Russia and Japan Have Now Agreed to Talk Peace

BLOW TO CZAR'S MOTHER

She Has Persistently Urged the Czar to Continue the Present Struggle

WASHINGTON, June 10.—From an authoritative official source it is learned today that it has been determined that the plenipotentiaries of Japan and Russia for determination of peace terms will hold their sessions in Washington.

JAPAN ACCEPTS TOKIO, June 10.—Japan has agreed to President Roosevelt's suggestion to appoint plenipotentiaries to meet Russian plenipotentiaries.

RUSSIA IS READY ST. PETERSBURG, June 10.—It was stated at the foreign office this afternoon that Russia is ready to appoint representatives to hear Japanese peace proposals, on being informed that Japan was nominating representatives.

JAPAN EXPECTS INDEMNITY (Copyright, 1905, by W. R. Hearst.) Special to The Telegram.

TOKIO, June 10.—Although the prospect of the war being brought to an end is welcome to the Japanese, there is yet no sanguine feelings that the present negotiations will bring about that result. It is deemed necessary that the nation shall be reimbursed for the great expenditures of blood and money that have been imposed upon it by this war, which was practically forced by Russia, and it is felt that there is some basis in the belief that Russia may hesitate to accept the terms that it will be necessary for Japan to name.

WILL MAKE EVERY EFFORT It can be said, however, that every possible effort will be made by Japan's representatives when they meet those of Russia to arrive at an agreement that shall result in bringing the war to an end. No intimation is given as to the other terms of settlement except that possession of Port Arthur is likely to be insisted on and the integrity of Manchuria guaranteed.

PEACE MAY BRING TROUBLE (Copyright, 1905, by W. R. Hearst.) Special Cable to The Telegram. ST. PETERSBURG, June 10.—Now that the outlook for peace seems practically bright, the government is confronted with a new peril. The practical certainty that a substantial indemnity for the war will be incurred in conducting the war will be the principal feature of the Japanese demands has given the radicals a new weapon to use against the government.

Must Deal Harsh. It is the general belief in government circles that Trepeff has his work cut out for him in the event of Russia agreeing to the indemnity proposition and that he will find it necessary to deal with the malcontents and revolutionists with the same stern severity that he showed in Moscow, which is the center of dissatisfaction.

No Suggestion Offered. The southern provinces and Finland are also contributing their share to the general turmoil and in all the criticism no suggestion is offered to the government as a way out of the difficulty that confronts it.

ENGAGED TO A KING LOVES ANOTHER MAN

Princess Patricia Who Is to Wed Alfonso, Loves a German Prince

Special Cable to The Telegram. LONDON, June 10.—The young king of Spain has set tongues wagging in the fashionable and courtier circles over the tragic fate which has befallen the beautiful young princess to whom he is reported to be engaged.

NAME LED DEATH LIST The Russians have well known the harsh, fierce nature of this woman and long ago, when the death lists were made out, the name of the dowager led all the rest.

PARIS, June 10.—The very fact that peace between Russia and Japan is a possibility means that the war woman of the czar's household has been overthrown. It is known to all diplomats that the czar's mother, the dowager empress, is one of the most dangerous elements of the Russian government.

When, after the bloody day's fightings of January the czar really proposed granting his subjects some form of representative government, it is declared that the dowager seized the infant czarévitch from his nurse's arms, and holding it before the perturbed emperor cried out: "What, and would you rob your own son of his birthright?"

CHICAGO EMPLOYERS ARE CLOSELY UNITED Peace Conferences Bring Out the Fact That Employers Are Standing Together

CHICAGO, Ill., June 10.—Action of the Chicago team owners in regard to the threatened lockout of 8,000 teamsters employed by the members has been held up by the decision of the association to postpone its meeting from tonight to Monday night.

Despite the protests of Colonel W. P. Bend, who has asked for the meeting today, the influences in the session for delay were strong enough to force a postponement.

The meeting will be held in the Great Northern hotel, where a decision will be reached as to whether the association will force out its drivers by ordering delivery to strike bound firms.

Shea Returns. G. P. Shea returned to his apartments in the Briggs House this afternoon after an absence of over 24 hours.

Future Conferences. Future "peace conferences" will be conducted on behalf of the employers association through J. W. Farwell Jr., if at all, and must be held in union "peace committee" headed by President Walter J. Gibbons of the teamsters' joint council, by the State street department store managers and owners through Joseph Rasch of Siegel, Cooper and Company. Mr. Farwell is chairman of the "action committee" of the employers' association, which consists of eight members.

Employers Strongly United. The peace efforts also established the fact that the employers are united so strongly that it will be impossible to make an agreement that does not provide for a settlement of the entire strike.

BOY IS KILLED While Looking at a Pistol an Accidental Discharge Occurs

AUSTIN, Texas, June 10.—Harland Hardin, a young negro aged 15 years, was shot and instantly killed this afternoon. His brother, Bone Hardin, was showing a weapon to Fat Adams, another boy, who was in the bath room at the time, who said that Harland was sitting on the edge of the tub when the brother was showing the weapon to them, and it was discharged, killing Harland. The killing is claimed to be accidental. Bone Hardin was arrested.

FOUND DEAD J. H. Winkler Found Dead on Railroad Track Near Waco

WACO, Texas, June 10.—J. H. Winkler was found dead on the Cotton Belt railroad near the city this afternoon soon after a passenger train passed along.

The train stopped and the conductor states that the man was cold when he reached him. The body was horribly mangled and could not have been recognized but for some papers on his person. The man was a farmer and resided about six miles from the city. He came to be on the track in a mystery. He was about 35 years of age and leaves a family.

AUSTIN, Texas, June 10.—Acting State Health Officer Florence today received a letter from State Health Officer Tabor, who is now at Montreal, Canada, on his bridal tour, in which Dr. Tabor writes that he will reach Austin on June 25.

CHEATHAM ATTACKS ALL CROP REPORTS

Raises Question as to Integrity of Government Figures Regarding Grain

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 10.—Expressing absolute confidence that a complete census had been made in support of the charges of irregularity in handling the cotton statistics of the department of agriculture and that his charges would be fully sustained, Richard Cheatham, secretary of the American Cotton Association, last evening opened up the wider question of the integrity of other crop reports issued by the government.

It Deserves Seriousness. "This matter has not been treated in the public reports with the seriousness it deserves," declared Mr. Cheatham, warning "Nobody would appreciate from what has been said about it what it means to a great industry. On these statistics depends in a large way the business of every man who raises cotton, who manufactures it, who sells its products or who wears it, and yet the story is calmly printed that the man against whom these charges have been made of manipulating the reports has been suspended at his own request, pending investigation.

Honesty in Reports. "This inquiry into the honesty of the crop reports virtually concerns not only the cotton raisers, but everybody else engaged in raising crops of any kind. The gamblers of Chicago and New York have the same interest in manipulating the markets in wheat, corn and oats and hay that they have in cotton. If they can reach the government report on the cotton, why not the reports on these other crops? I tell you it may turn out that the cotton people only got to it ahead of the others."

Mr. Cheatham admitted that he had no idea how long the investigation might continue, and he would not say anything about the evidence before Secretary Willson. He was positive, however, in declaring that it would convince the secretary that the charges were well founded.

VETERANS TO MEET IN PIOTAL STATE

Kentucky Furnished Both the Presidents and Many Leaders in Civil War

LOUISVILLE, Ky., June 10.—That Kentucky, in the war between the states, furnished the two presidents, Abraham Lincoln, northern, and Jefferson Davis, southern, both natives of the state, is generally known, as is also the fact that a Kentuckian, General Robert Anderson of Louisville, was the officer in charge of Fort Sumter when the first gun of the great war was fired. But it is not widely known that Kentucky played a star part in the mighty drama of the south.

The occasion of the fifteenth national reunion of the United Confederate Veterans at Louisville, June 14-16, is a fitting opportunity to emphasize some points indicating the prominent part played by Kentucky. Of the eight full generals one-fourth were by birth Kentuckians—Albert Sidney Johnston and John B. Hood. The only full general killed on field of battle was a Kentuckian, Albert Sidney Johnston. The only southern governor killed on the field of battle was a Kentuckian—Governor George W. Johnson, shot dead in the fight at Shiloh while he marched in the ranks carrying a musket. Of the seventeen lieutenant generals in the Confederate army two were from Kentucky—Simon Bolivar Buckner and Richard Taylor, the latter the only son of the president of the United States, Zachary Taylor.

RYAN INTERESTS WIN Battle Over Seaboard Air Line Ends Victoriously For Ryan

HOUSTON, Texas, June 10.—Information from absolutely authoritative sources reached here today that the battle for the control of the Seaboard Air Line railway has finally resulted in a defeat for the Williams interests and a complete victory for Thomas F. Ryan, James A. Blair and associates of the reorganized committee. The Ryan-Blair syndicate is represented in the control of the Seaboard by a former Houstonian, N. S. Meldrum, whom they have put as first vice president and treasurer of the road.

SERIOUSLY INJURED Captain W. H. McNeill of Georgetown Hurt at Saratoga

GEORGETOWN, Texas, June 10.—A telegram received from Saratoga, Texas, states that Captain W. H. McNeill, collector of the Texas agricultural exhibit at the World's Fair and well known over Texas, was seriously hurt this morning and will die. Mrs. McNeill and son James left immediately for Saratoga.

CHIEF BOOKKEEPER W. B. Harper Receives Appointment in Comptroller's Office

AUSTIN, Texas, June 10.—W. B. GETS SEVEN YEARS

For Attempting to Murder His Divorced Wife

PALESTINE, Texas, June 10.—In the district court today B. S. Harrison, an old man, was given seven years for attempt to murder. Harrison, it was alleged, tried to kill his divorced wife in this city several months ago. He gained entrance to the house by cutting a panel out of the door and is said to have shot at the woman three times.

KILLED BY TRAIN Body of Mike Craden Badly Mangled

ROSEBUD, Texas, June 10.—Mike Craden was run over and killed by the southbound San Antonio and Aransas Pass train last night. He lived at Burlington and it is supposed he was riding the bumpers. The body was badly mangled.

APPOINTED SPONSOR WACO, Texas, June 10.—Miss Mattie Laster has been appointed sponsor of the First Division Sons of Confederate Veterans, accepted, and goes to Louisville. She names her maids at once. The appointment was made by General W. P. Lane of Fort Worth.

FIGHTS FOR HIS LIFE WITH AN ALLIGATOR

Penned in Small Tank, William Snyder Has Encounter With Huge Reptile

NEW YORK, June 10.—Penned in a small brick tank in the Central park "zoo" William Snyder fought a desperate battle for life today with a huge alligator.

Snyder started to drive the alligator to the far end of the tank from which the water had been drawn. The little ones went, but the big fellow in the tank, who is known as "Lanky Bob," was ugly and morose and showed no sign of moving. Snyder prodded the big reptile viciously.

Instantly the tail of the alligator slashed through the air like a great whip; striking the legs of the keeper and knocking them from under him. Snyder was dazed by his fall and almost helpless.

With a spasmodic movement the keeper jerked his legs from the open jaws and managed to get to his feet, only to be knocked down again.

Snyder managed a second time to get his legs out of the way before the alligator closed up on them and then, staggering to his feet, he jabbed the sharp-ended pike into the under body of Lanky Bob, the only sensitive spot, and held him back for a few minutes. Snyder attempted to climb out of the tank.

The alligator was too quick to permit this, however, and every time the keeper let go his grip on the pike the beast would smash against his legs, knocking him down or bruising him so badly that he could hardly bear the pain.

He was fast losing his strength, while the alligator was growing angrier every moment. At last the pike was snapped out of the keeper's hand by the alligator. Snyder, nearer death at the moment than ever before in his experience as a "zoo" attendant, kept his nerve and made a successful leap for the edge of the tank. As he scrambled out the alligator seized Snyder again, but fortunately the cloth gave way, and as the keeper leaped the fence and fell on the grass beyond he had but little clothing left.

TO RESTORE TOLSTOI TO ORTHODOX CHURCH

Part of the Plan of M. Witte to Bring About a Greater Religious Freedom

(Copyright, 1905, by W. R. Hearst.) BY EMIL BENJAMIN.

ST. PETERSBURG, June 10.—I am informed that steps are being taken to restore Leo Tolstoi to the bosom of the orthodox church, from which he was expelled by decree of the holy synod just four years ago.

M. Witte, as part of the general campaign against the influence of M. Pobedonosteff, to whom Tolstoi's excommunication was due, represented to the czar at his last audience that a formal revocation of the church's anathema was the logical result of the recent religious liberty ukase.

Not Anti-Christian. Tolstoi, he argued, was not anti-Christian, but sectarian, and the ukase had specially freed sectarians from oppression by church or state. Nicholas II expressed surprise when informed by Witte that Tolstoi had been solemnly cursed from a thousand pulpits. He declared that canonically the orthodox priesthood was obliged to pray for the excommunicated and not to curse them.

To Instruct Parish Priests. The only disability involved in excommunication was loss of the right to attend communion, and Tolstoi had himself given up that right. A notice will be issued shortly by the synod, acting under pressure, instructing the parish priests that the church forbids the public denunciation of those it has excommunicated.

M. Pobedonosteff is using for all it is worth the argument that the annulling of Tolstoi's excommunication will give the czar an opportunity for using yet another manifesto against church and state.

It is pretty well known in financial circles that the price paid by the Ryan syndicate was in the neighborhood of $5,000,000. It is also well known that the stock purchased yields an annual dividend of some $3,000, scarcely more than a clerk's salary.

Manifestly, as was pointed out, this stock was not bought for the purpose of investment. The opinion of several shrewd men who have watched the trend of affairs and discussed the situation today was that the whole arrangement is but part of a scheme to consolidate and solidify all the well-to-do corporate interests—gas, electricity, street railways and subways, present and prospective, in one grand unit.

But as was pointed out, the selection made for the overlord of the society and the possible formation of a fighting and traffic trust by the use of the Equitable fund will do much toward minimizing this influence for good.

It was reported that if the resignation of Second Vice President Tarbell is accepted and he is forced out there would be a revolt of general agents in this city and elsewhere, which would cripple future operations of the society for some time to come. It was said that these agents would follow Mr. Tarbell, whichever way he might lead, either into the ranks of some other big insurance company or to assist him in founding a new company altogether. This report was not verified.

A number of general agents were about the Equitable offices today, who declared that there would be no general defection. This would appear the more reasonable when it is recalled that many of them have immense incomes locked in the Equitable, policies now in force in the shape of renewals, which would be forfeited by a withdrawal from the company under these circumstances.

No Reason to Retire. Friends of Mr. Tarbell expect that when it is shown that he is not censured by the forthcoming report of Superintendent Hendricks there will be no reason for his retirement and his resignation will be returned. Friends of James H. Hyde predict the same thing for him and con-

Attack on Morton Followed by Amicable Note

TARBELL HOLDS POWER

Holds Balance Through Influence With Agents Who Will Follow Him

NEW YORK, June 10.—The remarkable developments in the Equitable Assurance Society situation, which have occurred in the last thirty-six hours left the financial situation and community today in a state of complete bewilderment.

After the selection of Paul Morton as overlord, the resignation of one of the old officers and the announcement that James H. Hyde had sold his stock in the society to a syndicate headed by Thomas F. Ryan, it was supposed that these actions were only preliminary moves in a great battle between the financial giants for the control of great interests outside of the Equitable itself.

ATTACK ON MORTON It was thought that a great fight was on between Ryan and Belmont for the valuable franchise rights about to be awarded in this city. It looked as though the war in the Equitable might be carried on indefinitely. B. Ives at the meeting of the directors, in objecting to the selection of Paul Morton as chairman showed some temper and attacked his record as made the subject of testimony before the interstate commerce commission.

Mr. Ives left the board room in a rage when the majority voted for Paul Morton and refused to remain to offer congratulations with the rest. He was quivering with anger when some newspaper reporters stopped him in the hall and asked him what had transpired in the meeting. "I want you to understand that I am a free American citizen and that I want to be let alone. I am going now to do some work," he said.

Reconsider Plans. Other men of influence and standing in the financial world took the same position and a continuance of the fight for millions was looked for. A night of reflection seems to have brought a change of feeling, at least so far as Mr. Ives is concerned. After making his attack on Mr. Morton he doubtless felt that he could not remain on the board of directors and so sent in his resignation.

The letter of resignation is much more amicable than his talk of the day before and says, among other things, that, as he was not a stockholder in his own right, he desires to give Mr. Morton a free hand and wishes him every success. This apparent change of sentiment mystified Wall street not a little and the perplexity was still further increased by the perfectly friendly attitude by Mr. Belmont toward the whole transaction.

Instead of showing fight or the slightest intention of resigning in any way opposed to the Ryan control of the Equitable he prepared a statement and sent it over to the Equitable building by one of his secretaries, saying that what had been done and said in the matter of Tolstoi had his fullest endorsement and that the principle was the right one.

BELMONT LINES UP Mr. Belmont also denied that he had opposed Mr. Morton and bespoke the gratitude and indorsement of everyone for Mr. Ryan. The mystification was further increased during the day by speculation as to the reasons of the purchase of the Hyde stock.

Price Paid. It is pretty well known in financial circles that the price paid by the Ryan syndicate was in the neighborhood of $5,000,000. It is also well known that the stock purchased yields an annual dividend of some $3,000, scarcely more than a clerk's salary.

Manifestly, as was pointed out, this stock was not bought for the purpose of investment. The opinion of several shrewd men who have watched the trend of affairs and discussed the situation today was that the whole arrangement is but part of a scheme to consolidate and solidify all the well-to-do corporate interests—gas, electricity, street railways and subways, present and prospective, in one grand unit.

The trustees named for this stock have all accepted the trust. They are former President Cleveland, Judge Morgan J. O'Brien and George Westinghouse of Pittsburgh. It is thought that the attention of these gentlemen to the affairs of the Equitable Society would go far toward restoring the public confidence in the institution, which has been so much disturbed of late.

But as was pointed out, the selection made for the overlord of the society and the possible formation of a fighting and traffic trust by the use of the Equitable fund will do much toward minimizing this influence for good.

It was reported that if the resignation of Second Vice President Tarbell is accepted and he is forced out there would be a revolt of general agents in this city and elsewhere, which would cripple future operations of the society for some time to come. MAIL CARRIERS' PLANS

Local Organization Opposes Affiliation with Unions

Among the important questions which will be discussed at the state convention of letter carriers, to be held in this city July 4, is the matter of affiliation with the American Federation of Labor. This question has previously been voted down at national conventions, despite the urgent request of the A. F. of L., asking the carriers to unite.

This matter promises to be the most vital question to be considered at the coming convention. At the last regular meeting of the local organization the members voted unanimously to go on record as being opposed to affiliation with any union or federation of labor.

Members of branch No. 226, Fort Worth, are making preparations to entertain the state convention.

Captain B. E. Paddock will make an address of welcome in behalf of the city and C. E. Foster will speak for the local carriers. Response to this will be made by President Winn of the Texas state association.

According to statements of local carriers, there will be very little business to come before the convention, aside from the election of officers. After the work of the convention is concluded, a barbecue and picnic will be held in the afternoon, followed by a ball at night.

A committee has secured the exclusive use of Grunewald's park and pavilion. Each carrier will invite a number of his friends and a large crowd and a good time is expected.

W. R. McDaniel and D. B. Price have been appointed as chairman of the reception and entertainment committees, respectively, by the local branch.

Local delegates are C. E. Foster, C. F. Hammond and N. P. White. C. E. Foster is being urged as delegate at large for Texas to the Portland, Ore., convention.

RANGE MAY NOW BE OVERSTOCKED

The ample rains that have fallen this spring have worked a marvelous change in the condition of the ranges of the west and with proper usage the effect should be noticed for more than one season. Those who have given thought to the matter realize fully that overstocking not only causes loss of cattle and sheep from starvation in time of drought, but it causes the rapid extermination of the most valuable of the native grasses and forage plants. In any pasture grasses first eaten down are those which are the most nutritious or most palatable. Unless the pasturage is fostered and these best grasses are protected by resting or by artificial care and cultivation, they are soon reduced in number and become unimportant factors. They are prevented from ripening seed and are eaten so close that often the roots are killed by exposure. The first result of over-grazing is the disappearance of the best grasses, that is a lessening of the potential carrying capacity of the pasture. If the best grasses cover 25 per cent of the range, the loss from over-grazing will be at least that amount. If the pasture is still over-stocked, a similar process is continued with the remaining species until at last not a blade or fragment of a stem is left to support any grazing animal. The young shoots are eaten off as rapidly as put forth and the vitality of the plant is sapped, so that they are unable to endure the extremes of temperature or shortage of water supply to the same degree as when growth has been uninterrupted. It has been noticed that very often in times of drouth the best grazing grasses, such as sedge grasses, needle grasses, grammas and curly mesquite, which will ordinarily withstand the hardest usage are destroyed root and branch by being eaten into the ground. Not only is the grass destroyed, but the ground over extensive areas is trampled and lompated by cattle until every sprig that grows up it breaks up and is blown away. Following the destruction of the valuable perennials, the low annuals, such as the six weeks' grama, come in and supply almost the only feed. At the same time that the valuable grasses are disappearing the land is invaded by a vast number of rampant weeds which are not eaten by any grazing animal. It is the opinion of a majority of stockmen that the loss in what may be called the capital value of the grazing lands has been enormous within the past few years. The land made poor by this stripping process suffers actual decrease in fertility through exposure of the surface layers to the sun and air. Soils covered with verdure are always fertile and those which lack a protecting plant covering are sterile and deficient in life. Over-grazing also subjects the soil to the destructive action of torrential rains. When rain falls upon any field thickly covered with grass or other vegetation, the surface drainage is much retarded because the total surface for the retention of water is largely increased, but when the grass is all eaten off, or destroyed in any other way, not only is less rainfall absorbed, but the full force of the rushing waters is exerted upon the exposed surface, and vast quantities of the finest and richest parts of the soil covering are washed into the streams. The denudation of land by the destruction of grasses, while perhaps not so familiar as that following from the destruction of forests, nevertheless is proceeding quite rapidly in the west. The washing away of the soil proceeds less rapidly on the plains where the slopes are less abrupt than in the mountains, but the result is just as sure, although the obvious destruction is less marked.

Wherever grasses are allowed to fully mature and are not entirely eaten down, we see a decided difference in the amount an drapidity of the drainage. Less water runs off into the streams in the form of floods and more is absorbed into the soil.

These are the various results of the evil course of overstocking the grazing lands of the west, if persistently continued, will surely supply another example of the transmutation by human agencies of a fertile land into a desolate waste. A few two or three months during the growing season in the early spring would enable the early grasses to ripen and shed their seeds, thus perpetuating such species. After the seed has fallen, the cattle can be turned on the grass for two or three months, and again transferred to a fresh pasture. In the same way autumn and winter pastures can be secured. Several stockmen who have employed this method on a large scale for a number of years say that their ranges are constantly improving, in marked contrast to the deterioration where the old methods were practiced.—Field and Farm.

IN SCURRY COUNTY

Snyder Coming West.

Mr. Thomas of Byron poisoned two of his fine mares last week. He was poisoning grasshoppers and set the bucket, containing poisoned bran, within reach of his team. As a result of eating the contents of the bucket both horses died.

It is reported here on good authority that the Spur ranch has changed hands, passing under control of E. P. and S. A. Swenson of New York, and who own large ranch interests in Jones and other West Texas counties. The Spur ranch was owned by a Scotch syndicate, and contains about 1,000,000 acres of land, and sold at $3 per acre. We are informed that the company was offered $20 a head for its cattle.

IN BREWSTER COUNTY

Alpine Avalanche.

W. T. Henderson, the pioneer breeder of Galloways in the Alpine country, in his ambition to have the finest herd in the southwest has for several years been ransacking the whole country for the best and buying regardless of price wherever he found it. He returned yesterday from a raid through Kansas and Missouri with twenty-six registered thoroughbreds, every one of which boasts a pedigree as long as your arm, and one came from Bonnie Scotland, the aboriginal home of the Galloway. The following were purchased of J. M. Hill of Halstead, Kan.: Imported Sea Lad of Thornhill, 2 years old, $150.

Pride of Carnation, 15787, yearling, bred by Bonanza King, 19327, $125.

Eldorado Standard, 24903, $55.

Norma Druid, 1887, $100.

Sir Robert, 25896, $75.

The other twenty-one bulls are from the farm of A. M. Thompson, Nashua, Mo. They are all as fine as silk and the average price was about $100.

Mr. Henderson will reserve ten of these bulls for use on his ranch; the other sixteen are for sale.

IN DEAF SMITH COUNTY

Hereford Brand.

C. Grant of Kansas bought 230 head two, three and four-year-old steers from Crosby county parties, to be shipped from Hereford to Kansas pastures in a few days.

John T. Crowley of Fisher county this week sold Lee Blivins of Amarillo 600 two-year-old and 100 three-year-old steers to be delivered at Amarillo Saturday. The cattle were inspected and shipped from Hereford. Private terms.

Elliot and John C. Johnston returned Monday from Plainview and other South Plains points, where they had been for several days purchasing a bunch of fine horses. Both gentlemen were well pleased with their success in some of the very best breeds at reasonable figures. They will ship to Central Texas to market.

J. O. Lindsey came in from his Castro county ranch Tuesday and reports everything in a most favorable condition on the range and farm. Mr. Lindsey is in the wheat business this year and is rejoicing over the splendid yield which is now assured. He informed us that while the loco weed is found in greater abundance this year than usual, the cattle are not eating it on account of there being plenty of grass.

Mr. Harp, who bought the John Estes' place some time ago, has sold it now to some northern buyers for $38,000. This place or ranch consists of four sections well improved and has on it 300 acres of fine wheat which promises well and 1000 acres of alfalfa that cannot be beaten; besides a very fine orchard with some fruit.

From all over the range country comes reports of losses from dipping cattle. In some instances the hair is taken off the animal and its growth checked, while in others numbers of cattle have died. Many cattlemen are denouncing the methods practiced as cruel and unnecessary, but it is not difficult for those who are familiar with the cattle situation to realize that some means of preventing the spreading of contagious diseases is absolutely necessary. Thus far it seems that dipping is the best means yet discovered.

IN LLANO COUNTY

Llano Times.

W. M. Walton, who has been in Llano with the herd of Landa cattle from New Braunfels, made several sales here, and also some at Marble Falls and Fairland. He sold twenty-eight head to F. H. Holloway at Fairland, and to others in that section. Mr. Holloway has a fine ranch at Fairland, and is going to raise blooded stock in good shape.

D. H. Hart, clerk of the federal court, has just returned from a visit to his ranch in Burnet county, and he reports stock in fine shape. Mr. Hart announced that he and Captain Fred Peck have just purchased 170 head of fine Durham cattle and placed them on the ranch. These cattle were bought from W. T. Brown of Williamson county and are among the finest stock in the state. Messrs. Hart and Peck recently acquired one of the largest ranches in Burnet county and are now engaged in stocking it.

IN SUTTON COUNTY

Sonora News.

Max Mayer of Sonora sold for D. K. McMullan of San Angelo to Don Cooper 150 three-year-old steers at $21 per head.

Mr. Max Mayer sold to W. A. Glasscock of Sonora five head of registered Hereford cattle, four cows and one one-year-old heifer for $750.

Max Mayer of Sonora bought for the Val Verde Land and Cattle Company 200 yearling steers at $13, from J. W. Odow, and seventy-five one and two-year-old steers from R. E. Glasscock at $12 and $16.

J. W. Pruitt, the sheepman who has his sheep on the Pappan ranch in Edwards county, was in Sonora Monday trading. He has about 1,800 stock sheep for sale.

A. W. Mills of San Angelo was in Sonora Wednesday, on his way home from Crockett county, where he purchased the Moon Kilpatrick ranch on Howard draw for $200.

W. W. Means had on the Kansas City market 1,116 wethers, weighing 105 pounds, that brought $4.85. These wethers were from the evil river country and indicates that the country is still the Paradise.

IN POTTER COUNTY

Amerillo Herald.

J. B. Beauregard of Pinos Wells, N. M., a prominent sheepman in those parts, was in the city Sunday and Monday, coming overland from his ranch, and taking the train Tuesday morning for Chicago. Mr. Beauregard has his eyes on a home ranch in the Panhandle for supply of blooded sires to his range interests, and may take up a proposition not far from Amarillo.

W. C. Wright, county commissioner, was in from the ranch yesterday and today, and is much pleased over the existing conditions. The plentiful rains have pushed the grass finely and cattle are looking well, his own splendid stock of registered stuff being as fat and sleek as though ready for prize-winning at a show. Mr. Wright has lived fourteen years in the Panhandle, and ought to be a pretty fair authority, and he says he has never seen a more favorable prospect.

IN HEMPHILL COUNTY

Canadian Record.

Sam Isaacs returned home last Saturday morning from Colorado, Texas. Mr. Isaacs bought 1,300 head of three-year-old steers in Scurry county at $23 around. The herd will be traded to Hemphill county, and Mr. Isaacs and his men will get it at Clarendon. The outfit started from the Mundota ranch last Tuesday.

