Hardest Fight Against Fever Yet to Come

IS MEMPHIS INFECTED?

Surgeons Say They've Traced Italian Woman's Case to Tennessee City

FEVER RECORD TO DATE NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 26.—Official report up to 6 o'clock Saturday evening:

New cases, 47. Total cases to date, 1,712. Deaths, 10. Total deaths to date, 242. Cases now under treatment, 243. New foci, 12.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 26.—So far this year's epidemic has been less than one-half as virulent as that of 1878.

But the authorities agree that September has always been the worst month for the spread of yellow fever. And within the coming few weeks will be the time of crisis.

Action looking toward the mitigation of quarantine regulations, so far as allowing laborers to enter plantation regions where their labors are in demand, has already been taken by a number of parishes.

Detention Camp Reopened

Camp Wyman, the detention camp on the Louisville and Nashville, was today reopened by order of the surgeon in command, Dr. White, owing to the release of fourteen men, nine women and three children.

A meeting of the ward leaders of the citizens' volunteer association was held tonight in the Whitney central bank with General Superintendent Warner presiding.

Memphis Case Traced

That Memphis case, the discovery of which set two states by the ears, was traced by Dr. White today to Memphis, and ascertained to be actually of Mexican origin.

Quarantine Regulations

The quarantine regulations announced yesterday by the state board of health are still perplexing the railroads.

State in Control

President Soucheur, Dr. Guiteras and their party returned tonight from Patterson, where they have placed the state directly under state control.

Cases in the Parishes

Reports today to the state health board shows a new case just across the river. Elizabeth plantation one case.

JAPANESE AGAIN POSTPONE CRISIS

Ask Adjournment of Peace Conference Until Monday, When Russians Refuse to Yield Another Point

BY WILLIAM HOSLER

HOTEL WENTWORTH, PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Aug. 26.—Japan today at the eleventh hour, when the peace conference had reached its logical end, prevented a disruption by requesting an adjournment.

Logical End Reached

That marked the logical end, the work of the conference was performed at last; there was no other business before it; a pause during which literally the fate of thousands of men hung in the balance.

Ten men impressively faced each other across the mahogany table and war of peace depended upon the next spoken words.

Baron Komura broke the silence. He spoke in English and Mr. Witte impatiently shook his head and turned to Korostovetz.

Japan Suing for Peace

The fact is that Japan is the nation that on the face of things is suing for peace.

At all events, Japan is the yielding one here.

At 4 o'clock final agreement was reached over the terminology of the both-ersome protocol.

THREAT OF ARREST STOPS TRACK CHANGE

Alderman Maddox Prevents Traction Company From Shifting Rails

Employees of the Northern Texas Traction Company, attempting to replace narrow gauge tracks in Front street between Main and Houston streets, were stopped in the work Saturday afternoon after notice had been served on City Marshal Maddox to prevent the work and arrest anyone attempting to carry it on.

Call upon the city marshal to force if necessary came after reported resumption of the work after promise to desist.

Maddox's Story

"Friday morning the Traction Company removed the bricks about one of the rails of the narrow gauge tracks in the street at this place.

"I then requested Mr. Hawley to notify the company that they must stop the work.

Orders for Arrest Issued

"By this time Mr. Clifford of the Traction Company and a young man in the office of the Traction Company attorneys, arrived upon the scene.

SPEAKERS OPPOSE LIGHT FRANCHISE

ATLANTA, GA., ANGRY AT MAYOR'S ACTIONS

Reported Conduct at Toledo Convention to Be Followed by Apology, if True

ATLANTA, Ga., Aug. 26.—Mayor Woodward's conduct on the floor of the convention of the League of American Municipalities at Toledo, Ohio, when, while alleged to be under the influence of whisky, he attacked Mayor Dunne of Chicago and made a rambling speech on the question of municipal ownership, will result in a special meeting of the city council, they expressed the opinion that the council would have to take some notice of the affair.

were then issued to stop the work and I instructed the city marshal to arrest any and all persons who attempted to proceed with it.

The track, it is understood, will be kept under close watch by the city marshal and orders forbidding work upon it carried out to the letter.

Statement, it is understood, was made to city officials that the object in widening the track was to provide a place for the running of cars, in this way relieving the heavy traffic at Main and Front streets.

It was also rumored that the object in view was to secure loading tracks for the operation of the Interurban express business from Front street and also to occupy the street to prevent the entrance of another company to depot facilities.

Manager Mappleoram could not be found by repeated calls at the Traction Company office Saturday night for a verification of the reports.

In discussing the situation Friday night Alderman Maddox declared his belief that the company had no right whatever to take the action in which it was stopped, and declared his belief that the Texas and Pacific Railway Company had laid the paving which was being torn up.

Upon the latter point, however, he said he was not sure. He is firm in the position, however, that the Traction Company has no right to resume the use of long unused tracks.

Seventh Street Tracks Maintained

Narrow gauge tracks without connection to other parts of the city system, as has been pointed out by The Telegram, are also maintained by the Traction Company in East Seventh street, extending from Rusk across Main street.

It is likely Alderman Maddox will now demand the removal of both the tracks in West Front street and those in East Seventh street.

Alderman Maddox declared the council has the right to force the removal of the tracks.

Alderman Is Absent

Is Expected to Explain Sale of Bogus Austin Bonds

Special to The Telegram.

AUSTIN, Texas, Aug. 26.—An effort was made to see Frank Maddox, former alderman of this city, regarding the affidavit which he made before a notary public at Houston, swearing that he had procured the sale of the $135,000 of Austin's bonds which are now discovered to have been forged, but he is out of the city.

He left Austin Monday for Starr county, where he is engaged in surveying some land with W. C. Sullivan on the Santa Rosa ranch. He is about twenty miles from a telegraph office and it is impossible to get him by telegraph.

The story of the affair as given to The Telegram by Alderman Maddox, upon request, is as follows:

Municipal Ownership

Mr. Orr then referred to the heavy indebtedness of Fort Worth and said that had the city received something in the past for her franchises there would be no necessity of this great debt of $1,800,000, nor would her citizens be forced to pay a tax of $1.75 on the $100 valuation.

The debt, he said, is out of all reason and not consistent with good government.

"The stock in trade of a city is its franchises," he said, "and if you give them all away then you are without stock. If a franchise tax is assessed a sinking fund could be formed that would soon enable the city to wipe out its indebtedness.

The city of Fort Worth is bankrupt because her valuable franchises have been given away, and we will have the debt hanging on our necks so long as we are a municipality, and the practice of giving away franchises is not stopped. We ought to stop this foolishness by commencing with the Armstrong franchise."

Asks for Defeat

In concluding Mr. Orr said that he hoped the citizens of Fort Worth would vote down the proposition next Tuesday and that hereafter when corporations came asking franchises from Fort Worth they should come with their pocketbooks in their hands.

McCARTHY SUPPORTS THE REFERENDUM

A. H. McCarty, speaking against the Armstrong franchise, said in part:

"The vital principle in our government, the principle that places us as the franchise of the nation of the world, is the franchise—the right to vote.

"Our institutions are based on the suffrage and the perpetuity of free government depends upon the use, so to speak, of this privilege. Rome conquered the world as a republic, as an empire she perished. As an American citizen I shall with delight every law that extends our liberty, and shall oppose with all the power I possess every attempt to abridge our rights.

"For the past fifteen years I have earnestly advocated the referendum, because it is in the direction of more freedom and because through it popular government is made possible.

Tribute to Powell.

"While speaking of the referendum, I wish to pay tribute to the father of the referendum in Fort Worth, to the man who has done more than any other toward giving us a government of the people by the people for the people."

That man is Thomas Powell, our present mayor, and long may he live and prosper.

May Be Repealed.

"Right here I want to sound a note of warning. I say to you now that this privilege given us by the last legislature must be carefully guarded, for I know that already there is a movement on foot to attempt at the next session of the legislature to deprive us of the right of self-government. 'Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty.'

"Watch your candidates for the legislature and do not vote for any man who does not publicly pledge himself to defend the referendum.

Franchises Discussed.

"Our purpose here tonight is to discuss the two franchises that are to be voted on, the first one next Tuesday and the other Sept. 12. The first is known as the Armstrong franchise and the other as the Light Franchise."

