

How Sickness Starts In The Inside Nerves

Most forms of sickness start with the inside nerves. Indigestion, sour stomach, heartburn, dyspepsia—weak kidneys, diabetes, Bright's Disease—Liver irregularities—Heart irregularities—Bowel irregularities—all of these ailments, and the ailments which they, in turn, bring on, are due directly to derangements of certain nerve centers.

Understand first that we have two entirely separate nerve systems. When we walk, or talk, or act, we call into play a certain set of nerves—nerves which obey our mental commands. That is why the arm can be raised, or the mouth opened, or the eye shut, at the slightest desire. That is why your fingers can delicately pick up a pin one moment, and hold a heavy hammer the next.

But these are not the nerves we are to consider here. There is another set of nerves which control and govern and actuate the heart and the stomach, the kidneys and the liver and all of the vital functions. You cannot control these nerves. By no supreme effort of mind can you make your heart stop or start—nor can you even make it vary by a single beat a minute. And so with the stomach and the liver and the kidneys and the bowels—they are automatic—they do their work at a certain set speed whether you are awake or asleep—whether you will it or not.

Don't you, who do not know medicine at all, see that this is wrong? That it is mere patchwork? That while the suffering organ is enjoying its temporary relief, the nerve that is really sick may be getting worse and worse? Does this not explain to you why relapse so frequently follows a supposed cure? Is this not an account for the uncertainty of medicine?

More than thirty years ago this thought came to me: "If life and health depend upon perfect heart action, upon proper stomach digestion, upon correct kidney filtering why does not life itself depend upon these life governing power nerves—these inside nerves. I realized, too, that all ailments which result from one cause may, of course, be cured by one remedy. I resolved not to doctor the organs but to treat the one nerve system which operates them all.

For those who treat only the symptoms need a different remedy for each. Such treatments are only palliative; the results do not last. A cure can never come in disease of the stomach, heart, liver or kidneys, until the inside nerve power is restored. When that is done, Nature removes the symptoms. There is no need of doctoring them.

Why heat melts ice. Nor do I claim a discovery. For every detail of my treatment is based on truths so fundamental that none can deny them. And every ingredient of my medicine is as old as the hills it grows on. I simply applied the truths and combined the ingredients into a remedy that is practically certain.

But my years of patient experiment will avail you nothing if you do not accept my offer. For facts and reason and even belief will not cure. Only the remedy can do that. In eighty thousand communities—in more than a million homes, Dr. Shoop's Restorative is known. There are those all around you—your friends and neighbors, perhaps—whose suffering it has relieved. There is no physician anywhere who dares tell you I am wrong in the new medical principles which I apply. Your own common sense will tell you to treat not the ailing organ, but the nerve that controls it. And for six solid years my remedy has stood the severest tests of its limitless belief.

Will you accept this opportunity to learn at my expense absolutely, how to be rid forever of all forms of illness which are caused by inside nerve weakness? Do not let me hear of your delay or doubt. I say "simply write and ask." I will send you an order on your druggist which he will accept as gladly as he would accept a dollar. He will hand you from his shelves a standard sized bottle of my prescription, and he will send the bill to me.

My FREE Dollar Offer Any sick one who has not tried my remedy may have a Full Dollar's Worth Free. I ask no deposit, no reference, no security. There is nothing to pay, either now or later. I will send you an order on your druggist which he will accept in full payment for a regular, standard size dollar bottle. And he will send the bill to me. C. I. SHOOP, M.D.

Diplomacy--A Study In Character

Though "Diplomacy" has been a classic dramatic offering for many years many theater-goers, both young and old, saw it for the first time during the engagement that closed last night. It is difficult to discover even in a short time why this earliest of the Sardou plays has held an undisputed place with the best stage has to offer. It is true that this revival touring the south has two accomplished artists in the leading roles. With Rose Coghlan as the Russian adventuress and Howard Kyle the English Diplomat, favorable attention is commanded at the rising of the curtain. As the play unfolds the wonderful dexterity in the management of stage values and the still more wonderful grasp of the hidden processes of character expression become absorbing.

President Diehl Received Communication Calling for Support of Measures

That the present exertions of Railroad Roosevelt to secure supervision of railroad rates by amending the interstate commerce act is in a large measure due to the efforts of the Travelers' Protective Association is shown in the circular letter received by State President George Diehl from the national officer, Horace C. Starr, calling upon the members of the organization to urge their representatives in congress to work for the passage of the measure.

The report of a committee which visited the presidents to suggest the matter is contained in the report. The membership of the organization in this state is about fifteen hundred. The communication is as follows: "There are a number of bills before congress to amend the interstate commerce act, either by giving the commission enlarged powers or creating other tribunals, to the end that the making of rates for transportation shall not remain entirely vested with the carriers.

FAMOUS OLDTIME MINSTREL TO TELL HIS LIFE STORY

Billy Williams, Known to Thousands of Theater-Goers, Will Relate Story of Experiences Behind the Footlights During Twenty-five Years, at Entertainment in City Hall Tomorrow Evening

Billy Williams, at one time the most famous minstrel on the American stage, but who for the past few years has been conducting a school of dramatic art in Denver, and who recently came to this city, seeking the southern climate for his health, will lecture at the city hall Monday evening.

Misfortune, in one sense of the word, has seemed to follow Billy Williams, it having been his fate to find himself in different parts of the United States at times when either a pestilence was raging or there was a great catastrophe of some kind.

During the great yellow fever plague in Memphis, Tenn., in 1878, Billy Williams' minstrel troupe was quarantined in the town. Williams at that time was a young fellow and had just inherited a small fortune, something near $100,000.

When the Galveston storm occurred he gave a benefit entertainment in Colorado, raising a good sum, which was placed in the hands of the Galveston relief fund committee.

Tomorrow night at the city hall this man of varied career, who has won and given away a fortune, will tell of his many and interesting experiences in his travels as an actor.

The association has headquarters in New York, but has chapters in almost every important city in the United States. When a show starts on the road, postals are sent to the chaplains from headquarters, telling them to extend a helping hand to the members of the company in case the production be a moral one and worthy of the help of the organization. The Actors' Alliance has done much toward elevating the stage and has served to remove the prejudice of those who were of the opinion that theatrical folk were all immoral and the stage the road to ruin.

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL

Few People Know How Useful It is in Preserving Health and Beauty.

Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, drinking or after eating onions and other odorous vegetables.

Charcoal effectively clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powdered Willoughby charcoal, and other harmless anti-septics in tablet form or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon give you a much improved condition of the body, better health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but on the contrary, a great benefit.

A Buffalo physician in speaking of the benefits of charcoal, says: 'I advise Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat; I also believe the liver is greatly benefited by the daily use of them; they cost but twenty-five cents a box at drug stores, and although in some sense a patent preparation, yet I believe I get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets.'

STATE ORATORICAL CONTEST ARRANGED

Representatives of Texas Institutions Are to Meet Here in April

On April 21 the state intercollegiate oratorical contest will be held at Greenwood's opera house in this city. At that time representatives from the Fort Worth University, Baylor College and Texas Christian University of Waco, Southwestern University of Georgetown, Trinity University at Waxahachie, Austin College at Sherman and the Agricultural and Mechanical College will assemble in this city to deliver orations for state supremacy.

The orators from the different schools will be accompanied by large delegations of students, coming to support their champions. The winner of the contest will represent Texas in the all-south oratorical contest to be held at Monticello, Tenn., in August.

Fred McArthur, president of the Oratorical Society at the Fort Worth university, is busy making arrangements for a contest which will be held at the university in February, which will decide the school representative in the state contest.

The following students at the university will enter the local contest: T. T. Carrard, C. L. Smith, Jerome Bentley, Alvin H. Wheeler, H. A. McGregor, J. S. Payton and J. S. Jackson.

HE BELIEVES FATHER GOPON WAS KILLED

Friend of Russia Priest Says He Would Not Remain in Hiding if He Were Alive

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Jan. 28.—George Rogovoy, who was a member of the imperial orchestra in St. Petersburg and who fled that country to escape being forced into the army and sent to Manchuria, came to this city and joined the Symphony Orchestra. He and Father Gopon were close friends in St. Petersburg. Rogovoy often visited Father Gopon and he was well acquainted with his sister.

'I am satisfied that Father Gopon, or rather Agafouff, which is his real name, is dead,' said Rogovoy. 'I am fully convinced that he lost his life on that awful day at the head of his people, whom he so dearly loved and who so dearly loved him. He is not the man to hide or to stay in hiding. He would be among his people and strengthen them publicly everywhere, if alive.'

Rogovoy has a small crucifix and chain which Father Gopon gave him when they parted in St. Petersburg, which he values highly, although he is himself a Jew.

'Poor Gopon clung to me at parting. He knew we both felt it was to be our last parting.'