INGALLS IS PLEASSED

CINCINNATI, Ohio, June 10.—M. E. Ingalls, one of the members of the Frick commission, is very well pleased with the latest developments in the Equitable Life Assurance Society affair.

"If the reports from New York are true," he says, "there has been a happy termination of the difficulties in the Equitable Life. Paul Morton is a good man for the place. With the one-man power eliminated, the company is all right. I look for a paring of salaries under the new regime."

When asked if he thought that any of the directors who resigned would be asked to return to the fold, he said that he was not contemplating such a possibility.

PARLOR OF THE "PRESIDENTIAL SUITE" AT THE NEW WILLARD HOTEL, IN WASHINGTON

HOPE OF PEACE DAWNS ON THE EASTERN BATTLEFIELDS

duce her son Nicholas to go abroad on account of an alleged illness that the young czar's suspicions were aroused.

TALK OF BANISHMENT

There was talk for a time of banishing the dowager to Copenhagen—she is the daughter of the king of Denmark and the harsh sister of the gentle queen of England—but the shrewd woman succeeded in allaying her son's anger and alarm. It is a current belief in Russia that the dowager was one of the chief instigators of the war with Japan. It is certain that her influence has been exerted to continue it. Of late, however, the power and spirit of this imperious woman has been broken.

BLOW HAS TOLD

The dreadful force of the blow on blow has so told on her that a private letter received here from a person intimately connected with the household of the dowager empress declares that grave fears are entertained lest she die of sorrow.

A special wire connects the dowager empress' residence with the hospital and nursing homes and her majesty is in constant communication with the physicians and nurses who have charge of the sick and wounded who have returned to Russia. She is constantly occupied in planning means to relieve the sufferings of the military invalids and personally sees that her orders are put into execution.

Her face has assumed a wan, careworn expression, which is most disquieting to those of her household, whose close attention upon her majesty permits them to notice the terrible ravages of her sorrow upon her health.

"It is the most admirable peace of statesmanship I have ever seen. It is entirely based upon the noble idea of humanity and civilization, it will be regarded as the beacon light of the civilized world, to be followed in international transactions, and I am sure that the suggestion made in that manner by the president will be promptly accepted by Japan."

To Demand Port Arthur

The Japanese legation is still maintaining the position that Japan has not yet entirely estimated her indemnity and that this will only become known specifically when the Japanese plenipotentiary states the terms. The general impression gained here as to the special desire of Japan is same terms from China as it is now held by Russia. Japan, it is reasoned, has all she can get in Korea, as she could not have full sovereignty over that country. That Port Arthur is what Japan wants is a matter of history, past and present. Japan was deprived of Port Arthur at the time of the Chinese-Japanese war and got instead the island of Formosa. The main proposition of Japan will be for the possession of Port Arthur to put a stop for all time to Russian intrigue with China in Manchuria.

Powers Opposed

There is already a report that none of the ambassadors, even the British ambassador, who has been consulted by the president, favors the delivery of Port Arthur to Japan. Japan has by this war become the great power in the east and the rival of European nations along the Chinese coast, is believed to be already plotting to allow Japan a big indemnity rather than put her in the place at Port Arthur which Russia occupied when she was the great eastern power. It is said here that the plot of the powers is that Manchuria shall be delivered intact to China and that whatever concessions she may make for railways, etc., must have the approval of the nations which now have long leaseholds in China.

Japan may get more than a billion dollars and possibly some unimportant Russian territory, if the European concert has its way.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 10.—President Roosevelt is expected back in Washington tomorrow afternoon, when it is intimated he may have the replies in full of Russia and Japan to his individual notes suggesting peace, which was published today. During the absence of the president the mouths of officials, as they put it, are "absolutely sealed." They will neither affirm nor deny that this government's knowledge that both Japan and Russia have adopted the president's view that in the interest of humanity the war must cease.

It is not believed, however, that detailed reports of the belligerent governments have been received here—a proper reply to the president would demand consideration before the cabinet. The intimation is strong here from official sources that the declaration of a truce or armistice is to be looked for very shortly.

Steps Toward Peace

The various steps to lead up to the first session of the peace plenipotentiaries were today stated to be as follows:

- First—The agreement to call for peace by formal reply to president.
 - Second—Armistice.
 - Third—The appointment by Japan and Russia of peace plenipotentiaries.
 - Fourth—The selection of a place for the meeting of the plenipotentiaries.
- The state department says that the replies to the president from Japan and Russia will be sent to the state department by Mr. Gleason at Tokio and Ambassador Meyer at St. Petersburg. The unofficial news in Washington that Russia and Japan had approved of the president's plan is supposed to have come from the Russian embassy and the Japanese legation. The Japanese minister was outspoken with regard to the move made by the president. He said:

A WISCONSIN PIONEER

Recommends Pe-ru-na as Being "Worth Its Weight in Gold."

Pe-ru-na is a Catarrhal Tonic Especially Adapted to the Declining Powers of Old Age.

Hale and hearty old age means simply healthy organs and healthy functions retained beyond the usual time.

As a rule, at the age of 60 or 70 years, the functions begin to wane and the various organs to lose their natural power.

This need not occur. At least not in all cases. Many a man and woman have retained their health and vigor much later in life.

We have on file several letters from octogenarians who have found Peruna of priceless value to them as their declining years advanced.

Had Catarrh Several Winters—Two Bottles of Pe-ru-na Cured Him.

Mr. Carl Sierks, Dale, Ill., writes: "For several winters I had catarrh and coughed continually, and as I was eighty-three years old, I thought my days were numbered. I used different remedies without success. Then I came in possession of your calendar and read the testimonials of many who had been cured by Peruna.

"I purchased two bottles of Peruna and took it according to directions. I was much surprised, for on the third day I was better, and in a week I was permanently cured.

"I hesitated to say I was cured, as I wanted to test it, but winter went by, likewise summer and part of this winter, and I am still healthy.

"I do not hesitate to recommend Peruna to all who suffer with catarrh."

Has Reached Four Score Years and Weighs 156 Pounds.

Mr. Levi Kegg, Rainsburg, Pa., writes: "Your medicine has done me so much good I intend to keep it on hand all the time.

"I had all the symptoms of systemic catarrh. My eyes were red and inflamed, my throat, stomach and bowels troubled me, was nervous, and had nervous headaches. I am now entirely cured by Peruna.

"I am eighty years old, and I never weighed more than 140, but now I weigh 156 pounds."

A Man of 91 Years Finds Pe-ru-na Valuable.

Mr. Ameriah Hendrickson, 86 East Gay St., Columbus, Ohio, writes the ESTEEMED PIONEER OWES HEALTH TO PE-RU-NA.

Mr. John Paulin, Sr., a pioneer of Port Washington, Wis., is held in high esteem by the residents of that place. He is one of the oldest citizens. In a recent letter he says:

"I have used Peruna with good results for coughs and colds which troubled me every fall and winter. It has also cured my catarrh, which became worse when affected with but a slight cold. I am recommending Peruna because it is worth its weight in gold."

following interesting letter to The Peruna Drug Mfg. Co.:

"I shall be ninety-one years old my next birthday. My eyesight is good and I have never worn glasses.

"I have, until within the last ten years, enjoyed very good health. My illness is nothing special, but something resembling the weakness of old age. I find Peruna a great deal of use to me. It strengthens my stomach and digestion and I have never found any medicine as valuable as Peruna."

THE FIRST CAR OF OIL FROM BOSQUE FIELD

Shipped Saturday to Corsicana to Be Refined—Budget of Waco News

WACO, Texas, June 10.—The first car of oil from the South Bosque field was today shipped to Corsicana, and it will be refined there. Mr. East M. Moore, one of the active promoters, believes that regular shipments will soon be going forward. Only two wells are being pumped, but another is going down and the field is expected to widen rapidly. It is claimed that the grade of oil is far ahead of anything in Texas, and a little more than 30 cents per barrel was paid for the first car, which shows how it is regarded. The field is ten miles west of Waco, and is as yet a modest proposition, but with seeming chances for an excellent future.

WEDDINGS

STAMPS-RUDELL

M. A. Stamps and Miss Lynn D. Rudell, both of Cisco, were married by Justice J. L. Terrell Saturday afternoon. The groom is cashier of the Citizens' National Bank at Cisco. The bride has been visiting at 302 Lamar street, this city.

CITY NEWS

The firm of Mehl & Hurwitz, clothing and gents' furnishings, have removed from 1515 Main street to 1513. They have a newly fitted store room and all goods are clean, up-to-date and reasonable.

Several Fort Worth people left last week for New York and will sail for Liverpool tomorrow. The party included Mrs. Drumm, Mr. and Mrs. Nash and children. Mr. Nash will visit his relatives and there will be a tour of Great Britain and the continent before the return home.

Mrs. Bettie Martin, head of the sanitary department of Texas Northwestern College, has returned to her home in this city for the summer vacation. She is accompanied by her two daughters, Misses Elizabeth and Jessie, who have been attending the school.

Three gambling outfits were confiscated hundreds of poker chips seized and three women and six men arrested in a raid over a lower Main street saloon, conducted by police officers shortly after 1 o'clock this morning. Night Captain O'Connell and officers Pugh and Waller conducted the raid.

CENSUS COMPLETED

HOUSTON, Texas, June 10.—School census completed this morning showing the increase for 1905 over 1904 is 8.52. The record follows: 1905, whites, 8,114; colored, 4,392; total, 12,506. Scholastic census of San Antonio has just been completed. The figures give San Antonio 12,201 school children. A gain of 245 over last year. One thousand seven hundred and eighty-four are white and 1,417 colored.

HARVESTING WHEAT IN THE PANHANDLE

Denver Road Report Shows Good Progress Being Made With Crop

General Freight Agent Sterley of the Denver road says that harvesting is under full blast at different points along that line, and at some places the wheat is about all cut. Farmers, in some instances, ran their harvesters during last Sunday in order to finish the work before another rain. Mr. Sterley says that harvesting of wheat is practically finished above Decatur, but below this point the work is about one-half done.

The yield, he says, is pretty fair and wheat will average from ten to twelve bushels to the acre. It would have been a better yield had not rust interfered.

The crop is much better than it was last year, especially above Wichita Falls, where last year no wheat was raised.

TEXAS EXTENSIONS

Colorado Southern Looking After Grain Business

A special stockholders' meeting of the Colorado and Southern will be held at Denver June 15 for the purpose of providing for the raising of refunding bonds amounting to $100,000,000.

A New York dispatch received here Saturday says that plans for extending the road across this state from Fort Worth to Galveston and easterly to New Orleans have been completed. The Kansas City, Mexico and Orient railroad is to cross the Fort Worth and Denver City, which is a part of the Colorado and Southern system, and when the former is completed the latter will have a good connection into Kansas City and also into the Republic of Mexico. It is also stated that when these connections are completed the Colorado and Southern will make a special effort to control much of the grain movement out of Oklahoma and the Indian Territory for export from Galveston.

A. C. BIRD ILL

Gould Traffic Manager Down at Denver, Colo.

It was learned in this city Saturday that A. C. Bird, vice president and general traffic manager of the entire Gould system, is critically ill in Denver of acute bronchitis. Mr. Bird was en route to Colorado Springs, but when he reached Denver his condition became suddenly worse, compelling him to stop in Denver. Mr. Bird is accompanied by his wife and daughter.

PLANTING TREES

Denver Road to Begin Arbor Campaign Soon

The general freight department of the Fort Worth and Denver City Railroad Company will again take up the matter of tree planting along that system in the Panhandle country. The territory to be planted is the west and northwest portions. General Freight Agent Sterley said Saturday that the tests made in the past have proved very satisfactory. He referred to one case where Mr. Rowe, in Donley county, set out five acres four years ago and the trees have thrived to such an extent that this season Mr. Rowe was able to cut from the trees good-sized

MAIL CONTRACT

Rock Island and Southern Pacific Get the Plums

The Rock Island and Southern Pacific have succeeded in taking from the Santa Fe the contract for carrying the transcontinental mails between Chicago and St. Louis and the Pacific coast south of San Francisco.

NOTES AND PERSONALS

General Passenger Agent Auer of the Rock Island returned Saturday from Chicago, where he attended a "family conference" of the passenger department officials of that system.

Vice President and Traffic Manager D. B. Keeler of the Denver road and Mrs. Keeler went up the road Saturday.

General Passenger Agent Strain of the

PAYING TAX

Muskogee Merchants Will Offer No Further Resistance

MUSKOGEE, I. T., June 10.—Payment of the tribal tax is being rushed and it is believed that it will be practically paid up from all the towns within the Creek Nation next week.

Several out-of-town business men are here today to make a settlement. The receipts for the last two days amount to several thousand dollars.

Dispatches from Washington that Hitchcock refuses further delay was anticipated here and most of the leading merchants have paid up. The Indian police have been permitted to go home today, as they are no longer needed in the city.

TWO RESIGN

San Antonio Municipal Tangle Changed but Little Saturday

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, June 10.—Beyond the resignation of two men in the police and fire departments, there were no new developments in the municipal tangle. It is believed to be a case of a lull before a storm. Interesting developments are expected Monday. Who will be chief of police is a matter of speculation. The position was offered former Mayor John P. Campbell, but he has declined. Chief Irvine's resignation takes effect Monday.

FACTORY STARTED

WACO, Texas, June 10.—The Wiggins Sad Iron Foundry Company has commenced manufacturing sad irons and will ship in car load lots. The company is capitalized at $10,000. James D. Williams is president of the company and E. D. Powell, Oscar and C. P. Wiggins are associated with him.

The FIGHTERS & CORNER &

SAN FRANCISCO, June 10.—Defeated four times within a twelve-month, Young Corbett's aspirations to re-establish himself at the top of the pugilistic heap have gone glimmering and one of the most picturesque characters that the Queensbury game ever knew has passed to the shelf especially reserved for top-notchers. It seems almost criminal that this should be, for a gamer, cleverer boxer never pulled on a glove. To his own disregard for the laws of nature, Corbett's downfall is due. Physically and financially he has ruined himself. The red lights and the ponies have robbed him of power and purse and today he finds himself little better off than he was before he ever dreamed of meeting and conquering Terry McGovern. He has had a "good time," as good times go in the fast world, and now he is paying the penalty. Instead of wearing the crown of the feather-weights and nursing a comfortable bankroll, Corbett has lost all his laurels as well as the thousands he earned in the ring. Instead of being able to command fat purses, he will have to content himself with the modest sums that are the portion of the second and third rater.

There are still a number of good fights in Corbett, but he can never hope to cope successfully with high-class men. He has all of his old cleverness and gameness, but his punch is gone, his generalship has deteriorated and his speed is little more than a memory. But with all that he is not "all in" by any means. Too much wine has left his stomach in a condition where it can no longer withstand the effect of a hardy punch. He has gone the way of many another fighter and has no one to blame but himself.

The Denver boy declares he was robbed when Eddie Hanlon was given the decision in their twenty-round fight here last Friday night and many there are who contend that Corbett should have been given a draw. Fairly summed up, however, Hanlon had a "shade," and while it might have been generous to have given Corbett a draw it would have been unfair to the Californian. Before the twentieth round began the fight was even, but in the last period Hanlon cuffed the Denverite at will. Corbett was practically helpless and could not even protect himself. Hanlon showered blows on his head and stomach and when the gong sounded the close the Californian's margin in the final session was so wide that the referee could not overlook it.

The local pugilistic kaleidoscope has been given another shake and as a result neither Jabez White nor Battling Nelson will be seen in action here next month. Unless an unlooked-for hitch bobs up, Jimmie Britt and Eddie Hanlon will be the July card. A few days before Corbett and Hanlon met, Britt signed articles agreeing to meet the winner. It may have been simply a trick to "boost" the house for the Hanlon-Corbett engagement, but the agreement is signed on the Britt side, and as Hanlon has frequently expressed a desire to meet his fellow townsman in the ring, the boys may be "hooked up."

If Hanlon makes the match it will be a bad piece of business for him. Eddie is a good, courageous, fairly clever boy, but he is not in Britt's class. Besides, Britt is several rounds heavier. Hanlon, by the most liberal method of reasoning, could not hope to stay longer than 10 rounds with the champion, and if the latter is at his best when they meet, if they should do so, he should not have much difficulty in ending the mill in five rounds.

Battling Nelson has disgusted his local admirers by the showing he has made in his two eastern battles. A victory over the Dane by the Attell was not unlooked-for, but to meet a second beater at the hands of a poor second-rater like Kid Sullivan is more than the most rabid Nelson rooster can stand for. Nelson is evidently the victim of that strange disease made popular by Tommy Ryan—easy-moneyitis. Nelson has never been known to side-step hard game for easy money, therefore the burden of the responsibility for Nelson's downfall must lie with his manager, Billy Nolan. The fact that Nelson cannot go six rounds with the easiest sort of a mark and make a showing is common knowledge, but Nolan seems to have overlooked Nelson's capabilities, or rather lack of capabilities in this regard, and has cast aside judgment for the mere sake of adding a few easy dollars to his bankroll. Why he should "show up" his man in this manner is a mystery to local fight followers. He is knocking the props from under a big house when Britt meets Nelson, if Britt contends to meet the Dane after what has happened, and it is no exaggeration to say that whereas Britt and Nelson would have drawn a $30,000 gate four weeks ago, they would do well if $15,000 found its way into the box office, now that Nelson has been trimmed by Attell and Sullivan.

Nelson is possessed of considerable business sense and if his manager persists in making such senseless matches as the Attell and Sullivan affairs, the champion of Hegewisch should arise and assert himself. He is too good a boy to lose his power as a drawing card for the sake of a little easy money and the sooner he comes to a realization of the fact the better off he will be.

Old Bob Fitzsimmons has gone into training at Salt Lake for his fight with Mike Schreck in the Mormon metropolis on July 4. The venerable gentleman claims that he will have no difficulty getting into good condition and that Schreck is in line for a juicy hiding. Bob's pet lion will assist him in his training.

Despite the assiduous press work, the Root-Hart finish scheduled to take place at Reno, Nevada, on July 4, is attracting little attention here. Hart disappointed local fans in his fight with Jack Johnson and will have to do something worth while before they would be willing to go a night's travel to see him in action. Root and Hart went six rounds in Chicago a couple of years ago and Root was an easy winner, although Hart yelled "robbery."

But the miners at Tonopah and Goldfield may be willing to overlook all this just for the sake of seeing a real prize fight. Ordinarily, however, the match wouldn't set the world afire. Neither should it be considered seriously as an affair that will decide the world's heavy-weight championship.

Fort Worth Eagles will meet their Dallas brothers this afternoon for a game at Dallas. The famous Fog-Horn battery will do stunts for Fort Worth, the members of which feel that victory is assured. In the last game played between the two teams, which was won by Fort Worth on local grounds, the same battery was responsible for the winning of Fort Worth Eagles.

THE HANLON-CORBETT DECISION IN DOUBT

Generally Considered Corbett Had Some the Best of His Opponent at the End

By W. W. Naughton.
S. FRANCISCO, June 10.—Arguments are still in progress over the decision in brought him to his knees. The sweat, glancing punch changed the aspect of affairs in an instant. Hanlon who had been fighting coolly and systematically, and adding a little something to his lead in every round was converted into a glassy eyed, swaying mortal. Corbett, who had been loggy and possibly a trifle discouraged, suddenly brightened up and tore in with flying gloves the moment Hanlon straightened up.

Hanlon closed and held on and eager though Corbett was he could not place a telling blow. Homan separated them and Hanlon reeled and clinched again. Once more the veins in Homan's neck swelled as he tried to split them apart.

CORBETT WHISPERS
"You had better stop it, Homan," whispered "Young Corbett," between gasps.

four foot emphasis again. Fitzsimmons, it is understood, claims the title made vacant by Jeffries' retirement. He needs it for his collection, I suppose. According to his own showing he is now middle-weight champion, light heavyweight champion and full grown champion of the world. He is willing to defend either of the two first mentioned at the weight prescribed in each case, but if anyone wants to fight him for the adult distinction there is no limit as to tonnage.

Good boy, Robert. You are certainly the "big store" of the pugilistic industry and it may be, with Jeffries out of it, you are right twice out of three times. In respect to the middleweight end of it a good many of us think you are romancing. You may be able to do "158," but not for fighting purposes.

Fitzsimmons and Mike Schreck boxing at Salt Lake for the light heavyweight championship of the world on July 3 and Marvin Hart and Jack Root disputing "the" championship of the universe at Reno about the same time, but no doubt it will all be unraveled by and by. If Fitzsimmons wins his affair a real world's championship fight will loom up for the veteran will be regarded as the proper person to defend the title, but if Fitzsimmons should go under in his go with Schreck there will be serious complications as the foreign attaches say.

As to the claims of Root, Hart and Schreck and others I believe there is a young amateur heavy in San Francisco now, who, within six months would be able to down them all if he elects to turn professional. No, his name isn't Berger. It's Kaufman, and he will be as heavy a man as Jeffries nearly before he is done growing. In the matter of lineage I understand he is a mixture of German and Irish, a blend of blood that has been heard from before in fistic pursuits.

JULY CARD NOT SELECTED
The San Francisco card for July has not been selected yet, although it looks as though Jimmy Britt and "Kid" Sullivan of the Herford string will furnish the entertainment. Britt is about to start on a tramping tour through Yosemite valley, leaving his brother Willie behind to attend to the matchmaking. Willie says that Sullivan can have a match if he wants it and Morris Levy, the July promoter, is willing to furnish the ring. Herford, according to the best information, is making long distance inquiries about terms so that there is every reason for believing that the match will be arranged within a few days. Levy favors a date during the first week in July.

WILL REOPEN
The arena in the meadows of Colma is to be reopened under the management of Billy Roche formerly of New York, but now an adopted native son. Roche says he wants to inject some new blood into the game, as he believes the public is waxing weary of the Britts and Battling Nelsons. He will give weekly shows beginning Saturday night, June 17, and will have George Peterson, a newly blossomed professional, and Jack Clancy for his opening card. After that Charley Neary and Rufe Turner will be staged. Roche purposes bringing Buddy Ryan, Jimmy Walsh and other pugilists to the coast.

SALE OF HORSES

W. C. Whitney's Horses Sold Before First Race at Gravesend
GRAVESEND RACE TRACK, New York, June 10.—The sale of horses of the Whitney stable in order to finally administer the estate of the late W. C. Whitney, was held in the paddock before the first race today. A large and notable throng surrounded the sales ring.

Twenty-nine horses brought $126,500. H. P. Whitney bought in Burgomaster for $20,000, while Sam Hildreth professed $16,000 for Queen of Hearts, a full sister to Artful, futurity winner of last year, but when H. P. Whitney bid $16,000 the western trainer quit. The ailing Whitney horses were not offered. Kid McCoy was prominent among the purchasers and acting in behalf of his bride-to-be, Mrs. Ellis, purchased the colt Pamela for $11,200.

Borough president, Joseph Cassidy, of Queens, made a small sized killing on the first race. He backed Frank Farrell's Keator, and when cashing in time came was $4,950 to the good. Star Ruby Wins Derby
Sidney Paget's Star Ruby colt

Kalnigorm won the Brooklyn Derby this afternoon, showing his heels to Migrain, Merry Lark and Von Tromp. Cairngorm had a lead of a length at the end over Migrain, but to win had to be put under a drive by Jockey Davis. He was a 1 to 2 favorite and had many backers.

Hylas was the choice at 8 to 5 in the Empire State Steeplechase and he landed the light green of T. Hitchcock Jr. in front at the end. Messina, and Bonfire made the running for over a mile, when Hylas moved up and went to the front. He won by six lengths from Flying Butress. The latter made a bold bid in the last half mile but could not get up. Bonfire was third, twenty lengths back. Arrian refused at the first jump and Dromedary fell the second time around.

Keene is Congratulated

James R. Keene was warmly congratulated on the showing of his two-year-old Bohemia, who put the Tremont stakes to the credit of his owner. Bohemia ran so strong a second to H. P. Whitney's Burgomaster in the Great American of last Saturday that he was held an 8 to 5 favorite. They broke him in front and down the back stretch Jacobite went up to him. Coming into the stretch both colts were head and head, but Lyle shook up Bohemia and came away and won handily by two lengths from Voorhees, who beat Jacobite.

Carsman at 12 to 5, just lasted long enough to capture the fifth. The pacemaker, Voladay, moved out from the rail and Burns got through Carsman and won by two lengths. Wisard third, two lengths back.

Baird brought the favorite, Astronomer, in an easy winner in the sixth, although Debar, who got the place, closed as did Beaufort, who got third money.

CLOSE GAME GOES TO THE PANTHERS

Ward's Aggregation Defeats Players From Dallas by Score of 2 to 1

Fort Worth defeated Dallas in the first game of the series at Haines' Park Saturday afternoon by a score of 2 to 1. The Panthers won in the third inning when Sullivan came in on Butler's long fly and Hubbard followed on a miff of Wills' fly to right. Moran in the last inning lost a chance to score, cutting third base and being called out after crossing the plate.

THE GAME
 Andros opened for Dallas with a double to left. Ury went out from Boles over, advancing Andros to third. Moran went to first on an error by Hubbard playing in a fielder's choice by Huddleston and Myers went out on strikes. One run.

SECOND INNING
 Doyle went out on a foul, which Wills took the stand. Bero drew a foul. Fenner came to bat and Doyle was out on an attempt to steal second, and Fenner fled out to Mauch in right. No runs. Mauch got into the game again with a clean single to left. Wills made a pretty sacrifice. Blasingm went out on a high fly to first. Huddleston then drove a hot one to short, but was caught at first. No runs.

THIRD INNING
 Ables drove a hot one at Huddleston, who's bounded to Hubbard, who caught it at first. Andros went out by a route for his second time up. Ury followed with a similar one to Bursleson. No runs.

Sullivan started off again with a hard drive to left fence, reaching second. Hubbard followed with one out of reach of center, left and short. Sully took third. Butler sent a fly to center, upon which Sully came in, tying the score. Bursleson put another over short. Boles fanned. Mauch fled out to right, which was dropped, leaving Hubbard and taking the lead. Wills finished the inning by striking out. Two runs.

FOURTH INNING
 Moran got a single over third. Maloney went out on a pretty catch by Sullivan. Myers drew four bad ones. Doyle sent an easy one to Huddleston, who threw to second, making a double and retiring the side. No runs.

FIFTH INNING
 Bero went out on a grounder to second. Fenner walked, only to go out at second on a pretty throw of Blasingm. Ables fanned. No runs.

SIXTH INNING
 Andros fouled out to Bursleson. Ury hit a clean two-bagger to left fence. Moran walked. Maloney fled out to Sully for the second time. Myers flew out to Boles, leading the Panthers still in the lead. No runs.

SEVENTH INNING
 Doyle opened the seventh by an easy one from Hubbard to Wills. Bero went out on a quick play from third over. Fenner walked. No fouls but ones in succession. Ables was an easy out from Huddleston to first. No runs.

EIGHTH INNING
 Andros opened again, going out from Boles over. Ury fled out to left. Moran made a clean hit over second. Maloney followed with another to left, on which Moran reached home, but was called out for not touching third. No runs.

NINTH INNING
 Wills swung at two bad ones and then sent one to middle left, getting to second. Blasingm followed with one to the same place, going out. Huddleston was the last man up for the Panthers, fanning easily. No runs.

LAST CHANCE
 Myers opened for the last chance, flying out to Butler on his first chance of the game. Doyle fanned. Bero hit left fence for a three-bagger, bringing the crowd back to their seats. Fenner went out from third over, leaving Fort Worth a winner, 2 to 1. The score:

TEMPLE 2, WACO 1
 Temple, Texas, June 10.—Waco was defeated today in the best played game of the season. Adams and Lower were in superb form, the former being luckier in having hits scattered. Shelton's magnificent fielding, daring base running and hard hitting were the features. Both pitchers received fine support, which kept down the runs.

THINKS CATTLE IN POOR SHAPE

"Everything is looking fine in Irion county up along the Concho," said J. P. Treadwell of Menard county Tuesday evening. "Stock are beginning to get in fine shape. They ought to be, for we have had more grass than ever before, but the grass was soggy and did not possess the right amount of nourishing qualities. The sunshine of the past week has brought the grass to a better state of maturity. Near Sherwood it has been raining two and three times a week and this has helped to keep the cattle back. 'I am of the opinion,' said Mr. Treadwell, 'that there will not be much feedstuff shipped north before August or September. The cattle are fat enough now, but they cannot be gotten in shipping shape until much later, as they are too soft. It takes time to get cattle in a decent condition to ship to have them stand the rough traveling until they get to market. When cattle are placed on the market this year I think they will bring a good price, and especially those south of the quarantine line. I am sure they ought to be at least for it costs a great deal more to raise them now than formerly. Land is higher and school lands cost a good deal more for the leases than formerly.

counties is the demand for horses which is on at the present time. Buyers will take most anything that is in good shape. Good horses, however, are most desired and bring the best prices. Our ranchmen have found that there is no money in raising poor horses or poor cattle and consequently some of us are able to get a few of the good prices offered for horses.

