, he will come!"

Mark was restless the next day at Texarkana, slept little, and looked fagged out that night when we started west again. When we reached Marshall at about midnight, where we connected with No. 53 from New Orleans, Mark got out and went back where the passengers were boarding the train.

When he returned and it came his turn to take a sleep of an hour or so, he was nervous and restless. A little later I heard him say out loud:

"Well, I'm a big fool! Never thought about that through sleeper. Of course it was just hitched on to our train. There's where a banker would ride."

The morning fog was lifting when our train rolled into the station at Dallas. The boys were offering morning newspapers, and the enterprising hackmen were soliciting patronage; the platform was crowded with a gay throng on their way to a picnic at Eagle Ford.

The police had their hands full trying to preserve order and keep the crowd moving. Mark Winston stood oblivious of them, and looked and looked.

His face began to get hard, and his fingers tightened on the iron rod that served as a hand-hold on the mail car door. The crowd surged this way and that, and it began to look dangerous for the women and children. Mark swung himself forward into the crowd without a word. Five minutes later he came pushing back, disheveled and angry.

He was just opening his mouth to say something unpleasant, when, high perched on an old man's shoulders appeared the boy. The old man wore a blue ribbon of gigantic proportions, and the child and grandparent alike were laughing and happy.

Mark was turning to enter the car when the little fellow cried:

"That's the man I gave the letter to, and the one you sent me the money by!" I held Mark by the arm, and the old man came to the car and grasped his hand.

The locomotive bell was ringing, and there were tears in the eyes of both old men, as the elder said:

"I will get even with you for this, you old veteran!"

As the train moved out of the depot we looked after them. The Canal street banker still held the boy upon his shoulders high above the crowd, and the morning sun shone brightly on the resplendent ribbon.

NEW CURE FOR CANCER

French Doctors Discover That Roentgen Rays Heal

(Copyright, 1903, by W. R. Hearst.) PARIS, June 20.—(Special Cable.)—Two doctors of Lille claim to have discovered a real cure for cancer by means of treatment with the Roentgen rays. The doctors do not wish to have their names published as yet, but they are said to belong to the medical college of Lille.

In applying the X-rays they use a very feeble current, and what are called soft bulbs. By applying the bulbs to the affected parts of a woman patient pain was relieved as if by a miracle after three minutes. By repeating the application, each time for only three minutes, a scar is soon formed over the wound, the tumor diminishes and the crust falls off in a few days, leaving the wound entirely cicatrized.

In a case where they treated cancer of the internal organs, the patient being sixty-five years old, vomiting was stopped on the first application. After seven applications of three minutes each the woman was perfectly cured. A number of other patients have been submitted to the treatment, and the doctors are waiting to see if the cure will be permanent.

The Coming Of Lipton.

Next to a lovely woman, a smiling baby and a perfect rose, the most beautiful thing in the world is a vessel under full sail.

And the most beautiful form of vessel is a yacht.

We are a little past the half-century celebration of the triumph of steam over wind as the motive power of the sea. We see and read about the great steel hulks, behold them breaking records every year, gaze with wonder at their increasing size and power.

There is so much of it that we forget that, in spite of the tremendous growth of steam, the sail has not yet lost its hold or its fascination.

True, the sail vessels are much smaller, but still there are ten times more of them than there are of steamships, although thousands of them do not figure in the maritime statistics.

Nothing can take away the charm of sailing. It is born in us. The winds invite it. The movement itself is different and altogether more delightful. There is nothing more prosaic than sitting on a steam craft and knowing that you are moving by machinery.

Even the vast engines of war, the cruisers and the battle-ships, are distressingly like commonplace factories afloat. They run as regularly as cars and their life is as humdrum as that of a hotel.

But in sailing we have daring, adventure, skill and chance and the feeling of love and of sport between the sailor and the boat which no mere hulk of machinery can ever supply.

Thus it happens that the international yacht race means interest and thrill in every part of the country.

Because a man lives in the interior, far from the seacoast, is no reason why he should not be as much concerned in it as his compatriot who is never a mile from salt water.