SANTOS-DUMONT HAS NEW AIRSHIP SCHEME

Will Keep Gas in Balloon Hot, and Endeavor to Make Long Aerial Voyage

LONDON, Jan. 28.—Santos-Dumont is shortly to announce a new airship which he is constructing according to a new system. The friends of the young Brazilian are endeavoring to persuade him to abandon his intention of using the airship, as they fear that if he uses the new balloon he will meet his death. The airship is designed to combine the strength of the Century-Montgolfier system of heated air with a modern gas inflated balloon. Santos-Dumont argues that with the heated air thus supplementing the gas lost by ascending and by solar heat, he will be enabled to remain in flight several days, which will gratify his ambition to hold the record for remaining the longest period in the air. Scientific aeronauts point out that the petroleum stove required to keep his air hot can not fail to attract the gas necessarily escaping from the balloon and that as soon as the gas comes in contact with the flame an explosion will come, causing death and this will be the end of the Brazilian's career, and they advise the use of simpler contrivances. Santos-Dumont has replied that his stove being protected by a metal sheet surrounding it, he is safe, but experts declare the protection inadequate against emanations of gas, and that while Santos-Dumont may escape a few times with his usual luck, he has but to experiment in good earnest with his new toy and aeronauts may prepare for a big funeral.

ENGLISH GRAND OPERA COMING TO FORT WORTH

WITH SAVAGE GRAND OPERA CO.

Fort Worth music lovers look forward with more than ordinary interest to the coming of George W. Savage's English grand opera company, which will appear at Greenwood's opera house Friday and Saturday, Feb. 10 and 11.

The coming of this company to Texas is a daring venture on the part of Mr. Savage, who organized the company this season and comes south direct from a successful series of engagements in Boston, New York and other eastern cities.

While in Fort Worth the company will give "Tannhauser," "Carmen," "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci," four of the most popular operas which belong within the pale of the exclusively "grand." If the general interest which has been aroused by the announcement of Savage's company coming is a good indication, all its performances will be before crowded houses. Such an opportunity of hearing grand opera in English and sung by soloists of international reputation has never before been offered Fort Worth.

RAIN AGGRAVATES CONDITION

Imperfect Gutters and Lack of Curbing About City Hall Seen at Their Worst

Rainy weather is but serving to aggravate the condition of the city hall property, the lack of proper curbing and gutters increasing the mud spots that must be crossed in passing the property in going from the business center of the city to the postoffice.

The pool of water extending across Throckmorton street directly in front of the building has been increased in size, while the water passing directly in front of the main entrance effectively precluded crossing without wetting of feet. The efforts of citizens to bring about an amelioration of the conditions are continuing unabated, new names being constantly added to the petition on the subject which is as follows:

UNIVERSITY REVIVAL SERVICES President MacAdam is personally conducting a two weeks' revival meeting at the Fort Worth University, assisted by the university faculty. Several students have already joined the Christian association as a result of the meeting. Professor Pease is conducting the singing. The meetings will continue through this week.

REVIEW OF THE WEEK
Receipts have been at top notch in all markets. Hogs made a new record, reaching 15,400, beating last week's receipts, which were the record, by 5,100. The cattle run touched 14,800, an increase of 4,000, the highest in both instances for the year. Conditions have been good in the cattle market. The week's close finds steers strong with an active demand. Fat cows strong to the higher, with medium cows steady. Fancy vealers are strong, as are also heavy calves. The latter are quoted 15c higher by buyers. A good market in hogs for the week up to the closing day. By successive stages hogs advanced a dime for the week by Friday. Then under the pressure of large receipts of undesirable stuff added by the loss of 10c or more at northern points, the week-end market here took on a decline. The razor-backs, thirty-one cars of which were in the pens yesterday, dropped from 25c to 50c on pigs and light hogs. This carried down heavy hogs 10c, the end of the market was made amid a wholesale slashing of prices. Sheep prices for the week have been maintained steady. Several hundred were sold Saturday at $4 to $4.25, according to quality. The horse market has been active at steady prices for cotton mules and bunnings. Some fifteen loads were sold, the majority of which went to states east of the Mississippi.

COTTON
NEW ORLEANS, LA., Jan. 28.—Cotton had a good day in the local market; closing at a net advance for the week of 7 points. New York showed a like gain. Spots were unchanged here, but closed 15 down in New York. Today's total advance amounted to 13 points, being attributed to covering by shorts and heavy buying by Western interests at New York. Little disposition to sell was shown by the commission houses, at New York, however, some selling orders being apparent around 81. The temperate view of the situation taken by the convention here and the declaration that some falling off must be expected by the farmers before the results of their holding and reduction campaign are apparent has done much to strengthen belief in their sincerity and is having a good effect. Locally the market opened easy on a less favorable Liverpool cable than was expected at 6.57c. The opening, however, was the low point for the day, the advance being a steady one until the close. May followed with a steady advance, the bulls having a good day's work.

GRAIN
CHICAGO, Ill., Jan. 28.—Wheat closed 2-1/16c above yesterday, the change for the week showing a net advance of 1 7/8c. July followed May steadily, the difference between the options being about maintained. Little activity was noted, business seeming to be confined to room trading. Today's advance started shortly after the opening, its steadiness being

N. Y. STOCKS
NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—Strength in the stock 3-dollars developed in almost rampant liberality before the close of the short session. The quietness at the opening appeared to be due to the lack of any specially stimulating news features. In a general way the advices from Russia were more encouraging to financial interests and the official admission of yesterday that the proposed Russian loan in Paris was to be indefinitely postponed also gave more confidence with the regard to the future of monetary conditions. It is probable that sentiment was influenced prominently by the great advance in North Sea securities on the curb, for it was inferred from this that a decision in the

PETER SMITH MONUMENT
Final Steps for Its Erection to Be Taken at Meeting During This Week
Final steps for the erection of a monument to the memory of John Peter Smith will be taken during the week. Some months ago a movement was started to raise a fund among the realtors to be used in erecting a fitting monument, but for some time nothing tangible has been done. About the first of the new year Captain B. B. Paddock constituted himself a committee of one to raise the necessary money by subscription. Captain Paddock, referring to this matter Saturday, said: "I am pleased to announce that I have met with gratifying success. His friends and admirers have responded liberally. A meeting of the subscribers to the fund will be called some time this week to perfect arrangements to carry the purpose to completion. "I know there are a large number of citizens of Fort Worth whom I have not seen who would be pleased to contribute to this fund. The more money received the more handsome will be the shaft to be erected, and none would

The Secret of Grace Lies in Perfect Care of My Lady's Foot

By Margaret Vance Gaerney

The Greek Goddesses at Play

Care in drying the Foot

Then comes the Foot Tonic and Powder

The care of the Nail is important . . .

A brisk rub restores circulation .

TO CARE FOR AND IMPROVE THE FOOT

Every once in a while we hear some new phase, some novel development of the barefoot craze; but soon it drops out of public interest and public view. And why? Well, one shrewdly suspects because the feet themselves are not "fit for publication," that the following up of the barefoot craze would bring to light unsightly and distorted feet, feet that depart so markedly from the classical standard that their owners are too ashamed to exhibit them, even under the guise of health seeking, and of physical culture fads.

That the importance of paying due attention to the foot is underestimated there is no manner of doubt. The girl who will visit the manicure's regularly, who will have hair and scalp scientifically treated and taken care of, who goes in for face massage and all the rest of it, she is very likely to neglect her feet, and think that because they are not on public view they don't matter in the least.

One might talk at length about the anatomical importance of the feet; about its sixty-four little bones, its network of nerves, its delicate veins and blood vessels, without making the slightest impression; but just refer only once to the discomfort which an ill-fitting shoe, a tight or short stocking induces, speak feelingly of the causes that lead to corns and bunions, of the hobbling gait of the girl who has deliberately maimed her feet by wearing the wrong shoe, and at once you have an interested and eager audience.

Fundamentally—and this is no joke or pun—the foot is really the secret and foundation of all bodily grace; and full as much care and attention should be paid to its well being as any other part of the body.

And first and foremost, just make up your mind that you are going to be good to your feet. Study them, coax and caress them into shapeliness and softness, let them be as pink and white as are your hands, and take due care of the toenails. The foot that is well cared for does not show blemishes and disfigurements; but there is no part of the body, not even a delicate complexion, that will sooner resent neglect, and "rub it in," so to speak, as will the foot.

The first point is cleanliness, an angelic cleanliness. The million tiny pores of the skin are closer in the foot than on any other part of the body; and if the skin is to fulfill all of its physiological functions those little pores must be kept with open mouths all the time.

The foot bath should be warm, never hot; the soap dissolves in the water, and a tablespoonful of violet or other toilet ammonia will prove decidedly refreshing. Scrub the foot well with a brush, and scrub extra vigorously between the toes. Here the skin is naturally more delicate because of lack of exposure, it sheds quicker, and the dried skin requires to be removed often.

Scrub the soles well, too; and then rinse off the foot in clear water, just as warm as the first. Dry it well, patting off the excess moisture, with a coarse huckaback or Turkish towel.

Now is the time, after the skin is soft and dry and clean to attend to those blemishes which are a part and parcel of the usual foot. Pass the fingers over the entire foot, and wherever a calloused spot is detected, file that down instantly with a little velvet pumice stone. For five or ten cents you can purchase a conveniently shaped piece at any drug store or toilet counter, and a better investment for comfort you cannot make. If the callous be large and of long standing it may be necessary to pare off the upper layers with a good corn knife, and then apply the pumice. If the feet have not had attention for some time, it might be as well to hold one foot in warm water to keep it soft while attending to the other.