The discovery that no papers of com-

Johnson who had Bigelow in custody, was made in the station after the banker had been transferred to a Chicago and Alton train with the rest of the party, comprising Gordon Bigelow, his son, William Bigelow, his brother, and two Chicago friends. Mr. Bigelow said nothing at this development nor did any member of the party make a remark. Marshal Johnson had in his pocket papers for the commitment of John Speciale, a counterfeiter condemned to serve 1 1/2 years in the same prison as Bigelow. The guard that was speeding to Chicago from Milwaukee with Speciale had the Bigelow papers. It was Deputy Marshal Johnson's intention to take his prisoner to Fort Leavenworth on the next train. Upon the arrival of the two sets of papers an exchange was made.

 Clarendon Banner-Stockman. L. C. Beverly bought from Sacre of Lubbock ninety head of 2-year-old steers at $24. Harve Sparks of Matador was here last week with 1,000 yearlings, which he sold to a northern buyer at $14.50.

Bush & Tillar of Colorado City delivered here last week to Herron & Stinson 2,000 2s. The stuff brought $17.50 and was shipped to Texline. Scoggins & Brown delivered at Estelling last week to a northern buyer 3,300 steers. We understand the prices to have been $12.50 for yearlings and about $18 for 2s. McClellan, Crisp & Co. report the sale of 200 yearlings belonging to W. E. Barrow of Stonewall county to J. E. Mos Combs. The price was $14.50, with a 10 per cent cut, at $12.

Lewis & Moleworth are doing some heavy shipping of steers to the market. The cattle are being loaded at Carlsbad and Santa Rosa, N. M., and are mostly going to Kansas City. F. N. Page has purchased a seat on the Clarendon Live Stock Syndicate, terms private, and is this week over at Santa Rosa, N. M., helping Will Lewis ship out 2,000 steers to the Kansas City market.

There are now on the open market here cattle as follows: William Barbee of Merkel, 500 steer yearlings. Lee Brothers of Stonewall county, 1,000 1s, 2s and 3s. Berry Persey of Lubbock, 2,000 2s and 3s. There are perhaps other smaller herds here also.

Charles Derrick returned Tuesday from Knox and King counties, where he received two bunches of cattle for Lewis & Moleworth, one from Roy Burnett, shipped from Childress. Charley says the country is the best he ever saw it and grass is knee high.

G. Y. SMITH EIGHTH @ HOUSTON STREETS

man of the proper social training who does not possess a dress suit or who feels disinclined to wear one, receiving an invitation for an entertainment of formality understands the duty of sending his regrets.

But whatever may be thought of the lack of proper attire the use of tobacco at the home of a hostess whose guest a young man is seems utterly and entirely inexcusable. If a man, young or old, cannot refrain from his cigarette for an hour and a half why can he not remain at home? There is not a hostess who, if she were frank, but would tell him so if she were not restrained by her own sense of the duties of hospitality.

The use of tobacco at dances and receptions is altogether of the women's making. Not so long ago at Lake Erie a young man in conversation with several ladies, one a married woman, asked permission to smoke. Of course all consented. After he had gone one of the girls chided her married friend: "I thought you disapproved of men smoking in the presence of ladies?"

"I do," was the reply, "but this young man does not belong to me and I am not responsible for his education. But you may be sure he will never receive an invitation to my house for anything. I draw the line at my own home. Tobacco is prohibited by employees of all kinds, store, factory or workshop. The men know that if smoking was in favor or was necessary as they seem to think there would not be such strict rules. I think my home is as important as the young man's office, and I think I am as nice as the man he works for. He would not smoke while talking to his employer during his working hours. Why should he smoke while talking to me during his social hours. But I have none of the responsibilities of educating him. My only responsibility is to see that none but well-mannered young men are invited to my home.

The neglected party call should also have a thought for hostesses, especially hostesses who are entertaining young ladies, whether members of their families or visitors. The young man who pays this simplest, cheapest and most necessary courtesy can almost be counted. Strange as it may seem, no hostess would really die of disappointment should a young man for any reason decline her invitation. But having accepted, a certain duty devolves upon him that should be as binding as his poker debt.

In this day of unions and consolidations it would not be a bad idea if the ladies who are social leaders banded themselves together for a society for the selection of young men who practice the courtesies that prevail among well-mannered people. They might keep a list of neglectors and avoid any mistakes by starting a courteous movement that would eliminate such young men from having any further opportunities for neglecting or forgetting party calls or other social duties.

She was not more than 10. She beamed on all the passengers of a City Belt car, but all the men were on their way to their business and had no thought for little girls of 10. Her eyes searched the faces of every one and then she spied a woman across the aisle. The woman was looking out of the window. She was evidently absorbed, too, but the little maid after a short scrutiny, slipped into the seat beside her. "I am going to buy a doll," she confided, as she exhibited her handkerchief with a small coin carefully tied in a knot in the corner. "This is Lily's birthday and she is 7 years old." Again there was a radiant smile.

"Who is Lily?" asked the woman. "Lily is a little girl I know who is deaf and dumb. She has no playthings of her own and just loves to play with my little doll. So I am going to get her one just like mine so she can have one of her very own, because this is her birthday."

A well-dressed man entered a Fort Worth restaurant and evidently chose the most retired seat purposely. He whispered his order to the attendant. It was such an order as is not unusual for busy people at noon, a bowl of soup, a bit of pickled tongue, vegetables, some berries, cake and a cup of coffee. But this man seemed to be not busy. He sat at the table eating, while guest after guest came, ate and went away. After a length of time that caused even the waiter to wonder he approached the cashier's desk.

"I do not sit at the table so long usually," he began, apologetically, "but just now I have nothing to eat with, and I have more time than I need. On the train this morning while sitting by an open window I felt a sudden and irresistible desire to sneeze. It was an impulse not to be disregarded. I sneezed with a good deal of energy and my teeth were protruded through the open window out on the prairie between here and Oklahoma. I am now awaiting the good offices of one of your dentists, who has promised to replace my loss as speedily as possible. If I should ever come through here again I hope to make my luncheon in the ordinary way."

EVENTS OF THE WEEK

There has been much partial interest in the homecoming of Miss Mabel Davidson from Boston, where she has been attending the conservatory of music, not only because of the certainty that there would be delight in enjoying her musical attainments, but because both old and young are so peculiarly partial to a dear girl as lovable as she is talented. At Mrs. Davidson's musical last Tuesday evening, which was in honor of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Davidson as well as Miss Davidson and also complimenting Wilbur MacDonald, it was a disappointment to many that a throat affliction prevented Miss Davidson from appearing on the program, but the welcome from many friends was sincerely hearty.

This musical was an event of unusual importance and was enjoyed by more than two hundred guests. The program rendered by Edward Harrison, violinist, and Wilbur MacDonald, pianist, was impromptu, the musicians themselves not knowing their numbers until before the audience. But certain dainty melodies, a familiar minuet, traumered more than satisfied everybody.

After the program a pleasant hour was spent on the lawn, which was made additionally attractive by numerous rugs, cushions, chairs and settees. Dozens of electric globes made a brilliancy that was in itself an inspiration for festivity. A punch bowl filled with fruit nectar occupied a vine-covered bower and ices and cakes were served.

There was a fine array of immaculate uniforms with epaulets indicative of the glory of Elkhound at the Lake Erie pavilion last Friday night. There were many charming girls and radiantly gracious matrons and there was dancing for everybody until the last minute permissible. The dance was given in honor of Miss Greenwall, who was sponsor for the local Elks during their state meeting, and her maids. In leading the cotillion with Mr. Lockett Miss Greenwall shared honors with Miss Dupree of Waco, a visitor of many charms and of great social favor.

Among the large crowd were Admiral and Mrs. Shipp of Dallas, Wilson, Hall, Thompson, Wheeler, Lord, Ellis, James D. Ellis, Davis Burke, Talbert, Ellison, Miller, Crittenden, Wardlaw, Wassell, Walton, John Elliott of Dallas, Brock, Andrews, Sam Taylor, Bowie, Fry, Goetz, Mesdames Entriken of Enid, Robertson, Wright of Louisiana, Loebnitz, Chase, Herford, Tewksbury, Stryver, Wiess, Depree of Waco; Misses Van Zandt, Wilson of San Antonio, Greenwall, Dupree of Waco, Hollingsworth, Gibson of Dallas, Anderson, Bradley, Hogssett, McCarthey, Hassard, Kabley, Wells, Spooner, Goetz, Pendleton, Hunter, Long, Diehl, Yeates, Crowley, Zane-Cetti, Swinson, Griffin, McCarthey, Gwendolyn McCarthey, Evans, Oxsheer, Taylor, Dingee, Wombwell, Simpson, Keller, Smith, Humphreys, Davis of Dallas, Pankey, King, Williams, Markle, Fisher of Houston, Proctor, Connor, Mabry of Texarkana, Mitchum of Tennessee and Trigg; Mrs. Chilton, McLean, Dunlap, Barber, Major Elliott; Messrs. Lockett, May, Fuchsler, Henders, Erlin, Hardwick, Nixon, Cheatam, Zane-Cetti, Littlejohn, Toombs, Maddox, Eagon, Offutt, Allen, McLean, Honea, Greenwall, Taylor, Watkins, Scharbauer, Booby, Spooner, Hoffman, Oxsheer, Van Valkenburg, Fry, Warren, Taylor, Lewis, Hay, McConnell, Knatch, Lingo, Wood, Walkup, Browne, Bauer, Alford, Ridgeway, Kolp, McCook and Rozelle.

Mrs. R. E. L. Miller entertained the S. S. Glee Club Wednesday morning at a picnic going to Mrs. Slack. The players were Mesdames Slack, Moore, Reynolds and Hunter; Misses Fisher of Houston, Sue Smith, Pendleton, Hollingsworth, Juanita Hollingsworth, Elser, Erlington, Newman, Ridgeway, Samuels, Anderson and Jennings. Miss Mary Terrell will be the hostess this week.

The Daisies were blossoming in summer time to perfect last evening at a picnic party being their opportunities. The picnic was a supper picnic at Lake Erie with Mr. and Mrs. Jere Van Zandt to look after the larger and "other things." Those who were looked after were Misses Nancy, Mallard, Trippett, McCarthey, McGarry, Wells, Bowlin, Montgomery, Dingee, Kennedy, Hantey of Sherman, Mitchum of Tennessee, Pendleton, Hosmer, Card and Vallandigham; Dr. Cooper, Messrs. Honea, Will King, Stewart, Peak, Cheate, Browne, Staudt, A. Gersbacher, Cheatham, Binyon, Spiller, Barber, Crenshaw and J. Gersbacher.

The party of the Daisies last week was with Miss Edna Pendleton at her home Friday morning prizes were won by Misses Williams and Vallandigham and were tried for by Misses Montgomery, Dingee, Williams, Trippett, Card, Vallandigham, Montague, Mallard, Hosmer, Cantey, Murdoch, McCarthey and Bowlin.

Miss Nell Trippett will be the hostess of the club this week.

Martin Casey entertained about twenty-five guests at the Lake Erie cafe Friday evening in honor of his niece, the Misses Casey of Memphis, Tennessee, who are visiting here.

The marriage of Miss Minnie Nash to G. W. Parker will take place next Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Nash, in Monroe street.

Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Noel entertained informally with a musical and dance at their home on Blair street last Wednesday. After the program the guests passed a pleasant hour in dancing.

The Colorado City News has this account of a wedding in which Fort Worth friends are interested:

A very pretty home wedding on Wednesday night was that of Miss Mamie Louise Hamner, daughter of Judge and Mrs. Ed J. Hamner, and Clarence M. Wilcher of Fort Worth. The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride's parents and was witnessed only by the immediate family, Miss Sadie May Hughes and W. D. Terry, the latter an intimate friend of the groom. The parlor was festively decorated with chrysanthemums, ferns and roses. The bride, who is a very pretty girl, was very fair in her wedding robe of white chiffon over tulle. She carried a bouquet of bride's roses and ferns and was attended by Mrs. Martin Entriken. The party was in the honor of Judge Hamner's.

An elaborate supper followed the congratulations, and Mr. and Mrs. Wilcher left on the 9:25 p. m. train for New Orleans. After June 15 they will be at home in Fort Worth. A large array of gifts accompanied the good wishes of many friends.

In response to the invitation of Mrs. Rozelle and Mrs. John Winter there were first twenty-five guests at the Spencer home Friday afternoon to greet again Mrs. Entrikin and to pay their respects to Master Entrikin. The party was in their honor and produced such varieties of party conversations as would have delighted the souls of the Roosevelts, the Cleverlands et al.

Between times of these conversations there were much going in high five, the first prize ultimately going to Mrs. Lehane, an article of apparel highly prized in summer. The souvenir, a book, "Her Infinite Variety," was won by Mrs. Newt Moffett. Mrs. John Terrell won the second prize, articles similar to those scored by Mrs. Lehane, but lace design.

The guests were Mesdames Entriken, Palmer, Sears, Keeler, Swann, Cobb, Hunt, Davis, Scribner, Speer, Tribb, Martin, Jennings, Gwynne, Trippett, Stans, Wiselwell, Laneri, Collins, Morton, Moffett, McKenzie of Enid, Okla., Craddock, Hubbard, Van Zandt, Homan, Guy Rail, Loebnitz, Elbert Rail, Ford, Camp, Chubb, Mabel Brown, Williams, Andrews, Smith of Houston, Tewksbury, Childers, Donover, Ivan Gwynne, Terrell, Merrill, Herford and Miller; Misses Rintema, Van Zandt, McCarthey, Oxsheer, Fisher of Houston, Taylor, Binyon, Markle, Mrs. Hogssett, Laura Hogssett, Anderson, Luella and Bess White, Littlejohn, Greene of Quannah, Covert of Iowa, Fay and Mabel Spencer and Garrett of California.

The service that united Miss Amy Lillian Cotton to Charles Edwin Roberts last Wednesday was one that inspired feelings of deepest solemnity.

It was the ceremony of the Ancient Anglican church and was read with an impressiveness that only affection could add to consecration by the bride's father, the Rev. Robert Hammond Cotton, rector of Trinity, where the ceremony took place.

Promptly at noon Miss Bevany, the organist, began playing the opening bars of the processional, which was sung by the full vested choir. The bridesmaid, Miss Jennie Cotton, approached, the chancel, followed by the bride and Gen. Wemyss-Smith, who gave her into the keeping of the groom. The bridegroom

The parents and guardians of young girls just out of school at this season are pondering the problems that young womanhood presents. As certain recreational and social intercourse demands the poison of the appearance of evil that will damn a girl's good name and will ultimately lead to something more than appearance when ignorance has been removed and recklessness, indifference or bitterness comes to tempt to wrong doing.

Every time scandal and suspicion hovers about a girl's name, it is the fault of the parent. The parents should have exercised their right to decide on the men friends, men callers at the home. The parents should leave nothing undone to discover whether or not the young men asking the privileges of their hospitality are worthy. It does not take common sense long to read the kind of man that will invite a girl who is in his charge for an evening's festivity to slip around to some secluded corner, there to sip of the contents of a glass society forbids for public gatherings. One cocktail invites another and then the man reports to his friends, and it is not long until mothers are giving their daughters commands as to how and where they draw the line among their girl friends. The girl who has taken part in an escapade will sooner or later feel the weight of society's disapproval.

But what of the man who has been more than guilty? What kind of word has the mother for the man who invites such proceedings? No one can formulate laws where human beings are concerned, but it may be laid down as a law as safe as most laws that when things go wrong with girls it is because their men friends have been of the wrong sort. It may be something of a hardship for middle-aged to go to Handley two or three times in the summer, or to the different dances of the various clubs the same number of times during the winter. But there is no hardship greater than to awake some day to learn that the girl who is the apple of your eye and the pride of your life is the butt of the cruel gossip of an entire community.

We protect our girls when they are in short frocks and until they emerge into society. Then we turn them loose, satisfied if they have beaux a-plenty and have invitations to sustain a reputation for popularity. In fact, there is no time in a young woman's life where she more needs the care and watchful advice of love and authority than when first she enters upon her social career. The girl is all that parents and friends and teachers have tried to make her, and have hoped for, but her remaining so must depend upon the kind of men friends she is allowed to make, and that means also the kind of men that are permitted the hospitality of the home and the privileges of intimacy that such hospitality encourages.

In attending many kinds of entertainments, public gatherings and private parties the manners of the young men who frequent them can hardly fail to attract notice. Not so long ago a young man up in the 20s, a guest at an evening party which was elaborate and formal, not only appeared in his ordinary street clothes when the law would have demanded evening dress as a compliment to his hostess, but he remained outside on the veranda, and bringing out the inevitable cigarette, began puffing away so that the smoke passed into the parlors through the open windows. The question is unavoidable. By what right was this young man entitled to an invitation to an event of social prominence? A young

The styles are accordion plaited, side plaited and full tucked models; materials and workmanship are the best; not many of a kind, but your size in some style is here; former prices $5.95 to $8.95; Monday $3.98

We can allow no alterations at this price.

SOCIAL SEASON

and the groomsmen, Robert Young, met them at the altar. The entire bridal party at the altar heard the final words of the ceremony, solemn words on the duty and obligation of marriage. At the conclusion of the betrothal the choir sang, "O, Perfect Love," a hymn of the church.

After the ceremony the bridegroom and bride left the church to Mendelssohn's wedding march, and then the choir sang the recessional, with the closing benediction.

At the home of the bride's parents there was a wedding breakfast, at which were a number of guests. Among the many valuable presents was a liberal check from Mr. Roberts' friends at Armours, where he is a valued employe.

carried generous stemmed La France roses.

The ceremony was without ostentation but was marked with every evidence of devotion and the affection of many friends, who sent many presents to accompany their good wishes.

Mr. and Mrs. Hearne left immediately after the ceremony for their future home in McKinney.

The advent of summer had no effect on the Olivettes and other friends who were the guests of Mrs. J. J. Parker last Wednesday morning, for everybody came smilingly expectant of a pleasant morning and entered upon a good natured struggle for fives, high, low, ten spots and jacks. When the merry battle was over Mrs. Stanley was given a much desired prize (a pair of them), neatly put up in a box tied with ribbon. Mrs. Keeler won the guest prize, a gauze fan, and Miss Sue Smith the souvenir. A luncheon of chicken salad, tomato and cucumber salad, wafers and iced tea met with emphatic favor. These cards were handed to the Olivettes in water colors, the scorers being Mrs. Bert K. Smith, Miss Langston and Miss Bechler. Guests were: Mesdames Davis, Jennings, Rail, Swann, Smith Terrell, Van Zandt, Wynne, Cooper, Robinson, Guy Rail, Allen, Burke, Cameron, Dawson, Fikes, Forbes, Gayle, Hart, Keeler, Littlefair, Lyons, Loebnitz, Miller, Moffett, Pettigrew, Roy, Stovall, Ware, Walton and West; Misses McCarr-ter, Davis, Ochsner, Smith, Shugart, Langston of Cleburne, Bechler Phenix, Samuels, Tomlinson, Vickery, Watkins and Callaway.

MISCELLANEOUS

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Carter announce the marriage of their daughter, Minnie Marguerite, to John Edell Talbot, Wednesday, June 7, 1935, at Fort Worth, Texas.

Mrs. D. E. Colp entertained with a tallyho ride last Monday afternoon, complimentary to her mother, Mrs. R. T. Wilkins of south Texas. The ride was extended into the cool twilight and was enjoyed by Mrs. Pendleton, Mrs. McNeely, Mrs. Anderson, Mrs. Krauss, Mrs. Burts, Mrs. Jackson, Mrs. Henry Fellds, Mrs. Banks, Mrs. Malard and Miss Cora Wilkinson. Captain Adams held the honorary position of guardian and overseer of the festivity.

Bishop Garrett of Dallas was in town last week and in consultation with the ladies of All Saint's Hospital Association, gave them much encouragement concerning the completion of the hospital building. The association has no debts and has a sum of money on hand that will complete the lower floor. It is thought that it will not be many months until all the funds needed for the completion of the entire building will be secured.

The ladies of the All Saint's Hospital Association will give an "Old Maids Auction" at Lake Erie on the evening of the 18th. Anybody in need of a "maid" can secure one on this occasion for less than she is worth. After the auction there will be a dance for the "old maids" and their new owners. The old maids, it is hinted, will turn out to be the prettiest and most popular girls in town.

The week of weddings started off with the announcement Monday of the marriage in Dallas several days before of Miss Dora Crooner and H. Stuart Farmer. The bride is one of the young women at "The Fair," universally popular, and the bridegroom is an employe of A. & L. August, who, in a residence of a few months, has won many friends and a bride that makes him the envy of lots of folks.

A late number of the Musical Courier contains a highly complimentary notice of a recital at one of the leading conservatories of New York city, at which Victor Kuzdo was the violin soloist. The work of Mr. Kuzdo was specially praised. Those who met the Kuzdos while they were in Fort Worth will be glad to learn that on their return to New York they resumed their prestige among the leading musicians of the metropolis.

The Kensington Klub did not meet last week, a postponement being made necessary by the serious illness of Mr.

WACO, Texas, June 10.—Information comes from Camden, Ark., that T. E. Hubby of Waco has just broken the trap shooting record of Arkansas, by breaking 208 out of a possible 210 targets. He made a run of 140 straight without missing.

TORTURE OF A PREACHER

The story of the torture of Rev. O. D. Moore, pastor of the Baptist church of Harpersville, N. Y., will interest you. He says: "I suffered agonies, because of a persistent cough, resulting from a grip, I had to sleep sitting up in bed. I tried many remedies, without relief, until I took Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, which entirely cured my cough, and saved me from consumption." A grand cure for disease conditions of Throat and Lungs. At W. J. Fisher's, Reeves' Pharmacy and M. S. Blanton & Co., druggists; price 50c and $1.00, guaranteed. Trial bottle free.

OUR CAR HAS ARRIVED

This is the second one this year—three last year; that alone should convince you that "PALACE CAR" READY-MIXED PAINT is being used extensively by the people of Fort Worth. Five solid car-loads, and not one single complaint—and remember also the popular price—$1.50, not $1.65, but $1.50. We are satisfied with a living profit, and pleased customers. We need room badly—fire damaged goods are in the way. The price this week will move them all. Come early.

June Clearance Sale Still On

SO FAR our June Sales have been the largest in the history of this store and we still have a large stock of household goods left to select from. We are making prices that can't be duplicated by any other house in the city, and any one in need of household furnishings should get our prices before placing their order, as we are obliged to sell our goods this month to make room for our new stock which begins to arrive in a very short while, and in order to have room for our new goods we are offering our present stock at prices regardless of profit.

Special in All Grades of Carpet

As we are closing out our carpet stock we will sell any piece of carpet in our entire store at exactly factory cost, such as Axminsters, Wilton Velvets, Brussels, Body Brussels, and many grades of Ingrain. This is a chance to beautify your home at factory prices. Everybody should take advantage of this great sale.

We also handle the celebrated White Mountain Refrigerator, which is the best on the market, and we are going to make special prices on them for the next 30 days.

Special in Mattings

Our Matting Sale is still on and any one needing Matting should call and inspect our line before buying: 30c grade at 20c; 40c grade at 25c and 30c per yard.

Remember, this is June Clearance Sale, and we give all a very special invitation to call and inspect our stock.

"I'm Trying to Make an Honest Living" Says Nan Patterson

Actress Three Times Tried for Killing "Caesar" Young on the Stage Again—Wins Her Audience—Is Working to Pay Off Her Indebtedness

POTTSVILLE, Pa., June 10.—Four hundred persons saw Nan Patterson, the pretty Florodora girl, free after three trials on the charge of killing "Caesar" Young, in her appearance at the Academy of Music, in "A Romance of Panama." Her reception was enthusiastic and sincere.

She came on the stage in a blaze of limelight, looking exceedingly dainty in a girlish gown of baby blue chiffon, and sang two songs—"That's What the Daisy Said" and "A Picnic for Two."

During the chorus of the first song she came close to the footlights and tossed daisies to the audience. In her second song, which was given with a chorus of eight girls, she danced a little and gave a few of her Florodora nods, which delighted the audience. Her turn, which is entirely incidental to the musical comedy, took up about ten minutes.

WOMEN THROUGH STAGE DOOR

There was a throng of women outside the stage door when Nan arrived at the theater at 2 o'clock.

She wore a blue traveling suit, a white shirt waist, a wide-brimmed blue straw hat trimmed with bluebirds and a fluttering blue veil.

She used the star's dressing room and was dressed and in the wings talking to her manager by 10 o'clock. Half an hour later she made her appearance, the third since her return to the stage.

Her stage gown is a dainty creation by Mrs. Osborn. The baby blue chiffon covers a white taffeta underskirt and comes out to the top of her white kid boots. Her hat was white straw, with a long blue plume. She carried a crystal white silk parasol trimmed with chiffon and fresh daisies. She wore her favorite locket, the diamond studded gold piece, and a tiny heart of pearl and diamonds gleamed at her throat.

Although a little nervous at the first, her timidity disappeared after the first song and she seemed to sing and dance her way into the hearts of all those assembled. She didn't receive an ovation, but her work was loudly applauded.

The musical melange is said to be a sort of burlesque of "The Pirates of Penzance." Yolande Wallace and David Warsaw had a lot to do and sang many songs.

The first act is the pirates' stronghold on the coast of Panama and the second act shows the pirates' cavern. There is no mention of the Panama canal, but the chorus seemed to be dressed for hot weather and was much applauded.

The plot revolves around the love affairs of a wicked old pirate of Panama, who wants to marry an American heiress, but who is prevented by an Italian beauty. An Irishman and a Hebrew make up the comedy.

NO ALLUSION TO TRAGEDY

But there is not the slightest mention of "Nan." A revolver is brought into play in the last act, but not while she is on the stage.

Last night, as time wore on, the audience began asking whether "Nan" was really to appear.

The town has been vivid with great yellow posters announcing her debut for the past week.

When she did come on it was a darkened stage, where she stood until the spot light was turned on full glare. Then she walked up the stage, smiled and sang.

Tonight she appears at Harrisburg, Friday night at Johnstown and Saturday at Altoona.

"I'm trying to make an honest living—that's all!" said Nan Patterson to me after the performance, in the first interview she has authorized since her liberation from the Tombs prison and her return to the stage. "I mean to work until all my debts are paid."

As she talked she stood in the wings of the old Academy of Music, the natural red of her cheeks glowing through the rouge—for she had just finished her songs and dance and had come off the stage.

Nan appeared exceedingly girlish in her Osborn creation of baby blue chiffon and white silk. As she talked she pulled the petals out of the fresh daisies in her hand and scattered them about her.

"I never sang alone before," she continued, "and my voice sounds so strange to me, but it is improving in volume, so my manager says, and by the end of the week I shall be able to fill any theater."

Just then the doorman approached her, cap in hand. "There's a little girl waiting for you at the door," he said. "Shall I let her in?" Nan said "yes."

The door opened and in walked a pretty little girl hardly ten years of age. She walked timidly up to Nan and held out her hand.

CHILD'S SYMPATHY BRINGS TEARS

"Are you Miss Nan Patterson?" she asked. "Well, I'm a little girl, but I've been reading all about you in the newspapers, and I want to tell you how glad I am that you are free. Won't you write to me sometime?"

Nan stooped and kissed the little girl and promised to write.

As the girl disappeared, tears came into Nan's eyes. "That's real sympathy," she said. "It comes to me like the shadow of a great rock in a weary land."

From the stage stole the gay songs of the chorus and the applause of the people was heard.

For a moment Nan in her simplicity stood thinking. Her thoughts seemed to be wandering. There was a dilapidated scene of a prison leaning against the bare brick wall of the theater. She saw it, sighed, tore at the daisies nervously for a moment, then clutched at the pearl and diamond at her throat.

SKETCHED IN COURT FOR

"That's my Los Angeles pin," she exclaimed, as if eager to get away from her thoughts of the Tombs.

"Oh, how I should love to be back there among my friends. I hear from my mother and father nearly every day," she went on, "and I love to write them my experiences on these one-night stands."

"How I hate to get up so early in the morning and catch the trains! But by traveling and seeing new and strange faces I forget many things."

"I won't say I like the stage, but it was the only thing to which I could turn to make enough money to pay my debts."

"Many people criticize me unjustly. They don't seem to realize that I must make my living."

"I think a good many are disappointed when I make my appearance. They expect to see me dressed grandly, but I dress as simply as I can."

LEADING SIMPLE LIFE, PLAYING PINOCCHLE

"I am living just a simple life, and look to no greater diversion than a game of pinocchio while traveling. I go direct to my hotel after the theater and try to avoid the curious crowds."

"At Scranton I fooled a big crowd which waited outside the stage door by keeping a cab waiting while I made a hasty exit through the front."

"I heard a farmer say, 'Well, I guess we'd better go home now, reckon Nan is going to sleep in the opera house.'"

"In Wilkesbarre I went to have my hair dressed and tipped the little girl attendant with a quarter. She tied it up in a ribbon and said she meant to keep it all her life."

"A little, barefoot newsboy ran after the train as it was leaving Scranton. I threw him a piece of money and he threw me back a kiss with his soiled hands. In these little acts of sympathy seem to make life worth living again."

THE HARM OF FLIRTING

BEATRICE FAIRFAX

It is no compliment to be called a flirt. And yet there is not one girl out of ten who, in her inmost heart, is not pleased when the term is applied to her.