Indeed, it is a curious fact that the most ardent lovers of the sea are those from inland places, and the manager of the greatest steamship line in the world told the writer of this the other day that most of the applicants for places on his ships came from the Far West. It is another interesting fact that many of our Secretaries of the Navy and of those who have done much to build up the new fleets live nearer the Mississippi river than the Atlantic ocean.

But independent of this universal tendency the contest itself has enough historic importance to enlist the attention of every good American.

It was fifty-two years ago. The first great world's fair in history was going on in London. All the yachting worthy of the name was English. Only two American yachts had ever crossed the ocean. The British simply ridiculed the idea of possible competition.

But on August 22, 1851, the fateful moment came.

Eighteen vessels, representing the swiftest sailing craft of the British Isles, were there. A schooner-yacht, America, had come across the ocean. They laughed at her. It was another case of Yankee presumption. So little did they respect her that the invitation for her entrance into the competition had been delayed until common politeness forced it. And, of course, they thought she would end in mortified lonesomeness.

In one respect, at least, their expectations were realized. She did end very lonesomely, but she left the mortification to be divided up among the 18 competitors, who were so far behind that at one time not a single one of the whole squadron was in sight of the American vessel.

After this, Commodore Stevens, who commanded her, rubbed the mortification in a bit by offering to race anything the British people had to offer for any sum up to 10,000 guineas, and as an answer to the general derision that passed around the British Isles, one boat did attempt conclusions with the America, only to be defeated with great ease and much thoroughness.

There have been 12 international races.

From 1851 to 1870 none occurred, but in 1870 the British tried to lift the cup. In the 11 contests, the Americans have invariably won. In two they had a walk-over. One race was won on a foul. The only single race won by the English in all the sailing was on October 19, 1871, when the English Livonia was ahead, but the American boats took all the other four races of the series. In many respects the last race was the closest, and this fact gives a zest to the events of the present summer.

Undoubtedly Sir Thomas Lipton himself adds to the interest of the occasion. In reality he is not the ideal sportsman which we generally look for from the English race. In his make-up and his success he seems to belong more to America than to the other side of the pond. He is a self-made man, and his millions are a good monument to the value of advertising. He has built himself on newspaper publicity until his name is as well known as that of royalty itself and until the King is among his friends and guests.

He represents opportunity. Those people who think that he is throwing away a fortune in competing for the cup make a great mistake. All that he has spent for it is worth a premium of a hundred per cent. in advertising.

He does it generously and well, because it always pays to do things in a big way.

Whether he wins or loses the cup, he gains much by the attempt. It is possibly unfortunate that there is not the same single personality on the American side of the contest, but just so our boat wins quibbling would be both ungracious and ungrateful.

Sir Thomas Lipton has fully realized the value of the thing.

What, may be asked, is the material return to this country? Why should millions be spent for a race of sailboats in an age of steam?

The answer is easy. Before we began to get really interested in yacht racing, we did not have a navy worthy of the name. There was no sentiment for it, and as long as the sentiment did not exist Congress had no desire to pour out the millions.

But gradually the change has come, and today such men as Captain Mahan and other level-headed observers and historians will tell you that the development of our navy and the new stimulus in America's shipping are very closely connected with the contests that take place between the yachts of Great Britain and the United States.

So it has come to pass that the silver cup for which Reliance and Shamrock III. will make the thirteenth international contest is the most famous and the most important trophy amid all the things that can be won in the world.

Other competitions we have in abundance. Our athletes have met with the English athletes, our sports have had their international trials, and all of these have shown climatic differences and the variations of racial standards.

But on the sea these handicaps do not exist. Salt water is the freest and fairest field under Heaven, and the country that can win thus reaches the highest victory that the world can offer.

Leadership in most things now belongs to the United States. In wealth, in industries, in political advancement, in wide-visioned statesmanship, in diplomatic influence, Uncle Sam, holds all the records.

He, too, still holds the cup, and no good American wants Sir Thomas Lipton to lift it, even though his victory might add to the record the spice of variety.