The calloused spots all well attended to, anoint each one with a little olive or sweet oil, or even with cold cream or vaseline; and next turn attention to the corns. Treat these in the same manner, and finish by putting a piece of the old-fashioned soap plaster—five cents will purchase a goodly piece, enough for twenty times or more—right over the corn, being careful to strip the edges of the plaster in a bias manner so that it will lie comfortably in position. This will soften the corn and raise it, so that after a few times of bathing and plastering it can be lifted right out. When this occurs, then use a little alcohol—be sure to avoid wood alcohol, for this means poison and the possible loss of the toe—to disinfect and cleanse the resulting little cavity, and put on a piece of ordinary adhesive plaster. In a few days the piece thereof shall know it no more.

For bunions, when such have occurred, more care and a degree of skill is necessary. Indeed, there are many who claim that only a surgeon should treat these, and for aggravated cases medical advice should be relied upon. A cold compress put on and renewed as often as convenient will help to reduce the inflammation, and a toe spring to hold the enlarged joint in the natural position would better be resorted to.

Next comes the toilet of the toenails. Here the girl who does her own manicuring possesses the advantage, for the course of procedure is just the same. The cuticle is carefully pared away all around, the nail cut off square at the top, and the corners trimmed or not, just as seems most desirable. Some suffer severe discomfort if the corners of the nails be not trimmed out every time in so often; while others go a lifetime comfortably without paying any particular attention to them.

Where there is any tendency, even the slightest, to ingrowing toenails, the corner of the nail should be lifted—the blunt or rounded point of a penknife or scissors will answer—the upper surface of the nail filed down, and a little pledget of cotton, previously soaked in listerine or even any good liquid dentifrice will fill the bit, forced in under the ingrowing corner. The first pledget of cotton would better be a small one, and the succeeding ones can each time be a little larger. In this way the ingrowing habit of the nail can be discouraged; and in a comparatively short time it will have so reshaped itself that it assumes the natural shape and position, and will not require any further special attention. At the first indication of a return of the trouble, the cotton can again be forced under, and the condition remedied almost instantly. Any tendency in this direction must be watched for, and immediate measures taken to prevent it; otherwise a doctor's bill and an enforced rest for that foot will be the result. It is one of the many cases where the ounce of prevention is worth pounds of cure.

When all the blemishes and abnormalities have received their due measure of attention, the next thing is to put the foot in such condition that further ones will not be possible. Place it in warm water again, this time without any soap or ammonia, just the clear water, to remove the oil or cream or vaseline with which the corns and calloused spots have been treated. After drying the foot again carefully, give it a good pedicel rub, and see that each toe, and the flesh between the toes, get an ample supply of the fluid, and rub until it is all absorbed. Then take the tonic, or if you have not that, use olive oil, just the same as dresses the salad at table, or even common sweet oil, or vaseline, and rub the entire foot well with it, giving the nails a goodly rubbing so that the soap and water shall not deprive them of all their natural oil.

Finish up with a powder rub and use the powder as a lubricant for a general massage of the foot. Begin with the toes, and rub and turn each toe separately. Then take the arch of the foot, and beginning with the under part, on the sole of the foot, rub each muscle—they will stand out plainly if the foot be extended with the toes pointing downward—upward and outward, and all the time following the natural shape of the arch and the instep.

Next come the ankles, and these are important, for here the cords and muscles and tendons of the foot and the heel center. Give them a thorough massage, finishing with the pinching and slapping movements.

When all of these are done, next come the DON'TS; and if you would have a foot that will meet the requirements, not only of beauty but of daily comfort as well, the DON'TS are perhaps fully as important as are the DO'S.

DON'T under any circumstances wear a short stocking, one too short in the foot. This cramps the toes and interferes with circulation, with the result that the foot swells and severe discomfort ensues.

DON'T wear the so-called common sense shoe if you have a well-developed arch or instep; the common sense shoe—so-called—is mainly for flat footed people, and offers no support whatsoever for a highly arched instep.

DON'T wear a short shoe. If it comes to a choice between the short shoe and the narrow one, take the latter every time. Severe bone diseases have been started by short shoes; bunions are the inevitable result. One can tell the wear-sense shoe as far as one can see her—for it is usually her—by the hobbling gait and the expression of agony, which speaks volumes.

The proper shoe to wear should be so selected that breaking in is unnecessary, and although this will necessitate the expenditure of time and trouble to secure such a shoe, the resulting comfort will repay.

HOME-MADE GUNPOWDER WAS TOO POWERFUL

Dallas Man's Experiment with New Gunpowder Results in Painful Accident—Shotgun Exploded

DALLAS, Texas, Jan. 28.—C. D. Trowell, a carpenter residing at No. 666 South Ervay street, met with a painful accident late yesterday while experimenting with smokeless powder, which he had manufactured from a receipt obtained from an eastern concern.

After preparing the powder and loading several shells, he took a new single-barrel breech-loading shotgun and went to a point near the Katy and Santa Fe crossing in the river bottom, inserted one of the cartridges in the gun and pulled the trigger. The report was almost like that of a cannon. The gun barrel was shattered into fragments and the right thumb of Mr. Trowell's hand was split open from the hand to the end of the member.

The victim stated to a reporter afterwards that he was too busy at the time to notice whether the powder smoked or not, but that he is of the opinion that if the Russians adopted this powder to use in carrying on the war in the far east hostilities would have ceased long ago.

Mr. Trowell had his wound dressed by Dr. J. T. Wells, and states that after his hand is well he will load some more shells in smaller proportions than the first lot, and try again.

Chief Engineer Webster Declares Work Will Be Finished in This State

C. H. Webster, chief engineer for the Kansas City, Mexico and Orient Railroad Company, was in the city Saturday from headquarters at Sweetwater to secure fifty men for track laying on the line north from Sweetwater. Up to late last night twenty-five men had been secured. These will be taken west over the Texas and Pacific Sunday night, and the additional number will be sent out later. With the fifty men the track laying gang will be increased to about 100.

About five miles of track had been laid up to Thursday afternoon, three of which were laid when the company ordered construction to cease last fall. There are on the ground about forty cars of steel, besides other construction material sufficient to complete the road a distance of forty miles to the town of McCauley, near the Clear Fork of the Brazos river, close to the line of Stonewall county.

Chief Engineer Webster states that it is the intention to push construction to the Salt Fork of the Brazos in Knox county, thence to Knox City, about ninety miles distant from Sweetwater, from which place the Red river is about 140 miles.

The grade for the line through to Red river has been completed and steel has been ordered to complete the road that distance. Cars of steel are being received at Sweetwater constantly and the statement is made that the company intends to continue track laying until trains are running through from Sweetwater to Red river. Surfacing gangs are to be put on to follow up the construction forces just as fast as they complete their work. Mexicans are to be used for this work.

Chief Engineer Webster is sanguine over the situation of the Orient in Texas, and thinks that work of building will be continued without interruption until the line is completed in this state.

While Chief Engineer Webster refused to advise the idea that the Orient may complete a joint trackage arrangement with the Texas and Pacific from Sweetwater to Pecos City, it is learned from reliable sources that such will be done, and instead of the Orient building southwesterly from Sweetwater into Mexico, it will use the tracks of the Texas and Pacific as stated.

The distance from Sweetwater to Pecos City is about 240 miles. From the latter point it is understood that the Orient will build via Fort Stockton into the republic, the preliminary survey between Pecos City and Stockton having already been made.

When asked if the Orient is making a move towards construction south from Sweetwater, Mr. Webster said that he knew nothing of it if it was being contemplated.

It is also understood that the company will continue the construction of the line into the territory north from Red river, just as fast as the work can be done, which is dependent upon the receipt of the steel and other building supplies.

RAILROAD NOTES AND PERSONALS

J. W. Robbins, superintendent of the northern division of the Santa Fe, was in the city Saturday from Cleburne.

E. M. Coudridge, compiler of the Texas Railway Guide, a monthly publication, is in Fort Worth. He has been awarded the contract to get out the official souvenir program of the coming fat stock show, during the present week Mr. Coudridge will complete the work. The program is expected to be issued by Feb. 15, and as usual will be an artistic production.

An error was made in the announcement from Austin that the committee on common carriers of the houses of representatives had reported favorably the bill authorizing the Gulf, Colorado and Santa Fe to purchase and operate the Cotton Belt railroad. What should have been said is: That the Santa Fe had been authorized to purchase the Cane Belt, and not the Cotton Belt.

Wilson Large, aboard the United States training ship New Orleans, at Chefoo, writing to his mother, Mrs. W. H. Largo of this city, under dates of Dec. 8 and Dec. 17, tells the war conditions in that section as they appear to an American. He says:

"Dear Mother—Here we are in Chefoo, waiting for the Baltimore to come and relieve us. She left Cavite, P. I., last week, and stopped at Hong Kong to go in dock before she comes here, so will not get here before next week. We had to play football to keep in practice. It is not much of a place, with nothing to be seen but a lot of Koreans, Chinese and Japs."

"We lay pretty close to the Russian cruiser Variaz and the gunboat Korsetz, that were sunk by the Japs at the beginning of the war. We could see them only at low tide, and there is not much of them to be seen even at that time. The Japs have taken off all the guns and smoke stacks to lighten them so they can raise them."