You know, girls, there is a vast difference between a flirt and a coquette. The former is artificial, the latter natural.

The flirt is deliberate, calculating, caring not who she may hurt, so long as she is happy.

Her one idea is to have as much attention as she can, without entangling her own affections.

The coquette is a coquette from the cradle to the grave. She is spontaneous, charming. With her no action is premeditated; she is charming to all men simply because she can't help it.

Coquetry is inborn and cannot be cultivated.

A great many very popular girls are neither coquettes nor flirts. They were not born to be the former, they would scorn to be the latter.

The girl who leads a man on and deliberately throws him over when some new man appears should be ashamed of herself.

There is nothing to be proud of in a coquette that drags a sore, humiliated heart at its chariot wheels.

The coquette is warm-hearted, lovable. She will coquette with her own husband, will hold him enchanted by her ever-varying charm.

The flirt will be a blessing to no man.

She is cold and schemes only for her own ends.

She will never be satisfied with the love and attentions of one man. The man who marries her must reconcile himself to seeing her maneuver for the attentions of every man she meets.

Girls, when you hear a girl spoken of as "a desperate flirt," don't envy her. Remember, that you can be just as attractive by being natural and sweet and girlish.

The flirt may have a good deal of superficial attention, but if you notice you will find that a great many unmarried women are spoken of as having been great flirts in their day.

Perhaps if they had not been such flirts in their younger days they might now be happy wives.

Men are afraid of flirts. They want womanly, lovable women for wives, not flighty, heartless women who are never happy unless they have a dozen men at their feet.

The girl flirt is tolerated because one feels that she is carried away by the exuberance of youth and infatuated by the attention she is able to secure.

You feel sorry for her, and hope that she will change with time and experience. The married flirt is beneath contempt.

Not only does she ruin her husband's happiness, but she takes away from young girls the attentions which by right belong to them.

She can seek a man's society without being accused of trying to marry him. She has had her chance, and it is most unfair that she should interfere with the girl's chances.

Remember, dear girls, that if you are born coquettes it is your birthright, one of the charms with which nature has endowed you.

But if you are not do not spoil yourself by cultivating the spurious quality; don't try to be flirts.

MONSTER DEMONSTRATION TO SHOW PROGRESS OF THE GREAT SOUTHWEST

(Photographed by J. D. Kent for the Newspaper Enterprise Association.)
BREAKFAST ON ROUNDUP, 101 RANCH.

The biggest wild west show the world has ever seen will be held on the 101 ranch in Oklahoma today. This event will be one of the incidents connected with the visit of the National Editorial Association, which will arrive at Bliss, O. T., the 101 ranch station, after their convention at Guthrie, and before starting for Texas, California and the Portland exposition.

The hosts on this occasion will be the Miller brothers—Joseph, George and Zach—owners of the ranch.

ON 101 RANCH. The best kind of entertainment on the big stock and agricultural farm, comprising 87,000 acres.

He said he would show them 500 harvesters and binders at work in a wheat field of 13,000 acres. He would show them how to raise blooded stock on a mammoth scale, or he would give them a buffalo dinner, Indian war dances and cowboy feats of a thrilling nature.

Working over the entertainment plans the Miller brothers decided to death blow with the opening of "Old Oklahoma" April 22, 1889, over sixteen years ago. Oklahoma nowadays is a hustling agricultural community, with great industrial development and the fastest growing railways in the country. But easterners don't know it, so the Miller brothers will present an entertainment of contrasts, the west as it used to be, and the west as it is.

The ranch itself will typify the latter idea. The Millers have 87,000 acres with 150 miles of fencing. Nine thousand acres are in wheat, 2,000 in corn, 500 in oats and smaller tracts in potatoes, melons and other crops.

To handle these crops 101 ranch makes use of every modern device. The central ranch house is the center of a telephone system which reaches to all parts of the property. Forty-two wheat binders, 10 corn harvesters, 5 threshing outfits and 50 wagons are in use. A steam traction engine was purchased to haul gang plows. To see the 42 reapers go one after another down a vast expanse of waving, golden grain, one has to visit 101 ranch.

Nearly 500 farm hands are required to till the acreage, while 50 cowboys look after the 15,000 cattle. About 5,000 hoes, 500 mules and 300 work horses are kept on the ranch on the average.

The Miller brothers recently purchased 35 head of buffalo from a Montana man, and brought them down to Oklahoma. Three died on the way, but 32 arrived, as an event of some domestic importance occurred in one of the cars. The editorial convention will see the youngest buffalo calf in captivity.

The big chiefs, Geronimo, Quanah Parker and Big Wolf, chief of the Cheyennes, will lead a parade of 2,000 Indians and 250 cowboys in native dress. Then will come a genuine buffalo hunt, and for fear the brutes will not take kindly to a hunt, the Miller brothers have brought up a lot of long horned Texas steers which are guaranteed to lead the hunters a merry chase, and to endanger life and limb of pursuers.

Pickett, the negro cowboy, will do his favorite trick of leaping upon the bare back of a galloping steer, and of throwing the animal by seizing its nose between his teeth.

Roping contests will be held in half a dozen places at once, and bronches will be "busted." Lucille Mulhall, of wild west equestrian fame, "champion lady rider and roper of the world," will indulge in feats of horsemanship and throw the lasso and tie wild steers.

A cattle roundup and branding by cowboys will follow, and then will come a roping contest for the championship of the southwest.

Indians and cowboys will fight a sham battle, during which an immigrant train will be burned. As a finale, everybody who can get a horse will line up, and at the crack of a pistol start tearing across the prairie, in an imitation of the famous rush with which the Cherokee strip was opened. At night Indian dances will be held.

These will mark the obliteration of the tribal existence of the Ponca and Otoe tribes. They own much of the land in the 101 ranch, having leased it to the Miller brothers. The federal government is breaking up the tribal relations and allotting the land in individual parcels.

To properly mark the event, which is one of great seriousness and considerable paths to them, the Otos and Poncas have invited Indians from all the neighboring reservations to be their guests.

After the visiting editors wend their way to the special train to the music of a dozen bands, their cars will pass the 101 ranch barns, each 180 feet long, the big corrals, the ranch automobiles, the waving fields of grain, the huge stacks of hay, the building with the printing presses, the car loads of wire fencing, and other signs of agricultural wealth and industrial development. This will give them a picture of the west as it is.

And from burning immigrants' wagons and hunting buffalo to automobiles and steam plows is a space of 20 years.

INDIANS TO LEAD THE PARADE

Famous Chiefs of Old-Time West Will Participate in Big Show Today in Oklahoma

People are prone to associate Oklahoma and the west of today with Geronimo, the ferocious old warrior who now is about as harmless as a redskin can be, and with Quanah Parker, chief of the Comanches, whose mother was a white woman captured by a war party.

These big chiefs, with Big Wolf, chief of the Cheyennes, led the parade of 2,000 Indians and 250 cowboys, in native dress, one of the events of the big wild west show held at 101 Ranch in Oklahoma today, to demonstrate to members of the National Editorial Association the progress of the west.

THE MILLER BROTHERS, OWNERS OF 101 RANCH, WHO ARE ENTERTAINING THE EDITORIAL GUESTS DURING THE BIG DEMONSTRATION.

Joe Miller, president of the ranch and editor of the Bliss Review, attended the last convention of the association at St. Louis, and during the big fight for the next convention place promised the delegates that if they would vote for Oklahoma he would give them the make the event commemorative of the Oklahoma and the west of olden times, which still lives virile and green, it is believed, almost everywhere east of Chicago.

People in the west know that Oklahoma and the wild west received its

LUST OF GOLD DRAWS MEN BACK TO ALASKA

SEATTLE, Wash., June 10.—Lured on by that strange lust for gold which inspires strong men to pursue the fleeting phantom of fate to the foot of the fading rainbow of promise, more than 3,000 men will embark from Seattle during the next ten days for the placer fields on the bleak shores of Northwestern Alaska.

The annual June movement to Northwestern Alaska is popularly known as the "Nome rush," after the name of the commercial metropolis of the district, the place where gold was first discovered in large quantities. It begins some seasons as early as May 15, and continues until about June 15. The return movement sets in in September and continues until late in October.

The strangest of all strange features of these annual stampedes is the fascination which they have for a large class of miners and prospectors, many of whom go north from season to season with the regularity of birds of passage, who have not sufficient capital with which to purchase an outfit for prospecting and have no other prospect in view than to work for wages for some one of the large mining companies.

To the poor man going to Nome the whole season's experience is more than likely to prove one of danger and hardship. Even the trip north is fraught with no small amount of danger, while the steerage quarters on many of the steamships are far from attractive.

There was a time when Nome was the most promising "poor man's" camp in the world. Shortly after the discovery of gold on the adjacent creeks in 1888 it was found that the beach sands for miles were underlaid with a gold bearing strata which ran from 80 cents to $5 to the pan. But the beach sands soon became exhausted and when, the following spring, 20,000 men stampeded to the district to take part in working them it was found that they had been completely stripped of their treasure. Mining is now confined to the creeks and benches where the claims have fallen into the hands of large operators who have expended hundreds of thousands of dollars in constructing ditches and flumes and preparing to work their properties at the lowest possible cost for labor.

Each year, with the ever-increasing facilities for hydraulic operations, the demand for laborers in the conduct of these operations increases, and this season it will doubtless be smaller than ever before. A recent dispatch from Nome announces that the miners already in the district to the number of 1,000 have organized themselves into a union and sent out word that no more common laborers are needed in the district, that the number present is sufficient to meet all requirements of the work contemplated for the present season. Naturally this is denied, both by the big operators to whose advantage it would be to have the district flooded with laboring men, and by the agents of the steamship companies who are holding out the rosy promise of plenty of work at high wages to induce men to take passage on their vessels for the north.

Gold was first discovered at Nome in the fall of 1898 by three adventurous prospectors who, on their first day in the district, staked claims which have since made them all millionaires. The output of the district in gold now aggregates about $30,000,000, of which some $5,000,000 was produced last season. Reliable estimates place the probable output of the coming season at about the same amount, and this will come out chiefly in the hands of about twenty men who own and control the few rich mines of the district.

LAST DAY'S RACING IN OLD MISSOURI

June 16 Marks Closing of Four Race Tracks as the Result of Legislative Act Making Race Track Gambling a Felony

ST. LOUIS, June 10.—When Judge Edw. Maginn tolls the bell at the historic Fair Grounds track at the conclusion of the sixth race June 16, he will sound the knell of the racing game in Missouri.

Upon that day the Breeder's law, under which betting on the races has been legally conducted in Missouri since 1897, will become a dead letter, and the Fair Grounds track at the legislative, making race track gambling a felony, will go into effect.

Not only will it be illegal for Missourians to bet upon races run within the state, but it will be a penitentiary offense for them to make wagers on races run outside of the state.

The effect of the new law can best be judged when it is stated that over $14,000,000 was wagered at the four St. Louis tracks during the racing season of 1904. Of this vast sum, statistics show that fully one-half went into the pockets of the bookmakers and track owners.

In St. Louis, Cella, Tilles and Adler, known as the "Big Three," who control the Delmar, Fair Grounds and Kinloch tracks, have become multi-millionaires within a few years.

Ten years ago Louis Cella, known then as "The Dago Saloonkeeper," was a poor man. Today his wealth is es-business district in the early '90s. Public sentiment finally became so strong, however, that the police were forced to raid the place. It was then that Cella became interested in the old south side "Electric Light" track, where races were run at night. Later he associated with Adler and Tilles, and when midnight racing was forced out of business, they secured the passage of the Breeder's law.

til 1904, the "Big Three" had a monopoly on St. Louis racing. Then Patrick Carmody built the Union track and declared war upon the Western Jockey Club. The venture was a failure, and the plant went into the hands of a receiver at the close of the first season.

This spring the property was sold at auction, and was bought in by Carmody, who was backed by Ed Corrigan, owner of Hawthorne track at Chicago and the new Panama track at New Orleans.

The track has been operated this season in opposition to the Western Jockey Club, and as a result both places have maintained free gates.

Like Louis Cella, Barney Schreiber, probably the best known turfman in the west, owes his fortune to the St. Louis tracks. He has the distinction of having run a $20 bill up to $1,000,000 in the betting ring.

In 1886 Schreiber was driving a grocery wagon in South St. Louis and was getting $20 a month for his work. He was an unsophisticated boy, and when the "Electric Light" track was started was a cinch for the touts. Before making the killing which made him famous, Barney was the victim of some ludicrous jokes.

Upon his first visit to the races a tout advised Schreiber to play a certain horse "both ways." The tout stood beside Schreiber when the barrier flew up. Frightened by the flapping net, the horse carrying Barney's money wheeled and bolted in the wrong direction. The tout started to console Schreiber on his hard luck, when he was dumfounded to see his victim dancing around in delight.

"What's the matter, are you crazy?" demanded the tout. "Don't you know you have lost your money?"

"I don't see how," replied Schreiber. "didn't I play him both ways?"

While the St. Louis tracks have made a few wealthy, the police records show that a large percentage of the crimes and suicides in this city are directly attributable to money lost in the betting ring.

"I'm Trying to Make an Honest Living" Says Nan Patterson

Actress Three Times Tried for Killing "Caesar" Young on the Stage Again—Wins Her Audience—Is Working to Pay Off Her Indebtedness

POTTSVILLE, Pa., June 10.—Four hundred persons saw Nan Patterson, the pretty Florodora girl, free after three trials on the charge of killing "Caesar" Young, in her appearance at the Academy of Music, in "A Romance of Panama." Her reception was enthusiastic and sincere.

She came on the stage in a blaze of limelight, looking exceedingly dainty in a girlish gown of baby blue chiffon, and sang two songs—"That's What the Daisy Said" and "A Picnic for Two."

During the chorus of the first song she came close to the footlights and tossed daisies to the audience. In her second song, which was given with a chorus of eight girls, she danced a little and gave a few of her Florodora nods, which delighted the audience. Her turn, which is entirely incidental to the musical comedy, took up about ten minutes.

WOMEN THROU STAGE DOOR

There was a throng of women outside the stage door when Nan arrived at the theater at 2 o'clock.

She wore a blue traveling suit, a white shirt waist, a wide-brimmed blue straw hat trimmed with bluebirds and a fluttering blue veil.

She used the star's dressing room and was dressed and in the wings talking to her manager by 10 o'clock. Half an hour later she made her appearance, the third since her return to the stage.

Her stage gown is a dainty creation by Mrs. Osborn. The baby blue chiffon covers a white taffeta underskirt and comes out to the top of her white kid boots. Her hat was white straw, with a long blue plume. She carried a crystal white silk parasol trimmed with chiffon and fresh daisies. She wore her favorite locket, the diamond studded gold piece, and a tiny heart of pearl and diamonds gleamed at her throat.

Although a little nervous at the first, her timidity disappeared after the first song and she seemed to sing and dance her way into the hearts of all those assembled. She didn't receive an ovation, but her work was loudly applauded.

The musical melange is said to be a sort of burlesque of "The Pirates of Penzance." Yolande Wallace and David Warsaw had a lot to do and sang many songs.

The first act is the pirates' stronghold on the coast of Panama and the second act shows the pirates' cavern. There is no mention of the Panama canal, but the chorus seemed to be dressed for hot weather and was much applauded.

The plot revolves around the love affairs of a wicked old pirate of Panama, who wants to marry an American heiress, but who is prevented by an Italian beauty. An Irishman and a Hebrew make up the comedy.

NO ALLUSION TO TRAGEDY

But there is not the slightest mention of "Nan." A revolver is brought into play in the last act, but not while she is on the stage.

Last night, as time wore on, the audience began asking whether "Nan" was really to appear.

The town has been vivid with great yellow posters announcing her debut for the past week.

When she did come on it was a darkened stage, where she stood until the spot light was turned on full glare. Then she walked up the stage, smiled and sang.

Tonight she appears at Harrisburg, Friday night at Johnstown and Saturday at Altoona.

"I'm trying to make an honest living—that's all!" said Nan Patterson to me after the performance, in the first interview she has authorized since her liberation from the Tombs prison and her return to the stage. "I mean to work until all my debts are paid."

As she talked she stood in the wings of the old Academy of Music, the natural red of her cheeks glowing through the rouge—for she had just finished her songs and dance and had come off the stage.

Nan appeared exceedingly girlish in her Osborn creation of baby blue chiffon and white silk. As she talked she pulled the petals out of the fresh daisies in her hand and scattered them about her.

"I never sang alone before," she continued, "and my voice sounds so strange to me, but it is improving in volume, so my manager says, and by the end of the week I shall be able to fill any theater."

Just then the doorman approached her, cap in hand. "There's a little girl waiting for you at the door," he said. "Shall I let her in?" Nan said "yes."

The door opened and in walked a pretty little girl hardly ten years of age. She walked timidly up to Nan and held out her hand.

CHILD'S SYMPATHY BRINGS TEARS

"Are you Miss Nan Patterson?" she asked. "Well, I'm a little girl, but I've been reading all about you in the newspapers, and I want to tell you how glad I am that you are free. Won't you write to me sometime?"

Nan stooped and kissed the little girl and promised to write.

As the girl disappeared, tears came into Nan's eyes.

"That's real sympathy," she said. "It comes to me like the shadow of a great rock in a weary land."

From the stage stole the gay songs of the chorus and the applause of the people was heard.

For a moment Nan in her simplicity stood thinking. Her thoughts seemed to be wandering. There was a dilapidated scene of a prison leaning against the bare brick wall of the theater. She saw it, sighed, tore at the daisies nervously for a moment, then clutched at the pearl and diamond at her throat. "That's my Los Angeles pin," she exclaimed, as if eager to get away from her thoughts of the Tombs.

"Oh, how I should love to be back there among my friends. I hear from my mother and father nearly every day," she went on, "and I love to write them my experiences on these one-night stands."

"How I hate to get up so early in the morning and catch the trains! But by traveling and seeing new and strange faces I forget many things."

"I won't say I like the stage, but it was the only thing to which I could turn to make enough money to pay my debts."

"Many people criticize me unjustly. They don't seem to realize that I must make my living."

"I think a good many are disappointed when I make my appearance. They expect to see me dressed grandly, but I dress as simply as I can."

LEADING SIMPLE LIFE, PLAYING PINOCCHLE

"I am living just a simple life, and look to no greater diversion than a game of pinocchle while traveling. I go direct to my hotel after the theater and try to avoid the curious crowds."

"At Scranton I fooled a big crowd which waited outside the stage door by keeping a cab waiting while I made a hasty exit through the front."

"I heard a farmer say, 'Well, I guess we'd better go home now, reckon Nan is going to sleep in the opera house.'"

"In Wilkesbarre I went to have my hair dressed and tipped the little girl attendant with a quarter. She tied it up in a ribbon and said she meant to keep it all her life."

"A little, barefoot newsboy ran after the train as it was leaving Scranton. I threw him a piece of money and he threw me back a kiss with his soiled hands. In these little acts of sympathy seem to make life worth living again."

THE HARM OF FLIRTING

BEATRICE FAIRFAX

It is no compliment to be called a flirt. And yet there is not one girl out of ten who, in her inmost heart, is not pleased when the term is applied to her.

You know, girls, there is a vast difference between a flirt and a coquette.

The former is artificial, the latter natural.

The flirt is deliberate, calculating, caring not who she may hurt, so long as she is happy.

Her one idea is to have as much attention as she can, without entangling her own affections.

The coquette is a coquette from the cradle to the grave. She is spontaneous, charming. With her no action is premeditated; she is charming to all men simply because she can't help it.

Coquetry is inborn and cannot be cultivated.

A great many very popular girls are neither coquettes nor flirts.

They were not born to be the former, they would scorn to be the latter.

The girl who leads a man on and deliberately throws him over when some new man appears should be ashamed of herself.

There is nothing to be proud of in a coquette that drags a sore, humiliated heart at its chariot wheels.

The coquette is warm-hearted, lovable. She will coquette with her own husband, will hold him enchanted by her ever-varying charm.

The flirt will be a blessing to no man.

TRY THE Agnes Cafe When in Mineral Wells. DRINK "White Sulphur Water" AT MINERAL WELLS

She is cold and schemes only for her own ends.

She will never be satisfied with the love and attentions of one man. The man who marries her must reconcile himself to seeing her maneuver for the attentions of every man she meets.

Girls, when you hear a girl spoken of as "a desperate flirt," don't envy her.

Remember, that you can be just as attractive by being natural and sweet and girlish.

The flirt may have a good deal of superficial attention, but if you notice you will find that a great many unmarried women are spoken of as having been great flirts in their day.

Perhaps if they had not been such flirts in their younger days their might now be happy wives.

Men are afraid of flirts. They want womanly, lovable women for wives, not flighty, heartless women who are never happy unless they have a dozen men at their feet.

The girl flirt is tolerated because one feels that she is carried away by the exuberance of youth and infatuated by the attention she is able to secure.

You feel sorry for her, and hope that she will change with time and experience.

The married flirt is beneath contempt.

Not only does she ruin her husband's happiness, but she takes away from young girls the attentions which by right belong to them.

She can seek a man's society without being accused of trying to marry him.

She has had her chance, and it is most unfair that she should interfere with the girls' chances.

Remember, dear girls, that if you are born coquettes it is your birthright, one of the charms with which nature has endowed you. But if you are not do not spoil yourself by cultivating the spurious quality; don't try to be flirts.

OUR LAY SERMON

"I hate a cold-blooded, right-living rascal that has accumulated his $10,000,000, reaches Sunday school regularly and, within the range of the law, drives his hard bargains every week day. If such people would ask me what I thought of them I would answer them in keeping with the general tendency now for each man to do unto his neighbor as his neighbor would do unto him, only he tries to do it first."

These are strong words to come from the lips of a preacher, but they constitute the public declaration of President Francis L. Patton of Princeton Theological Seminary. It is not strange that the animus exists for such a declaration, but in this day and time when there is such a universal proneness to bow to the golden calf, it seems strange that a man who occupies such an exalted and important position as does Dr. Patton would have the temerity to thus speak out right in meeting, as the expression goes.

The type of the cold-blooded, right-living rascal that has accumulated a full share of this world's goods, is found in almost every community. He is the man who has laid up earthly treasures through questionable means and when the evening of life is throwing its shadows about his declining years, seeks to buy his way into that celestial reward that only is due after a long life well spent. He has given the best years of his life to the worship of Mammon and has crushed with relentless power every form of opposition and obstacle that has crossed his path. The unfortunates who have been so relentlessly ground between and beneath the wheels of this modern juggernaut are forgotten, as are the methods used in the accomplishing of the desired ends. All has been laid aside except the one overweening, selfish grasping desire to accumulate, and when fortune has been piled up almost beyond the dreams of avarice, there comes a sudden realization that something is yet wanting.

There are things we encounter in this life that money cannot reach. They are beyond the influence of the circulating medium that is alleged to be the root of all evil on this mundane sphere. An austere life in which there is no further craving for the almighty dollar will not bring relief. A show of piety and devotion publicly to some form of religion does not bring the desired peace, for the withered and miserly old heart realizes that there is something yet lacking that it is beyond the power of his earthly hoard to supply. It is the consciousness that in the accumulation of treasure there has been no peace with God. While He has permitted the miserly old soul to go on and accumulate through some wise plan of His own He has placed a gnawing worm in that old heart that serves to perpetually remind it that it has only sown to the flesh.

Perhaps the greatest punishment that can be visited upon men of this class is the bitter realization that they can carry none of this accumulation into the other world with them. Poor and naked, without money and without other earthly treasure they arrived in this world, and they must take their departure under the same accompanying conditions. The man with his millions may lie in a magnificent mausoleum when he is done with the things of this life, and his tomb may embody the same costly pomp and show that characterized his earthly life. But on the other side he stands divested of it all. He carries no more with him than the poor devil who is cheaply laid away in the Potter's field. He is just as poor when he reaches the presence of his Master as Lazarus, whose festering sores were licked by a dog, and who pleaded for the crumbs which fell from the rich man's table.

Great wealth can purchase position and power in this world, but when the avarice is brought face to face with the Grim Reaper he realizes that his life has been a complete failure. He finds that what he thought was life is but the span of a few years, and that real life lies beyond the grave. And as the closing period of the short span of life draws nearer to an end, then men seek to tempt God, even as Satan tempted the Son of God in the dark hour of his trial. They would give lavishly of that ill-gotten wealth in a most ostentatious manner to placate God for what they know He has written against them, and they would feel the world by making it believe they were so religious that they gave the mafor portion of their means for the promotion of His work.

The Telegram believes that men can serve God with their money just as they can by their other good deeds. But the question is, how was that money accumulated that is to be used in serving the true and living God? We know that money is needed to carry on the evangelization of the world, commanded by God Himself, but that knowledge does not justify us in the act of murdering some man with money that we may take of his substance and carry on the Master's work. Could the Creator of this universe bless to His holy use the means thus acquired? On the contrary, does it not seem more reasonable and in consonance with what we know of the revealed will of God, to believe that the dollar given by the washerwoman—the fruit of hard and unrelenting toil, is more acceptable and will be productive of more good results than the expenditure of the millions that have been wrung from the masses as blood money by the men who are thus tempting God?

This is the principle that is inspiring some of the real men of God in these modern times to rise up and protest against what they have very appropriately designated as "tainted money" in the Master's work. And who knows but what it is the spirit of God Himself working within these men to bring home to the world a full realization of the fact that God will not be tempted?

These men who are thus tempting Jehovah are not giving all they have to His cause. They are simply trying to effect some kind of partnership arrangement with Him, through which they can work Him out of the necessity of paying the full penalty of their misdeeds in this life through the donation of a portion of the spoils.

The publican was told to go, give away what he had and come and follow the Lord Jesus Christ. The fact that the sepulchre has been whitened on the outside does not remove the smell of the charnel house on the interior. We cannot serve Mammon six days out of every week and then enjoy the requisite communion with God on the seventh day. We cannot grind the very life out of God's people six days in the week and then make our peace with the Father by giving Him a portion of the spoils on the Sabbath. He does not want the product of any such unholy combination.

When we have restored the things that we have obtained unrighteously and have repented for our misdeeds in the acquirement of those things, we can find the peace our hearts crave. But we will not be permitted to stop even there. We must make up our minds that we will sin no more. We must put into practical effect and execution such plans as will demonstrate our sincerity in turning back from the methods that brought us to our low estate.

And we can never purchase peace with the almighty dollar. Neither can we expect God to look with favor upon any act of ours which seeks to make Him the beneficiary of such methods.

PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATES.

The great American game of politics, like Tennyson's brook, goes on forever. Here in Texas while we are felicitating ourselves over the fact that the threatened state campaign has been averted until the proper time, we cannot be blind to the fact that national candidates are setting those of lesser degree an example in forwardness that is well calculated to stir the Texas candidates to renewed activity. It is a well known fact that the last national campaign had not closed before another was begun. Hon. Charles W. Fairbanks, of Indiana, did not neglect to do a whole lot of nomination, and the earliness of the Fairbanks campaign has served to put other republican aspirants into early action. The Fairbanks presidential aspirations have been handicapped from the very beginning by the unpopularity of the president of the United States. President Roosevelt has made public announcement of the fact that he will not accept renomination at the hands of his party, but the president has not yet stated that he would not do all in his power to name the man who shall come after him.

Big Bill Taft, the present secretary of war, is believed to be the man the president has settled upon as his successor, and even the suspicion that exists in that direction has been sufficient to bring the Taft boom very much to the front. Ohio has enjoyed something of a monopoly of the presidential business for several terms, and secretary Taft is very popular in Ohio. In fact, recent developments in that state seem to indicate that Ohio is very agreeable to the Ohio idea, and it begins to look as if the big Ohioan is today one of the most formidable candidates that has been suggested. Judge Taft is a big man physically and mentally and a very clean man. While there will be a whole lot of smaller republican fry in the presidential swim, it is already apparent that the real fight will be between Fairbanks and Taft, with the odds decidedly in favor of Taft.

The democratic party has not yet developed many aspirants for the honor of the presidential nomination, but the general opinion is that William J. Bryan is the man who will be selected to lead the democratic host. The affairs of the party have been such that the outlook has not been considered very encouraging. On that account there has not been an over-weening desire on the part of many prominent democrats to do the living sacrifice act. There will be bitter and determined opposition to Bryan, as it will be urged that he has already twice led the party to defeat and it can only result in another case of history repeating itself. But Bryan took hold of the party organization when it had almost been wiped out of existence and has made a supreme effort to bring order out of chaos. He is going abroad to study conditions with the idea of developing an issue.

There are indications that Tom Lawson, the author of the frenzied finance stories that have attracted so much attention, is seriously considering himself in the light of a presidential candidate. It is said to be Lawson's idea to attempt the achievement along the line of the people's candidate. He would seek to weld together all the trust busters of the country under his banner and ride on the wave of popular enthusiasm as the man who stands for the protection of the rights of the masses, and who would wipe out at one fell swoop all the crookedness that exists in financial and speculative circles. To those who have been wondering what was behind the Lawson movement, this disclosure will come as a genuine revelation. Tom Lawson is playing for big game, but the probabilities are he will make a very slight showing. He began his campaign too early and has worn the people out with his frenzied. And again, he is going to come in conflict with the democracy, which will all resent the appearance of another savior of the masses.