Armstrong Petition Discussed at Mass Meeting

MEASURE IS ANALYZED

One Defender for Ordinance Appears—Dollar Gas Is Called "Hot Air"

The last mass meeting of citizens to hear the Armstrong franchise discussed was held at the city hall auditorium last night. It was not largely attended, but the speakers were enthusiastic and were given from twenty to forty minutes each in which to discuss the matter.

Some of them branched out into a discussion of municipal ownership and its advantages to the people.

H. Pangburn was called to the platform and announced the object of the meeting, after which Alderman E. P. Maddox was made chairman. He said he was not a parliamentarian, but was interested in the outcome of the question before the meeting and hoped that business would characterize the deliberations.

He said that these questions have in the past been passed upon by the city council, but that in the election next Tuesday the voters would be privileged to cast their ballots individually on the question.

Chairman Maddox then introduced Judge J. E. Martin, who delivered an address upon local autonomy, opposing state power over city governments.

Orr Declares Gift Is Being Sought

William Orr followed Judge Martin. He said the question of granting the Armstrong franchise is one of the most vital that has ever been before the people of Fort Worth; that he is bitterly opposed to it because the company asks the city to donate a franchise that is worth from $40,000 to $50,000 without agreeing to pay a single cent for it.

He said he further opposed it because there is no guarantee that the Armstrong company will do as it says it will do. He said that he is in favor of municipal ownership of public utilities and gave comparisons by referring to various cities that are under this system.

How to Clear Debt

Mr. Orr then referred to the heavy indebtedness of Fort Worth and said that had the city received something in the past for her franchises there would be no necessity of this great debt of $1,800,000, nor would her citizens be forced to pay a tax of $1.75 on the $100 valuation.

The debt, he said, is out of all reason and not consistent with good government.

"The stock in trade of a city is its franchises," he said, "and if you give them all away then you are without stock. If a franchise tax is assessed a sinking fund could be formed that would soon enable the city to wipe out its indebtedness.

STATEMAKERS TALK OF WOMAN SUFFRAGE

Constitutional Convention Delegates Divided Over Question of Franchise

Special to The Telegram.
MUSKOGEE, I. T., Aug. 26.—Members of the constitutional committee of the separate statehood convention meet here Tuesday to receive reports of all sub-committees. The judiciary and apportionment committees will make reports in detail while the others only in abstract. There is some agitation over woman's suffrage, but it is improbable any attention will be given this feature, though some favor giving the women the power of ballot on school matters. Advocates of separate statehood are more confident today than ever that the state will be admitted. This is due to a telegram received here, but from what source no one seems to know, though it is believed to be dated Washington. The report of the committee on apportionment will deal largely with area, resources, both agricultural and mineral, the wealth of several counties, population, railroads, etc. It will be a splendid exposition of conditions in Indian Territory and strong argument for separate statehood. The prohibition element contends that the cause would be injured by single statehood, and the only way for the government to carry out its treaty obligations with the Indians is to grant the petition for an independent state.

TOLSTOI SEES FAILURE IN PEACE CONFERENCE

Says Reference of Important Matters to Rival Rulers Defeats Object

(Special Cable to The Telegram—Copyright, 1905, by Bennett's Service.)
PARIS, Aug. 26.—In a letter on the Russia-Japan peace conference which has just been published here, Count Leo Tolstoy expresses his lack of faith in the efficacy of conferences of the kind as long as every matter of importance is referred to the two rulers, who in the first place are responsible for the war.

The letter, which shows that the old philosopher is a bitter enemy of patriotism and government, is as follows: "Patriotism today is the cruel tradition of an out-lived period which exists not merely by its inertia, but because the governments and ruling classes are aware that their power only, but their very existence depends upon it, excite and maintain it among the people persistently both by cunning and violence.

"Patriotism today is like a scaffolding which was useful once to raise the walls of the building, but which, though it prevents the only obstacle to the house being inhabited, is none the less retained because its existence is of profit to certain persons. Patriotism is at the bottom of all wars, the present as well as all before. Hostile relations between friendly people are evoked by the governments under its aspect in order to exhibit their act to their neighbors. But reasonable people settle their differences by argument, persuasion and by referring the decision of the question to other reasonable persons. So the nations are beginning to act today, so we see them even at this very moment, though in a stumbling manner, leaving the last decision in the hands of the very governments that provoked the war. The Russians and Japanese that subordinate themselves to a government cannot be reasonable because this subordination is in itself a sign of a lack of reason. Now how can we speak of reasonableness of men who promise in advance to accomplish everything, including murder, that the government, mikado or czar, may command? Men who accept such obligations as resigning authority themselves to anything that may be prescribed to them in St. Petersburg or Tokio cannot be considered reasonable and the governments can be less considered reasonable. This is why peace between nations cannot be attained by reasonable means by convention, by arbitration and so forth as long as the subordination of the people to the government continues. But unless the people themselves will continue to exist as long as patriotism exists because all governmental authority is founded on patriotism, that is, on the readiness of people to subordinate themselves to authority in order to defend their nation, country or state from dangers which are supposed to threaten."

"Those who preach peace by arbitration argue thus: Two animals cannot divide their prey otherwise than by fighting, as is also the case with children, savages and savage nations. But reasonable people settle their differences by argument, persuasion and by referring the decision of the question to other reasonable persons. So the nations are beginning to act today, so we see them even at this very moment, though in a stumbling manner, leaving the last decision in the hands of the very governments that provoked the war. SAN ANTONIO POLICE GET NO ICE WATER

Mayor Refuses to Pay for Cooling Chunks While Coppers Sweat Under Brassy Sun

Special to The Telegram.
SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Aug. 26.—San Antonians have had a taste of hot weather the last week that has made them pine for the nipping blasts of a northern. They console themselves by reading the heat records of other Texas cities and by talking about the cool breeze at night, but even the night breeze on several occasions has deserted them. The heat and drought are having a bad effect on cotton, which is shedding its leaves to the ground. No ice for Policemen.
No matter how hot it is, the commission muddle we have with us always. The latest act of the mayor is his refusal to pay for ice for the police department. The policemen at headquarters now have to either drink water as it comes from the faucet at 70 degrees or lie themselves to some third party to quench the fire. A committee of citizens has taken upon itself the task of bringing about a settlement of the dispute between the mayor and the commission, but there is very little chance of success crowning its endeavors. Their proposition is that the mayor take one department and the commission the other and that the men in both be paid until the matter is finally settled by the courts. The proposition has been laid before the mayor and will be put up to the commis-

WHITE SANITARIUM

Offers Correct Treatment and Absolute Cure for Alcoholic and Drug Addictions

In from five to ten days' time, after all other methods of treating these habits have been tried without success. The methods employed at this institution are correct and thoroughly reliable, and are not to be confounded with "Free Trial Sample," "Home Treatment" or like propositions which are being daily exploited through various mediums. The physicians in charge have made the treatment and cure of alcoholic and drug habits a life-long study, and have originated, developed, and perfected methods for eliminating these addictions that have proven their inestimable value in the very worst cases, and absolute and permanent cures have been effected in every instance. They offer their services on a basis that no other institution can, inasmuch that they propose to give you a careful personal examination, take care of you at their Sanitarium, give you every attention, and pay all of your necessary expenses, yet they will not expect you to pay one cent until you are thoroughly satisfied that you are soundly and permanently cured. There can be no fairer proposition than this; then why not take active steps today toward ridding yourself of these terrible addictions?

Center Building and Wings completed, End Rooms to be Added.

To Whom It May Concern:
It gives me profound pleasure to state that the White Sanitarium for the cure of whiskey and morphine is located near my institution and that I am thoroughly familiar with the good work being done there for unfortunate ones. They are speedily and permanently cured, as I have in numerous instances observed. I regard the method used there as the most perfected one of the times. It is quick, safe, efficient, and permanent.

After being firm the greater part of the session there was a radical change near the end with short selling on a volume scale and stop loss selling in great measure for account of early buyers. The price of September wheat declined 1 5-8c from its highest point, and at the close after 3-8c reaction showed a net decline for the day of 7-8c. September sold from 81c down to 78 3-8c, reacting and closed at 79 3-4c. December closed at 81½¢ to 81 5-8c, after selling as high as 82½¢, as low as 81 3-8c. Corn was generally firm, but trading was light and prices did not fluctuate outside of a narrow range. Firmness of the earlier half of the session evaporated when wheat began to fall so rapidly and September old and new were the chief sufferers. The range of September was from 54 5-8c down to 53 3-8c, closing at 53 3-4c. December closed at the bottom, 45 5-8c. The highest was 45 7-8c. Oats were strong and active at the outset, but later became quiet but firm. Only a moderate trade was transacted. September sold from 25 7-8¢ to 26 1-8c, closing at 26c. December sold down from 26 3-4c to 27c, closing at the low price of 26 3-4c.