"The weather is getting colder here all the time, but we are not having any more snow or rain; so it is not quite as bad as it was." We go ashore every day to play football to keep in practice. We do not know just when we are going to leave here for home. By the looks of things now, we will not get to Frisco before the last of January or the first of February. Before we leave Cavite we are going to take off all our guns and ammunition; then coal ship and take on stores and have the ship's hull cleaned for our long trip across the Pacific. Then when we leave Manila it will be for good. We are going by the way of Guam, Wake, Island and Honolulu."

"Hong Kong, China, Dec. 17, 1904.—The Baltimore arrived at Chefoo Dec. 12, and we left on the following day for Manila, but stopped here to make some transfers to the United States gunboats that are here."

"We brought out our homeward-bound pennant the day we sailed from Chefoo, and I tell you she is a beauty. The pennant is 400 feet long, fourteen feet wide at the top and of pure silk. It cost about $250. I am one of a committee that has been appointed to escort our homeward bound colors to New Orleans, La., and present them to the city; so I expect I will go there from Frisco, and then come home for a short furlough."

"We are going to leave here some time today, and expect to arrive in Cavite about Monday night. We expect now to leave Manila about Dec. 24, for Honolulu, en route to Frisco. We had fine weather all the way up here, and by the looks of things will have a good trip to Manila."

Boer General Declares Agreement to Teach Native Language in Schools Has Not Been Fairly Kept

LONDON, Jan. 28.—The Boer general, Kritzinger, will be remembered for his active share in the war in South Africa, and particularly the part he played in keeping the troops employed in Cape Colony, arrived in Brussels on Wednesday in order to attend a reception of his compatriots. He asserts that the teaching of the Boer language is not placed on the same footing as the teaching of the new colonies and intends to deliver lectures in various towns for the purpose of collecting funds to carry on the work of national education.

FOSTER'S WEATHER FORECAST

COPYRIGHT, 1904, BY W. T. FOSTER

WEATHER BULLETIN

(Copyrighted, 1905, by W. T. Foster, P. O. Box XI, Washington, D. C.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 28.—Last bulletin gave forecasts of disturbances to cross continent 26 to 30, warm wave 25 to 29, cool wave 28 to Feb. 1. Next disturbance will reach Pacific coast 30, cross west of Rockies by close of 31, great central valleys Feb. 1 to 3, eastern states 4. Warm wave will cross west of Rockies about 20, Great central valleys Feb. 1, eastern states Feb. 3. Cool wave will cross west Rockies about 2, great central valleys 4, eastern states 5.

Nothing of especial interest connected with this disturbance. The storms will be of a little greater force than usual but not particularly noticeable. The great trend of temperature will be sharply upward and the cool wave that will close the above disturbance will not bring very low temperatures. Rainfall will be deficient.

Second disturbance of February will reach Pacific coast about 3, cross west of Rockies by close of 5, great central valleys 6 to 8, eastern states 9. Warm wave will cross west of Rockies about 4, great central valleys 6, eastern states 8.

This will be an important disturbance from start to finish. The weather features accompanying it will be of more than usual intensity on the Pacific coast and continue with great energy until the storm shall have passed out onto the Pacific ocean. The storm will move five or six hundred miles a day. The cold wave following will not go to great extremes. An offshoot of this disturbance will go into Texas about 8 or 9 while the main disturbance will keep to northward. Rainfall will increase over the past week.

February will average colder than usual in and east of the great central valleys, warmer than usual west of the Rockies. Rainfall of February will be deficient in Texas, lower Mississippi, upper Missouri and Ohio valley, all of the eastern states and eastern Canada; about normal Manitoba and western Canada, west of Rockies, the upper great lakes, upper Mississippi valley and state of Illinois.

Weather in southern states will be favorable to preparing soil for putting in seed for crops, but rice and truck farmers may begin to fear that rainfall will be deficient.

I have heretofore claimed that my forecasts were good two times out of three. I feel justified now in claiming that they are good three times out of four. I have just experienced another covering the week 19 to 17 of January. While I very much regret these two errors my readers should remember that they are the only serious errors that have occurred in twenty weeks. One other error occurred but not so serious and that leaves me seventeen weeks of fairly good forecasts to three weeks of failure.

Hank's Grizzly By H. I. GREENE

Copyright, 1902, by the Frank Leslie Publishing House.

Hank the guide, peeped into the coffee pot and then sat down on a log to await the boiling.

"The queerest reptyle ever I met," he said, "was up in Utah. Drifted into Whiskey Lake's parlor one evenin', and feelin' pretty good, shot a few holes through the ceiling, not a meanin' no harm. Bimeby down comes a little feller with nothin' on but his pants, shirt and spectacles and looks me over. He was a funny lookin' critter, cock-eyed, long body and short legs, like one of them—that do you call them dogs, Clawed, what they bring up under the bureau so their legs can't grow?"

"Dachshunds."

"Yes, I reckon them's it. His legs ly love ter see a gum chune that I might inspect his maxillaries," says he, whatever them might be. I didn't say no more, but I thought if a little, half-grown son of a microbe like him dast stay in the same county with a grizzly, a full-grown man like yer Uncle Hank ought not to be afraid to walk up to one and pull his whiskers out. Well, we camped there, and sure enough a couple of days after I run into the tracks again, smokin' hot, so I hops back right lively to camp.

"The biggest was backed up against a tree with a pair of blunders on. Said he was examin' the hairs on the legs of a skeeter to see what tribe he belonged to, but when I told him I had rounded up his game he dropped the insek sudden. 'Where is he?' asks the little man.

"'Pardner,' says I, 'holdin' out my hand, I hired out to you as a guide, but I can't earn the money. Hereafter I will cook for you and wash your feet, but you are the guide, bear-fighter, bronco-buster and roarin' bully of this outfit. When I go back to town I am goin' to quit guidin' and learn fancy sewin'."

Hank stirred up the pot with a pine stick. "Pull up your rockin' cheers, fellers; coffee's bilin'."

"FIRST, CAME TH E PERFESSOR."

was so short that when he stood up his feet just touched the floor and that's all. Pretty soon he says, 'I must insist that you cease shooting through my bed-room. It is very annoying, and if you do so any more I will be compelled to take the law into my own hands.'"

"How so?" I asks, curious enough. Well, he goes down in his pocket and fishes around for a spell, like he had lost somethin', and finally digs up a little pee wee, putty shootin' weppin about the size of a cigarette and holds it out in front of him like a woman holds up a dead rat by the tail. 'I shall shoot back,' he says, frownin'.

"For a minit I wr's knocked speechless, then I come to slowly. 'Of all the sawed-off, hammered-down, nail-bitin', death-breathin', roarin', tearin' bullies ever I seen you are the wust,' I says, and turns away. But the next mornin' as I was settin' speculatin' on the hereafter, up comes this same little man and hires me to take him into the hills. Come to find out he was a buggist, one of them fellers that is always stickin' their noses into the private business of loads and reptyles to find out what they are doin' and when they are home and in the bunsoms of their families. Well, we outfit in a way that would make a palls dinin'-car look like a lunch counter and struck out, and immediate that feller commenced to get busy. Every time he would see a danged bug he crawlin' along the train he wanted to get off his cayuse and foller him home. Durned fool.

"About a week afterwards I seen that we had jumped the claim of an old grizzly. First I noticed where he had wallered and then rubbed up against a rampike and slashed it with his claws—scuttin' his trademark on it and skakin' out his claim to that range. I didn't say nothin' but at last the dude seen it himself, and blame me if he didn't know what it meant—never was so surprised in my life. He got interested at once, buzzin' around here and there like a fly on a free lunch. Said he wanted to take a picture of him with the little boy he had packed on his back; wanted to foller him up and take his fytograf at close range. I told him nothin' would make me happier; that I dearly loved to set down beside a grizzly and swap news with him—kind of a fad of mine—but that I always waited until a circus come along before gratifyin' my hankerin'.

"Oh, sugar! they won't hurt you," he answered. "Don't be afraid. I have read all about bears in books and they ain't dangerous."

"That's all right, too, but suppose he happens to be a gum chune bear?" I asked.

"A what? says he.

"A gum chune bear. Never heard of one? I am surprised that you didn't read about them in your jografy. A gum chune bear is a grouchily old bear, or maybe a dissipated old maid, what gets down on saeslity and longs to wipe it out. He sneezes around until he gets a big wad of spruce gum and he chaws on that day after day to strengthen his jaws. When he gets so he can chaw a crowbar off first shot out of the box, then he goes a-woolin' trouble. Better go a little careful with this bear," said he.

"Well, what's so scary 'bout the little skeeter, that only made him so anxious to spy the brute. 'I should dass

"About half a mile up the gully yonder. Better straddle along right pearly, because I didn't tie him none too fast," says I.

"Certainly, to be sure. Had I best take my weepin'?" he says.