The situation is already a decidedly interesting one, notwithstanding the carliness with which some of these booms have been launched, as it is evident that there is no cessation in the great game of national politics. When congress meets this fall and passes upon some of the matters now agitating the public mind it is probable that some of the haziness of the political atmosphere will clear away and candidates will begin to more fully realize just what is before them. So far as the democracy is concerned, much depends on the action of the coming session of congress. If that body falls into line with the president and popular demand for some pending reforms, then democracy will be up against a hard proposition. If congress takes unfavorable action in these matters, then democracy's opportunity will have come, and it may mean a sweeping democratic victory in an appeal to the people.

The family council called by the czar to consider the matter of peace with Japan has resulted in the rather remarkable declaration that the subject will be considered if the terms are favorable. The terms of peace are not usually very favorable to the side that loses out, as victors usually claim for themselves the prerogative of naming the terms of peace.

The actual losses of Admiral Rojestvensky in the big naval battle with the Japanese has just been made public. During the engagement it is said 10,000 men were killed and drowned and more than 5,000 taken prisoners. It is not strange that the world is now declaring the victory of Togo to be the greatest that has occurred since Trafalgar.

The Russian people are doing very plain talking to their weakling czar these days, but talk in Russia does not count for much. Corn is from hip to waist high. Some cotton is six inches high, others just coming up. Both crops are pretty clean considering the wet weather we have been having.—Bowie Cross Timbers.

Texas crops are generally late this season as a result of the unfavorable spring. But there is so much moisture in the ground all vegetation has taken on a rapid growth and it is believed there will be a good yield of all staple crops.

The mayor of Cuero says the boll weevils have been a blessing to that section of Texas. He said farmers there formerly raised all cotton and in consequence were always poor and behind financially, but the weevil forced them to diversify and now nearly all of them have money ahead.—Kaufman Sun.

And still Texas is making steady war on the boll weevil for doing the very work the Cotton Growers' Association is trying to do. As a reducer of the cotton crop the boll weevil has proven an unqualified success.

The Colorado country is fast coming to the front as a stock farming country, and for high grade cattle it can not be excelled. Smaller ranches and better cattle is the key that will unlock the door to prosperity in West Texas.—Colorado News.

The Colorado country is rapidly developing along proper lines, and the time is not far distant when it will become the most prosperous portion of Texas. The combination of agriculture and stock raising will surely win.

Colonel W. J. Bryan and Judge Alton B. Parker, although the goal they are both striving for is almost out of sight, are both "talking now," as the sweet telephone girls are wont to say. What are they talking so much for, anyway?—Texarkana Courier.

With grass fed cattle bringing 5 cents on the Chicago market the cattlemen are beginning to feel that the tide has turned and that things are at last coming their way. Prosperity has returned to the cattle industry of the country, and it will be more apparent when the cattlemen get through squaring up the deficiencies produced by the great depression. They have had a hard rub, and deserve all the good things they are having.

The man who is honest will strive to give his employer more than value received for his money. He realizes that the employer must have a profit from his services or his position will soon be vacant, and with loyalty in his heart, he strives from day to day to measure up fully to the requirements.

The farmers of Red River county are offering fancy prices for cotton choppers and the peace officers, county, precinct and city, have begun to thin out the loafers. It's work or be locked up.—Clarksville Times.

And that is a rule that should be vigorously enforced in every community. The loafers and vags should all be made to go to work. Their services are needed on the farms, and in the towns they are but a constant menace to peace and general tranquility.

A FELLOW'S MOTHER KNOWS A fellow's father knows a lot. Of office work and such. But when it comes to things like what a boy wants, he ain't much. For when it comes to cuts or warts, or a stone bruise on your toes, A fellow's father ain't much, but A fellow's mother knows.

A fellow's father, he looks nice. And says it "A-hem! A-hem!" But when it comes to cakes and pies, "What are you knowin' of them?" He knows the price of wheat and rye. And corn and oats, it's true. But if you got the leg ache, why, He don't know what to do.

And if you burned your back the time That you went in to swim, And want some stuff to heal it, why, You never go to him; Because he doesn't know a thing About such things as those; But you just bet, and don't forget, A fellow's mother knows.

And if your nose is sunburned till It's all peeled off, and you Go to him for some health'g stuff, He don't know what to do. He's just as helpless as can be; But when a fellow goes And asks his mother, why, you see, A fellow's mother knows.

And if a fellow's lost his top, Or anything he's got, A fellow's father never knows If he's seen it or not. And so a fellow never asks His father, but he goes And asks his mother, and you bet, A fellow's mother knows.

A fellow's father knows a lot, But it ain't any use; So if a fellow's really got A headache or a bruise, Or if there's anything he wants, He gets right up and goes And asks his mother, for you see, A fellow's mother knows.

A fellow's father knows a lot, But it ain't any use; So if a fellow's really got A headache or a bruise, Or if there's anything he wants, He gets right up and goes And asks his mother, for you see, A fellow's mother knows.

SHOULD A GIRL PROPOSE

BY CYNTHIA GREY

Should a girl propose? If she gets the chance, should she? Not a man among you but will say, "I would hate to marry the woman who did!"

"No! A woman who reads will fall to say, 'Well, I should say not!'"

But—think it over. Those answers are for others. Suppose you had the question to answer for yourself and you believed the happiness of two lives depended upon the decision. If you were the girl, wouldn't you? If you were the man, wouldn't you think she should?

At the crucial moment when the "Will you" trembled on his lips, did you by the flutter of an eyelash or by bending a bit nearer say plainly, "No words, 'Go on, I won't do it.' If you didn't and are single, 40, and lonely, aren't you kicking yourself because you didn't help him out when all he needed was a little push to land him on the right side of the fence?"

KING EDWARD NOT SUPERSTITIOUS

But Would Not Lunch in the Open at Aldershot

CATCH OF THE SEASON

FOLLOWS THE FASHION

Mrs. Potter Palmer of Chicago Is Coming Out Strong in High Society

BY PAUL LAMBETH (Copyright, 1905, by the Hearst News Service.)

London Bureau of The Telegram. LONDON, June 10.—King Edward is not, like the czar of Russia, a superstitious man. He has had his fortune told by the most famous fortune tellers, but he has always frankly told the fortune tellers that he does not believe in "such rubbish."

There is one place, however, which the king would gladly avoid if he could, and that place is Aldershot. It was at Aldershot that, as the young Prince of Wales, he first felt the chill which afterwards developed into typhoid fever, from the dangers of which he so narrowly escaped with his life.

It was at Aldershot, when still Prince of Wales, some five years later, that he injured his knee; and it was at the same place, where, in a cold rain, he finally collapsed just before his coronation.

The other day when he was asked to review troops at Aldershot and lunch in the open field he turned to an officer at Buckingham Palace and said: "Not even if I am called an infirm old woman will I lunch out of doors at that place. I could do so anywhere else with impunity, but not at Aldershot."

As every one says it was useless to try and persuade the king, it was finally arranged that he should lunch at one of the general's houses, a small establishment, where very few servants were kept.

Like many American husbands whose wives are devoted to London life, Frank Mackey of Chicago and San Francisco spends most of his time making money on the other side, while his better half spends it with gay freedom here.

It does not, therefore, surprise people who first meet Mr. Mackey in London that he should show some contempt for the ordinary social conventions.

At a dinner given by Mrs. Mackey at her house "to meet her husband," Mr. Mackey, who sat between Mrs. Melba and Princess Patricia, amused the guests immensely by his outspoken utterances.

The climax came later in the evening, when one of the guests, a very pretty young married woman whom Mr. Mackey had imagined to be out of the house an hour before, came forward to say good-night.

Mr. Mackey did not conceal his surprise. All he said was: "Good Lord! You here still?"

The dangerous illness of Mrs. Sam Lewis, now known as Mrs. Lewis-Hill, who on the death of that world-famous money lender, Sam Lewis, married Lieutenant Hill, a young officer in the Guards, is causing all manner of rather callous speculation as to the nature of her probable legacy in case of death.

Sam Lewis left his widow the sum of four millions sterling. She was, according to his will, to enjoy the interest of this fortune during her lifetime, but on her death a million sterling was to go to the King Edward's hospital fund.

It is only natural, perhaps, that the hospital fund people should be taking such an interest in Mrs. Lewis-Hill's illness, for should she die no further subscription toward the fund would be asked from the public, and all the London hospitals would be placed on a sound financial basis.

As it is, Mrs. Hill has been giving outside the terms of the will ten thousand pounds a year to the hospital. Her young husband would undoubtedly be left the greater part of the three millions. The couple have been very happy together so far, despite the fact that many of the husband's friends have become very cool to him since the marriage.

An American hostess who is very much in evidence in Mrs. Potter Palmer, who gives one entertainment after another at the Duke of Abercorn's town mansion, Hampden house. Mrs. Palmer has followed the fashion set by the Hon. Mrs. George Keppel and Lady de Grey of dressing frequently in black and white, with a profusion of pearls.

The fashion certainly suits her, for she looks positively regal when she is receiving guests. Mrs. Palmer is coming out "very strong" at Ascot. She has taken one of the most beautiful places on the River Thames—Down Place, which is about three miles above Windsor, and which was at one time the favorite summer place of Constance, Duchess of Manchester.

Down Place, where Mrs. Palmer will entertain a huge house party for the Ascot races, the days of George IV, known as the Kit-Kat Club. It was frequented by the gilded youth of the period, and became rather notorious as a gambling club and a nest of political intrigue.

"She may not be good-looking, but she's always as neat as a pin." That is the verdict of Englishwomen on the Duchess of Roxburghe, who has established a reputation for perfect dressing and wonderfully good taste in the matter of jewelry.

The duchess, who has collected turquoise since she was a child, and who is a connoisseur in these stones, has just ordered some shoulder ornaments from Boucheron, the Paris jeweler, to complete a turquoise set which comprises a tiara, a neck ornament which spreads out over the chest in fan shape and comes to a point with a brilliant pendant and a stomacher.

The tiara is a work of art. Each turquoise, mounted in diamonds, stands shivering on a slender wire, and the effect is magnificent. The duchess intends to wear the entire set with a white gown at the dance she is to give at the house in Carlton Gardens, which she has rented from the Earl of Dudley.

When Dr. Torrey and Mr. Alexander, the Chicago evangelist, first started their mission at the Albert Hall a large number of well-known titled women of a serious turn of mind threw themselves heart and soul into the campaign which was to reform London, but of late these good ladies have shown signs of dropping off one by one.

Mr. Alexander these ladies were much in sympathy with, chiefly because he sang much and said little; but even Lord Kingsland and his female relations who so often attended the meetings are of opinion that Dr. Torrey has gone too far in his denunciations of society and Londoners in general.

The other day Dr. Torrey electrified his audience at Euston by stating that all those who go motoring, golfing or cycling on the Sabbath day will pay the penalty in their children, who will become rakes and blackguards.

This was too much even for the most religiously inclined of his followers, and has caused intense indignation among those who have been hitherto in sympathy with the mission.

The result of these utterances has been most marked, and the Strand mission, held in a huge temporary structure near the law courts, shows signs of ending in a fiasco. The man in the street declares that Dr. Torrey has had a splendid opportunity and lost it through sheer lack of human sympathy.

HEALTH IMPROVED

Henrik Isben Able to Be Up and Around Again

Special Cable to The Telegram. CHRISTIANA, June 10.—All rumors, so the contrary notwithstanding, it is a fact that the health of Henrik Isben is better than for many months. While he took very little interest in anything six months ago and seemed almost incapable of conceiving what was happening around him, he now follows social and political events with evident interest.

It is true that he no longer appears out of doors, either walking or riding. He sits at his usual window in the Grand on Carl John street and views the crowds who pass by to get a glimpse of him.

"Where there is noise, there is also life and health," he said a few days ago when speaking of the controversy.

WATER SUPPLY FAILING

Special Cable to The Telegram. NEUCHÂTEL, June 10.—The people of this city are up in arms against the project of tapping Neuchâtel Lake to provide drinking water for the city of Paris.

The present water supply of that city is poor and insufficient and it is proposed to build an enormous aqueduct from here from the lake that the surface of the water would be three feet lower than at present.

LONDON, June 10.—The Amer of Afghanistan is at the present time a most important personage, and both Russia and England are courting his favor, as his country lies like a buffer state between the Asiatic possessions of both countries and is conceded to be the key to India. Recently the English government sent a special minister to the capital of the Amer, and the above cut shows a snapshot taken by a member of the missions of the military escort which the Amer

GERMAN EMPEROR AN EXPANSIONIST

Knows That His Views Will Result in War

THE MONROE DOCTRINE

Stands in His Way and Causes Him Much Worry at the Present Time

BY MALCOLM CLARKE (Copyright, 1905, by the Hearst News Service.)

Special Cable to The Telegram. BERLIN, June 10.—The German empire, so recently founded when compared to other powers, has not yet reached the limit of the extension of its power.

"On both our eastern and western frontier the boundary lines must be pushed further back, to enable a race which a few generations hence will number one hundred million people, to live and prosper."

These are the views which the kaiser and a certain party in Germany hold, although it is clear that they must necessarily lead to war.

The German nation as a whole does not desire war. Its unity, baptized in blood thirty-five years ago, is no longer threatened in any way, and peace is necessary to its social and economical welfare.

But there still exists in Prussia a small feudal clan that cannot forget its warlike origin, and which, to use one of its own expressions of some years ago, considers war "a national industry."

This clan is the militaristic party, composed largely of officers, fanatic admirers of Frederick the Great, who believe that every Hohenzollern must love war.

The kaiser is naturally at the head of this clique, and when he considers the safety of his members, with no outsiders present, he loves to give vent to his real feelings, which diplomatic reasons force him to hide in his bosom under ordinary circumstances.

Occasionally his words leak out, and then the papers which print them are punished and the official and semi-official press get busy denying them point blank.

The words quoted above, showing that in certain circles here another war is considered inevitable, while not coming direct from the kaiser himself, were written for a purpose by a high army officer, General von Bernhard, who is very close to the kaiser and who would most assuredly not publish anything not approved by his imperial master.

The same officer in his article says that he considers war perfectly justifiable, and even says that it comes from God and serves its purpose, and that it is just as necessary to man as food and drink.

"Germany's mission is far from finished," he says, "and will not be until we have gathered under the wings of our great empire all the scattered elements of the German race."

"We must extend our sphere of influence wherever Germans live, and we must secure for Germanism the place which it ought to have in all parts of the globe."

In other words, the militarists of Germany will never rest, if they are allowed to have their way, until Germany has usurped not only Russia's Baltic provinces, the greater part of Austria, Holland, Luxembourg, parts of Belgium and Switzerland, but also large territories in South America, when the empire shall feel strong enough to tackle the Monroe doctrine.

The article has caused an immense sensation in Germany, but though it has been sharply criticized by the socialists, not one disapproving word has come from the kaiser or the government.

Prince Khilkoff, the Russian minister of transportation, who, by the way, is much more American than Russian, having spent many years on the other side of the Atlantic, and who is considered one of Russia's most prominent men, far from believing that Russia is an ardent advocate of prologues to an ardent advocate of prologues to the war, and as his influence with the czar is very strong it is more

A Program of Functions, He Is Expected to Attend

EMPEROR'S MOUTHPIECE

Count Henkel Who Is in Close Touch With William II

SPRING RACE MEETING

It Serves as a Pretext for Exhibitions of Feminine Adornment

BY MARGUIS DE CASTELLANE (Copyright, 1905, by the Hearst News Service.)

Special Cable to The Telegram. PARIS, June 10.—For the benefit of those American readers who may be inclined to wonder at the somewhat retiring role which the president of the French republic seems to play, I give herewith a list of the functions attended by M. Loubet during the first week in May, and an account of how he spent his time.

On May 1—Inauguration of the Salon obligatory admission of twelve masterpieces and 3,600 drawings, lasting for several hours. On May 2—Travelling at Bordeaux and banquet from 8 a. m. to 8 p. m. May 3—Opening of the congress of Hygiene, Apotheosis of the Tub and Cake of Soap.

May 4—Honorary presidency over the meeting of the Gymnastic Societies of Paris. Two hours spent in rûty and ship on a grand stand in a public garden. May 5—Opening of the Mutualists Congress. Four hours of speech, music and poetry.

May 6—Gala performance at the opera in aid of a society for Preparing Young Men for a Military Career. Three hours of yawning over a deadly dull performance. May 7—Honorary presidency at the military ball given by the pupils of St. Cyr.

Smiles, handshakes, kind words, etc. May 8—Grand dinner at the Club de la Rue Royale given at the Elysee, and a reception afterward. Hours of bows and idle talk and keeping up an air of enjoying it.

Try to imagine Mr. Roosevelt living in the midst of a social whirl in New York, instead of at Washington, and having to attend such a lot of foolish functions, and see how much energy he would have left to meditate on grave political questions, and the way to apply the Monroe doctrine.

Miss MacLeod Mata-Hari has come to Paris. Miss MacLeod Mata-Hari is a Japanese dancer, who recently resumed her maiden prefix after having for some months been the legitimate spouse of an English nobleman. Miss MacLeod Mata-Hari has two specialties. Like Isadora Duncan, the American dancer, she pretends to have found the real art of dancing, which, it appears, no European has hitherto known, and she exhibits herself under the pretext of being nearer the truth, in the scantiest of coverings. I say scantiest, whereas, in reality, she wears nothing at all. This new sport, which is being carried on under the half-closed eyes of the police, has not yet, thank Fortune, been submitted to the public gaze, but Miss MacLeod Mata-Hari has appeared in her unclothed state in certain salons, and in one of the most celebrated clubs of Paris, the Club de la Rue Royale. Pictures to yourself the eyes of three hundred men fixed upon this spectacle, and decide for yourselves whether or not mere nudity is or is not indecent. If I were the head of the French government, it seems to me just the same. I would prohibit Miss MacLeod Mata-Hari from giving her artistic performances.

FRENCH PEOPLE ARE AROUSED

another attempt against this country. He is connected with the history of aggression. The presence of this man in France at a time when the relations between the two countries is strained, is a disquieting sight for the rest of the world.

Readers of these dispatches will perhaps remember that I said more than six weeks ago that the Alger-Toulon motor boat race would be either a huge fiasco or a terrible disaster. It did not need to be said that a nutshell could not float on a more or less agitated sea for twenty hours without coming to grief. The fiasco has been complete, for not one of the contestants has arrived at the winning post. As for the disaster, it would have been an overwhelming had it not been for the bravery and devotion of the government's sailors. Without their aid the intrepid Madame du Gast, and the no less courageous Duc Decazes would be at the bottom of the sea feeding the fishes. Did the state do right in contributing its assistance to such foolish sport? Personally, and much in opposition to the opinion of most of my compatriots, I think the government was right. It is the duty of the state to uphold and encourage all manifestations of energy, however foolhardy. If their eventual development can render any service to humanity. Who knows if the outcome of the Alger-Toulon race may not be one of incalculable good to the industry of automobile navigation.

The spring race meeting serves as a pretext for the most marvelous exhibitions of feminine adornment. The dressmakers thoroughly realize this fact and every year they send their most beautiful models to Longchamp to show off their new styles. I have just attended the races and have taken the occasion to carefully examine the fashions. The result of my investigation has been the following results as the obligations imposed upon womanhood which would be in the height of fashion by Messrs. Worth, Doucet, Paquin & Co.

The correct thing in wraps is a long coat of soft cloth, in an indefinable shade of khaki, with collar and revers ornamented with large gold buttons, and opening over an old-fashioned embroidered waistcoat.

Secondly, hats must be small, basket-shaped contrivances, similar to those which are seen on the heads of Watteau's shepherdesses. No more big hats which protect from the sun, but are also the redoubtable enemies of men at the theaters.

LOOKING FOR EDEN

A New Religion Known As the "Simple Life"

Special Cable to The Telegram. GENEVA, June 10.—Swiss and Italian authorities are at a loss what to do with the ever-increasing numbers of followers of the Simple Life, who have formed colonies in several places in Southern Switzerland and Northern Italy, and who are looking for a site on which to found a new Garden of Eden.

These people wear no clothing beyond one long flowing garment and sandals, and when they have found their Garden of Eden they may even go back to the stage which preceded the fig leaves.

The proselytes of this strange sect are people of all nationalities—Englishmen, Germans, French and Russians—most of them, strange to say, of the educated and refined classes.

The men wear long hair and picturesque beards, while the women, robust and the picture of vigor and health, have an almost Amazonian appearance.

They pass their lives in the open air and when compelled, as during some of the recent severe weather, to sleep in houses, they remove doors, windows, carpets and curtains, and sleep, with scarcely any covering, on a hard simple mattress.

They bathe at least twice a day, are strict believers in vegetarianism, and an uncooked food diet; they drink ice water, and as far as I can ascertain, they are one and all free thinking Christians.

Of their family histories and past positions in the world they do not speak, though among them are persons of undoubted distinction.

They claim to be the healthiest and most rational livers on earth, and declare that all who desire to escape disease and unhappiness are bound in time to join their ranks and adopt their rules, which are those of nature and of Christ.

It becomes more evident every day that the Vatican is anxious to effect a reconciliation with the House of Savoy, and many are the suggestions which have been made to end the long quarrel between state and church in Italy.

None of these suggestions has been discussed, so much as one recently made by Monsignore Patrieli that the Pope should accept the appanage offered by the Holy Father by the Italian government thirty-five years ago.

Should Pius X decide to do this 109,000,000 lire will be paid into the papal treasury, representing the appanage accumulated since 1870.

The bad times, the secession of France and the steadily decreasing Peter's pence have all encouraged Monsignore Patrieli to offer his suggestion.

All points out that the appanage of the pope, unlike that of the king, is not subject to revision by the Italian people, it having been fixed by international consent when the Italian government had sanctioned by representatives of all powers.

At Attempted Assassination of King Alfonso

THE VATICAN IS ANXIOUS

To Effect Reconciliation With the House of Savoy

DISPLEASED AT LETTER

English People Did Not Like the Letter Written by King Alfonso

BY PAUL VILLIERS (Copyright, 1905, by the Hearst News Service.)

Paris Bureau of The Telegram. PARIS, June 10.—The recent attempt to assassinate the young King of Spain during his visit to this city has aroused the French people to such a pitch of indignation that from all parts of the country comes the demand that the French government take steps to expel from French territory every person suspected to sympathize with these assassins.

The people of France, while having no particular love for monarchs, have always admired courage and the bravery of King Alfonso, who, although a mere boy in years, showed remarkable coolness in a moment when he had escaped death by the mere chance, won him the respect and admiration of every Frenchman.

As the king was the guest of the nation, those who enjoy the hospitality of France after having been driven out of their own country should have considered his person sacred as long as he was on French soil, is the argument of the French people, and now pressure is being put on President Loubet to induce him to invite representatives of all civilized powers to an international congress for the purpose of adopting measures against anarchists and nihilists.

The police of this city have now in their possession a list of all revolutionists in Paris and it is expected that the municipality will decide to deport the whole gang, no matter what measures the government may decide to take.

The revolutionists will be allowed to choose whether they want to go to Switzerland, England or the United States, and the government of each of these countries will be notified of the departure of each anarchist from here and supplied with all the information concerning him now in the possession of the Paris police.

The people of Paris desire that their city in the future, as in the past, shall be a haven of refuge for the downtrodden and persecuted, but they will no longer allow common murderers to plan and execute their bloody deeds here.

It becomes more evident every day that the Vatican is anxious to effect a reconciliation with the House of Savoy, and many are the suggestions which have been made to end the long quarrel between state and church in Italy.

MARGARET SANGSTER'S DEPARTMENT THE LESSON YOU DON'T LIKE

BY MARGARET E. SANGSTER
(Copyright, 1906, by J. P. Bowles.)
Some girls dislike all lessons. They would shed no tears if they never again had to memorize or recite; if lessons were left wholly out of their calendar from this time onward. I hope you do not belong to their company. You do not, do you, you will make haste to leave it.

There was Molly Sue, a girl I knew when she was 16, pretty, soft-mannered, sweet-voiced, but, oh so lazy. She drifted through school with no more than a passing interest, always playing the role of a good-natured, irresponsible shirk. Her kittenish ways and dainty sweetness won her far too many excuses from her teachers, and among her friends the feeling was well expressed by an artist, who said: "Molly Sue does not need to know anything. It is quite enough to look at her, as one looks at a perfect flower."

But Molly Sue did not stay 16. She grew out of girlhood, as you will, too, and after awhile people forgot to notice her when she was in the room with those who had brains and ideas. The perfect beauty faded. She became a withered rose. The vacant mind, the lumbering body, the lack of interest in anything, it was all the greater pity, for if somebody had taken Molly Sue by the shoulders and shaken her out of her indifference when she was a school girl she might have grown up an interesting woman.

It is your positive duty, dear girl, to so train mind, heart, will and disposition that you shall be neither stupid, silly, insipid nor tedious when you are older. An interesting woman, a woman of brains, keen and responsive, is more to be desired than a beautiful woman; and is more attractive in her home. She will more deeply impress society.

Of course this girl was an exception. Most girls combine their inertia and study after a fashion; fortunately most girls have a share of common sense. Even reluctantly acquired knowledge is better than none at all.

What I want to urge upon you is to put the emphasis of your efforts on the studies you don't like. We all have studies we love. For instance, Dorothy, who enjoys her English work, finds no difficulty in keeping at the head of her class, but when the question is of mathematics she groans about in the dark. If you will glance over your classmates, you will have no trouble in picking out a half dozen Dorothy's. Some of them come out splendidly in history and are dull in physics; some shine in Latin, and cannot tackle the simplest algebraic problem. The point for every such girl, don't you think, is to spend strength and time and really hard work on the book, the subject, the situation that she has no particular aptitude for? The things one likes one acquires without painstaking, but it is painstaking that rewards one in the end.

I don't think there is a pleasure in the world that can be compared with an honest joy in conquering a difficult task. It is by hard work over what one does not enjoy that one gains that mastery of the will and faculty of the mind that make the true distinction between the educated and uneducated person. Natural cleverness is a good quality. But a better one is downright, sturdy, dogged perseverance, that never lets go, once it has started on any line of work.

The schoolgirl's stock of her own capacity. There is an old story of appanage, without surrendering the inalienable rights and privileges of the Holy Chair, we will submit to his decision and say that he is a strong right in trying to save at least this small part of his riches from the shipwreck that robbed him of everything else, and that it is quite natural that His Holiness does not wish the church to lose what those who have received it are willing to give up.

The long and the short of it is that the Vatican needs money, that the Peter's pence are steadily decreasing and that a certain clique among the cardinals would like to get hold of the millions which are theirs for the asking.

Whether this will be wise or will morally strengthen the pope's position is another question.

The enthusiasm of the English people for King Alfonso during his visit to England would have been considerably greater had not a letter written by the king to Cardinal Casanova, who tried to prevent the opening of the Episcopal cathedral at Barcelona, become known in England shortly before his arrival there.

In this letter, which the Spanish censor tried to keep secret, the king wrote:

"As Catholic king and submissive and believing son, I do not think that I am deeply pained by this new attempt against the faith of our ancestors and the religion of the state whose destinies Divine Providence has deemed right to entrust to me in these moments and I do not hesitate to assure you, Senior Cardinal, that I shall do all in my power within the attributes of my constitutional sovereignty, that the projects which your eminence express may be nullified by my government."

Admiral Togo's letter to the Mikado, in which he assured that monarch that the glorious Japanese victory over the Russian fleet in the Straits of Korea was due to "the illustrious virtues of the Mikado and the protection of the spirits of his glorious ancestors and not to any human agency," may have pleased the Mikado, but it is rather painful to see a hero of the qualities of Admiral Togo in the role of a common court flatterer, announcing himself in the dust before a good-for-nothing monarch, who has no other thoughts than to give tea and chrysanthemum parties and write poor poetry by the bushel, while his people are bleeding to death.

The thought may even occur to the people of Japan, whose whole male population is now under arms, that if Admiral Togo's words are true it would have been considerably more to the advantage to have sent the Mikado out to defeat the Russians on land or sea alone and armed only with his "illustrious virtues" and protected by the "spirits of his glorious ancestors."

It begins to look as if Heaven had gone back on John D. Rockefeller and Standard Oil.

Not only have ministers declared his money tainted, but the world monopoly of the company to which he owes his gigantic fortune seems threatened in more than one country.

During the last six months large deposits of oil discovered in Russia and Germany have been kept out of his hands by governments which have not the same respect for him as that of his own country, and now comes the report that also here in France oil has been found, which he will not be allowed to run into his pipe lines.

While boring an artesian well on his property at Paris, in Vanclue, M. Auguste Cartier was surprised to see oil flowing from the pipes instead of the expected water and later investigations seem to show the presence of oil in abundance on all the surrounding property.

A precepter who wrote to the rich parent of a very dull pupil, that his daughter lacked capacity. "Buy her only immediately," telegraphed the man of affairs. Alas! gold cannot buy capacity. No outsider can give it you. But you can buy it for yourself.