The Latest Fashion Fancie

Paris fashions - Gowns of Linen and Lace

Linen is a material that has only recently— that is, within the last year or two— become popular for summer wear, but its popularity is now well established, and advisedly so, as the virtue of linen as a summer fabric has not sooner become known. But with the exception of the linen dusters that were worn by both men and women, and the natural colored linen gowns with a lot of glaze to them that were in fashion a good many years ago, it has never met with success.

The old fashioned linens were very heavy, with the exception of the kind already referred to. Heavy crash was especially in demand for a little while, but soon proved valueless on account of its weight, which made it appear as though it were as warm as a wool gown. The many different weaves in fashion now are almost without exception light in weight. Some are more closely woven than others, some have more of a polished surface (these are not the most fashionable), others have a little figure or design through them and look almost like plaids. The majority are in white, but there are also colored linens that are very smart in plain effects or in white with colored lines, pink dots or some small embroidered pattern worn in the material.

There are two or three distinct styles in black is introduced, with a white embroidery or a black and white fine cord, but somehow these lack the delicateness and smartness of those all one color. The pale blue linens with the white lace, of course, have the contrast between the white and blue. It is a pale shade of blue, and the white is not too glaring in effect against it, while the pink is relieved by the contrast of white. In the all one color linen robes are to be seen laces of the same shade, and in the green linens especially are medallions of the lace or outline embroidery and all in the same, very dainty and cool in appearance and essentially artistic in the harmony of coloring.

Under the head of linen gowns come the linen batistes that are so sheer and fine that they hardly seem heavier, if as heavy as the fine lace or embroidery with which they are trimmed. Although the embroidery or the linen batistes exhibits some of the very finest work that has ever been seen, or at least seen for very many years, and is associated in one's mind with the embroidery on the finest lingerie or pocket handkerchiefs, this is an age of luxury that is evidenced in nothing more than dress, and consequently there is a craze for this fine and beautiful handwork.

Dark blue linen gowns have not been so fashionable the last two or three years, principally because the heavier qualities of denims were so much used for the cheapest

The Healthful And Savory Onion.

Eat onions in May. And all the year after physicians may pray.

So runs the old couplet, whose truth has been crystallized from the experience of centuries.

Way back in Egypt land the value of the onion was held to be so great that the Egyptian priests deified it and used it in their worship of Isis, while the common folk showed their appreciation by devouring it in such vast quantities that one of the pyramids contained an inscription recording the enormous sum required to furnish the workmen with onions and garlic during its construction.

A salad of cucumber and sliced onion or of shaved cabbage and onion rings is delicious dressed with a plain French dressing or a mayonnaise, while an oriental bean and onion salad always calls for "some sazin." To make it, peel and slice 10 medium-sized white onions very fine. Pour cold water on them, let them stand an hour, then press hard with the hand to remove the strong taste. Drain well. Put into the salad bowl a pint and a half of cold boiled or baked beans. Add the sliced onion, a teaspoonful and a half of salt, a scant teaspoonful of pepper, three teaspoonfuls of olive oil, one teaspoonful of white sugar and a half cup of vinegar, not Terragon. Toss and mix lightly, but thoroughly, with a fork, garnish with olives and hard-boiled eggs sliced and serve on lettuce leaves. As a necessary adjunct to most soups and dressings the onion has no equal; the essential in this case being that "sauce suspected" it shall "animate the whole." For a salad, where just a suspicion of the flavor is desired, the best may be rubbed with a slice of onion or a clove of garlic. Do the same with the meat plate before transferring the steak to it. Slices of onion laid on slices of fish for an hour before cooking impart a fine flavor, and a thin bit of minced onion or onion juice is a great improvement to the dish of breakfast hash. To extract the onion juice press the cut sides of a raw onion against a grater, move it slowly and the juice will run off the corner of the grater. A few drops of the juice will go a long way in the flavoring. The grater may be cleaned afterward by using cold water and a little brush, while if the onion is held carefully, no odor will be left on the fingers.