"As you please," says I. "But I wouldn't advise you to peck at him overmuch with it. If you ever hit a pore bear with that piece of ordnance, there wouldn't be enough left of him to pick up on the pint of a pin and examin' through that magnifyin' machine of yours. But he fetches it along just the same and pretty soon we come to the tracks, which same were about the size of a wash tub. The professor takes off his glasses and polishes them a bit, then cinches up his leather and takes to the trail. 'Here, you galoot!' I yells. 'It don't make no difference to me which way we go but if you foller them that way long enough you will come to the place where your bear was borned. You have got to back track, pardner.'"

"Ah, I see," said the professor, rubbin' his chin. "Mebby you are right. We'll try the opsrite way first." He turned around and nosed off in tother direction, him a lookin' at the trail and me guardin' the rear and lookin' at everything else. Then all at once I seen the critter were a-peekin' for. His nose was pinto towards us, his head hangin' low and swingin' and his mouth full of the prettiest teeth ever I looked at. The fool buggist was bendin' over the trail, and I reckon he would have run plumb into tother's mouth and disappeared forever if I hadn't ketchin' him by the part that was handiest and yanked him pack. 'There's you blame chipmunk,' says I. 'Ain't he just lovely?'"

"Magnificent. The Ursus horribilus in his native wild. What a pictur to show Dr. Dodo down east!" says the professor. He unclenched his camery and commenced to sneak up closer, sayin' soothin' loke, 'so bear, good bear,' as he perched. Pretty quick old Eph skinned his lip and commenced to cuss and rumble down in his insides and I let out a holler. 'Better take your fytograf and back-water strong, 'cause there's goin' to be strange doins' almost immediate, mister.' I sings, and I hadn't got the words out of my mouth before he gives a 'woof' and comes for us like a steam engine. I had been expectin' the same all along and the good Lord had caused me to stop under a limb that I could just jump up and grab handy; so up I goes, and no sooner had I got on the grandstand than the percussion passed along.

"First come the professor and it was an'akin' to gaze upon the way that stub-legged dude could stampeede when he once got interested. Under the limb he went so fast that I could hear him whiz, his legs goin' like the drive-wheels of a locomotive on a slippery track. And as he went he was sayin' to himself, 'Run you little fool. Now you've done it, ain't you, dang you?' like he was sort of findin' fault with himself for somethin'.

"I yanked out my 44 Army as the bear came snortin' by and let him have a couple in the shoulder. He went heels over apperite, but was up in a second and fairly bustin' his suspenders to make up for lost time. Not havin' anythin' particular to do, I dropped down and trailed along after them, thinkin' if I could grab the bear by the tail mebby I could hold him back a couple of minutes, by which time I figured the professor would be back in Boston. But though I straddled along uncommon active, seein' as how I have got a spavin and a couple of ring-bones, I soon seed I was like a mud turtle chasin' a rabbit. Then I remembered when I was a kid at school I heard the teacher say that the hypothermose of a somethin' was the shortest distance between two pints, and bearin' that in mind I cut across lots, figurin' on headin' them off.

"Well, I made it and arrove first in a clus finish. The little man was still goin' as fast as former, puffin' and blowin' tremenous. When he seen me a look of genoouise joy perched on his features, and he changed his course and come a sallin' by within two feet, disappearin' with a whistin' sound. But at the same time the grizzly side-stepped, too, and come straight for me, ears laid back, mouth open, breathin' fire.

"Some fellers would have got right down on their benders and prayed, but I only girded up my loins and sayin' 'deliver us from evil' right earnest, hopped over a tree trunk and skeddled down the hill somethin' wonderful. Next minit I heap over my shoulder, and what do you suppose I seen? Nothin' but old Eph stretched out deaderin' a herra'n and the little runt of a professor settin' a-straddle of him and examin' his jaws. 'Genoouise silver-tip grizzly,' he says when I comes up. 'Puffic specimen. Then he looks up at me and says, 'Where was you goin'?"

'Nowhere much,' says I. 'Jest travelin' round and admirin' the scenery.'"

"Must have seen a lot, considerin' the time you was travelin'," he answered with a funny grin.

"Yes, quite a chunk. How did you do it?" I asks, full of wonder.

"Oh, I just got behind a tree and shot him in the eye with my weppin as he come along. See! He pinto at the bear's eye with his bean-shooter, and you can skin me and hang my pelt on the cabin wall if he hadn't done it sleek and clean; somethin' no mortal man ever done before or since with such a weppin and a bear goin' at full jump. I couldn't say a word; couldn't even cuss, showin' how bad I felt. I just sat down on a log and weeped.

"But that wasn't the worst of it. That night he developed his pictur and the next day showed it to me. It was the most hair-raisin' fytograf of a grizzly a comin' head on that was ever took by a human bein'. That will tickle Dr. Dodo most to death,' says the little bear-killer."

"Pardner,' says I, 'holdin' out my hand, I hired out to you as a guide, but I can't earn the money. Hereafter I will cook for you and wash your feet, but you are the guide, bear-fighter, bronco-buster and roarin' bully of this outfit. When I go back to town I am goin' to quit guidin' and learn fancy sewin'."

Hank stirred up the pot with a pine stick. "Pull up your rockin' cheers, fellers; coffee's bilin'."

The Temporary Editor By E. P. BUTLER

The editor of the Hartsock News lay flat on his back in bed, as crazy as a loon, and jabbering like a porthead motion photograph.

"Nothin' but old Eph stretched out deaderin' a herra'n and the little runt of a professor settin' a-straddle of him and examin' his jaws. 'Genoouise silver-tip grizzly,' he says when I comes up. 'Puffic specimen. Then he looks up at me and says, 'Where was you goin'?"

"Ah, I see," said the professor, rubbin' his chin. "Mebby you are right. We'll try the opsrite way first." He turned around and nosed off in tother direction, him a lookin' at the trail and me guardin' the rear and lookin' at everything else. Then all at once I seen the critter were a-peekin' for. His nose was pinto towards us, his head hangin' low and swingin' and his mouth full of the prettiest teeth ever I looked at. The fool buggist was bendin' over the trail, and I reckon he would have run plumb into tother's mouth and disappeared forever if I hadn't ketchin' him by the part that was handiest and yanked him pack.

"Magnificent. The Ursus horribilus in his native wild. What a pictur to show Dr. Dodo down east!" says the professor. He unclenched his camery and commenced to sneak up closer, sayin' soothin' loke, 'so bear, good bear,' as he perched. Pretty quick old Eph skinned his lip and commenced to cuss and rumble down in his insides and I let out a holler. 'Better take your fytograf and back-water strong, 'cause there's goin' to be strange doins' almost immediate, mister.' I sings, and I hadn't got the words out of my mouth before he gives a 'woof' and comes for us like a steam engine. I had been expectin' the same all along and the good Lord had caused me to stop under a limb that I could just jump up and grab handy; so up I goes, and no sooner had I got on the grandstand than the percussion passed along.

"First come the professor and it was an'akin' to gaze upon the way that stub-legged dude could stampeede when he once got interested. Under the limb he went so fast that I could hear him whiz, his legs goin' like the drive-wheels of a locomotive on a slippery track. And as he went he was sayin' to himself, 'Run you little fool. Now you've done it, ain't you, dang you?' like he was sort of findin' fault with himself for somethin'.

"I yanked out my 44 Army as the bear came snortin' by and let him have a couple in the shoulder. He went heels over apperite, but was up in a second and fairly bustin' his suspenders to make up for lost time. Not havin' anythin' particular to do, I dropped down and trailed along after them, thinkin' if I could grab the bear by the tail mebby I could hold him back a couple of minutes, by which "Do tell!" exclaimed Gramma. "I s'posed gran'son 'ud hev all that ready. Ain't you got any at all?"

"No'm," said Jimmie.

"Well, I can't fix the types, but I guess you know how," she said. "An' I can't see to write, but you kin take down. First, say gran'son's sick with the grip, but doc says he'll git along all right soon's the fever goes down some. Then say Marthy Clemen's baby is sick with the measles. WOOD ALCOHOL A TERRIBLE DRUG

Persons Drinking the Powerful Spirits Go Blind if Their Lives Are Spared

MIXED IN GOOD WHISKEY

Victim Cannot Detect Difference Until in the Agonies of Poisoning

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—Within the last six years the Demon Rum has been displaced by an alcoholic impersonator, the chemist of eternal, becomes as an ox team to a limited passenger train.

"Deodorized alcohol" is this new vehicle to dreamlessness. Twelve fingers of this methylated spirits taken within a period of three hours by a single person in four drafts at the most threatens to involve the coroner and the undertaker and at the least promises the oculist one of the most difficult of eye complications.

Of 100 persons taking four ounces of this deodorized alcohol within three hours forty will die and of these twenty will go blind before death thirty of the 100 will recover, finally, but twenty of the sixty will be permanently blind.

Five hundred people in the United States have died or gone blind from the effects of this deodorized wood alcohol, which in its semi-odorless form is often so closely related in smell to grain alcohol as to prevent the average person's detecting the difference.

Now that the substance has taken the insidious odorless form only an expert can detect whether the varnish mixture be made of the grain alcohol or of the methylated spirits. The difference between the use of one or the other was illustrated strikingly in Milwaukee last summer.

USE IN VARNISH KILLS THREE

In one of the big breweries a great beer vat needed to be varnished inside. Five men were sent into it for the work and it was completed by them. But the deodorized wood alcohol had been used in mixing the varnish and in the vat there had been no ventilation. On the way out from work one of the men proposed a drink of whisky, but only one other man of the five took the liquor. These two men lived; the other three died.