You, Edith, who complain that you cannot remember, that what you learn to-day is forgotten tomorrow, may change all that, if you will give your attention to one thing at a time, and let nobody disturb you. Some girls are scatter-brained. Don't be like them. Fix your mind on a single word, a single sentence, a single paragraph, and compel it to understand that, and to remember it. Memory is a slave to those who know how to command it and make it obey.

You, Rosamond, who have no trouble about memorizing, but whose handwriting is that you cannot read, that you do not see into things clearly, must take the same precaution. Be contented if you do not make very rapid progress, but concentrate your thoughts on the thing in hand. "Nothing can stand before the day's work," said a great teacher. Each day's work, carefully done, tells wonderfully the work of a month or a term.

This is what happens to you, my dear girl, whoever you are. It has happened to me many a time, so I know whereof I speak. Never mind the locality; a girl in the district school in the woods, a girl in a town, a girl with every appliance, or a girl with few helps may have the same experience. You tug along doubtfully. It is uphill work. You slip back sometimes, but you plant your feet again firmly, and take a new start. You gain a little ground today, a little more tomorrow.

RUSSIA SEEN THROUGH RUSSIAN EYES

BY HARRY G. FARMER.
(Staff Correspondence to the Newspapers Enterprise Association.)

LONDON, June 10.—The best known and most brilliant of Russian statesmen, a member of the highest class is Madame Olga Novikoff, who makes London her home the greater part of the year.

So popular is she in England that she has been named "The Russian ambassador." Madame Novikoff is a god-daughter of the first Emperor Nicholas, and moves in court in St. Petersburg as one of the royal family.

I asked her to write an article for the Newspapers Enterprise Association, giving us a glimpse of Russia from Russian eyes. She said she would not write, but she requested me to call, saying that she would grant an interview.

Very soon we entered upon a discussion of the war, and I asked her about peace.

"We Russians," said Madame Novikoff, "are all in favor of an honorable peace, but to any other sort of peace we are absolutely opposed. I do not think that the emperor himself could tell you under what conditions peace would be acceptable to us. We shall be guided by circumstances. It may be of interest to your readers to learn that today, in some quarters, it is believed that the war will be ended by the cessation of hostilities, set down as a traitor."

"What of the much-talked-of grand dukes, Madame Novikoff?" I inquired.

"Everybody in Russia laughs at the rubbish that is being written about the grand dukes. They are not the advisers of the czar. The Grand Duke Constantine is of an artistic disposition; a capable actor and poet. He has translated Hamlet into Russian. Another grand duke is at the head of the army, and a third directs the navy; but if these persons have authority in their own respective spheres, they do not constitute a party, nor do they present any particular views.

"It is extraordinary what absurdities are printed about Russia. I remember that years ago it was solemnly stated in print that the Czar Alexander III had, in a fit of drunkenness, killed one of his aides-de-camp. Now Alexander III was a teetotaler.

After referring to other matters, Madame Novikoff showed me a signed photograph of the Grand Duchess Elizabeth, widow of the Grand Duke Sergius, who was lately killed by a bomb.

"The Grand Duke Sergius," said Madame Novikoff, in reply to a question concerning the czar's character, "was very patriotic, and devoted to his duty as a Russian citizen. His views were moderate, but he was exceedingly firm in putting them into execution, and perhaps he was not over lenient. He had no patience with revolutionary aims. His death was a severe loss to us."

"As to these active assassins in Russia, Madame, to what section of the community do they belong?"

"They are terrible. As a rule, they are half-educated creatures. Some of them throw bombs for the sake of winning notoriety; others because they have been ordered to do so by societies of which they are afraid. When the Grand Duchess Elizabeth was in the prison to interview her husband's murderer, the man broke into sobs, and exclaimed: 'I've been misled.' These assassins are anarchists. All that they want is revolution."

"Russia's great mistake is that she row. Suddenly, you can't explain how or why, the difficulties vanish, the husk of trouble falls away, and out comes the perfect flower, white, fragrant, satisfying. You could not see yesterday, but you see today. You had no vocabulary last week, but words crowd on you now.

A girl I know was studying a new language. She kept walling over and over: "I have no words. I have no words. I have to find out every word I want in the lexicon. It is an endless task. I shall never understand, never catch up." All at once, words began meeting her with friendly faces. They were no longer strangers. She knew their inflections, their cadences, the vocabulary of another language was her own. Hard work had brought it reward. "Never" is a word to be turned away from one's door. There need be no such word.

School honors and prizes are worth striving for. The girl who can win her teacher's approval is always enviable. But on the whole, the girl who wins it with effort is more enviable than the bright one who did not try hard. And I believe that it is much more pleasant to have the full approval of one's personal conscience, to know that let happen what may, one has done one's very best, than to carry off marks and medals and certificates.

Some of you are handicapped by having too many studies at one and the same time. It is unwise to attempt too much. If the class work includes more lessons than you can assimilate, ask to have some of them dropped. Teachers are willing to aid an earnest pupil who is doing what she can to overcome her own deficiencies. But if you drop something, let it be the thing you are fond of, not the thing you dislike. The study you care for may be taken up at any time in the future. The other must be faced and conquered now, or it will never give you the joy of victory.

Yes, I love the youthful winner. With the medal and the mark; He has gained the prize he sought for. He is joyous as a lark. Every one will haste to praise him; He is on the honor list. I've a tender thought, my darlings, For the one who tried, and missed.

One? Ah, met they count by thousands. Those who have not gained the race, Though they did their best and fared, Striving for the winner's place. Only few can reach the laurel; Many see their chance flit by. I've a tender thought, my darlings, For the earnest band who try.

'Tis the trying that is noble. If you're made of sterner stuff Than the laggards who are daunted When the bit of road is rough. All will praise the happy winners; But when they have hurried by, I've a song to cheer, my darlings, The great company who try.

is too lenient. For example, we have neither capital nor corporal punishment. This being so, how are we to keep peace in our midst? This lives of those who take life should be forfeited.

"Again, our penal establishments are far from being the uncomfortable institutions they are pictured. I have myself been directress of a Russian prison, and you may be surprised to hear that our convicted criminals are allowed as much food as they can eat. Our prisons compare most favorably with England's."

"An insight into the personality of the czar, Madame, would be useful, especially at the present juncture."

"I am very fond of the czar. He is kind and generous. His weak point is that he is too kind. So generous is he that he will not offend if he can avoid doing so. He hesitates to adopt strong measures, which might be expedient. At the same time, he exhibits wonderful judgment in some of his appointments."

"He is devoted to his wife and family, and is, perhaps, not sufficiently ambitious. He is fond of walking, and he has a bicycle. I believe, but his real recreation is playing with children. His leisure hours are few, however. He rises early, and works hard the whole of the day. I may add that he is intensely religious and moral."

"It has been repeatedly asserted that Russia cannot make headway while autocracy continues. What is your defense of autocracy?"

"If we support autocracy," Madame Novikoff replied, "it is because we wish to get reforms. You can effectively carry out reforms when you have concentrated power, and that the autocracy has."

PICTURESQUE MAYOR OF FAR-AWAY EL PASO

Captain Davis is Rich, Hunts Bear, Plays Politics and Helps the Stranded

EL PASO, Texas, June 9.—El Paso has, perhaps, the most picturesque mayor of any city in the United States. His name is Captain Charles Davis, a typical Texan. Davis was a captain in the civil war for the Confederate army. After the war he became a captain of industry, and has amassed an immense fortune.

Only two weeks ago Captain Davis killed a bear over in the wilds of Mexico, and there was no more burrah

INTIMATE SKETCH OF NEW SECRETARY OF THE NAVY

He is a Deep Thinking, Thorough Man—A Peculiar Personal Appearance—They Say in Maryland That His New Job is Only a Stepping Stone to John's Hay's Office

CHARLES JEROME BONAPARTE, WHO WILL BE SECRETARY OF THE NAVY AFTER JULY 1.

BY C. M. PURDY.
BALTIMORE, June 10.—What sort of a man is Charles J. Bonaparte? Hundreds, thousands, of Americans are asking that question since Roosevelt named the well known Baltimore reformer and civil service lawyer to succeed Paul Morton as secretary of the navy.

There is nothing of the politician in Mr. Bonaparte. He looks like a whimsical, lackadaisical sort of gentleman with lots of time, money and eccentricities.

That's just what he is. Yet with it he is one of the hardest working lawyers of means in practice, and is thoroughly alive not only to political but reform movements, and is noted as an authority on historical as well as artistic subjects.

He is about 54, stoop shouldered, with a very large head. A very small hat emphasizes this exceedingly. His hair is almost bald save for streaks of black hair well tufted at the sides and back.

He has a very high forehead and very large cheekbones, a full face, which, added to his somewhat small hazel-colored eyes, gives him rather an odd appearance. His arms are long and his hands large and well kept. His body is loosely held together, and with his long swinging gait, his large head bobbing from side to side in a characteristic manner, he is usually much noticed on the streets.

Then, too, his method of speech is marked by a peculiar intonation which often ends in a high falsetto as he rounds out a sentence. But, despite this, he is an able orator. He has the keen wit, and loves to use it, for he is one of the sunniest men ever called to public life.

To see him without his smile is most unusual.

There is nothing of the notoriety seeker in Mr. Bonaparte. He pays strict attention to his law business daily from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m., after which he goes, in winter, to an old-fashioned residence in the swell section, or in summer to a large estate in Baltimore county. He is not athletic, loves the simple life and finds pleasure in reading and walking.

He is a total abstainer and never uses tobacco. Does not like to travel, and strange to say has never taken a long sea trip in his life. His friends are wondering how he will accept his first aquatic trip. They all expect him to have had a dour. He does, himself. He admitted it to your correspondent.

His clientele is very profitable and he is worth about a million, though to see him one would never believe it. His wife dislikes society and rarely is seen in any save the circle of a few intimate friends; the household of her husband's friends. Nearly every day there are a few guests to dinner, but barring that, the Bonaparte entertainments are far from frequent. His wife was a Miss Ellen Channing Day of Hartford, Conn., and there are no children.

Harvard is Mr. Bonaparte's alma mater, and for twelve years he was one of the governors of that institution. To show his thoroughness and punctuality it is recorded that he is one of the very few governors who attended every meeting of the board, despite that he had to come a farther distance than any of the others. He is careful and painstaking to a fault, and those who know him fear that he may overstrain himself in his effort to look after the detail of the portfolio which he has accepted.

Mr. Bonaparte's thoroughness in the preparation of a law case is well known. But he will not take a case unless he considers his client is legally and honorably entitled to a verdict. For that reason he aided an unfortunate Polish Jewess to have her mother pardoned when he believed the mother had been duped by a police official and a shyster lawyer. Again, very recently he took up the case of a colored girl charged with assaulting a white woman by sitting on her lap. For this he received, it is understood, not a penny, taking the case because he believed the girl was innocent.

During the campaign in 1895 against Gorman and Rasin, the democratic leaders in Maryland, Bonaparte with other reformers acquired certain titles, one of which has stuck to him to this day: "Soup House Charley."

Explaining this appellation, Mr.

It will pay you to make a trial of the most successful medicine known, for the relief of the ills and pains of womankind, viz:

ABOUT BOOKS!

BY J. MONTGOMERY BROWN

IOLE. By Robert W. Chambers, 12mo. Illustrated. New York: D. Appleton & Co. $1.25.

"Art," said the poet, opening his heavy lids with a large, sweet smile, "Art is above Art, but Art is never below Art. Art, to be Art, must be artless. That is a very precious thought—very, very precious. Thank you for understanding me—thank you."

And the poet himself, continually plucking atoms and molecules from the atmosphere, examining and gently releasing them from his large, soft, fat, white fingers, was seemingly artless to the extreme degree of art. He sought to get near to nature, and so established for himself a little workshop which he called Rose Cross.

The station master thus described the place to Mr. Briggs, who came down to foreclose a mortgage on the poet's property:

He set up his shop and hired bookbinders from York. Then he set up another shop and hired some of us 'round here to go and make them big slabby arches. All the authors were called "At the Sign of" something 'r other. Bales of vellum arrived for to bind little dinky books; art rocking chairs were shipped out of here by the carload. Meanwhile Gullford (the poet) he done poetry on the side and run a magazine. . . . Wall, Sir, the whole thing bust. . . . I guess the public kinder stekened 'r them art rockers and inky books without much printin' into them. Gullford he stuck to it noble, but the shops closed one by one.

But the poet continued to live near to Nature. He raised his eight blooming daughters in ignorance of conventions and customs. He taught them to roam about the fields in pink pajamas and sunbonnets, with their golden hair looped up in beautiful disorder, and these guileless maidens, fresh as sea nymphs, clean limbed, fair, young and spirited, plucked daisies, or gathered strawberries or mixed their own breath with that of the wild rose; they jested playfully with each other in Greek or Arabic (Gullford was a "cocker on culture") and they played the harp and the piano and the organ and the violin and other instruments. And as for tennis and chess! No man could beat them. And their names and ages were Chlorippe, twelve; Philodice, thirteen; Dione, fourteen; Aphrodite, fifteen; Cybele, sixteen; Lissa, seventeen; Iole, eighteen; and Vanessa, nineteen. "No wonder poor Briggs found it impossible to foreclose the mortgage, and when George Wayne, a turtle-fed, chare-flushed, idle and rich young man, in whose favor the mortgage was to be foreclosed, came up to personally conduct his affairs in the face of Briggs' mutiny (Briggs had already fixed his fancy on Vanessa, nineteen), he suddenly found himself powerless before the aschering himselflessness of the very few governors who attended every meeting of the board, despite that he had to come a farther distance than any of the others. He is careful and painstaking to a fault, and those who know him fear that he may overstrain himself in his effort to look after the detail of the portfolio which he has accepted.

"The Princess Elopes," by Harold MacGrath, in the new series of "The Pocket Books" designed to represent the three aspects of American romance—adventure, mystery and humor—is a delightful love story in which the element of romance dominates. A young American consul to a certain municipality in Germany tells the story of the lovely princess who is persecuted by a choleric uncle who demands that she shall marry a red-nosed old prince, who in his youth lost a son whom he could never find, and who is the half Americanized hero of the tale. Like all the author's stories it is imaginative and alive with action, and the plot with its contrasts of German etiquette and American independence contains many an unexpected laugh. It is a wholesome, spontaneous fantasy, in which cupid wins out in the most satisfactory way; it is a book to list for summer reading. 75 cents. (Bobbs-Merrill Co.)

"Enchantment," by Harold MacGrath, is a collection of five characteristic short stories. They are "A Night's Enchantment," "The Blind Madonna," "No Cinderella," "The Candidates" and "The Enchanted Hat." Novel situations and glints of mystery are the predominant notes of the tales which shift from New York to Monte Carlo and other big cities. The first story is the tale of an escapee in which a young woman stops her carriage in front of the Players' Club, New York city, and invites a young man who has just left it, to get in. She is beautiful, so he gets in and takes his chances as to the result. She is a perfect stranger to him and he to her. She carries him to her home to a dinner party and here wins a mystery. The other stories are bright, and the situations amusing. The book belongs to the series of Pocket Books. 75 cents. (Bobbs-Merrill Co.)

"The Amethyst," by Anna Katharine Green, possesses the interest generally attached to a detective story, though no ferret-eyed sleuth is required to solve the mystery, which follows the disappearance of the strange, fascinating and deadly-poisonous little Italian stickler, seen in laid in Newport on the eve of a fashionable wedding, and the characters are the bridal party. With the author's usual skill, she arouses interest on the opening page and then, after throwing suspicion on one character after another, clears the air of the unexpected deprecation. It is just the story with which to while away a weary hour and is most appropriate as one of the Pocket Books. 75 cents. (Bobbs-Merrill Co.)

ABOUT AUTHORS

Hamlin Garland is more than a literary man. He devotes that part of his time not occupied in writing to doing carpenter work of a finer variety. All the furniture in his library at West Salem, Wis., was made by his own hands, and it is said to combine every characteristic of artistic workmanship, adding durability to beauty and strength to simplicity. Mr. Garland is also a practical farmer, as is evidenced from the following selection, taken from a letter to a friend:

"My life here goes on like the hands on a town clock," he writes; "I write three hours in the morning, and work in the garden, do carpentering, or build fences in the afternoon, go to bed at 8, and rise at 6:30 the next day to take up the same routine. I sold $25 worth of strawberries and $40 worth of early potatoes—but that sounds too much like boasting!" And later he adds: "I've got the doggondest patch of Hubbard squashes!"

So—Mr. Garland's income is not all derived from fiction writing.

With the retirement of Edward J. Wheeler from the editorship of the Literary Digest, Dr. Isaac K. Funk has taken personal charge of the paper, with William S. Woods as his chief assistant. The connection of Francis W. Halsey with the house of Funk & Wagnalls is that of literary adviser.

Harold MacGrath can write of sloppiness from experience as well as from imagination, for after a vain attempt to round up a clergyman he was recently married by a justice of the peace at Bridgeport, Conn., to Miss Alma J. Kenyon of Syracuse, to whom, by the way, he dedicated his story, "The Princess Elopes."

Probably the author most talked of in England today is Bernard Shaw. We have the authority of the New York Sun critic for the following facts concerning him: "As for the man himself, he is yet under 49 years of age. He eats nothing but vegetables, drinks nothing but water and smokes nothing at all. He blacks nothing and starches nothing, and is probably the cleanest man on earth."

Prescription No. 2551, by Eimer & Amend, will not cure all complaints, but will cure rheumatism. For sale by all druggists.

VETERANS OFF FOR REUNION

Leave for Louisville Reunion Monday Morning
MANY SONS WILL ATTEND
Young Folks Will Take Prominent Part in Gathering
SPONSORS IN COMMAND
State, Division and Camp Representatives Will Be Queens at Old South Meeting

Special trains which will carry the members of the United Confederate Veterans, the Sons of United Confederate

Miss Alice Eve Robinson, Fort Worth, sponsor local Sons of Veterans.

Veterans and Daughters and invited friends, will leave the Texas and Pacific station Monday morning at 10 o'clock, and will be well loaded with Texans. It is estimated that several hundred in all will go from this city.

The Cotton Belt train will be in personal charge of J. F. Lehane, general freight agent of the company, but until recently general passenger agent. He will be with the special party both going and returning. The special train, it is said, will be one of the finest ever run from Texas to the general reunion of the Confederate Veterans, the equipment being the very best in the service.

The Texas veterans will be landed in Louisville, Ky., at 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, and returning the train will leave Louisville Friday night at midnight.

Provision has been made to permit those who desire to take them to make side trips to points of interest in the vicinity of Louisville. Quite a number of the Fort Worth delegation have decided to take in all the sights and will not miss anything that is worth seeing on the trip, sponsors and friends, is the "Sheboygan," said to be one of the most elaborate in the Pullman service. It will be profusely and elaborately decorated with banners and flags. This car will be used by the party on its arrival at Louisville.

Miss Jennie Daughtrey, Waco, maid of honor to Miss Mills.

Among those who will be the guests of Mr. Lane are the following: Mrs. W. P. Lane, former secretary of the Daughters of the Confederacy; Mrs. Edna E. Mills of Waco, sponsor for the state division; Miss Jessie Daughtrey of Waco, chief maid of honor, and the following maids of honor: Miss Luna Clark of Plano, Miss Lottie Stephens of Temple, Miss Fay Lane of Fort Worth, Miss Virginia Nunn of Amarillo, Miss Margaret Pickering of Victoria, Misses Lula and Lo' Weaver of Mount Vernon, Miss Nellie Donnelly of Jacksonville. Besides these maids there will be several others from the southern part of the state who will go to Louisville by the Southern Pacific; Miss Mary Oliver of Victoria, sponsor for the Third brigade; Miss Mattie Lastinger of Waco, sponsor for the First brigade; Mrs. J. W. Weaver of Waco, chaperone for the Texas division of Sons; Mrs. W. E. Donnelly of Jacksonville, assistant chaperone; Mrs. John A. Key of Fort Worth, assistant chaperone; Hon. W. E. Richards of Fairfield, commander of the First brigade; Porter Key of Fort Worth, Inspector general of the Texas division; R. McDonald of Athens, assistant judge advocate general; Winifry McConnell of Fort Worth, assistant quartermaster of the Texas division; Roy Murphy of Fort Worth, assistant Inspector general of the Texas division; John A. Key of Fort Worth, assistant commissary general; Major W. M. McConnell, adjutant of Lee camp, wife and son; United Confederate Veterans; Colonel James Q. Chenoweth, superintendent of the Confederate Home at Annapolis; Mrs. M. E. Redick of Denton, Miss Fannie Cantrell, sponsor for Lee camp, United Confederate Veterans; Miss Alice Eve Robinson, sponsor for R. E. Lee camp, United Sons of Confederate Veterans; Miss Blanche Key of Denton, maid of honor; Major E. M. Daggett and wife, Mrs. Frank Ellison, L. C. Lichenstein, H. Wieher and wife, Miss Lucy Lotton and Miss Singleton.

With Commander in Chief N. R. Tisdal will also be a large party of Sons and Daughters, among them being Miss Nona Leach, sponsor, and Miss Ada Darter, chief maid. Miss Carolyn Keller, who is attending school in New York, and who was appointed sponsor for the Texas division of the Trans-Mississippi department of Wapanucka, I. T., will leave New York in time to join her division at Louisville.

On the special train will be Major General K. M. Van Zandt, commander of the Texas division, United Confederate Veterans and staff; C. A. Skeen, commander of the Trans-Mississippi department, U. C. V., and staff; Hon. Thomas P. Stone of Waco, past commander in chief of the U. C. V., and the delegates representing Lee camp, who are Dr. George Jackson, R. E. Beckham, J. W. Adams, W. M. McConnell, H. C. Cantrell, E. M. Daggett, W. K. Logan, Captain E. B. Paddock, commander of the Fifth brigade, and E. W. Yeates.

Among some of the other camps of the state that will attend the Louisville reunion are the following:

- Joseph E. Johnston camp, No. 267, U. C. V., Greenville; Robert E. Lee camp, No. 231, U. C. V., Commerce; Matt Ashcroft camp, No. 170, U. C. V., Sulphur Springs; Ben McCullough camp, No. 399, U. C. THE BUGLER'S CREST

Is well expanded. He uses his lungs to their fullest capacity. People in ordinary do not use much over half their lung power. The unused lung surface becomes inert, and offers a prepared ground for the attack of the germs of consumption. There is no need to warn people of the danger of consumption, but warning is constantly needed not to neglect the first symptoms of diseased lungs.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures obstinate coughs, bronchitis, bleeding lungs, and other conditions which, if neglected or unskillfully treated, find a fatal termination in consumption. It is entirely free from opiates and narcotics.

"About three years ago I was taken with a bad cough, vomiting and spitting blood," writes Mr. D. J. Robinson, of Spring Garden, W. Va. "I tried many remedies, nothing seemed to help me to improve. My case seemed to be almost hopeless one. Doctors pronounced it ulcer of the lungs. I was sick nearly two years—part of the time bedfast. Was given up to die by all I thought it would be impossible for me to live over night at one time. I haven't spit any blood now for more than twelve months, and worked on the farm all last summer. It was Dr. Pierce's medicine that cured me."

ARTILLERY OLD STYLE

Russian General Says Field Artillery Was Almost Worthless

ST. PETERSBURG, June 10.—The Russian general, who, under the signature of "S. K." has been making a series of scathing attacks on the war ministry in the Russki Ya Viedomosti, declares that the inferiority of the czar's artillery is alone sufficient to account for Japan's victories.

The Putiloff field gun of 1903 was pronounced of inferior style almost as the model was adopted. Yet at the beginning of the war almost the whole of Kuroki's army was armed with it and with it alone.

In 1902 a new and improved type of field gun was decided upon, yet a year later the war office, seeing a crisis imminent, began to manufacture guns of the old type of 1903. Up to the end of March, 1905, only three batteries of the new 1902 gun had been sent to the Far East.

During the first six months of the war, when the fighting was exclusively in hilly country, there were at the front only two batteries of mountain artillery, and these were of a type dating back to 1883. Yet as far back as the beginning of 1903 the Japanese army had no less than 410 quick firing mountain guns of the Arisaka system.

As regards weight of shell, initial speed and mobility, the Russian guns were inferior to the Japanese.

ARKANSAS GIRL'S ACT

Threw Scalding Coffee on Impertinent Negro in Restaurant

ST. LOUIS, June 10.—How Miss Mattie O'Brien, formerly of Jonesboro, Ark., now a waitress at Union Station, negroes a loudly dressed, insulting negro by throwing scalding coffee, accompanied by cup and saucer, on him was told today in a report by Policeman McCormack.

"I'm in a hurry; wait on me first," said the negro.

"I'm busy now," replied Miss O'Brien, "but will wait on you next."

"Oh, to thunder with those others and you, too," retorted the negro. "I want a cup of coffee, and I want it in a hurry."

Quick as a flash coffee, cup and saucer hit him squarely in the face. The row attracted the attention of Policeman McCormack, who, after investigating, drove the negro from the depot.

"I was taught in Arkansas that negroes must be respectful at all times and places," explained Miss O'Brien afterward.

NEW YORK, June 10.—A smart, general and active rally in the stock market was the response to the announcement of the settlement of the Equitable Life Insurance scandal...

Strength dominated the market from the opening until the close. First prices in many leading issues showed gains of from about a point to nearly two points...

Brokers reported that many selling orders had been canceled and sentiment was favorably influenced by the fact that brokers who usually act for big interests were active in buying orders...

The fact that the railway interests will control the Equitable was regarded as a bull point on Metropolitan...

The rally was most prominent in the rally with advances of about two to three points in St. Paul, Union Pacific, Atlantic Coast Line...

A very favorable showing was made in the compilation of railroad gross reports made so far for the month of May...

Transactions in stocks and bonds today compared with those of the same day last year were as follows: Number of shares sold today 464,950...

The much talked of financial statement was given out. The street had expected a surplus of from twenty to thirty millions and instead found less than ten and four-fifths of it "loaned" to one of the constituent companies.

A director pointed out that the surplus in the treasury of some of the other companies whose stocks are owned by the Amalgamated should be borne in mind...

ISSUES CIRCULAR TO U. C. V.

Let me appeal to you, my old comrades, to go and meet your old comrades, who are living and who are anxious to meet you and take you by the hand once more.

He indulges the hope that the greatest number attending the reunion will be from the Trans-Mississippi Department, owing to the low rates on all railroads running to Louisville.

The lieutenant general hereby gives notice that his HEADQUARTERS STAFF, SPONSORS, MAIDS OF HONOR AND ESCORTS WILL GO ON THE TEXAS AND PACIFIC RAILROAD ON A SPLENDIDLY DECORATED TRAIN, where he can be found by telegram, by personal interview or by letter after leaving Dallas the morning of the 12th. His headquarters will be at the Gault Hotel in Louisville, Ky. Respectfully,

"W. L. CABELL"

Lieutenant General United Confederate Veterans, Trans-Mississippi Department.

General B. B. Paddock, commanding the Fifth Brigade, together with his sponsors, maids of honor and escorts, will also be on this, the real Confederate Veteran train. Remember, this is the train that made the best time to the reunion last year and will do it again this year.

Two lackeys woke me—one a tall, grim-visaged fellow with a dark and eastern cast of features; the other a little dapper Frenchman with long, greasy hair. The latter spoke. "His majesty has sent his compliments, and bids me say he waits anxiously to receive you."

I sprang up, and then proceeded first to disrobe me and then to deck me in the court costume which had already arrived, complete in every detail. During the process I found that one of my lackeys was named Roustan, that he was a Mamaluke, dumb, and the emperor's own attendant. Such compliments quite embarrassed me—the emperor's own attendant!

I surveyed myself before a mirror and could scarce suppress a cry of admiration. The costume was simply magnificent, but it was designed less to adorn than to display, so I was delighted to find that I appeared even superior to the costume. My coat was of fine white silk, richly embroidered with gold and real jewels; my doublet and knickers were of damask satin; my stockings of gleaming pearl; my shoes black, high heeled and golden-buckled. I had never beheld myself so completely attired to my own satisfaction, and without vanity I declare that I looked a prince from crown to sole. The knowledge gave me confidence, and I followed Roustan, feeling proud and insolent, although about to meet and be subjected to the criticism of the keenest eyes and brightest intellect this world has ever produced.

At the door of the emperor's ante-room, which was filled with half a score of gentlemen attired similarly to myself, some of whom I recognized from fanciful descriptions of their persons which had trickled into England. I was met by a young gentleman who hastily introduced himself.

"I am the Comte de Segur, prince," he whispered, "and delighted to welcome you to France, but his majesty awaits you." The young count possessed a pale, bright and exceedingly intelligent eyes and while not strictly handsome, was of such a frank countenance and taking manners that I conceived an instant fancy for him. I followed him to the door of an inner chamber, which he opened, and after announcing my name in a low voice, made way for me to pass and instantly closed the door behind me.

Thus I came face to face with Napoleon Bonaparte, one time a Corsican noble, later a lieutenant of artillery, now master of half Europe and the most powerful man in the civilized world. He was quite alone. He was attired in that dress which he always affected, and which has become so notorious as to be unnecessary for me to describe. I noted in a flash that he was short and somewhat pot-bellied. Then I met his eyes and was instantly lost to all else. Men have told me that Napoleon was slightly bald, that his nose was shapely and straight, that his mouth was a miracle of beauty and strength, his chin predominant. It may be so, I believe, but cannot distinctly remember any of these things, for always my powers of observation have stopped short at his eyes. A smile softened the iron hardness of his face, and presently he spoke out in a merry, frank fashion which quite won my regard.