Baked onions are often relished by invalids or convalescents, and are allowed in salutations when other forms of cooking are tabooed. Bake in their skins until thoroughly tender, the center being steamed in its own juices. When ready to serve remove the outer jacket, butter and season.

Stuffed onions furnish a delicious entree, or may serve as the supper hot dish. For this purpose get the Bermuda or large Spanish onion. Peel, cook in boiling salted water a few moments, but not long enough to lose their shape. Cut in halves, take out the heart and fill the cavity with a force meat made of bread crumbs, moistened, well seasoned and combined with bits of cold meat or grated cheese.

Pack all that you can get in and bake in a moderate oven, basting often with gravy or melted butter.

For scalloped onions peel, cut in halves, parboil, then cook in boiling salted water until tender but firm. Drain carefully, place in a shallow baking dish, well buttered, sprinkle with salt and pepper, dot with butter and cover with fine bread crumbs. On these layers until the dish is full, having the last layer of crumbs moistened with melted butter. Pour over them rich milk, with a teaspoonful of flour blended for each cup of milk, and place in the oven until rich brown. Grated cheese may be added if desired.

Liver and onions is a Turk preserve to become well known in this country. Buy calf's liver and have the butcher cut it in pieces about an inch square. Slice about half the quantity of onions very thin; mix together, salt and pepper, and having a good lump of butter in the frying pan, well browned, stir in the liver and onion, spreading it evenly and think over the bottom of the pan; slip a knife under to prevent scorching, turn over, so as to brown both sides, and when well cooked turn on a hot platter, garnish with parsley or cress, and serve hot.

Breakfast and Onions (adapted from the Turk). While the Turk uses a spit, the gridiron is the next best alternative. Prepare the steak the night before using, by pounding with a blunt, heavy carving knife, and rolling it up with three or four chopped onions inside, to impart the desired flavor. Put in the ice box overnight, and in the morning broil quickly over a brisk fire, turning frequently. While broiling have a hot frying pan ready, with a little butter, and turn into it two or three onions sliced thin. Shake and stir rapidly until crisp and a delicate brown. Lay the meat on a hot platter, season with salt and pepper, add bits of butter and the sliced onion and serve.

In the old fashioned list of household remedies the onion played an important part, and its efficacy remains unimpaired. The high percentage of sulphur which it contains makes it most effectual as a blood purifier and a complexion tonic, but to attain these results it must be eaten daily. For earache, the heart of a roasted onion wrapped in a piece of thin muslin and laid in the ear, or a poultice made of boiled onion, meal and the water in which the onion was cooked, proves a sovereign remedy.

Our Day Growing Longer.

The earth revolves on its axis once in 24 hours at present, yet millions of years ago it completed a revolution in a day of about five hours. It could revolve no faster than this and remain a single, unbroken mass.

Now, when our day was about five hours long, the moon, so astronomers tell us, was in contact with the surface of the earth. It had just broken away from the parent mass, but as our length of the terrestrial day increased so did the distance of the moon.

Whenever the rotation time of a planet is shorter than the period of the revolution of its satellite the effect of their mutual action is to accelerate the motion of the satellite and to compel it to move in an increased orbit—to amplify its distance.

So now our day is shorter than the month—the period of revolution of the moon. Our satellite, therefore, is slowly receding from us, and it has been moving away for thousands of centuries. But the day of the earth is growing longer.

So long as the terrestrial day is shorter than the lunar month the moon will continue to recede from us. In time, so many millions of years hence that they almost defy computation, our day will be a month long and the moon will be lost to space.

A French philosopher once said that the passage of time is like the wind, and that we can only feel its presence when it is blowing against us. In this sense, the day is a wind that is blowing against us, and we can only feel its presence when it is blowing against us.

Vassar College Inn.

Vassar College has an inn. It has not yet had time to gather the traditions and associations that have stolen into song and story and into the hearts of the alumni of Yale and other sister colleges, but it has its picturesque features, and every day it is becoming more and more strongly identified with the college life.