BULLS IN CONTROL OF COTTON MARKET

Dry Weather Throughout the Week Has Helped Maintain High Price Level

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—Bull speculation has been in control of the cotton market all the week with the high points touched on Thursday, when October sold at 11.05c; December at 11.15c and January at 11.24c or 72 to 82 points above the low level of a week ago. News favoring the bull side has included a slight improvement on spot demand and the continued dry hot weather in the southwest which with hardly a break has continued for the last three weeks with temperature during the middle of many days ranging from 100 to 105. The bulls still had the weather to rely upon this morning, for continued pessimistic crop reports came in from Texas, while the reports of Bradstreet's and the Chronicle were essentially bullish in tone. Practically the whole mass of news was in fact of a nature to give the bulls courage in their campaign for a still higher level of prices than has yet been reached, a campaign which the general public seems to regard as purely speculative, but which it recognizes undoubtedly as being in progress. Little attention was paid today to the Liverpool cables, which were one point lower than due on last night's close here. WHEAT CLOSES LOWER

LANE WILL ENTER LEGISLATIVE RACE

Issues Letter of Acceptance to Petition to Become County Candidate

W. P. Lane of this city has decided to become a candidate for state legislature following the petition asking him to do so, as announced in The Telegram. He has issued a letter announcing his purpose as follows: "I am in receipt of your very kind and courteous request asking me to submit my name to the next democratic county primary as a candidate for the office of representative in the legislature of the state of Texas from Tarrant county..."

WRONG SORT Perhaps Plain Old Meat, Potatoes and Bread May Be Against You for a Time.

A change to the right kind of food can lift one from a sick bed. A lady in Weldon, Ill., says: "Last spring I became bed-fast with severe stomach trouble accompanied by sick headache. I got worse and worse until I became so low I could scarcely retain any food at all, although I tried every kind. I had become completely discouraged, had given up all hope and thought I was doomed to starve to death. One day my husband trying to find something I could retain brought home some Grape-Nuts. To my surprise the food agreed with me, digested perfectly and without distress. I began to gain strength at once, my flesh (which had been flabby) grew firmer, my health improved in every way, and every day, and in a very few weeks I gained 20 pounds in weight. There's a reason. Grape-Nuts so well that for four months I ate no other food, and always felt as well satisfied after eating as if I had sat down to a fine banquet. I had no return of the miserable sick stomach nor of the headaches that I used to have when I ate other food. I am now a well woman, doing all my own work again, and feel that life is worth living. Grape-Nuts food has been a godsend to my family; it surely saved my life and my two little boys have thriven on it wonderfully." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. There's a reason. that if elected I will use every legitimate means within my power to apply provide for the indigent Confederate soldier. This applies to the maintenance of the Confederate Home as well as Confederate pensions. If this is not the predominant sentiment in Tarrant county I do not want to be the representative. While this call came to me unsolicited, yet I am profoundly grateful to my many friends who signed the petition and am especially gratified at the very complimentary language in which it is expressed. "I take this means of also making public acknowledgment of my grateful appreciation of the cordial endorsement given me by the Third Ward Democratic Club. Respectfully, W. P. LANE."

RAILROAD RUMBLING

As a result of the recent cloudburst at Taos, Colo., near Trinidad, Thursday, the Denver train that should have reached Fort Worth Friday afternoon at 5:20 o'clock did not get here until Saturday morning at 11 o'clock. The connection with the Colorado and Southern, which line was badly washed out by the flood of water, was missed, causing the delay. There were fourteen people who lost their lives in the storm. All were Austrians and Italians, who were employed in the coal mines. The washout on the Colorado and Southern was a severe one, but trains were moving on schedule Saturday.

SWEENEY HERE

Brazos Valley Official Returns from South Texas M. Sweeney, general manager of the Trinity and Brazos Valley line, the connecting link in the Yoakum Gulf line system, reached this city Saturday night from South Texas, where he has been looking after matters in connection with the extensions of the line from Mexia. It is rumored plans are on foot for another extension of the line into the rich pine regions of East Texas.

Queen City Lodge will confer the rank of Knight on three esquires at the Monday night meeting.

AUDITORIUM PLAN MEETS WITH FAVOR

Combination With the Market House Is Found Successful in Many Other Cities

Further meeting of council committee to whom was referred the recommendation of Mayor Powell that action be taken by the city looking to the support of the movement for the establishment of a permanent farmers' market in this city is expected to be held the first of this week. Report will be made to the city council Friday night. Under the general offer which the council is considering ground west of the market place would be impossible building is erected at a cost of not less than $15,000 and additional land for a market square is purchased adjoining the site. On all sides the plan of combining the Auditorium and market house suggested at the first meeting of farmers and citizens at the Board of Trade several months ago is meeting with favor. By this plan alone, it is urged, the Auditorium can be made self-sustaining. Kansas City has been pointed to as unsuccessful in maintaining an Auditorium alone, the additional lesson of a destructive fire that would have been impossible with other use by which there was some one constantly in all parts of the building, heightening the effect of the lesson. Indianapolis, on the other hand, it is pointed out, has made the Auditorium a success by combination with a market place. The rent of stalls maintains the building, giving the city also the advantage of the fine market. Complaint that it would be unpleasant to have vegetables or other odorous things left in the ground floor of the building has been fully met in that city. All stalls are raised above the cement floor covering the entire ground and at the close of market each day the entire floor is flooded, leaving it spotlessly clean. Heavy advantage in reduced insurance rates is also reported as being secured by the combination plan. A full-sized block, it is being urged, with ample ground around it for the use of farmers' teams. Reports of building cost in San Antonio and other places are being secured and it is believed the example set in other cities that have tried the combination plan successfully will result in its adoption in this city.

IN THE COURTS

DAMAGE SUITS FILED Z. Davis has filed a damage suit against the Northern Texas Traction company in the district court. The petition alleges that a car of the defendant company ran into a wagon being driven on Missouri avenue Aug. 8 by the plaintiff, while exceeding the speed limit within the city limits; that the horses and wagon were damaged to the extent of $735, for which sum judgment is asked. J. R. Hinson, in a petition for damages against the Northern Texas Traction company, alleges that he suffered much physical pain by being discharged at a wrong station while riding from Dallas on the Interurban. He alleges that on June 5 last he bought a ticket to stop 17, but the conductor carried him on to stop 19, and he was forced to walk back to stop 17. Damages in the amount of $1,000 are asked. Damages in the sum of $10,000 are asked of the Rock Island railway et al. by William Stewart, aged 29 years, who alleges he was personally injured July 7 last by being pushed off a moving Rock Island train while traveling from Rush Springs, I. T., to Fort Worth. Stewart alleges that by permission he was riding in a baggage car when the porter, without cause, assaulted him as the train was nearing Comanche, I. T., shoving him through an open door. He alleges he struck on his head and shoulders and was rendered unconscious and that his face and body were badly bruised and lacerated. COUNTY COURT CASES Following cases were filed in the county court Saturday: Harry Brown, theft; J. C. Kyle, abusive language; John Davis, aggravated assault; Bill Turpin, disturbing the peace; Charles Caldwell, pistol. DISTRICT COURT CASES Following cases were filed in the district court Saturday: W. P. Kruckman against W. B. Carson et al., debt and foreclosure. J. M. Wallis against Ellen Wallis, divorce. Mrs. Pearl Bowman against John Bowman, divorce. DEPUTY RETURNS John Kaiser, office deputy under Sheriff Honea, has returned from Austin, where he went on business. He turned over to the local officers of Austin a negro, Davis, and also made a settlement with the comptroller for the months of April and May. RECORD OF BIRTHS To Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Painter, of near Mansfield, a boy. To Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Middleton of near Mansfield, a boy. To Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Brooks of Birdville, a boy. To Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Pell of near Mansfield, twins, boy and girl. MARRIAGE LICENSE Fred Kreger and Miss Retta Mahandoo. KAISER WILL CRACK BOTTLE OF FIZZ When Big New Fast Hamburg American Liner is Launched Next Tuesday (Special Cable to The Telegram—Copyright, 1905, by Hearst News Service.) BERLIN, Aug. 26.—The greatest passenger steamer ever built in Germany will be launched Tuesday in the presence of the kaiser, the kaiserin and four English admirals. Augusta Victoria is the name she will be christened when the kaiser himself breaks the bottle on her prow. The steamer, built for the Hamburg-American Steamship Company, is expected to break all records between New York and Plymouth. The Augusta Victoria has been in the hands of the ship builders since last November. She was then of only moderate capacity. Since then she has been split in two and had sixty-four feet added to her length. The jubilee celebrations of the Hamburg-American lines are expected to take place aboard the Augusta Victoria.