"Diantre!" he cried, "they told me you were a conspirator, a man of mature years, of wonderful cunning and cowardice. What age are you, lad?" I remembered that D'Arras was an older man than I and replied at hazard, "Forty-four, sire."

"He advanced and put his hand upon my shoulder. "So much! Come," he said, "take that chair. I foresee that we shall be friends." He himself took and sat astride a chair before me, his strange eyes always fastened on my face. I admit, I grew, with the passing of each moment, to like him more and more, but I remembered my role and that I must appear reserved and stiff.

"You are very good, sire," I muttered coldly. He frowned. "I hope your apartments are comfortable," he said, in a different and harsher voice than he had yet used. "Quite, sire," I stammered. "So! And nothing was amiss in your reception?" "Nothing, sire," still more stiffly.

He rose abruptly. "Diantre! what all you men?" he cried in a sudden rage. "Is the question of your sister?" The crown prince is on his way here. He will arrive tomorrow, the marriage will take place the day after. What more can I do?" His eyes fairly shot fire at me.

THUS I CAME FACE TO FACE WITH NAPOLEON BONAPARTE

I gave him stare for stare and answered in a voice which conveyed a sense of irreparable injury sustained—"You might give me something to eat, sire; I've tasted nothing since daylight." He flashed at me a burning glance, but finding my features imperturbable, presently broke into a roar of laughter.

"Good!" he cried, "you shall lunch with me. All!" A tall soldier, the very counterpart of Roustan, my Mamaluke, glided into the room. "Bring us something to eat here, immediately." The man saluted, departed, but like magic returned bearing with him a tray containing two fowls roasted whole, some plates, knives, forks, glasses and wicker-covered flask of light Italian wine. The emperor seated himself, dismissed all with a curt nod, and invited me to join him. He helped himself first, then pushed the tray to me, and, nothing loth, I commenced to eat a hearty meal. Napoleon seemed wrapped in thought and ate but little. Now and then he addressed to me quick, curt questions all having reference to England.

"Sir Sidney Smith—is where?" "Engaging Verhuel off Ostend, sire, I believe." "Verhuel will beat him." "I hope so, sire," and drank a bumper of the wine, which I found excellent. "Where is Cornwallis?" he suddenly demanded. "Somewhere in the channel, sire." "Do you know his strength?" "I have heard it said fifty ships of the line."

"Wrong! He has but eighteen!" he shouted, glaring at me savagely. "But I met his glance with calm insouciance." "I may have been misinformed, sire; those English are great braggarts." "True," and he relapsed into meditation. Soon he started muttering rapidly to himself, having, I verily believe, quite forgotten my existence. "If Villeneuve were Ganteaume I would not be sure, but even so he can't fail me now. He must beat Calder or evade him, and then with his forty ships raise the blockade of Brest. That would give us sixty-one ships to hold the channel—for a week. I want no more."

I listened breathlessly, but was careful not to appear too deeply interested. Napoleon thumped the table with his fist. "The knell of England has sounded," he cried. "For 500 years the English have been masters of the universe. We shall in one week—I want no more, one week—but then back into their proper places. They conquered France under an idiot king; we shall conquer England under a demented one!"

"Where do you propose to land your forces, sire?" I asked the question with affected indifference, but a beating heart. He gazed at me with a far-away look. "From the flotillas now waiting to embark at Boulogne and Brest, we shall land on the shores of Kent and Sussex, whence we shall spring on London. The expedition of Texel will sail up the Thames; Verhuel will see to that; the nature of my plan is so good, that in spite of all possible obstacles, every chance is in my favor."

Verily I agreed with him, but I perceived the weak spot in his design. For all this depended upon Admiral Villeneuve, who was then lingering in refit at Vigo, after an encounter with Calder, who had taken two of his ships off Cape Finisterre.

pleas I have heard the news of your return! Need I say with what loving hopes I await the time when once more I shall be locked in your dear arms. Do not keep me waiting too long, Henri. You will find nothing changed, save that the kitten you used to love so well has grown big and sleek, and is the mother of a large and thriving family. Ah! mon Dieu, I cannot see to write for tears—tears of happiness. Come to me, Henri, come quickly. The note bore no address of the sender and was undated.

I gave a low whistle of surprise, reflecting rather conceitedly that with my change of personality I had assumed undreamed of responsibilities. It made me half regretful that my time in France was limited, for Amelie's letter pleased me very much. I pictured her as a slight, tender little girl with big eyes and a big heart, then turned with a sigh to the third missive.

This last was addressed in bold, dashing characters—the proper handwriting of a soldier. As I read I almost groaned. Truly, more burdens fell on me each moment. "Monsieur"—said this letter—"you will not know me, but you will doubtless remember my sister, Constance Drusart. It may or may not surprise you to learn that your cowardly desertion of her left her without means to live. She died at your door! I have sworn to avenge her. My seconds will wait upon you without delay. Should you refuse me satisfaction (forgive me for the doubt, but you are reputed a coward) I shall pull your nose tonight, or whenever I see you, if it be in the presence of the emperor himself."

"JEAN DRUSART, Colonel, 15me Regt. d'Art." There was no mistaking the meaning of this epistle. It was direct and straightforward, the message of a brave man and a clear thinker. I commenced to perceive that D'Arras must have been an infernal villain, but my meditation was interrupted by the greasy headed lackey, Francois.

"Monsieur the Colonel Vidant and Monsieur the Captain Marcelle wish to pay you their respects, monsieur. "Ask them to wait, Francois." I turned to De Segur, who had been amusing himself by looking out the window. "My dear Comte De Segur, I am about to ask you a great favor. "If I can attend briskly. "Whatever I can do, command," he answered. "Ah, well, the fact is, an old quarrel has cropped up which must be settled. Colonel Drusart and I are at odds. Segur gave a start. "Colonel Drusart?" he cried. "Yes, my friend, Colonel Drusart. He has sent me a challenge, and his seconds, I fancy, are now waiting in the next room."

"You wish me to act for you, mon siegneur?" "Precisely." "It shall be charmed, mon siegneur." "What is there surprising in that name, my friend?" "Nothing, count, nothing. At least—he fees well. It is not long since he killed poor old Texcon, the most dour of the British regiments, the Hottentot Chasseurs. But then, as the challenged, you have the choice of weapons. I should tell you Drusart has no name as a pistol shot."

"I yawned with much indifference. "I prefer swords," he said, "they make less noise, and in the end are less bother. Let it be swords, mon ami." "I shall have to arrange for another second," said the count. "I am sure that Lavalliere will oblige, if you have no objection."

"You increase my debt of gratitude," I murmured. "Only for my sake, try to have the meeting take place tomorrow morning. I hate to let these matters linger indefinitely." Segur looked astonished, but he nodded, and went out to the officers who had come to call upon me. In a few minutes he returned with the information that the land so near at hand, so masterly conceived and planned to its last detail, must necessarily fall, for already Pitt had been preparing a diversion on the continent. Russia had signed an agreement, Austria, who had long been awaiting the signal to launch her battalions against the army of the Rhine; while even Germany was making mighty preparations for war.

I looked for wings wherewith to fly to England and whisper what I had heard into the ears of Pitt; I saw I could not afford to linger long in France, and from that moment I thought of escape, for already my excursion into the heart of this hostile land had been more than justified, and I knew well that Pitt would have given his right hand to learn Napoleon's plans. My reflections were disturbed by the emperor, who still muttered to himself. I could no longer catch the drift of his distracted mutterings.

By this I had finished my meal, and row leaned back in my chair speculating on the thoughts of this strange little man who held the fate of nations in his grasp. He still stared at me, but his gaze was unsteady—that of a visionary or a dreamer whose prophetic glance sought to penetrate the future through the walls of the present. I did not choose to disturb his dreaming, and heaven knows how long he might have continued were it not for De Segur, who entered and said:

I did not choose to disturb his dreaming, and heaven knows how long he might have continued were it not for De Segur, who entered and said:

AT LAST I FELL UPON HIS STIFFENING BODY IN A DEATHLIKE SWOON

then carried on by means of the little cutters, sloops and fishing smacks that piled unceasingly between England and France. It appeared that a regular fleet of these smugglers constantly ran the blockade and passed from the southern ports of England to Boulogne or Brest almost without question, carrying from England coffee, sugar and spices; from France brandy and wines.

This news gave me a little hope for the future, but I was not fool enough to deceive myself and hope too much. With the passing of every hour my task appeared more difficult. Here was I landed in the heart of a hostile country, a self-constituted spy, engaged in mercifully tricking the greatest man on earth, becoming every moment more involved in peril, every moment more in danger of detection; and moreover, I was unable to conceal from myself the horrid fact that detection would mean nothing but a most shameful and disgraceful death. In two days my sweetheart was engaged to espouse a powerful prince. I had fallen into a grave mood. This, with an effort, I presently shook off, and surprised my companions with a display of excessive good humor. I amused the empress by reciting a more or less imaginary account of our adventures since leaving England. I recounted a score of anecdotes concerning celebrated Englishmen, holding them up in each case to the derision of the company.

The empress laughed and applauded; Napoleon himself entering silently, listened, smiling grimly to himself, and once when I had particularly flattered Pitt over an imaginary horse dealing transaction, in which I made England's prime minister figure as a shrewd man of business completely lacking in all notions of honor, commercial or otherwise, he gave a long hiss of contempt. "S—s—s," he muttered. "If I were rich enough there were no need to conquer England."

"Sire!" stammered Rapp. "I should buy it," sneered the emperor. "There is not a man in England can resist a bargain." I felt that I could cheerfully have run my sword through his heart, but for all that I laughed louder than the rest.

"You are right, sire!" I cried. "And if they have not already offered their country for sale—" "It is," interrupted Napoleon, "because they know I will not buy what I can take, and he strode off amidst a perfect storm of applause. Soon afterwards the empress retired, and I also; but not for another hour did Clarisse visit me. "How gay you were!" she murmured reproachfully, "and my heart was like lead."

"My dear child," I answered gravely, "the only time that one can afford to appear miserable is when the mind is entirely at ease; I have been troubled, therefore I was gay." "Ah! you are laughing at me, Caryl." "On the contrary, dear, I was never more serious." The girl wrung her hands. "Oh, mon Dieu!" she cried, "whatever will become of you? And me! my fate is horrible—to be married to a man I have never seen. But you! Oh, heaven, Caryl! soon you will be detected, soon, and they will kill you, and it will be all through me! Mon Dieu! mon Dieu!" The tears were streaming down her cheeks.

I took her gently in my arms and kissed away her tears, then when she was more composed I asked gravely, "You truly love me, little one?" "You ask that?" she muttered, and gave me a glance that fired my blood, but I sternly repressed myself. "Well, dear, would you be content with me for a husband?" "Ah, but that is impossible, impossible!" "Nevertheless, would you be content, little one, were it possible?" She hid her face in my shoulder. "I love you, monsieur," she whispered. "But I forced her to look at me. "You say so, baby; then will you risk something for my sake?" "Anything," she answered bravely. "Will you leave France with me, baby?" "Ah, yes! now, at once, Caryl; anything, only let me be always with you. Let us start now."

may seem. Will you promise this, dear?" She gave me a look of tender confidence which touched me to the heart. "Gladly, monsieur. What you tell me to do, I shall do; is that right?" "Quite right, baby; but go now, dear, for I must think. Rest satisfied; my sweetheart; trust all to me, everything will be well."

She looked shyly up at me. "Caryl," she whispered, "will you tell me one thing? Why did you bring me to France? You knew that this marriage was arranged for me—if you loved me, why did you let me come?" The question staggered me. "I did not know how much I loved you until it was too late. But would you—I stammered—"would you have gone with me—married me before?" She looked me gravely, honestly in the eyes, and in that sweet regard the child faded into the woman.

"Yes, dear," she answered simply. "I was yours from that first day." I am afraid I cursed myself for a fool, cursed everything—my ambition, even my country, which I was trying to serve in this mad expedition—for I saw I had jeopardized the happiness of the sweetest being in the world. Kneeling down, I kissed her hand in very humble self-abasement, and kneeling there I vowed to do all that a man might do to serve her, and I think I addressed a little prayer to the Omnipotent to help me in my vow.

Subsequently we arranged that she should visit me in the same manner and hour on the morrow, and Madame Julien's pocket became in consequence the richer by another 100 lous.

When I had thought her gone Clarisse flashed back at me. "What is it?" I muttered, seeing in her face a touch of coquetry. "There is something I thought I ought to tell you," she whispered. "The empress says that the crown prince is a very handsome man, and dark. I love dark men." And she vanished into the corridor before I could move to stay her. (To be Continued.)

MAKES CLAIM TO HAWAIIAN THRONE

HONOLULU, June 10.—David Ku'i a gigantic Hawaiian, 40 years of age, has set the native populace agog by publicly asserting that he is a son of King Kamehameha the Great, and his queen, Kaahumanu, and that his mission is to right the wrongs inflicted upon the Hawaiian race by Queen Liliuokalani and to restore the throne to Kamehameha's descendants. While no stock is placed in Ku'i's claim by the white people, the natives believe in him and are intensely aroused. Ku'i has been arrested.

Dandierine Grew This Hair AND WE CAN PROVE IT. Little Frances Marie Knowlton is the daughter of Dr. E. W. Knowlton, the discoverer of this rest-hair-growing remedy, and her beautiful hair was grown wholly by the use of this great tonic. This little girl had no more hair than the average child before using Dandierine, while now she has the longest and most beautiful head of golden hair ever possessed by a child of her age in the world. Dandierine makes the scalp healthy and fertile and keeps it so. It is the greatest scalp fertilizer and therefore the greatest hair-producing remedy ever discovered. It is a natural food and a wholesome medicine for both the hair and scalp. Even a 25c. bottle of it will put more genuine life in your hair than a gallon of any other hair tonic ever made. NOW at all druggists, in three sizes, 25 cents, 50 cents and $1.00 per bottle. FREE. To show how quickly Dandierine acts, we will send a large sample free by return mail to any one who sends this advertisement to the Knowlton Dandierine Co., Chicago, with name and address and 10 cents in silver or stamps to pay postage. Some Little Stories Well Told

A CHANGE OF VENUS The Honorable Thomas C. Watson of Georgia used to tell an amusing story of a negro in that state, who, by reason of his excessive admiration of the dusky belles of the vicinity, often got himself into difficulties. At last he entangled himself to such a degree that he found himself in court to answer a charge of bigamy. There two irate damsels of color confronted him, each claiming to be his lawfully wedded wife. During a consultation with his counsel the defendant suddenly exclaimed, "Boss, I don't see nothin' fo' me to do in this case 'cept to apply fo' a change of venue." "A change of venue?" gasped the astonished lawyer. "What do you mean?" "I want a change ob venus," doggedly reiterated the accused, ignoring the correction on the part of his attorney. "One ob dese wimmen am prejudiced 'gainst me!"

UNCLE RUSSELL WAS SUSPICIOUS "Russell Sage has a suspicious mind," said a New York broker. "He can see through nearly everything. I doubt if he was ever duped on an investment yet." "They say that two promoters once called on Mr. Sage to try and interest him in a certain scheme of theirs. They talked to the great financier about an hour. Then they took their leave, having been told that Mr. Sage's decision would be mailed to them in a few days. "I believe we've got him," said the first promoter, hopefully, on the way uptown. "I don't know," rejoined the other. "He seems very suspicious." "Suspicious?" said the first. "What makes you think he was suspicious?" "Didn't you notice," was the reply, "how he counted his fingers after I had shaken hands with him?"

TRUSTING BUT DOUBTFUL Governor Douglas of Massachusetts tells this of the southern darkey: "There was a darkey in Southern Tennessee named Eph. Friday, who died a short time ago. Eph. was neither a member of a church nor of a lodge and thus had no one to deliver an address or a prayer at his burial. At last an old uncle consented to make a few remarks for the departed soul. As the coffin was being lowered into the grave the old uncle said to the assembled mourners: "Eph. Friday, we trusts you hab gone to de place whar we spects you ain't."

DANGERS WERE EVEN Raymond Hill tells a story of Lew Fields, formerly of Weber & Fields, which is worth repeating, even though it may not be true. Fields owns a collie dog which serves as watchman at his home on West Eighty-third street, New York, says Hill. The other evening an insubstantial neighbor of Fields, mistaking the comedian's home for his own, was bitten by the collie on the left leg. The next morning he wrote: "I demand $1,000 for my injuries. I may suffer from hydrophobia." Mr. Fields promptly wrote back: "My dog is worth $1,500. I demand that amount of money from you. My collie is suffering from alcoholism."

A SAFE PROPOSITION The following story is one that was related by the late Stephen C. Fettes of Warner, N. H., who was for several years a member of the school board: One day while he was visiting a school, a class in reading was heard by the teacher. It was made up of the smaller pupils, who had not progressed very far in reading. One little girl got along very well until she came to the word "enough." This seemed to puzzle her, and she stopped and spelled it out, but could not tell what it was. Thinking to help her a little, Mr. Fettes said: "If your kitty had all the good things she wanted to eat, and all the nice milk she wanted to drink, what would she have?" The little girl pondered a minute, and then answered, "Kittens."

THE RETORT COURTEOUS Captain Frederick Muller, the president of the Rough Riders' Association, was talking in Santa Fe about the arrogance of a sea captain whom he knew. "It is impossible for a passenger," Captain Muller said, "to get a civil answer out of this man. Ask him the simplest and politest question, and with a gruff impertinence he turns his back on you and walks away."

Captain Muller smiled. "But a friend of mine," he said, "once got the better of the sour old fellow in a delightful way. "The captain was standing near the bow of the boat, examining through his glasses a passing ship. "What ship is that?" said my friend. "The captain frowned at him. "Go ask the cook," he said. "Oh, I beg your pardon," said my friend. "I thought you were the cook."

HAD LOST NO BEAR The president's hunting trip brings forth this story from a Mississippi representative who has had considerable experience hunting bear in his state. "Several years ago a relative of mine living in a nearby state came to visit me. Of course, it was just the thing to take him bear-hunting. We did so, and when in the thickest of the woods and brush, where we knew there were bear, the young fellow was put on a 'stand' and told just how to act in case a bear came along. The trail was not difficult to find, and several times we got so close to Mr. Bear that we could hear him growl. Finally my young relative got in too close quarters and came galloping to us. I asked him what was the matter, and his reply was: "See here, I haven't lost any bear, and I am darned if I care to hunt for one."

THE PROPER STEP Representative Gaines of Tennessee has a young friend in Memphis who has embarked in the field of dispensing pills and potions. One day not long ago the representative was in Memphis, and was called on by the young doctor. "I suppose you know that I am actively engaged in my profession, Mr. Gaines?" said the young M. D. "Oh, yes," was the answer, "I noticed it in the newspapers." "Saw it in the papers?" "Yes." "When?" "This morning." "What did it say?" "As well as I can remember, 'There were seventy internments last month over the month previous.'"

WAS ALMOST SATISFIED Congressman Broussard of Louisiana says that at New Iberia, his state, in the early '90s, when that district was visited by a severe flood, one of the expeditions for relief organized by the government one day encountered an old negro who, in a dilapidated dugout, was having considerable trouble in keeping afloat. The old fellow was busy paddling with one hand, while he balled out his craft with the other. At this juncture the relief boat came within hailing distance, and the captain called out: "Hello, there, uncle! Anything you want?" "Nothin', 'cept wings, boss," was the grim reply.

COALS TO NEWCASTLE Governor Douglas of Massachusetts tells a story of a benevolent-looking friend of his from the center of the state who was walking along the road from Northampton to Amherst one day and saw a rural-looking man sitting on a stone wall swinging his legs and gazing earnestly at the telegraph wires, which were humming busily in the wind over his head. Desiring to rest a while he saw a chance for a companion. Going over to the yokel he said: "Watching the wires, I suppose. Waiting to see a message go long, eh?" "The man on the wall grinned and said, "Ay." "The benevolent-looking man got on the wall and for the next quarter of an hour tried hard to dispel his ignorance. "Now," he said at last, "you know something about the matter, don't you? And what's more, I hope you spread your knowledge among your mates on the farm." "But I don't work on a farm," replied the rural citizen. "Where, then, may I ask?" "You see, me and my mates are telegraph linemen and we are testing a new wire."

WHY THEY FLUNKED In the medical department of Columbia University there was a professor who had a very high opinion of himself; he also disliked to assist the students in any personal way, and was noted for propounding difficult questions during examination. One day, after a lengthy lecture, one of the students, with a perplexed air, walked up to the professor and asked him to explain why his theory of a certain phenomenon should be accepted to the exclusion of all others, and also gave his reason for believing another theory to be the better.

SECRET IN A POSTAL There was a big crowd on the street corner as the car stopped and two women started to say good-bye. They weren't going to see each other for a week and had "such an awful lot to say." Then they embraced and the conductor unfeelingly shouted: "Step lively, please!" The blonde stepped aboard and the brunette said: "Oh, Jenny, there's something else I wanted to say, but it's a secret and I don't want anybody but you in the world to know it." The car jerked forward and she called out: "I'll drop you a postal in the morning telling you all about it. Remember, mum's the word."

THE PANAMA MOSQUITO John Barrett, who returned here the other day from his mission as United States minister to Panama, told a story at the Waldorf-Astoria concerning the mosquito pest at the Isthmus. "One spot in particular, called Mosquito creek," said he "is infested to an incredible extent; even the very natives are scared and have to sleep under tents. "A gang of American workmen, among whom were one or two Irishmen, were camped near the creek one night while on their way to a certain point along the canal. The men were driven almost mad by the myriads of insects, and in order to protect themselves they lay on the ground completely covered from head to foot with blankets and canvas in spite of the intense heat. One of the Irishmen, who had momentarily come up to breathe, looking round and shouting out in panic-stricken accents to his comrades: "Taint a bit of good, boys, for ye to try an' console yourselves. Be the holy token, if there isn't millions of the winged devils comin' at us wid electric searchlights. It's New York for mine, boys." "It was the first time time Pat had seen fireflies."

CARNEGIE'S PROFANE HERO Some time ago Andrew Carnegie set aside the sum of $5,000,000 as a hero fund, by which persons who have done heroic deeds may be honored and benefited. Heretofore the only inspiration or enjoyment heroes have received is in the thrill of reading or hearing about the deeds themselves. But hereafter the country will not only have the pleasure of learning how brave men have saved the lives of others, but it will also have the fun of seeing how astonished and disconcerted most of these plain every-day heroes will be when they hear that medals and money are coming to them. One of this class of heroes was greatly astonished a few days ago. He was the waterboy in a Pennsylvania mine who, discovering a fire in one of the galleries, risked his own life to save a number of miners who, but for his action, would have been cut off and killed by the flame and smoke. This waterboy did not regard the saving of the miners' lives as anything more than a part of his day's work, and least of all did he expect any one to applaud what he had done. Hence when some one approached him with the information that he had won a Carnegie medal he replied with great emphasis: "Medal? Me? Wot the hell will I do with that?"

HE WAS A SPEAKER Thomas H. Reed, when speaker of the House of Representatives, once went into an unfamiliar barber shop in Washington to be shaved. When the negro barber had about finished he began to try to seal a hair curl. "Hair curly thin, sur," he said, fingering the two or three stray locks that fringed Mr. Reed's bald pate. "Been that way long, sur?" "I was born that way," replied Mr. Reed. "Afterward I enjoyed a brief period of hirsute efflorescence, but it did not endure." The barber gasped and said no more. Later some one told him he had shaved the speaker. "Spakah!" he exclaimed. "Don't I know dat? I should say he was a speak-ah, sure 'nuf!"

PLEASED THE ADMIRAL An American correspondent had just been introduced to Admiral Togo. "I'm glad to meet you," he said simply. "What!" exclaimed the admiral, "you're not going to ask me 'where I am going Togo?'" "No," said the correspondent. "You are not going to remark that it is better for the Russians Togo while they can?" "Certainly not." "You aren't even going to say 'Togo or not Togo?'" "No, indeed." "Glory!" shouted the great admiral. "You are the first American I have met who hasn't." Hastily pinning a medal on the breast of the visitor he led him to the highball magazine.

Hoffmann Piano
Club Rapidly Forming
Splendid Response to the Opening of the First Hoffmann Piano Club
 Piano Ownership is Possible to Any Family or Employed Young Man or Woman

The Ross & Heyer Club gives to individuals the advantage of quantity buying—"YOU" could run a club—but it requires large capital to carry the accounts, for we pay the maker spot cash for sixty pianos and distribute them to you on these easy terms:
 $10 at joining; then $1.50 a week.
 A club makes it possible to own a brand new fine piano for as little money as one must pay for a good "second-hand" piano—and even on easier terms.
 The advantages of joining a Ross & Heyer Piano Club are: Easy terms of payment. You buy your piano at about wholesale price. You get your piano without waiting for us to get the rest of the members. In a word, any young man or woman, any head of a family, anyone interested in music can certainly afford to own a new piano of really good grade. The tone of the Hoffmann piano is all that one could ask. We invite inspection and comparison.
 It costs money to send salesmen out to solicit you—you save that cost by joining the club—you must come in our store and make your purchase in order to secure club rates. Absolutely no outside soliciting on the club piano.
 Out-of-town members will have to pay freight from Fort Worth to their homes. Otherwise no difference in price or terms. We are receiving many inquiries from all over the state, and are pleased to serve them and enter their names for membership and send them piano at once.

 Between First Natl. Bank and Famous Shoe Store

Probably the most remarkable shoes ever produced within recent times were those worn at a function in London the other day by a lady well known in society. In keeping with a gorgeous gown which is said to have cost a fabulous sum, she wore a pair of shoes that were literally covered with flashing jewels—diamonds, rubies and pearls. The style of decoration was of a remarkably striking character. Five hundred dollars was the price of each shoe.

Fort Worth Eagles will meet their Dallas brothers this afternoon for a game at Dallas. The famous Fogg-Horn battery will do stunts for Fort Worth, the members of which feel that victory is assured. In the last game played between the two teams, which was won by Fort Worth on local grounds, the same battery was responsible for the winning of Fort Worth Eagles.

JUDGES AWARD CONTEST PRIZES

Winners in The Telegram Who? Where? What? contest, which closed Thursday at 6 p. m., are:
 First Prize—$15, Franca Martin, 601 West Front street, Fort Worth.
 Second Prize—$5, Mrs. T. C. Acoll, 1309 Lee avenue, North Fort Worth.
 Third Prize—$1, Mrs. H. E. Barnett, 1616 Harley street, Fort Worth.
 Fourth Prize—$1, Mrs. George E. Wells, Handley, Fort Worth.
 Fifth Prize—$1, John K. Boone, 213-215 Main street, Fort Worth.
 Sixth Prize—$1, J. M. Turner, care The J. E. Mitchell Company, 506-508 Main street, Fort Worth.
 Seventh Prize—$1, Mrs. E. E. McLennan, Frisco Machine Shops, Fort Worth.

The contest inaugurated in The Telegram of last Sunday, requiring contestants to discover who advertised where; where their places of business were located and what they advertised, was received with great favor, an even 400 answers being received. Of these 104 were correct, 285 incorrect and 11 were received after 6 p. m. Thursday, and thus barred by the terms of the contest.
 Mr. J. Montgomery Brown, advertising manager of The Fair, and Mr. Frank T. Crittenden, advertising manager of Washer Brothers, consented to act as judges and decided the contest, awarding the prizes to the foregoing winners.

The biggest surprise of the contest was caused by the number of contestants who lost an opportunity to win a prize by apparent carelessness. The contest which upon its face was one of the greatest ease developed sticklers in many places, causing a most careful and thorough search of the advertising columns to learn the correct answers.
 Probably the most common mistake of all the contestants was the answer to the third question of No. 3, which was to name the college from which Dr. Dyer graduated in 1892. In his address he spoke of graduating from another college in 1892, which was the Chicago Polytechnic College, and this was confused by many with the correct answer, which was the Baltimore College of Physicians and Surgeons.
 A young lady on Humboldt street in answering the last question in No. 23, referring to the Knight Dry Goods Company's ad, and which asked the price at which 2,000 yards of embroidery was offered, gave in the answer the price at which 3,000 yards of embroidery was offered in another part of the ad.
 A North Fort Worth contestant was counted out by entirely omitting the answers to No. 4, jumping from No. 3 to No. 5.
 Another list sent in from the Worth hotel was counted out because the second question in No. 23 was not answered.
 A contestant at Tenth and Rusk streets had his entire list correct except the last question in No. 3, which was the cause of so many being counted out.
 A contestant on West Second street missed the third question in No. 3, giving Missouri avenue instead of Pennsylvania avenue the correct answer.
 A lady living in St. Louis avenue was counted out by failing to answer the third question of No. 7.
 A college avenue contestant made the same error as did the contestant from Humboldt street, in regard to the Knight Dry Goods Company's embroidery.