Prof. Frank Butler of the chair of ophthalmology in McGill university at Montreal and Professor Casey A. Wood of the same chair in the University of Illinois have been recognized as authorities on the subject of wood alcohol poisoning, having delved into every detail of wood alcohol history.

Both of these men are opposed to the sale of the deodorized wood alcohol for domestic purposes and in the art. In the United States the solution proposed by Dr. Wood is an untaxed grain alcohol which shall make the deodorized wood alcohol superfluous.

One of the most dramatic of the deaths from intoxicants that have come to the medical profession in Chicago was reported to Dr. W. A. Evans.

The victim was a rancher living alone on the Poudre river in Montana, miles from any other person. On one occasion he visited a Montana city and in more. Just be sure to have the paper out on time."

Jimmie promised and Gramma went home. She had done her duty.

There were forty-two local and patent medicine advertisements that were always scattered through the reading. He knew this, and as the sermons were long and solid, he cut each sermon into small pieces, laying the plates across the chair and saving them into chunks with the office saw. Then he made up his forms, sticking in a piece of sermon, then a local, then another bit of sermon, then a patent medicine "ad," then more sermon. He did not miss a department. He had "Local News," "Country Correspondence," "From Our Exchanges" and "A Little Nonsense," each in its appointed place, but each composed of short reading advertisements and small sections of sermon.

The sermons were rather mixed. In saving them he had failed to preserve their consecutive form. There were fifteen columns of disjointed sermon, sandwiched with "Perkins Plasters" and "Get Your Canned Tomatoes at Wray's."

Jimmie persuaded Bob Hochstetler to help him run the press, and the paper came out on time. The editor was sleeping nicely when Jimmie delivered the News at the door. The editor was out of his fever. When he awoke Gramma proudly handed him the News.

As a rule, I have said the editor was as sane as could be expected. He looked through the paper, and gasped. It was two days later before the two strong men who were called in to hold him in bed were permitted to release him. Then he thanked Gramma, put on his clothes and went down to his office and discharged Jimmie three times. The third time he raised his wages.

The next week the editorial page contained the following notice, double-headed, at the head of the first column:

"AHEAD AGAIN."

"The News, always the foremost paper of the state, again outstripped its rivals last week by inaugurating a new and highly moral page competition. As we never do things by half, we devoted our entire paper to this newest and most attractive feature. Scattered over pages one, four, five and eight were five complete sermons. went upon a spree. He awoke at home one morning, deathly sick. All that day he suffered from violent nausea and vomiting, the symptoms continuing for three days. On the morning of the fourth day the rancher discovered that everything was unusually dark. This sensation of darkness increased until in the afternoon the man discovered that the trouble was not with the daylight but with his eyes. He went out and sat in his horse, setting off for his nearest neighbor, fifteen miles away. He could scarcely follow the trail, it had become so dim, and the last few miles traversed were left to the instincts of his horse. At the neighbor's ranch it was discovered that night was almost gone within two days the man was totally blind.

Friends in Montana took him to the railroad and started him for Chicago, and arriving here, a messenger was summoned to take him to an oculist. There it was decided that nothing could be done, but still hopeful, the man went over to his former home in Great Britain to look for relief. It has not come, however, and the man is blind for life.

BLAMED ON JAMAICA GINGER

The first case of total wood alcohol in quantities the deaths and blindnesses that first were caused by the spirit were attributed to the Jamaica gingers that were served with drinks in the cheaper saloons. The drinker began to look very ill and upon ginger, with which he had been heating his whisky, and the analytical chemist for a time was at sea to know why one ginger was poisonous and another harmless.

Not until 1903 was it determined satisfactorily that deodorized wood alcohol under several descriptive names was being substituted for the grain alcohol in such preparations. Since that first discovery this poison has been found in almost every variety of beverage producing intoxication and in many of the medical compounds put out by unscrupulous manufacturers.

But the danger does not stop with the stuffs designed for the stomach. One of the chief uses for the old-fashioned wood alcohol was as a solvent for varnish gums. Where this odor was pronounced in the varnish the painter and decorator could avoid the possibility of poison from breathing its fumes.

Now that the substance has taken the insidious odorless form only an expert can detect whether the varnish mixture be made of the grain alcohol or of the methylated spirits. The difference between the use of one or the other was illustrated strikingly in Milwaukee last summer.

Liquids which serve when whisky is not obtainable. Because of the fact that whisky is forbidden the Indians there are many cases of wood alcohol poisoning from these people's drinking concoctions made from the spirits.

Congressman Boutell of Illinois has presented a bill to the present congress providing for an untaxed grain alcohol, denatured for industrial purposes. Germany of all European countries is most liberal as to untaxed alcohol for industrial purposes, keeping out the wood spirits in great measure.

In England and in Russia, however, the American wood product is finding its way, and in the mobilizing of the Russian armies last summer dozens of soldiers fell victims to the methylated spirits, which was so new to them and at the same time tempting to their palates. Dr. Wood, in opposing the methylated spirit in its present marketable form, suggests it as an odoriferous adulterant to make an untaxed alcohol undrinkable. He points to the fact that the "methylated spirit" of Great Britain is a grain alcohol

BEST FRIENDS OF PE-RU-NA ARE THE MOTHERS AND CHILDREN

When Sickness Comes to the Little Ones It is the Mother Who Chiefly Suffers.

The sufferer more than the child who happens to be sick. Her sympathy is deeper than that of any other member of the family.

The doctors may come and go with their different theories and constant change of remedies.

The doctor of years ago gave entirely different remedies than he does today.

A Multitude of Mothers Have discovered that Peruna is the stand-by, and that in all the ailments of spring and summer to which the children are subjected, Peruna is the remedy that will most quickly relieve.

Peruna quickly relieves this condition of the mucous membranes. Its operation is prompt, the children do not dislike to take the medicine, it has no deleterious effects in any part of the body.

Peruna is a specific remedy for all catarrhal ailments of winter and summer, acute or chronic.

The mothers all over the United States are the best friends that Peruna has.

The Mothers Hold Per-ru-na in High Esteem.

Not only because it has cured them of their various ailments, but because it always recures the children from the throes and grasp of catarrhal diseases.

Peruna is a specific remedy for all catarrhal ailments of winter and summer, acute or chronic.

Peruna is a specific remedy for all catarrhal ailments of winter and summer, acute or chronic.

The Benefit Which the Children of the United States Have Received From Per-ru-na Can Never Be Put Into Words.

The chronic ailments it has prevented, the suffering it has mitigated, will never be fully recorded.

Per-ru-na Contains No Narcotics. One reason why Peruna has found permanent use in so many homes is that it contains no narcotic of any kind.

Per-ru-na Protects the Entire Household. As soon as the value of Peruna is appreciated by every household, both as a preventive and cure, tens of thousands of lives will be saved.

Mrs. Theresa Rooke, 258 N. Ashland Ave., Chicago, Ill., Treasurer Ladies' of the Macaebes, writes: "In our home Peruna is the only medicine we have."

"If the baby has colic, or any stomach disorders, a dose or two cures her. I consider Peruna finer than any doctor's medicine that I have ever tried."

No Doctor Required. Mr. Edward Otto, 927 De Soto street, St. Paul, Minn., writes: "I cannot say enough for Peruna."

Mr. G. H. Farmer, New Martinsville, W. Va., writes: "Our little son, Harry, is well and healthy now and we think it was you directed us, he will keep his health and grow strong."

Mr. Howard Andrew Sterner, Muddy Creek, Pa., writes: "I have Peruna in my house all the time and won't be without it."

Mr. Edward Otto, 927 De Soto street, St. Paul, Minn., writes: "We had several doctors and they said they could do no more for him so we tried Peruna as a last resort, and it did the work."

G.H. Farmer and Son.

Per-ru-na Should Be Kept In Every Household Where There Are Little Children.

Peruna should be kept in the house all the time. Don't wait until the child is sick, then send to a drug store.

Children are especially liable to acute catarrh. Indeed, most of the affections of childhood are catarrh.

All forms of sore throat, quins, croup, hoarseness, laryngitis, etc., are but different phases of catarrh.

"I have used Peruna for a number of years. It cured me of chronic catarrh which I suffered with from infancy."

"When my three children were born they all had catarrh, but I have given them Peruna and find it very effective in ridding them of this horrible trouble."

"In fact, I consider it a household blessing. I would not know how to raise my children without it."

Fort Worth has a singer or two, more than one pianist, a fiddler, a cellist that only awaits the opportunity of being heard by an intelligent public to receive the applause of that public.

"THE RUNAWAYS"
 The big Sam S. Shubert production, Arthur Dunn in "The Runaways," one of last season's most pronounced successes, will be the attraction at Greenwall's opera house Tuesday matinee and night, Jan. 31, when local theatergoers will again have the opportunity of seeing the famous New York Casino production in all its entirety. This year there will be presented a marvelous new feature in the now famous pony ballet in sensational radium dances. The use of radium as a means of illumination is the greatest discovery of modern stagecraft, and the radium ballet has proven the most astonishing feature of recent years.