GREENWALL'S OPERA HOUSE

All arrangements for the opening of the season at the Greenwall Opera House are now complete. The decorators, painters, electricians and other tradesmen are busy touches to their work and when the doors are opened next Monday night the public will behold as pretty and complete a theater as there is in Texas. During the summer season the theater has been and up-to-date scenery has been painted and the public will have the pleasure of seeing the several attractions surrounded by stage settings and scenic effects that are destined to make the performance complete in every respect. The first attraction of the season will be the Albert Taylor Stock Company, an organization that has become a household word with Texas theatergoers. The company will make its first appearance for this season tomorrow night and will present as its initial bill the sensational comedy, "The Wages of Sin," a play that will give the artists in the cast an opportunity to display their best dramatic talent. In announcing his stock company for the season Mr. Taylor takes special pride in presenting an organization of players that will in dramatic merit surpass any popular-priced organization. Walter McMillan, a conscientious actor, who has made many friends among the theatergoers of this section, will appear at the head of the company. Mr. McMillan will make every effort to keep the name of the Taylor Stock Company at the top of all popular-priced organizations. A very choice list of plays has been selected for the weeks' repertoire, and amusement-lovers can anticipate a delightful treat. At each performance high-class vaudeville features are introduced by a coterie of attractive artists headed by the clever trio, the famous Keely sisters, who alone are a whole show. Tomorrow night one lady is admitted free with each 50-cent ticket purchased before 5 p. m. The sale of seats will be open all day at the box office.

Greenwall's opera house has been largely refurbished in a renovated and anticipation of the season's business. New carpets have been laid throughout, the walls and floors repainted, some attractive fresco work done in the lobby, and a large supply of new scenery purchased. A new drop curtain has also been purchased, so that interiorally the house will be practically new when the curtain goes up tomorrow night.

TO THE TELEGRAM

MUNICIPAL SANITATION

To The Telegram.

Since there has been an airing so to speak concerning the action of the council recently, the writer would offer a few suggestions.

First, it is a recognized fact that the council had no authority to act as it did until the city had been declared a health resort. It is not a matter of mere health, but of the condition we have at home. The writer is a physician and even a village doctor knows there are many cases of typhoid fever in this city. Where does it come from? It is a known fact that the disease is introduced through the water supply. It is a known fact that Fort Worth has a single case, when we have the best water in the world? Will we not have to admit that it will be distributed through the milk supply or from local unsanitary communities? There are a number of open toilets scattered all over the city in the residence portion where the sewer system passes right by the door. Some of these places are kept clean, or comparatively so (done as clean), while others are allowed to accumulate month in and month out. Is the police department taking care of this? Fort Worth should be a city entirely without typhoid, as well as many other conditions found here—all caused by lax sanitation.

The writer, being a friend of Dr. Barrer, though he does not believe that it had a chance he would see that this city was as it should be. The council should place at his disposal the men and such paraphernalia as he needs and the chief of police compel his orders to be executed, instead of taking away anything. The writer has lived in several cities in this state, as well as other states and notes that the efforts at sanitation compare to even towns of one-fourth its size are mere pretenses.

There is never a garbage wagon on the streets, as in other places (save when the street gang is out occasionally). Everything is allowed to be dumped in the back alleys and there it lays. There should be no toilet above ground, at least where there is a sewer system, and as fast as the system is extended it should be made a necessity thereto.

Look in almost any of the alleys of the business part of town and it is even worse than the residence portion. Take a peep into the stables of the city and see the filth allowed to accumulate there. What are the council, the city physician and even the police for?

Is Fort Worth going to lag when she might be the cleanest and most healthful city in the entire southwest? Show to the world what a clean healthy place we have (when it is clean); show the stranger how low our death rate will then be and see how fast it will fill up from all over the country. We have churches, schools and other things that our people are proud to point to, but the greatest thing we should have, could have and must have we have not. This is not intended to offend, but to

SUFFERED YEARS WITH COMPLICATED PELVIC DISEASES

Hopeless Invalid Women Restored to Health and Usefulness By Pe-ru-na

General Debility, Nervousness, Backache, Kidney Troubles, Female Weakness, Are All Symptoms of Pelvic Catarrh.

Pe-ru-na Is An Unfailing Remedy For All of These Cases.

If the reader will take the pains to glance over this article, it will be noticed that three American women make frank, unequivocal statements concerning Peruna.

They were chronic and hopeless victims of pelvic catarrh. Now, they are healthy, happy and useful women.

The symptoms of catarrhal weakness, systemic catarrh and female catarrh are very numerous. No two cases are exactly alike. The symptoms most frequently met are general debility—kidney trouble—loss of flesh—bad complexion—tired and worn-out all the time—aches and pains—unable to stand long at a time or to walk any distance—periodical cramps—displacement of pelvic organs—ovarian troubles—throbbing—troubling—flushes of heat—nervous—headaches—chronic dyspepsia—constipation—insomnia—irritability—easily frightened—brown spots before the eyes—dizziness—roaring in the head, etc.

Any one or more of these symptoms mean that the victim has chronic systemic catarrh which is undermining all the bodily functions and weakening every nerve center.

Such women are liable to become bedfast, or, are induced to submit to some surgical operation in complete desperation.

Operations Unnecessary.

A short course of Peruna is sufficient to convince any woman in such a condition that there is a remedy that is able to come to her relief.

Thousands of women have already discovered this, but, there are tens of thousands of others who need to know it.

Any woman who reads these lines and feels that her case is described in whole or in part by the above symptoms should lose no time in giving Peruna a fair trial.

Those requiring special advice should write to Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio, when they will receive a prompt reply to their letters, free of charge.

Eight Years of Pain—Praises Pe-ru-na for Her Recovery.

Mrs. L. Mahaffey, 195 Seventh street, Portland, Ore., Chairman St. Patrick's Circle, writes:

"I suffered for eight years with pro-lapsus uteri and a painful, inflamed condition, which at times compelled me to go to bed, as I was unable to stand on my feet.

"I tried different remedies which brought only temporary relief until a friend told me how she had been cured of ovarian trouble by the use of Peruna and advised me to try it. I used it for two months with surprising results."

Sick Thirteen Years—Well Woman Today—Thanks to Pe-ru-na.

Miss Louise Carr, 1030 S. New Jersey street, Indianapolis, Ind., writes:

"I have had my share of sickness, for thirteen years I have not known what it was to draw a well breath, and it is thanks to Peruna that I am well today. I suffered with general weakness, female complaint and severe kidney trouble. Peruna cured me."

Suffered Three Years—Recommend Peruna.

Mrs. A. L. Orrison, 1035 E. Franklin street, Richmond, Va., writes:

"After three months' trial of your remedy, I am cured of painful menstruation."

"After suffering untold agony for three years, and spending over a hundred dollars and finding no relief, whatever, I began taking Peruna under the advice which you so kindly gave me. I shall never cease to be thankful for this, or recommend Peruna to all women whom I find suffering from the above ailment."

MAYOR POWELL TO RUN FOR CONGRESS

City Executive Decides to Make Race for Representative in the Eleventh District

Mayor T. J. Powell of this city Saturday made official announcement of his candidacy to become representative of the Twelfth congressional district of Texas.

Mayor Powell has for some time been mentioned as a probable candidate for the democratic nomination, but up until Saturday refrained from any declaration upon the subject. His announcement with his well known campaign power and force is expected to inject a large amount of interest into the campaign, which already has admitted candidate Congressman O. W. Gillespie, the present representative, and O. S. Lattimore of this city, former county attorney. A number of other names have been mentioned as those of unofficial candidates.

Mayor Powell is already a favorite with the farmers and laboring men, which in addition to his popularity in the city is counted upon to make his candidacy a strong one.