Many these persons have proposed establishing a college inn, but the Vassar Inn is a unique one in its kind. It is a building of the highest quality, and it is situated in the heart of the college campus. It is a building of the highest quality, and it is situated in the heart of the college campus.

Safe From Summer Complaints

All mammas, and papas too, for that matter, dread the heat of summer with its danger for the little folks, especially the babies. It is simply heart-breaking to read year after year about the great death rate among children caused by the summer's heat. Yet it is easy to protect the infants against all summer complaints, because we know that all these fearful perils have their beginning in stomach and bowel troubles, and we have a perfect family medicine that will keep the delicate machinery in a child's body clean, regular and in healthy working order in the hottest weather—CASCARETS Candy Cathartic. The plump, bouncing, crowing baby shown here is a CASCARET baby. He feels that way winter and summer. Nursing mammas take a CASCARET at bedtime, and it makes their mother's milk mildly purgative and keeps the baby just right. Older children like to take the fragrant, sweet little candy tablet, and are safe from colic, gripes, diarrhoea, summer rash, prickly heat, and all the mean troubles that summer brings with it.

DAILY SHORT STORY

DENICE THE DEVINE STORY.

BY RALPH ENDERLY
Daddy Edwards, after my journey half across England to see you? Why you are dumb! and I—I am so tired!"
"Your dear Denice—forgive me!—you've improved so out of all knowledge that, as you say, I am literally struck dumb."
"Thanks, most reverend Daddy! your professional offspring dutifully appreciates the compliment!"
Then the dainty little lady cast a furtively inquisitive glance at Marston. The manager intercepted it, and forthwith introduced the "leading man" to the newcomer.
"Marston—this is Denice Hope our only hope now, if she will not mind my making a bad joke. This Denice, is Sidney Marston, my 'leading man' and my friend."

Without any further trouble in this direction, Sidney Marston taking upon himself at the manager's request, to facilitate Denice back to her hotel.
Neither of them saw a dark browed, evil expression pan shadowing them from a safe distance.
Although Sidney Marston was undeniably smitten with the charms of the fair Denice, called in every tongue the "Devine," the conversation of the actor and actress was of the most commonplace and conventional character.
The shadower, however, evidently clenched his hands, and muttered intelligibly.
Sidney parted from his companion at the hotel entrance, and turned immediately to retrace his steps.
This, in a dozen yards or so, brought him face to face with Trevelyan.
Whether it was his new-born interest in Denice that prompted him; or whether it was just an idea with him, that the stranger was taking an unwarrantable liberty in forcing his unwelcome attentions upon the actress, Marston peremptorily stopped him and gave him a bit of his mind.
"Look here, Mr. Trevelyan—if that is your name, I don't want to threaten you, but if I catch you molesting or annoying Miss Hope in any way, I promise you it will not be good for you. Good morning!"

BUSINESS MEN COMBINED TO TELL THE WORLD

SAN FRANCISCO, May 25, 1903.—To H. T. Pangburn & Co.—Dear Sirs: There are daily occurrences in this city that ought to be known all over the world. A guileless old gentleman, an octogenarian, a distant relative of Robert Fulton of first steamship fame, has saved the lives of hundreds (probably thousands) after they were believed to be beyond human aid. His discovery is undoubtedly the long-sought cure for Bright's Disease and Diabetes.
This is not easy of belief and it is the purpose of a number of business and professional men of this city (of whom I am one) to tell the people. You are hereby authorized to tell the hundreds in your city whose kidney diseases have become chronic and who fear they are incurable, that nearly nine-tenths of them can recover. Among the business men whose giving moral and financial support, and who would give neither if the above was not strictly true, are: Hon. D. M. Burns, president Candelaria Mining Company; Edward Mills, president Bullock & Jones Company; Captain Roberts, president Boca and Loyalton R. R. Co.; Thos. Kirkpatrick, capitalist; D. E. Bender, capitalist; W. C. Price, capitalist; William Sharp, capitalist; C. W. Clark, capitalist, and many others. The pamphlets herewith are to be given to all inquirers without charge. Yours truly, A. E. SHATTUCK, President Pacific States Type Foundry.