It was Mr. Griffith's first appearance in Houston as an actor, though he was here in 1888, when a small boy in his early teens, as property boy, with Mrs. D. P. Bowers. Mr. Griffith is young—quite young in years as well as in tragedy. He is tremendous of physique, has a voice of great carrying power and capability of expression and tone to interpret tragedy when the chill of years shall somewhat moderate his intensity.

Mr. Griffith at times was very fine—showed that he will, if he perseveres, make a very satisfactory player of Shakespearean parts. In the scene where he meets Lady Macbeth, after she has written her of the wicked ambitions that

ARTHUR DUNN WITH "THE SIX WIDOWS" IN "THE RUNAWAYS."

Other attractions announced for the week are "The Runaways," with Arthur Dunn as comedian; "Sergeant Kitty" and "That Little Swede."

The week's list, therefore, sums itself up into two musical comedies, one tragedy, one comedy and one problem play.

Some degree of interest, other than that a Texas girl has the leading part, attaches to the appearance of "Iris." It will be the first time for Iris to appear here and its problems will doubtless provoke as much discussion as they have everywhere else the play was produced. Aside from its prob-entire comic opera troupe to an island on the Pacific ocean, called the Isle of Table d'hote, on which dyspepsia is unknown.

In writing about the production, one enthusiast said that it was "A kaleidoscopic panegyric to the dressmaking trade," displaying on living models taken by the Shuberts from heaven only knows where, the glittering trousseaus of a hundred queens of Sheba. Some of these gowns are set with gold, some with silver and others jewels. There are shimmering laces, gorgeous fringes, flashing in a rainbow of colors, with sombre blacks, modest grays, innocent fawn colors and belligerent martial stripes. The finale of the second act enter his mind regarding the murder of Duncan and his usurpation of the kingdom of Scotland, he did some good acting.

In the scene at the banquet he was better, and gradually reached an ascending scale of excellence until he reached the denunciation. In his last interview and his monologues, before meeting with Macduff for the final conflict, he left little to be desired in his portrayal of the man hounded by conscience from within and fear from without, while the reception of the news of the death of Lady Macbeth has probably never been surpassed on the Houston stage. To this scene the audience paid the tribute of appreciation that always tells when almost perfection is reached in a part which is painful and makes one long for the old-fashioned farce that invariably took the wire edge of tragedy after each performance.

During the fourth act Miss Toone will eclipse all former efforts in the dressmaker's art. She will wear a negligee of Venetian lace, broken with panels of Irish point. A touch of Miss Toone's favorite color, turquoise, will be introduced and with this creation will be worn a riddle of gold.

During the last act, or act five, Miss Toone will wear a gown of black crepe de chine—deep yoke and sleeves of escurial lace outlined with French folds of the crepe; with the gown is worn a black hat of chiffon, and feather boa, gloves, etc.

"SERGEANT KITTY."

lem, "Iris" chief interest lies in the opportunity for some marvelous gowns. "Sergeant Kitty" and "The Runaways" are two sprightly musical comedies. "The Runaways" was here last year and Arthur Dunn, its leading funmaker, made a decided hit. "Sergeant Kitty" is new. It had a great run in New York.

John Griffith's "Macbeth" will be the first Shakespearean play since Joseph De Grasse appeared in "Hamlet" and "The Merchant of Venice." Griffith is said to be a virtuous young actor and to carry superb mounting for his production.

"That Little Swede," which closes the week, is brand new in Texas. It is a quiet sort of comedy which New York critics treated kindly.

Last week's attractions, "The Princess Chic" and "Diplomacy," amply filled expectations. Neither received is said to be a picture worth waiting for. It shows the choicest beauties of the chorus swung from the sides in fanciful warm hues, dripped from above, and over it all is thrown a shower of changing colors. Then at last comes a shower of rosebuds, each illuminated by a tiny electric globe. It is a fairy finish to a fairy ride. The management searched for and play. The management searched for a wide to corral together the choicest assortment of comedians, funmakers and clever women that could be obtained, and in Mr. Dunn's support will be seen Charles Cox, Clarence Harvey, William Meehan, Thomas Whitbread, Misses Emma Earle, Marie Glazier, Florence Martin, the Althea sisters and over seventy-five others.

"MACBETH"
 A French gentleman who had heard "rum" called "spirits," went into a hotel and called for a glass of punch, request-

Miss Ripley, who, by the way, was reared in Sherman, was a very satisfactory Lady Macbeth. Her rendering of the lines in her first interview with her husband after she had read his letter, her urging on his "inform of purpose," her hesitation to commit the deed he himself had first suggested to her, the reading of the parts at the banquet, and especially the night-walking scene, were good—they were fine bits of acting.

Mr. Edward Sullivan made a good Macduff. He is, on the whole, very symmetrical in his interpretation of that part than is Mr. Griffith in Macbeth, though not showing the ability to rise to the heights that Mr. Griffith reaches when he keeps his feelings within the circle of artistic limits.

"SERGEANT KITTY"
 It is announced that the comic opera success of New York, "Sergeant Kitty," will be presented under the able management of George R. White, at Greenwall's opera house Thursday night, Feb. 2. This production comes here with the hearty endorsement of the critics and audiences of such cities as New York, Philadelphia, Washington, Baltimore, Richmond and Atlanta.

The music is by A. Baldwin Sloans and the book by R. H. Burnside. The company is headed by Miss Helen Byron. The chief fun-maker is Charles Wayne. These two are ably supported by a large company, including such comic opera favorites as Miss Edith Blair, Miss Virginia Palmer, Frederick Knights, Wheeler Earl, Tom Hadaway, Sylvain Langlois and a half dozen others in the long list of principals. The chorus is made up of a big aggregation of pretty girls who can and do sing and sing sweetly.

Mr. White, firm in his belief that the public is entitled to the best, had spared no expense to make the costumes all that they should be and to have the scenery faithfully to the locale of the play. As the success of a musical production depends to a considerable extent upon the assistance rendered the singers on the stage by the orchestra, Mr. White carries with the company a special orchestra and his own musical director.

The presentation of "Sergeant Kitty" in this city should be one long remembered pleasantly by all who witness it.

BESSIE TOONE IN "IRIS"
 Miss Bessie Toone, who appears here in "Iris," will wear gowns that are

THE DIAMOND CURE.
 The latest news from Paris is that they have discovered a diamond cure for pneumonia, it will, however, be best for you to take that great remedy mentioned by W. T. McGee of Vanier, Tenn. "I discovered a cure for fourteen years. Nothing had a cough, for I took Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, which gave instant relief and effected a permanent cure." Unequaled quick cure for Throat and Lung Troubles. At W. J. Fisher, Reeves' Pharmacy and N. S. Blanton & Co. drug stores, price 50c and $1, guaranteed. Trial bottle free.

"THAT LITTLE SWEDE."

It is generally conceded that these gowns make Miss Toone the most handsomely gowned actress upon the American stage, and will prove a revelation to feminine eyes.

"Iris" comes to Greenwall's opera house Friday night, Feb. 3.

"THAT LITTLE SWEDE"
 An attraction of which much has been heard is Emily Erickson Greene in the beautiful dialect play, "That Little Swede," which comes to Greenwall's opera house Saturday matinee and night, Feb. 4.

Miss Greene is the most successful Swede dialect actress before the public today, and is a warm-hearted, impulsive, delightful little woman full of magnetism and infectious vivacity, and the drama, beginning as many favorite stars have begun in the variety business, she graduated very soon for that

 "A Chinese Honeymoon" has been advertised by certain eastern admirers of the piece as being comic opera. While the term would have need of considerable elasticity in order to apply to "A Chinese Honeymoon," the fact that there is more plot and more continuous flow of pleasing music than usual appears in a musical comedy is undeniable.

In the gorgeous production of the new De Koven, Klein and Cook romantic opera "Red Feather," Grace Van Studdiford will surprise her most sanguine admirers. This youngest and most beautiful of American prima donnas has greatly improved since her association with The Bostonians some years ago. The Van Studdiford voice, today, is admitted to be the most brilliant outside of grand opera.

Nothing in the loftier realm of theatrical offerings will meet such utter responsiveness in this city as that which is already guaranteed for "Monsieur Beaucaire," the romantic play that served Richard Mansfield so faithfully and which that distinguished actor, Creston Clarke, will present here shortly, making a prodigious production of it at the same time.

"The Marriage of Kitty," the most emphatic comedy success of this season, will be seen here again with Max Figman in the most prominent character, and with the same company which pleased patrons in the last presentation of this delightfully witty play.

A NEW RULE FOR "PICKING" PRIMA DONNAS
 One of Henry W. Savage's waggish managerial friends in New York declares that the successful producer has become so skilled in "picking" prima donnas that if he should stand blind-folded on the corner of Broadway and Forty-second street he could select prima donnas from the constantly passing throng, simply by their speaking voices. When the story reached the ears of the imprecario his face assumed a serious look and he reported: "I am not looking for prima donnas as much as I am young women with sweet voices that I think the public will like to hear. There are so-called prima donnas that I couldn't use in the chorus. My rule is to determine whether a voice is worth $2 to the public or only 50 cents."