T. J. Powell was born in Knoxville, Tenn., in 1858 and came to Texas in 1882, settling at once in this city, where he became city editor of the Fort Worth Gazette. He was highly successful as a newspaper man and in a short time was admitted to the bar, engaging in the practice of his profession in partnership with W. F. Pendleton and H. M. Chapman. He was elected city attorney in 1889, serving in this office four years. He was elected mayor in 1900 and is now serving his third term at the head of the city government.

As an executive officer he has made a fine record, many notable city improvements being made during his term and a new financial plan greatly reducing the burden of the city inaugurated. It was also largely through his efforts that the referendum clauses were incorporated in the city charter at the last session of the legislature. Representing the city upon the occasion of visits of noted persons and assemblages, he has made a record for himself as a tactful and pleasing public speaker, while his addresses on various occasions have been marked by a force and freedom of idea that have caused them wide publicity.

The Twelfth congressional district comprises Tarrant, Johnson, Parker, Hood, Erath, Comanche and Somervell counties.

NEGRO BOYS HELD ON MURDER CHARGE

Examining Trial in Death of Robert Porter Set for Monday

Held as prisoners in the Tarrant county jail with the charge of murder written opposite their names are two negro lads, Felix Reese, 14 years old, and Arthur Palmer, three years his junior. Robert Porter, a white boy, 12 years old, as a result of whose death the two negro boys are held, was buried yesterday afternoon. He died late Friday afternoon from a stab wound near the heart, received just as he was about to join his father at the stone yard near the Frisco tracks and Adams street where the senior Porter is employed.

The story of the death of Young Porter and the arrest of the two negro lads is unfolded by the preliminary hearing of the two young prisoners, before Justice C. T. Rowland at 10 o'clock Monday morning.

One version says it was a quarrel over a game of marbles that led to the fatal stabbing. Another report says the two negro lads and the little white boy quarreled over the division of some candy.

What the true facts are probably will not be known until the preliminary hearing of the two young prisoners, before Justice C. T. Rowland at 10 o'clock Monday morning.

Went to Meet Father

Twelve-year-old Robert Porter, the victim of the tragedy, lived with his father in Riverside, east of the city. The father works in the stone yards near the Frisco shops in Adams street. It was the boy's daily custom to drive to Fort Worth late every afternoon and take his father home.

Friday afternoon he drove into the city as usual. He reached North and Vine streets near where some negro lads were playing. Young Reese and Palmer appear to have been among the boys.

Stories Are Conflicting

From that point the stories of what happened next begin to conflict. Both negro boys seem to agree that they threw stones at Young Porter's buggy and that he, getting out of the vehicle, picked up a stone to throw at them.

Then a knife gleamed in somebody's hand, young Porter ran about fifty feet and then fell, face downward in the dusty street, dying almost instantly.

Passersby picked him up. The father who had been at work but a short distance from the scene of his son's tragic death, was summoned, and the body was taken to the Robertson undertaking rooms.

Police Arrest Negroes

Felix Reese was arrested almost immediately after the stabbing of young Porter and the Palmer boy was arrested later. Both were taken before Chief Maddox and closely questioned, but their stories were so varying, both were held. Yesterday afternoon they were transferred to the custody of the county.

Inquest Testimony Withheld

Justice Rowland began an inquest Friday afternoon and continued it yesterday.

The newest developed facts to the satisfaction of the officers as to who did the stabbing, but until the preliminary hearing has been held, no definite statement will be made public. However, both boys are being held on complaints made by County Attorney Jeff D. McLean, alleging murder.

The officials were busy all Saturday hunting up evidence in the interest of the state.

Should the jury which will try the case find the defendants guilty, there will be no capital punishment, as under the laws of Texas persons under the age of 17 years cannot be executed. Should the jury find the defendants guilty and assess their punishment at more than five years, the punishment would be confinement in the reformatory.

LABOR NOTES

MEETINGS THIS WEEK

Sunday—Stationary Firemen.
Monday—Machinists and Labor Day committee.
Wednesday—Electrical Workers, Carpenters and Plumbers.
Friday—Plasterers.

LABOR DAY

All plans for Labor Day have been practically completed and members of the various organizations in this city are confident the celebration will be the greatest ever held here.

Participation of farmers in the celebration will be a feature of unusual interest, large delegations from this and surrounding counties promising to be here.

A communication received by the Labor Day committee from Denton announces that members of the Farmers' Union in that county will attend practically in a body, while all locals in this county will be well represented.

Line and order of march as previously announced in The Telegram will be followed. Celebration will take place at Hermann Park, reached by the Stockyards cars on both street railway systems.

STATIONARY FIREMEN

Action regarding the Armstrong franchise to be voted upon Tuesday is expected to be taken at a meeting of stationary firemen to be held at Laor Temple today.

FARMERS' LECTURE

County Lecturer C. A. McMeans of the Farmers' Union has announced a lecture to be held at Riverside Monday night.

ROOSEVELT'S RACE SUICIDE CHARGE IS CONFIRMED

Federal Census Experts Find from Careful Figuring that Fewer and Fewer Children are Being Reared

A Condition Common All Over the United States and Which Since Before the War Has Become More and More Pronounced—The South Doing the Best and the Whites Are More Prolific Than the Negroes

By Gilson Gardner.

Staff Correspondence of The Telegram
WASHINGTON, D. C. Aug. 25.—The charge of "race suicide," which President Roosevelt has laid at the door of the American people, finds confirmation in the figures just made public by the federal census.

Dating from "war times" and before, each year sees fewer children reared in the United States. In some sections the complaint is worse than others, but the condition prevails generally north, south, east and west. And the capital of the nation, Washington, D. C., leads all the rest in the smallness of its proportion of children to "potential motherhood."

The data on this subject was arranged and considered by Prof. Walter F. Wilcox, of Cornell university, who was employed as an expert by the census department, and the conclusions were worked out by him. The reason for the decline is treated by two other experts, Gen. Francis A. Walker and Dr. Jno. S. Billings. Gen. Walker makes an extended argument to show that the influx of foreign population results in a "shock to the population instinct of the natives."

There are no accurate figures to be had on the actual birth rate in the United States; but the proportion of children under 10 or 5 years of age can be found in the various census enumerations which have been taken since 1850, and this gives a clew to the amount of new blood which is being brought into the country by nature's process of reproduction and growth. For purposes of comparison Prof. Wilcox has taken the number of children under 5 years of age, as proportioned to the number of "potential mothers"; that is, of women between 15 and 49 years of age.

At the beginning of the 19th century the children under 10 years of age constituted one-third and at the end, less than one-fourth of the total population. The decline in child rearing may be noted as early as 1810 to 1820. From that date on the decline continues uninterruptedly, but at varying rates. The extent of the decline will appear when it is noted that in 1860 the number of children under 5 years of age to every 1000 "potential mothers" was 635, while in

EMPTY IS THE AMERICAN CRADLE

1900 it was only 474, or only three-fourths as many.

In the following states there has been a steady decline in the proportion of children to mothers since 1850: Maryland, Michigan, Ohio, Illinois, Kentucky and Indiana.

In the following states the decline in the proportionate number of children has been steady since 1860: Delaware, District of Columbia, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Oregon and Colorado; in these states there was a boom in child raising between 1850 and 1860. The proportion increased in that decade. But the boom did not last.

The effects of the civil war are seen in a very considerable decrease in the number of children between 1860 and 1870.

Striking an average for the whole country, of children to potential mothers, it is found that the poorest territory for children is that most thickly populated, and having the greatest material wealth of manufactures and developed farms, namely, the states lying north of the Potomac and Ohio rivers, and east of the Mississippi.

With the one exception of Wisconsin these states are all below the country's average in child production in the last decade. Of the states further west, Colorado, Nevada, California and Oregon were the ones to fall below the average.

Leaving the negro out of consideration, the South is doing very well in raising children, that section being ahead of both the North and most of the far Western states in white children. And even when compared to the negroes, the Southern white, in 1900, was found to be more prolific, showing a larger number of children to the 1000 potential mothers than do the negroes.

After emancipation the negroes showed a great increase in the number of children produced. But for some reason the increase was only temporary, and for the past 40 years the birth rate among the colored people has been on the decline. In 1900 it was less than half the rate shown in 1880, when it was temporarily high. So, if present tendencies continue, the negro race is likely to be crowded out by the whites.

As a general rule more children are raised in the country than in the cities, hardly two-thirds as many being found in the centers of population. The only exceptions to this rule are where a teeming foreign immigration is added to the city, thus adding to the number of children.