The correct list of answers and that sent in by the prize winners is:

IN THE COURTS
SEVENTEENTH DISTRICT COURT
 The Sam Butler case was again up in this court Saturday, and was discussed at some length.
 More than a year ago the homestead of Sam Butler and wife was deeded to the county in liquidation of certain claims, the property being valued at $4,000. In the present suit the contention of Mr. Butler and J. W. Sandidge, who became interested in the property, is that the deed was as a mortgage and therefore is null and void. The style of the pending suit is J. E. Murray et al against J. W. Sandidge et al.
 Judge Smith took the case under advisement.

FORTY-EIGHTH DISTRICT COURT
 Judge Irby Dunklin granted a divorce in the case of Meroba S. Hirschfeld against Alexander Hirschfeld. A division of property was granted on plaintiff's petition.
 A $109 judgment for plaintiff was rendered by Judge Dunklin in the case of the Missouri Iron and Metal Company against John T. Abbott, with a foreclosure of lien.
 Mrs. S. E. Ellison against R. A. Randall, debt, is on trial in this court. The damage case of C. H. Rines & Company against A. F. Deckman was dismissed.

PROBATE MATTERS
 An application for guardianship in the estate of James Meyer et al was made by George Carter.
 J. F. Prosser made application for temporary administration of the estate of Mrs. E. A. Gregory, deceased.
 Judge R. F. Milam approved the final account of Bridget Maloney, administratrix of the E. J. Maloney estate.

RECORD OF BIRTHS
 To Mr. and Mrs. George McTutchnin of Azle, a boy.
MARRIAGE LICENSES
 W. E. Cook and Mrs. Ella McDonnald.
 S. K. Ash and Miss Eliza Hornbaker of Fort Worth.
 George E. Bartlett and Miss Luciel Grimes.
JUSTICE COURT
 Jack Childress and Henry Hill, the two men arrested Friday on the alleged charge of holding up Frank Morgan of Sherman and relieving him of $272, were taken before Justice of the Peace Charles T. Rowland Saturday for a preliminary hearing. Both men waived

SPECIAL SESSION URGED
 Congressman Gillespie anxious to Tackle Tariff and Rates
 "I am very anxious that President Roosevelt stick to his original program to call an extra session of congress Oct. 1," said Congressman Gillespie, W. Gillespie of this, the Eighth congressional district, Saturday. "I hope he will send into congress a clean-cut message demanding a revision and adjustment of the tariff, or at least a message that will relieve the tariff of its present iniquitous features—one that will enable the farmers in this country to buy of American manufacturers as cheaply as can the farmers in foreign countries."
 Congressman Gillespie added that when he left Washington at the adjournment of the last session of congress, March 4, it was stated by President Roosevelt that he would call an extra session Oct. 1 for the purpose of giving consideration to both tariff revision and the railroad rate question.
 "The railroads and manufacturers are both opposed to congress meddling with either proposition," said Congressman Gillespie, "but if the president holds to his original declaration to call an extra session, there will be something doing."
 Mr. Gillespie thinks, however, that inasmuch as the president has announced he will take trip south to Mississippi and Alabama Oct. 17, he (the president) does not intend to call the extra session, that if the president takes the trip as outlined there will be no time for holding an extra session prior to the beginning of the regular session, which convenes the first Monday in December. Mr. Gillespie said that if President Roosevelt does make his southern trip it certainly means that he will not follow out his original program of calling an extra session.

A DAY AT MINERAL WELLS
 Proposed Interurban Line a Topic for Enthusiastic Conversation
 MINERAL WELLS, Texas, June 10.—Judging from the efforts and general enthusiasm of the committees in the field, Mineral Wells will soon know whether or not the proposed electric line will be built.
 Already the right of way has been secured over five or six miles and George Barber, chairman of this committee, tells The Telegram representative that progress on the proposed route is to be pushed up to the division end. As for the required bonus for this city, it is also being increased daily by subscriptions of the smaller class. The largest subscriptions so far reported by the committee are Cleo Smith $1,500, D. M. Howard $1,000, H. N. Frost $500, Frank Richards $100.
 Judge Oxford of Stephenville held the examining trial of Maggie Brown, the negro who shot and killed Will Henderson here last week. Her bond is fixed at $1,750, being reduced from $3,000, as fixed by Justice Cook.
 Considerable enthusiasm is being manifested by a large class of people in bowling. The Hawthorne Social Athletic Club claims a large percentage of this class and some excellent scores have been made in recent contests. Splendid alleys are ably managed here and the largest scores thus far made by ladies are: Miss Fay Hayer, Nacogdoches, 197; Miss Carl Smith, Fort Worth, 193; and Mrs. H. B. Rodgers of Paris, 196.
 The special attraction at the Carlsbad pavilion last evening was the unique whistling of little Master Jack of Mineral Wells, accompanied by his little sister. Both of the children are highly talented and will easily prove their value in the world of music.
 Governor Lanham came in today and will spend some days at the wells for rest and health.
 No town in Texas today, to say nothing of a great health resort, offers the visitors and general public such complete, yet such cheap, transfer and hack service as does "The Wells." The moderate rates, sharp competition and the great number of slick people riding every hour probably caused the excellent service to be established. Beside Green's Transfer and Livery there are the hack lines of Tanner, Lewis, Dr. Mud and others, all well equipped for rides to the Pinto Lake, mountains or picnics.
 Every hotel in Mineral Wells is planning for the rush of the season for next week and the capacity of many of the best houses is now already being tested. Over six hundred visitors came to The Wells this week and the extra influx of the coming week caused by the State Association of Retail Grocers will add over a thousand more, to say nothing of the regular increase caused by this warm June weather. With the formal opening of Patridge Inn and one or two more smaller houses this week, however, there

OLD WOMAN MURDERED
 Thought Murderer Had Heard Her Speak of Buried Treasure
 CINCINNATI, Ohio, June 10.—Mrs. Mary Rechart, an enfeebled old woman, 87 years old, was murdered early this morning in her little cottage at 3196 Holbrook avenue, in the East End. She lived alone for many years and in childish manner often spoke of having large sums of money concealed in her home.
 It is supposed that these vagaries of her weakened mentality became noised abroad and aroused the cupidity of some unknown person sufficiently to induce him to make an effort to find her imaginary wealth.
 Peter Hill, a laborer who lives next door, told the police that he was awakened by a noise in the home of the reclusive about 2 o'clock and hurried to her cottage in time to see a stranger escape from a side door. He found the aged woman alive, but her skull crushed. She died before the arrival of a physician. A brick covered with a piece of carpet was the weapon used.
 There is mystery about the crime and Hill will be detained by the police until Coroner Cameron makes an investigation. The little cottage in which she lived was the only property she owned. Her only son lives in this city, but the mother would not live at his home.

IT ALWAYS TURNS OUT THIS WAY

1. "By George, that is a fine baby, Smith. Such a good natured little fellow."
2. "Best natured baby I ever saw. My wife just drops him in the crib, turns out the light, and we don't hear a sound until 5 o'clock the next morning. We like that very often. In fact, I don't think he's cried like that at night in six months. Generally he drops off to sleep without a sound."

3. "John, I wish you'd come upstairs and help me. I and bring up that long bottle on the left hand shelf in the pantry—the bottle with the white label. I'm sure the child has a pain or he wouldn't cry so hard."

4. "I hope you'll excuse me for being gone so long, Jones, but there's something the matter with the boy. Do you really have to go? Well, come again, and we'll have a quiet smoke. I can promise you it'll never happen again."

TO CHANGE RIVER BED
EL PASO, Texas, June 10.—Negotiations have been opened by wires with the City of Mexico for permission to change the bed of the Rio Grande river to save thousands of acres of land in Texas below this city.
TO STRAIGHTEN THE RIVER IT MUST BE CUT ACROSS MEXICAN TERRITORY, appropriating a few acres of Mexican soil. If Mexico consent the river will be straightened in banks and will overflow the Texas valley side and may change its channel permanently.
NEW YORK, June 10.—In the pig iron market demand was more active, but nothing was accomplished. Sellers were strong in their views. Close: June, July $14.40 to $14.75, August $14.40 to $14.75, October $15.00, November $14.50 to $15.00, December $14.50 to $15.00, February $15.00 to $15.25.

WORLD'S EDUCATORS TO MEET IN NEW JERSEY

Will Be One of Largest Gatherings of This Kind in History of the World

This meeting of the greatest educators not only of America, but of the world, convenes this year at Asbury Park and Ocean Grove.

For years these two points upon the Atlantic have been the resorts of pleasure seekers. Lately they have been centers of educational and other gatherings.

RAILROADS EXTEND COURTESIES

The railroads are doing their part in the way of facilities, stop-overs and other courtesies. It is quite a distance to New York from this state and the single fare round trip rate is quite an item.

The agents of these roads will see that their patronage is well cared for.

WRESTLED FOR $1,000

In a Private Gymnasium Fred Beell Meets Tom Jenkins
NEW YORK, June 10.—In a private gymnasium before a select crowd of sportsmen, Fred Beell of Wisconsin and Tom Jenkins of Cleveland have wrestled for $1,000 a side. Beell, of whom little was known, wrestled the old champion to a standstill and then threw him after a struggle lasting two hours and forty-three minutes. Jenkins eventually won the match through superior weight, but declared when it was over that Beell was the hardest opponent for his size and weight that he ever met.

Only about 100 men saw the match, which was for the best two out of three falls, catch-as-catch-can, any hold but the strangle hold.

For nearly one hour it was a fierce struggle. For minutes at a time the men stood with heads lowered like bulls, their arms locked behind each other's necks, and straining until their muscles stood out like whipcords.

At last they were over in one corner of the ring and Jenkins secured a half Nelson and was about to turn Beell over. Beell wrenched himself loose and catching Jenkins off his balance turned him over like a flash and pinned his shoulders to the mat. After a short rest the men came on for the second bout. Jenkins was thoroughly aroused and went at Beell like a tiger. After one minute and forty-three seconds of wrestling he hurled the little fellow with terrific force against the south wall and Beell fell to the mat half dazed. It was easy work then for Jenkins to get a fall with a half Nelson. He followed with a second fall and secured the decision in quick order.

The Greatest Automobile Value Yet

Oldsmobile Standard 7 h. p. Runabout

If there is any possible way to improve this new and improved Oldsmobile Standard Runabout, we don't know it. It represents all we have learned in 20 years about runabout building. It has power, durability, comfort and beauty—with an Oldsmobile motor that has no equal.

It stands in our opinion, as the perfect runabout, because it is built in a way we know an automobile should be to stand hard daily use for the city or country—good roads or bad.

See this car—try it—examine it—there isn't the slightest question that anyone who will be influenced in purchasing a car by merit, by superiority point by point over any other, will buy an Oldsmobile—$650.00, f. o. b. factory. Lamps and horn included.

The new flexible springs make it as comfortable as a Touring Car. New ratchet differential brake; new hub brakes lined with camel's hair belting; new circulating pump; starting relief at side of seat; priming cup is added for cold weather; piston pin is bigger and four piston rings instead of three; automatic oiling system; Improved clutches—in fact every little thing strengthened and improved to make the car "simply perfect."

Any runabout that can cross the American continent will do any work you can ask of it.

Variety Needs VACATION TIME

THE SILKEN BATHING SUIT

PARISIAN CHIC IN A WALKING SUIT

FOR OUTDOOR WEAR

Description of Illustrations.

The Silken Bathing Suit.
The vogue of silk for the bathing suit is one that originally came to us, as do most of the other fashions, from France. The one illustrated shows a full blouse, with deep pleats in the shoulder seams and at the cut-out throat, the fullness so attained being deftly shirred into a feathered belt that serves to keep the figure from looking floppy. A broad collar of embroidered linen somewhat after the familiar sailor design is used over the shoulders, and just the suggestion of a chemise is seen in the little band to match that is tucked in across the throat. The skirt is joined to the fitted belt, a pointed pattern in smocking adjusting the fullness over the hips and adding much to the smart appearance. The sleeve is a short puff, with elastic bands run in the shirring to make it set closely to the arm. The little bloomers worn beneath the skirt are the best of their kind, giving sufficient freedom of movement without taking up a weight of water that is likely to hamper the movement of the swimmer.

Parisian Chic in a Walking Suit.

One of those smart pale blue and white pinhead checks in mohair is deftly relieved with a tiny piping of blue velvet edging and folds of black satin. This simple, but very effective trimming appears on the roll shawl collar and on the upturned cuffs that are further trimmed with ruffled rows of narrow yellowish Valenciennes. The coat is one of those Etos designs that, while cleverly fitted, still stand away from the figure in the most fetching way, fastening in double-breasted style in front, with a double row of burnt ivory buttons. The sleeve is pleated to the arm size and again into the cuff just below the elbow and finished with a pendant frill. The skirt is of circular cut, with that smart bias seam down the center front that the Parisian tailor favors so mightily, this creating any pleats or darts or shirring on the hips. A deep bias fold of the silk material is applied above the hem, several rows of machine stitching at the top serving for trimming effect.

For Outdoor Wear.

There are several novel points expressed in this dainty blouse and smart skirt. The blouse is of sheer India linen, with both lace and embroidery adding to its adornment. The yoke is tucked, and brette straps of lace pass from the back to the front and another band of the same serves as a heading to the blouse section, which is embroidered across the body and fastens in the back. The sleeve is one of those full loose leg-of-mutton affairs, shirred on the inner seam and finished with a generous lace frill below the elbow. The skirt is fashioned from one of those novel fastidious stiffening plaids that are defined with hairlines of color upon a lighter surface, two shades of gray showing in that of the picture. The front is in a tablier, with an inverted pleat down the center and a folded pleat on either side. These are stitched down to knee depth and then pressed flat to flare from there. The sides are circular in cut, with a flounce attached above the knee that rounds up prettily in the back; while the back is nearly to the waistline so that it extends pretty nearly to the bust. Some soft drapery is usually introduced at this point, and in many instances the draped lines are continued down the front prettily nearly to the knee. This gives a charming effect of novelty, and any idea of bulkiness or bulk is obliterated in the close fit of the skirt over the hips.

Suggestion for Summer Mourning.

For those who are compelled to wear black during the warm weather those habutai silks offer a welcome attraction. Unlike other black silks these will not spot or turn rusty in wear, and even perspiration has no power to fade them. A smart shirtwaist suit is illustrated. The gown is made up unlined. To a round yoke trimmed with narrow black Valenciennes the blouse is shirred, a handkerchief pointed bertha with ruffled lace on the edges adding a note of dressiness. The sleeve is a full puff with deep lacetrimmed cuff. The skirt is rather original in its lines, tucked circular sections being placed together with rows of lace insertion and finished with a tucked flounce at the foot. Although these silks are perspiration proof it were not wise to omit the usual dress-shield in frocks of this character.

For a General Surtout.

What the French woman terms her surtout—figurely and literally, her overall—has come to be one of the recognized needs of the wardrobe. For general wear, for traveling in wet weather or dry, those smart garments are ever appropriate. The Mandelberg model, originated in London, is one well worth copying this side of the water. The material is a waterproofed thibet in a new shade of brown, and a velvet touch is achieved in the use of brown velvet braided in a fancy pattern in black, and edged with a gold cord mixed with white. The upper part of the coat is bloused, and fastens in double-breasted style, with broad plaits over the shoulders. The plaits are decorated with fancy rosette-shaped appliques, and fancy metal buttons make the fastening. The skirt portion is circular in cut, fitted without darts or pleats, and hanging in full folds to below the ankles.

The Traveling Wrap--Outing and Shirtwaist Suits--For the Golf Links and Tennis Courts--Filmy Afternoon Frocks--Hints as to Mourning.

The business woman, with her necessarily short vacation time, has come to be quite a recognized factor in the scheme of things fashionable. For her has Dame Fashion specially invented the ever-useful shirtwaist suit that has been taken up so enthusiastically by all sections of society, and just as gratefully by the society bud who has never seen the inside of a business office, save, perhaps, as a gratification of curiosity, as well as by the woman to meet whose daily needs it was originally planned. And even those who are not tied down by the demands of business are taking much to the short vacation fad. This restless generation, instead of making a hie to some country place early in the season, and "staying put" there, as our Yankee cousins say, all summer, are nowadays making short and flying visits to ever so many places. Nowadays the question is not "Where will you summer?" but rather "What rounds do you expect to cover this season?" So from seashore to mountains, from bathing beach to country club, fair femininity plans to flit; and she likewise plans her wardrobe and her trunk accommodations to meet the demands of those same and frequent flittings. First and foremost comes the question of a suitable and comfortable traveling wrap. It demands some consideration, this traveling garment, for it must be lightweight, waterproof, cool and yet warm enough to be comfortable; it must be dressy enough to be smart, and yet not too dainty, so that it will look out of place on country roads and for woodland wanderings. Both the full and the three-quarter lengths are in esteem for this purpose, and it depends altogether upon the style of the wearer which she shall choose. Much to be preferred are the smart coats of waterproofed silk and stoddens that display the touch of velvet somewhere in the trimming that is one of the hallmarks of this late season's style. Some of these are made with a body lining that will prove the acme of comfort in a cold wind and yet not add appreciably to the weight of the garment. The devotee of tennis and golf used not this year make any special purchases in the way of costumes in which to follow her favorite sport. Anyone of her ordinary shirtwaists will do to top the short skirt, which the Parisienne is cutting quite some four inches off the ground, short enough in all conscience to satisfy the most rabid adherent of the antiquer theory. One rather more than suspects, however, that it was not with any sanitary or scientific object that the smart skirt has been so shortened; to the initiated it looks as though it were merely to display the distractingly pretty effects in shiny shoes and sheer hose that the smart dresser of this year of grace affects. No matter how remote or how rural the place selected for the vacation time, one simply must, in self-respect, adopt some little frilly and dressy costume for the late afternoon, and who this is cleverly planned it may be to do duty for all evening as well. Where laundry bills and laundry facilities are not a matter of course, those black habutai silks will prove a perfect treasure-trove. Even for those who are not in mourning they are especially attractive. They are thin, cool, light in weight and texture, and better than all else, they do not spot or fade. They are even said to be perspiration-proof, but this is a claim that one would hardly care to put to the test by omitting the cleanly dress shield from beneath the arm. One may be quite willing to accept the claim, and with it a feeling of security; but it would be tempting fate to run the risk of ruining a new frock, and a silk one at that, by carelessly neglecting a common precaution. Those who can afford them are ordering the most bewitching confections—there is no other name for them—in embroidered linen and batiste. Much use is made of the real Irish crochet, not the coarse and inartistic kind that is so often mis-called under this name, and which is made by the Italian and Slav peasantry generally, but the real product of those nimble Irish fingers that displays a distinctness of design and a fitness of execution that simply enslave one's admiration. The transparent yoke and the deep intaike cuff are so often made of this fascinating lace, and a backing of sheer chiffon is used, so that the flesh tints take on an alluring softness beneath. The blouse that fastens in the back is quite a favorite, and a full sleeve has just a trifle of lining at the top to hold the shape. The skirt is usually simplicity itself, an upper part that is somewhat circular in cut—it is considered a pity to cut the all-over embroidery into gores, and lose much of it in matching the pattern—and few embroidered ruffles serve as the only trimmings required.

A Filmy, Frilly Toilette.

The frilly modes of this summer time are daintily expressed in this toilette in which chapeau, visite and frock are all of embroidered batiste, and even the parasol is made to match. The frock shows yoke and deep sleeve cuff of beige Irish crochet, just the sheerest of chiffon being used to veil the flesh tints beneath; and the blouse is shirred to the yoke, fastening in the back and dropping with a graceful boof fantry into the deep boned centre of soft white liberty ribbon. The skirt is cut with full circular top, soft shirring adjusting the fullness over the hips and at the back; and two embroidered flounces are posed above the hem, a wavy band of entre-deux serving as a heading. The visite is one of the very newest effects in summer wraps. This is really but a shaped yoke, cut loose around the neck and with deep V-shaped scallops on the lower edge. The yoke is covered with all-over embroidery and the edge is lavishly ruffled with the embroidered flouncing. Long and narrow ends entirely covered with the shirred flouncing hang almost to the knee in front. The parasol matches the visite, the top of all-over embroidered batiste, and the edge a mass of ruffled flouncing. The handle is of white corkwood with a shepherd's crook covered with tiny Scotch roses in white and tied with a big splashy bow of white liberty ribbon.

A SUGGESTION FOR SUMMER MOURNING

The Cult of the Tea Gown. Neglige and Demi-Neglige Styles that are Usually Attractive.

One often wonders why it is that the French actresses who visit here present such a bewitching appearance when they wear a tea-gown, a pelmior, a negligee of any sort upon the stage. One versed in the lore of things sartorial bewails the fact that so many of our best American actresses, even those who have a reputation for clever dressing, fall utterly to impress the audience when seen in deshabille as they do at the moments of the play when they are an grand tenue. Many of our native born actresses can wear an exquisite dinner gown, a superb ball gown to perfection, but when it comes to the tea gown and the negligee they fall utterly. Is the reason to be found in a recognition of the psychology of clothes, or is it one that is purely physical? Certain it is that the negligee style of dress will, in those of sensitive temperament, produce a corresponding negligee or negligence (there is no intention to pun in this) of mind and attitude, for the influence of clothes upon the mood and the mind is one that is universally recognized. One can hardly rise to heights of tragedy clad only in a loose bath robe or wrapper, and with one's heels dangling from a pair of quilted mules. The inspiration of clothes is then distinctly lacking, and few there be who can rise superior to this influence and forget the costume in the fervor of the scene. And there is a perilous danger of an untoward slip of attitude or gesture turning the whole tragedy of the scene into a burlesque, for the traditional steps from the sublime to the ridiculous often is made over the bridge of costume upon the stage. But to return to the tea-gown and its grace of wearing. For one thing, the tea-gown is distinctly and distinctively the garment of the leisure class, of the idle rich or the merely well-to-do. It demands, in the first place, a well-filled purse wherewith to purchase one of those Parisian confections; and, secondly, the leisure and the correct surroundings in which to display it. Given the gown and the environment, the next thing is to know how to wear it. Now, there be those who claim that the correct wearing of the tea-gown is an acquired grace, just as dancing, singing, fencing and other accomplishments; and this is a view which several of the Parisian makers of the mode who are noted for the elegance of their production in this line express. What the French people so expressively designate as "allure" and the dictionary badly translates as gait, is what is required to the best wearing of the tea-gown. It is an allure of gait, of pose, of carriage of the whole body, that is required for the success of the tea-gown; and this must be practiced and rehearsed diligently throughout and worked out until even the most critical is satisfied. No garment brings out one's individuality as does this same tea-gown. It is not a garb for the strenuously athletic girl to pose in, save and unless she has taken her strenuousness for the nonce and doted to ways of pleasantness and peace. Dignity and bodily grace and charm come next. A repose of face and of manner are imperative, and all of these attributes, when lacking, declare their absence with a cruel sharpness that is positively disconcerting to the onlooker of keen, if not trained, perceptions. Some women seem born to wear the tea gown, and do so with a queenly grace that invests the simplest and most inexpensive garment of this character with a cachet that none other can imitate. Others again, even when clad in the most harmonious and bewitching design that tout Paris can turn out, are naturally so loud, so fussy in manner, so restless in movement, that the effect of their presence is inharmonious, even when it is not positively disagreeable. The Parisienne is much given to wearing her tea-gowns for informal and affably dinners. The French are a home-loving people, and while respecting a wise hospitality, are but little inclined to invite the stranger within their gates to dine with them en famille. The intimacy of home and family life is too sacred to them to be lightly offered to any but time-tried intimates. So it is that the delightful informality of the tea-gown is turned to further use, and it makes its appearance for dinner as well. Loose and flowing draperies, especially those based upon the styles of the fashions of the First Empire, are best expressed in these. There is usually more or less of a décolletage—for a high collar while on negligence is abhorrent to the Parisienne—and the sleeve is arranged to display to the best advantage the rounded curves of the arm. The delightful little tea jacket shares in large and generous measure the popularity of the tea-gown. Pretty much the same lines are followed, except that the jacket sometimes displays a hint or two of elegance at the waist; and all of the sheerer silken fabrics, from chiffon and mousseline to crepe de chine and tafetas, are encrusted with lace and plaiting for their better adornment.

Some Frills of Fashion.

In the early part of the season all of the best material appeared over the bust upon the fashionable coats and bodices. Now it is being moved down to the waistline, and some very smart dinner coats in sheer crepe of an exquisite poppy red are shown with shirring at the waistline, the gathering being done in the side seams and the sheer crepe wrinkling much, but tightly around the waist. Upon a slender figure the effect is delightful; but one shudders to think of a short waisted, stout and matronly contour thus arrayed. In some of the latest costumes, where the bodice is of silk or lace, or a clever combination of both, topping a cloth skirt, the skirt has the front panel deftly cut above the waistline so that it extends pretty nearly to the bust. Some soft drapery is usually introduced at this point, and in many instances the draped lines are continued down the front prettily nearly to the knee. This gives a charming effect of novelty, and any idea of bulkiness or bulk is obliterated in the close fit of the skirt over the hips. Many of the summer evening gowns are furnished with what might better be described as arm draperies rather than sleeves. The arm size is provided with a V-shaped piece of material, the broader part cut out to shape and the apex of the V hanging at the back anywhere from the elbow to the waist, or even to knee length. Sheer and gauzy material is demanded, spangles are a decided addition and the edges are elaborated to any extent. The celebrated actress, Mlle. Lecocquer, of the Theatre Francaise, Paris, passing along the streets at a late hour one bitterly cold night was accosted by a poor woman with four children, who besought the actress to take pity on her. Mlle. Lecocquer searched in her pockets and found she had nothing. "Wait, my good woman," she exclaimed, "I will soon give you something." And instantly, throwing off her mantle, she began to recite the imprecations of Camilla with such vehemence and talent that a crowd soon collected around her. She then made a collection from her audience, and with the fruits of her charitable action gave the women sufficient for food and

NOTES AND NOTIONS FROM THE REALM OF FASHION

Separate pongee and tafetas coats will be worn for driving and automobile wear for commencement gowns (and they'd make splendid graduation gifts) and for some of the same as a light-weight coat can be used for turn-back cuff of the same or contrasting material and this idea will be especially pretty in the boleros worn over thin blouses. The material of silky finish are very gay and pretty, and are being brought up heavily for children's frocks, although they by no means belong to necessity to the children's wardrobe. Weaves, coarse and fine, figured and plain, some of the coarse-mesh cotton greenhouses with silk finish and printed flower designs being remarkably effective. The double-width onesame crepe de chine, fashioned some of the smartest frocks; and when one is skilled in embroidery this makes a very desirable width materials are all of them desirable, and in many modes imperative. The double-width onesame crepe de chine, fashioned some of the smartest frocks; and when one is skilled in embroidery this makes a very desirable most satisfactory foundation for the embroidered robe which is enjoying such a vogue abroad, and for which such an enormous price—it seems unbelievable—is asked.

A PAGE THAT WILL MAKE YOU FEEL BETTER

Bridget—Oh'm awful sorry, mum, that Ol broke that tumber; but it'll never happen agin, mum.
Her Mistress—Of course it won't. That was the last one of the set.

A DIFFERENCE.
The Daughter—I don't know what to do about Cholly Stayiate.
Her Mamma—What's the matter?
The Daughter—You object to his shortcomings and papa objects to his long stayings.

Mr. E. Z. Mark—What must we think of a woman who tries to be like a man?
Miss Cutting Hintz—That she doesn't know him.

"Did you hear about Hungry Hogbins? He et four dozen mince pies an' drank a keg of beer fer a bet an' died."
"Why, what wus do matter wit him?"

Lady of the House—Don't you ever get tired of doing nothing?
Tramp—Oh! yes, mum; but I never complain.

THEN HE SAID GOODBYE.
Mr. Klumsay—Ahl dear heart, I would go round the world for your sake.
Miss Caustique—Half way round would do.
THE WANING OF THE HONEYMOON
Mrs. Noolywedd—Oh! Jack, you are surely not going to the office without kissing me good bye!
Noolywedd—I'm late, pet. I'll kiss you when I return. Business before pleasure, you know. So long, dearie!
ON BOARD SHIP.
Mrs. Benham—That fellow is terribly sick unless he is a contortionist.
Benham—He certainly is.

FROM THE HOUR GLASS OF TIME.

HEARD IN DOG LAND.
First Pup—Yes, Daschy is all right, I guess, but he comes from such a low-down family.

The Cannibal Chief's Wife—The women are all going to wear very long skirts this season—and my skirt is so fearfully short.
The Cannibal Chief—It'll be long enough before you get another one.

I had a little dog, they called him Bluff.
I sent him to the shop for 3 cents' worth of snuff.
But he lost the bag and spilt the snuff.
So take that cuff and that's enough.
Find the dog.

"Did you git sick when you first learned to smoke, Jimmie?"
"I dunno. Dat wus 'way back when I wus a mere child."

NATURALLY.
Jigson—There is one word in the English language that is spelled terribly.
Jagson—What is that?
Jigson—Terribly, of course.

HIS MODEST OFFER.
Mrs. Henpeck (who insists on buying her husband's clothes)—I want something nice in trousers.
New Clerk—Yes m. Would I come anywhere near any idea you may have?