These for whom art must ever speak the language of beauty, and who expect of the exponents of the highest form of dramatic art through eye and ear to sound the vibrant chords of nature's harmony and to produce spontaneous responses to realize authentic ideals, award such of the highest praise to the management that arranges with infinite pains, artistic care and cultured taste such a performance as "The Winter's Tale," which will be given by the Frederick Ward and Kathryn Kidder company.

It is interesting to compare the all-star cast which is to present the Adolph d'Enery and Eugene Cormon sterling melodramatic play, "The Two Orphans," with that which presented the play originally at the Union Square Theatre, New York, thirty years ago. At the time of its production in the original cast the Chevalier was played by Charles R. Thorne, in the all-star revival it is played by James O'Neill, P. F. Mackay was Pierre, now played by J. E. Dodson; McKee Rankin was Jacques, the part now being played by Louis James; Stuart Robson was the original Picard, now it is Jameson Lee Finney; Kate Claxton was the Louise, Grace George is now; Kitty Blanchard played Henriette, now it is Sarah Truax; Ira Vernon was Sister Genevieve; Clara Morris now plays the part, Fanny Morant was the countess, Mrs. LeMoine plays the part at present; Marie Wilkins was La Frochard, Edith Proctor Otis is now playing it, and Rose Eyring was the Marianne. Bijou Fernandez being the present interpreter.

Bigger, better, greater than ever is W. E. Nankville's Consolidated Minstrels, headed by that funny man, Billy Van, "the minstrel man." New jokes, new songs and a dozen new features in the olio will make this burnt cork aggregation the most popular minstrel show now touring. Manager Nankville has left nothing undone to make this the best organization

DOES WORKING AT RICH, PAY?

Woman Who Secured Paying Gold Mine in Klondike Tells of Her Experience

DOGS AS ONLY COMPANIONS

Says She Would Not Undergo Hardships Again for Even Larger Reward

CHICAGO, Jan. 28.—Does "striking it rich" in the Klondike wipe out the sufferings and hardships of a seven years' exile in the frozen north? Is it worth enduring privations which few men can stand, to say nothing of their effect on a fragile woman, to go day after day without food and shelter, month after month without friends, and to depend on Eskimo dogs for "being companionship"—is all this a fair price to pay for a rich mine?

Seven years of such isolation Marie Riedeselle has bartered for a paying gold mine in the Nome country, and though she is happy that her claim has panned out the little woman admits that she would not undergo the same experience again for many times the amount of her newly made wealth.

Not until Mrs. Riedeselle stepped aboard the Senator en route from Nome to the Pacific Northwest did a load lift from her heart and a feeling of safety and security steal over her, for she dreaded a slip at the last minute which might render all her toiling and

SUFFERING IN VAIN.

The fortune won so pluckily and with such sacrifice is estimated at something less than a million. Mrs. Riedeselle herself is reticent about the figures, but she admits that her share of a gold mine located on the Eldorado river, sixty miles from Nome, and owned by herself and two male partners, will keep her in comfort, even luxury, all the rest of her days. Already part of it is being devoted to her own education, and later on some of it will be used to build and operate a sanatorium in the Connecticut hills.

"It is in 1897, during the great rush to the gold fields of Alaska, that I went prospecting," said Mrs. Riedeselle. "I had lived and worked in New York long enough to find out that happiness and the contentment and enjoyment that come from following one's own bent are possible only with a substantial income. I wanted to study and I had to put in my days working. Seeing nothing better ahead of me, I decided to give up the struggle here and make a desperate plunge which might land me in wealth or be my end."

"A couple of years, or three at the outside, were all I counted on in order to locate a rich claim, but each summer that I planned to return to the United States brought some new problem, and so year after year slid by, keeping me a prisoner in the icy country. It was hard, harder than I can make you understand," she added with a shudder, "and if it had not been for the protection of the West Indian doctor, who was always just at my shoulder to help me through all difficulties—"

"Who was the West Indian doctor?"

"The spirit of the little doctor really won my fortune for me," she replied. "He has been my friend since childhood, and even after his death his guardianship has not deserted me. I owed him my life when very young, for I had developed infantile consumption, and my flesh-firm. He was like a small spaniel, the doctor—so quiet, timid and docile, but ready to spring up and come to my aid at the first call. Before his death he told me that, 'dead or alive,' he would be my constant companion and guardian; all I had to do to evoke his help would be to call his name. I have done it ever so many times since then, and always with the result that the spirit has responded instantly and brought me safely out of danger."

"That sounds like the remark of a spiritualist, doesn't it?" she asked. "But I am not a believer in the powers of mediums and communication with disembodied spirits, though my doctor is as real to me as any living friend. I know that he is ever at my shoulder, very quiet and invisible to all but me, and that he is ever ready to do my bidding."

"After two years of nursing, doctoring and studying in Dawson City without any nearer approach to the gold mines of my dreams, I determined to reach Nome at any cost and look about. I was going to open a restaurant there, but upon arriving in the mining city I found that many others before me had ventured upon the same business with utter failure, so the idea was abandoned. I had no money and MUST HAVE FOOD AND SHELTER.

"At this point in my experience I heard the miners talking about a sick man in a camp down by the water, so I made up my mind to see him and do what I could to nurse him back to health. The poor lad, whom I found lying in water-soaked blankets, with boots and clothing damp and soggy, was suffering from pneumonia. His partner had done all he could, but he had no knowledge of medicine. They needed a woman's help. Together we pulled the boy through the siege, and to show their gratitude they offered me a partnership in a claim they had just staked out on the Eldorado, sixty miles from Nome. 'If it pans out,' they said, 'there'll be plenty for three and if it doesn't—well, it's just the chance every miner takes.'"

"Here was my golden opportunity, and, backed by the spirit doctor, there seemed every chance for striking it rich. Summertime had just begun, so the three of us journeyed to our claim on the Eldorado and put up temporary tents. The first months were easy, and we got mine working in good shape. Meanwhile winter was coming on. Snow piled up around us and a blizzard succeeded blizzard. It was the hardest winter during the seven years I spent in the Klondike. For days we had nothing to eat."

"Why didn't I call on my spirit friend? I did, and he never failed to respond. I lent him occasionally to my partners, and more than once they owed their lives to him."

"One of them set out on a long snowshoe journey, and as he started from the cabin I felt a premonition of danger, so I offered him the protection of my spirit doctor. I knew his disability in the super-natural guardian, but I bade the doctor accompany him and said in the last extremity my partner must remember that

KING CHRISTIAN FEARS FOR CZAR

(Special Cable to The Telegram. Copyright, 1905, by W. R. Hearst.)

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 28.—King Christian is greatly worried over the threatened outbreak of a revolution in Russia and fears for the life of the czar, who has always been his favorite grandson.

He keeps up a vivid correspondence with his daughter, the Dowager Empress Maria Feodorovna, and beseeches her to use her influence with the czar to induce him to cut loose from the grand ducal clique, as he did when he issued his peace manifesto, and give a free constitution to Russia. He has an active ally in the czarina, to whom he has taken a great liking and who favors a constitutional government, which would free her husband from the cares which are sapping his strength.

It is known that the Danish ambassador to St. Petersburg has written the king that the situation is one of grave danger, and only by a miracle can either a palace revolution or a popular uprising be avoided.

The whole situation reminds to a remarkable degree the situation in France before the great revolution. Like Louis XVI, the czar heartily desires the welfare of his people, but, like that unhappy king, he is too weak to make up his mind to take sides with any of the two struggling parties.

So worried is King Christian, indeed, that, in spite of his great age, he declares he will go to St. Petersburg as soon as the winter is over to try to personally persuade the czar to accede to the demands of his people.

MAY A MAN PAWN ANCESTOR'S TOMB?

Special Cable to The Telegram.

(Copyright, 1905, by W. R. Hearst.)

VIENNA, Jan. 28.—A most unusual case will come up before the court at Graz next week to decide whether a man has the right to pawn the tombs of his ancestors as security for debt.

Marechal Count Karl von Tarnoff, former president of the Army museum in this city, died in this city nine years ago, and his body was placed in a magnificent vault in the cemetery of St. Leonard, at Graz.

To the great surprise of the people of that city, his coffin was recently secretly removed and buried in a simple grave, without as much as a cross or stone to mark his resting place.

Several generals, friends of the deceased, decided to investigate, and found that a nephew of the dead count, after spending in dissipation the money which he had inherited, had pawned the vault, which represents a value of 30,000 crowns, to the owner of a fashionable hotel to whom he owed many thousands for wine suppers.

After writing for some time for his money, the hotel owner took possession of the vault, removed the count's body and sold the vault to a rich pork packer. The court will now decide whether the transactions were legal or not.

SPONGING SCHOONER SUNK

KEY WEST, Fla., Jan. 28.—The schooner Volunteer, owned here by George Bartlett, was sunk in the gulf a few days ago. The Volunteer was loaded with cotton from the British steamship Audania, wrecked on the Bahaman reefs and was returning to this port. She sprung a leak so large that the pumps could not keep up with the inflow of water. The crew, escaped in their boats and were picked up by the British steamship Penrith Castle and landed at Sand Key. The Volunteer was a sponging schooner of twenty-four tone burden and was manned by a crew of negro spongers.