The figures show plainly that the country is being populated most rapidly by the children of foreign-born women. A thousand foreign-born women rear 710 children whereas a thousand native-born women rear 410 children. That is the proportion shown by the 1900 figures.

BIG DOINGS AT THE DAYLIGHT STORE DURING THE LAST DAYS OF AUGUST

Once there was a young man who lacked a certain amount of enterprise, but on the other hand he would not refrain from telling what he would like to do. Last night as he stood in the moonlight he said to his best girl: "I can not help but think how much I would like to kiss you." "Well," she replied, "as the poet says, the thought of yesterday is the action of today." That's our motto, too. What we plan to do today, we see to it that it is done tomorrow. Our tomorrow's business will not be conducted as though its results in profits and losses extended no farther than to the latch click at the night's closing. If the store's set policy is adhered to, every sale will be made upon a basis so satisfactory to the patron that it will bring us other sales and other patrons in the days to come. We want only transactions of the pleasant sort, and if the others creep in will you not allow us to undo them? Your money is an evil here if in getting it we have lost your good will. Our store will open tomorrow morning at 8 o'clock with some of the best values that have ever been offered to the people of Fort Worth, and will be on sale all week as long as the lines last.

Pillow Bargains

We've captured a prize this time, and no mistake. Have just received 400 Pillows, and at the prices they are going to be sold at tomorrow it is a very good time for hotels and boarding house keepers to supply themselves with pillows, as they can never be bought at this price again.

(Pardon the Slang)

Is foreign to every sensibility of G. Y. There are no kid-gloved overseers nor $10,000 beauties. If there should sprout in the mind of any salesman or saleslady or anyone else here the idea that because the business has become prosperous and of good proportions, there could be discourtesy, carelessness or insincerity in treatment of patrons, the individual so misguided would be quickly advised to "seek pastures new." This business is "of the people and by the people"; the people have made it and its workers live in fullest consciousness that they are no better nor worse than their fellow mortals.

We are not entitled to, and do not expect, any more of the public's favors than we make ourselves deserving of by careful, faithful and efficient service.

THE TELEGRAM'S SHORT STORY

When the Light Returned

(Copyright, 1905, by the Newspaper Enterprise Association.)

Two young girls sat together in a large room in a boarding house in New York. Twilight was falling on this spring evening, and as they remained silent, save for sobs occasionally from one or the other, the room might have been empty for any signs of life. At length one of the girls raised her hand and said in a choking voice:

"Perhaps we had better look through the desk tonight, Grace."

"Well, we will if you think best," was the answer.

The first speaker arose, lighted a softly-shaded lamp and drew the sofa on which her sister reclined closer to the fireplace. As the light struck the figure it was difficult to distinguish one girl from the other. In both there was the same peculiar large hazel eyes, dark brows and lashes, with a profusion of light hair which fell in soft curls around their faces. Both were fair and very pale and mourning garments were worn by each. Yet a close observer would have seen an expression in Ellen's face which showed firmness and decision of character, while Grace's face told of that winning disposition which rests so confidently upon a stronger nature.

Ellen and Grace Neville, twins, were the only children of Grant Neville, for years one of the wealthiest men in the west. Speculating had been his mania before marriage. When his wife died he had placed his daughters in a fashionable boarding school and himself moved to Daisewille. When they finished school they returned to him and presided over the luxurious home. The love of speculation, like the love of gambling, grows upon its victim, and not content with the bright present in his grasp he strove for a future still brighter. He risked his whole fortune on one of the bubbles of the day and lost all. Arriving with the girls in New York after the crash he had been seized with brain fever and lasted less than two weeks.

It was late that night when the sisters finished their inventory of their father's affairs. Only a small amount of ready money was left in their possession and the future looked very black for them. It would be necessary for them to go to work at once, but what could they do to earn anything like a comfortable living? But try it they must.

The next day they started out to search for something to do, and after many rebuffs and crushing experiences they succeeded in getting some sewing and copying to do in their room. This finished they sought other work and for several weeks existed.

It was a clear, quiet summer morning that Grace awoke to find that she could not see. Her sight had left her suddenly and this new bereavement threatened to deprive them of all hope. Ellen's patience succeeded in bringing the suffering girl to a point where she would listen to reason and she made up her mind to bear the burden and not make it harder for her sister, who must now make a living for two.

Dr. Curtis, a cousin of one of Ellen's music pupils, whom she had secured through the influence of a kind-hearted woman, took an interest in the young teacher and requested to be allowed to examine her sister's eyes.

This examination was productive of good. He found that with a delicate but not dangerous operation sight might be restored, and told the sufferer so. He begged permission to perform this operation himself, urging the value to his profession that would result, and trying to cover their protestations that they would never be able to pay for his services. The task over he placed a bandage upon the eyes and came every day to see how his patient progressed.

During this time Ellen fought with herself the bitterest struggle of her existence. Until he had seen her sister Dr. Curtis had, without one word of love passing between them, won Ellen's warmest esteem and unconsciously this had ripened into love. He had loved her, she believed, but now all this seemed changed. Bound by no words he felt a strong interest in Ellen, which doubtless would have led him to woo her had he not seen her sister. Ellen knew that she could still win him; that he stood between her and Grace, admiring both yet loving neither as yet.

"We may take this off today," said Dr. Curtis one morning, touching the bandage on Grace's eyes.

"Wait till Ellen comes," said Grace. "I want her to be here."

"Hers shall be the first face you see, if you desire it," said Dr. Curtis in a low, meaning tone.

Grace colored and there was a little nervous quiver around her mouth, but she did not answer.

Ellen came soon after and started on finding Dr. Curtis with her sister. "My patient would not have this removed till you came," he said. "Shall I take it off now?" he asked Grace.

"Yes," said Grace. "Come close to me, Ellen. I want to see you."

In another instant the bandage fell to her lap. One quick glance at Ellen and then she turned to Dr. Curtis.

"I see! I see!" she cried. "Oh, how can I ever thank you or show my gratitude" and she started up, stretching both hands to him.

He took them in his own and drew her close to him, saying: "Nothing less than the power to call you my own can thank me." Her fair head fell on his bosom and he bent over her. Ellen crept away, bitterly conscious that neither of them missed her. The sacrifice was made.

HOG ORDINANCE TO BE ENFORCED

Test Case Under New Regulation Is Tried in North Fort Worth

In the North Fort Worth city court Saturday a test of the new ordinance prohibiting hog pens to be maintained upon private premises was heard, the result being that a fine of $1 and costs was imposed upon J. D. Echols, a resident of Ellis avenue.

The case was watched with interest by the citizens, some of whom did not think a fine would be imposed.

Waterworks Progress

The system of water works for the city of Fort Worth is nearing completion. The McQuatters Plumbing and Machine Company has the contract and says it will have the same completed in full, with entire plant ready for work by Oct. 1.

Pipe laying is now completed, with the exception of about three thousand feet on Central avenue and Twenty-fourth street. The tank is about half finished at the present time.

Notes

J. A. Bartlett and family are spending a week at Mineral Wells.

The Fort Worth Telephone Company is extending a phone line across Rosen Heights from east to west and there is to be a general improvement in the system and service. The line will extend directly west about one mile from the boundary of North Fort Worth and there are a number of branch lines that will connect the residences of the heights and make the service more satisfactory.

NEW ROOM FOR EAGLES

Work Commenced Saturday on Building to Be Used

Excavations for the new business house of Messrs. Polk, Smith and Thrasher at the southeast corner of Sixth and Rusk streets, were commenced Saturday morning. There is a large force of laborers at work. The building will face Rusk street and will have a frontage of fifty feet. It will be 100 feet deep, three stories high and will cost approximately $20,000.

The second story is to be used by the Eagles' lodge. Stores will occupy the ground floors.

COUNTY SCHOOL REPORT

Superintendent Ramsey Preparing Annual Statement

County Superintendent Ramsey is preparing his annual report of school matters in Tarrant county and will complete it in about two weeks' time. It will then be forwarded to the state comptroller.

It will include the enrollment of pupils, both whites and negroes, in the Ninety-seventh district and will also show the amount of money received and disbursed by the trustees of the different districts.

The report, Mr. Ramsey says, will be one of the most satisfactory made to the comptroller from this county in a long time.

WANT RESTRICTIONS REMOVED

ARDMORE, I. T., Aug. 26.—Representative of the United States Indian agent here is taking applications for the removal of restrictions on Indian lands. Three thousand applications have been made but only a small percentage has been granted so far.

BILLY TAGGART POOR WITNESS FOR DEFENSE

Story of His Relations With Major's Wife Leaves Bad Impression

GOT SUIT OF CLOTHES Also Letters and Two Drafts for $50 Each—Testimony Torments Relative

WOOSTER, Ohio, Aug. 26.—It is some- thing significant that a contention begin- ning in a grocer's wagon. Socially it is a long way from the parade ground to the chess box and thoughts that spring at the drum's alarm are not popularly be- lieved to be found in a mackerel's kiln. The tramping away of light or die for one's native land cannot be compared to facing the gossip of a little town.

Here in the beginning of the end of the Taggart trial with its geographical limita- tions erased and its inmate lands of allega- tion, many matters appeal to even the most vagrant. There have been re- flected in the mirror of justice, pictures that pain and please and slight that sear and soothe as they are received. Light and darkness checked every shift- ing scene from fair faces radiant with tearful caresses, the logical legacy of the soldiers' wives left behind to com- mand, to the languor of vice, rolling up destiny like an opium pellet to be de- stroyed at a single puff.

Fortune, honor, jealousy, hatred, in- trigues, divisions, love, and domestic dis- tress, have shimmered in the caudron about which witches have reeled in the dance of the damned, at post hop or cotillon.

The great genius worth thousands have been dulled by the fine china and the fur purchased from Chinese merchants at Shanghai have degenerated into the plush jacket of rural indifference. From cut glass punch bowls where the blue and gold balanced up with Parisian creations to whisky by the quart in a rented cottage, is a descent equalled in the physical world only by the blue heron, but the records of the Taggart trial contain a great deal of all these things.

Taggart Leaves Bad Impression. When Billy Taggart, the alleged lover of Grace Taggart, at Orville, left the stand today he left with a bad impres- sion. A gloom settled over the defensive, for behind Billy was the explanation re- ceiving him of a suit of clothes from Mrs. Taggart from California. He admitted he got them and that he still has them. He admitted having had a ring and a watch, but he said he had sold them. He told them at the time it was worth $500 and belonged to Mrs. Taggart. He admitted having inserted an advertise- ment in a country paper offering $50 re- ward for its recovery. That paper's ad- vertising rates were exposed when Billy said today he paid 15 cents for the inser- tion, which covered about four squares. He said when at bay, that he had really paid only a dollar for the ring. This latter statement, being true, Billy is placed in the position of being too ec- centric for normal maturity and being false, would let the cat out of the bag. The prosecution hopes to greatly benefit by his testimony. He admitted that his under- wear may have gone to the laundry with that of Mrs. Taggart at the Akron hotel, giving the wrong address. His ex- planation of this was weak and unconvinc- ing. He talked freely about the pair of No. 5 shoes Mrs. Taggart bought for him at Akron, saying he could not get his shoes at Orville. He claimed to have repaired her for them, but could not fix the date of payment.

Harsh and out of tune was his testi- mony taken from him as the dentist takes his tooth and out of line with afternoon calls and midday courtesies to which Mrs. Taggart has been used.

Cashed Two Drafts. Finally, after deep digging, he admitted he had received a letter from Mrs. Taggart while she was in California and had cashed two drafts of $50 each which came from her bank. Hubert of the Corn Exchange National bank of Chicago, but which he said was used to pay debts left behind by Mrs. Taggart when she left Orville for Chicago. He denied having received money clandestinely from Mrs. Taggart or that she had been "keep- ing" him.

Out in the sheriff's office sat Mrs. Taggart while these statements were being wrung from Billy. She looked evenly and light-hearted and not wholly con- cerned with the proceedings forty feet away.

Inside the railing sat Major Taggart, his face a study of interest. His eyes flashed an unnatural redness, which as the hours passed deepened into a color that sug- gested mortification. His eyes bulged out and the arteries were swollen in his neck. On the witness stand, another Taggart, a distant relative, looked at him doggedly and dutifully, occasionally rubbing his hand lightly across his mouth, his thin, sleek hair oiled and combed back.

Here was the dancing captain who had shaken hands in the Santiago trenches with officers of the Sixth over their own head. In the language of Mrs. Charles Wright Miner, wife of the brigadier gen- eral who testified a few days ago, the slaughter that swept the Sixth at San- tiago softened the hearts it did not still and for a time obliterated social iniquities in the line. Here was a picture worthy of some master hand—a man, who in shot and shell could not be daunted, but who was seemingly crucified by the testimony of a civilian whose vanity had been appeased by a dollar diamond ring and who is alleged to have said upon re- ceipt of a ten dollar note that he would never have to work again. The high call- ing of Major Taggart's relative had been to carry coal and kindling and he earned $9 a week as a clerk, but that was in the days when he used to work.

About this time Attorney John Adair, who had been trying to pass for the defense, was aided by that old sol- dier, Captain J. B. Taylor, to quit "but- ting in" and a word was issued.

Mrs. Taggart's Reputation. The session until noon was taken up in continued examination of Wm. Taggart, after whom witnesses testified to Mrs. Taggart's exemplary conduct since she came to Wooster, thirteen months ago. These witnesses, good citizens of this city, were in no opinion as to Major Taggart's wife. Her reputation since she came here was by them shown to be faultless. Among them were Judge and Mrs. John C. McClaren, neighbors of the Hallors, where Mrs. Taggart and her chil- dren, together with the nurse, have made their home since coming here.

William Taggart for two hours denied he had made statements to Orville people regarding Mrs. Taggart's support- ing him.

He said he had not flashed rolls of money at different times at Orville, claiming she had sent it to him.

After received here today from New- port, Ky., is said to contain in- formation relative to communication reported to have passed be- tween him and Judge Smyser, Mrs. Tag- gart's attorney. It seems that Judge Smyser had already obtained Judge Berry's deposition, he pre- ferred for him to come in person and testify regarding this sent Berry a mes- sage asking him to do so. The first mes- sage Judge Berry ignored and Smyser in great wrath wired him again, this time in a more forcible vein, but Judge Berry declined to come or have further to do with the case than by deposition.

In a ruling today on a side issue Judge Eason had occasion to refer to the Tag- gart children and hint of what would fol- low in his decision may be forecast by what he said. The judge told both sides that whatever either Taggart or his wife had been guilty of, the children are in- nocent.

The litigants, said he, can take care of themselves, but the judge will take care of these children, whatever happens. You can rest assured of this fact.

May Take Away Children. It is surmised by some lawyers here that this might indicate that if he ac- cept the judge may take Oliver and Tida- dies from the custody of both. While there is no effort to anticipate the ver- dict of the court this probability was sug- gested by his honor's few but determined words.

Very, most of which are without founda- tion. There is a persistent rumor that Mrs. Taggart and a prominent Wooster man have fallen in love with one another and that soon after the divorce is granted they will be married. Mrs. Taggart, of course, will deny it. The relatives and friends of Mrs. Taggart, who have been for weeks her side, have nearly all gone. Her sister and her husband of Chi- cago have gone to Pittsburg, Mrs. Fannie Saffaron is in Chicago and Dr. and Mrs. Foster are going to Cleveland, Ohio, ear- ly since their departure has for the greater part of the time absented herself from the court room.

To Take Stand Monday. Mrs. Taggart, who was booked to take the stand today, will be called early Mon- day morning.

"I have only the straight story of my life to tell," said she today. "And as there is nothing to conceal, it will be an easy matter to tell it. I do not dread in the least to take the stand. I have something to say in this matter and nat- urally, like all women, I want to say it. I will stand by the side of my mother rather with a feeling of pleasant antici- pation. At present I can say nothing more."

Major Taggart will, as usual, spend the Sunday with Culver at his father's in Orville and as usual Mrs. Taggart and Tiddies will remain here and attend Sab- bath school and church services.

connection to one which virtually means a gift to them of $50,000.

"Of course all this hot air about dollar gas, if the price of oil goes not up, and if this and if that, won't go very far with you. What is to prevent this cor- poration from selling out to another and larger concern and to prevent this corporation to absorb the existing com- pany? Then, again, what is to pre- vent this last monopoly enforcing high priced gas?"

"I couldn't be done at the present, but strange things have occurred in the his- tory of our country. It would cause them some difficulty with the present ad- ministration. There is one of whom we may refer to E. J. Maddox (Cheers). But, in St. Louis and in other large, but not less important cities, such things have been related. Boodiers may come to Fort Worth the same as other large cor- porations.

Will Cause Delay. The granting of this franchise does nothing but to put the city in a position to have implicit faith in municipal ownership (cheers). Twenty-five years further away. And remember one thing, fellow citizens, monopolies are not, as a rule, competitive. Suppose you go to one corporation and try to sell a load of stock; then you go to another for the same purpose—how much difference will you find in the price? (Cheers and laughter.)

"Fellow citizens, it is my earnest hope and I believe that of every right-minded man in Fort Worth, that you all go to the polls Aug. 23 and vote on this ques- tion. If you go and vote, I feel assured that it will be a success."

MANY NEW BUILDINGS AT MINERAL WELLS

Popular Health Resort is Enjoying Steady and Material Growth

Special to The Telegram. MINERAL WELLS, Texas, Aug. 26.— Besides giving permission for the con- struction of two brick and about six- teen cottages in August, the mayor has approved the erection of a $5,000 transfer barn by T. J. Green of the local transfer company. This will be a brick structure and the largest barn of the kind in the state of Texas.

The latest plans for a three-story brick to be erected right away have just been made known. The promoters of this enterprise are Hugh Coleman and Flake Barber and the new build- ing will be erected opposite the pre- sent Hawthorne wells. Present plans indicate that the lower floor is to be a brick structure and the second and third floors bowling alley and the third an elegant dancing pavilion. The concern, as it is incorporated, is to be known as the Hawthorne Athletic Club, and will occupy, 1906, it will ready for occupancy.

Manager Stewart of the Fairfield Inn thinks Mineral Wells is to have hun- dreds of visitors during the winter sea- son. August 1st, he says, here say that their guests for the heated term many of them spoke of returning during the cold months for the benefits of the famous curative waters.

Mineral Wells now boasts of one of the best modern swimming pools in all North Texas. The natatorium is owned and operated by Messrs. Ed Dismukes and Leubetter and is in the block be- hind the summer theater and has run- ning through it three inches of pure fresh water all the while.

All bath houses here report that they have increased their help and still they have been crowded all during the summer hot days. Manager Swann of the Pal-Pinto reports his business doubled in the last thirty days since he bought the establishment.

This fall and winter will see several new buildings put into improvements at the Wells on the various pavilions. Especially are the two large places of entertainment, the Carlsbad and the Crazy, to be materially im- proved before the next season. J. L. Smith of the Texas-Carlsbad out-letting $10,000 to $15,000 in the erection of a great modern pavilion of brick or stone, and the thousands of visitors will be able to find ample accommodations here by March of 1926. A special feature to be added to the Carlsbad will be the open lawn socials, musicals and general privileges in operation. Mr. Smith has only engaged some of his musicians for the coming season and the up-to-date pavilion.

General Passenger Agent D. M. Mor- gan of the Cotton Belt and Traveling Passenger Agent Davis of the Denver Road came in today for a season of drink.

CIGARS WON IN ECONOMY FIGHT

Post J. T. P. A., Decides to Continue Use of Tobacco at Regular Meetings

Post J. T. P. A., met Saturday night at the board of trade rooms in an interesting session, attended by about a dozen mem- bers of the association. President E. Leaker was in the chair, with Secretary W. T. Royster present.

Among the business matters passed upon by the meeting was a motion to discontinue the use of postal cards by the secretary in notifying members of coming meetings. It was decided to use the phone in the notification of the mem- bers.

Along the line of retrenchment a mo- tion was made to cease the use of cigars by the association at meetings. After a spirited discussion, participated in by every member present, the vote stood 4-1 in favor of the motion. The result with that hereafter, as for- merly, cigars will be in evidence at the meetings of Post J.

IN THE TERRITORIES

MUSKOGEE GETS WATER RATE Special to The Telegram. MUSKOGEE, Okla., Aug. 26.—About seventy-five bales of cotton were ship- ped from here to Fall River, Mass., to- day via the Arkansas River and Kan- sas City Southern railway. The Gulf Cotton Company is shipping this is the first shipment of cotton down the river since 1871 and in connection with the shipment it is announced a cut of 50 per cent is made in the new rate, making a reduction of 75 per cent as compared with the rate last year. It is also announced that a tariff agreement has been made by the rail- road and steamboat company making a reduction of 25 per cent on all freight to Muskogee.

COTTON CROP GOOD ARDMORE, I. T., Aug. 26.—The govern- ment cotton statistician here in his report to be sent to Washington Mon- day will state that prevailing hot and weather has stopped the ravages of the worms, that the crop is fruiting well and that 15 per cent will cover the loss by deterioration.

MANY AFTER FEDERAL PLACE ARDMORE, I. T., Aug. 26.—The sec- ond term of W. B. Johnson as United States district attorney for the South- ern district will expire next January. It is learned that Assistant Attorney J. E. Humphrey and C. O. Burr of this city, also H. M. Carr, a newspaper man of Pauls Valley, will be applicants to succeed Mr. Johnson. The terms of Judge Hosok, Treasurer and Marshal B. H. Colbert will expire at the same time.

COLD WATER CAUSES ILLNESS ARDMORE, I. T., Aug. 26.—John Mapp, aged 11, is at his home in Mar- jory in a precarious condition from an attack of cerebro-spinal meningitis. The boy became overheated two days in succession and each day poured a quantity of cold water on his head, which resulted in his illness.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN For a month past extensive repairs have been under way on the interior of the First Presbyterian church. There will be no preaching in this church until the return of the pastor, Dr. Wil- liam Caldwell, on the second Sunday in September. Dr. Caldwell is spending his vacation in Chicago. Sunday school will be held at the usual hour today.

WACO BEATS TEMPLE Local Season Ends with Victory for the Tigers WACO, Texas, Aug. 26.—The baseball season as far as local games are concern- ed, closed here this afternoon, the Tigers defeating Temple in a slow and ragged game by a score of 7 to 2.

Neither Lewis nor Lovew were effective, but the latter had better support and won easily.

The season locally has been the most successful in history of Waco clubs and the attendance has been the best in the history of the city. Plans are already on foot for next year's team and it is hoped that several of this year's team will be retained.

Post J. T. P. A., met Saturday night at the board of trade rooms in an interesting session, attended by about a dozen mem- bers of the association. President E. Leaker was in the chair, with Secretary W. T. Royster present.

Among the business matters passed upon by the meeting was a motion to discontinue the use of postal cards by the secretary in notifying members of coming meetings. It was decided to use the phone in the notification of the mem- bers.

Along the line of retrenchment a mo- tion was made to cease the use of cigars by the association at meetings. After a spirited discussion, participated in by every member present, the vote stood 4-1 in favor of the motion. The result with that hereafter, as for- merly, cigars will be in evidence at the meetings of Post J.

IN THE TERRITORIES

MUSKOGEE GETS WATER RATE Special to The Telegram. MUSKOGEE, Okla., Aug. 26.—About seventy-five bales of cotton were ship- ped from here to Fall River, Mass., to- day via the Arkansas River and Kan- sas City Southern railway. The Gulf Cotton Company is shipping this is the first shipment of cotton down the river since 1871 and in connection with the shipment it is announced a cut of 50 per cent is made in the new rate, making a reduction of 75 per cent as compared with the rate last year. It is also announced that a tariff agreement has been made by the rail- road and steamboat company making a reduction of 25 per cent on all freight to Muskogee.

COTTON CROP GOOD ARDMORE, I. T., Aug. 26.—The govern- ment cotton statistician here in his report to be sent to Washington Mon- day will state that prevailing hot and weather has stopped the ravages of the worms, that the crop is fruiting well and that 15 per cent will cover the loss by deterioration.

MANY AFTER FEDERAL PLACE ARDMORE, I. T., Aug. 26.—The sec- ond term of W. B. Johnson as United States district attorney for the South- ern district will expire next January. It is learned that Assistant Attorney J. E. Humphrey and C. O. Burr of this city, also H. M. Carr, a newspaper man of Pauls Valley, will be applicants to succeed Mr. Johnson. The terms of Judge Hosok, Treasurer and Marshal B. H. Colbert will expire at the same time.

COLD WATER CAUSES ILLNESS ARDMORE, I. T., Aug. 26.—John Mapp, aged 11, is at his home in Mar- jory in a precarious condition from an attack of cerebro-spinal meningitis. The boy became overheated two days in succession and each day poured a quantity of cold water on his head, which resulted in his illness.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN For a month past extensive repairs have been under way on the interior of the First Presbyterian church. There will be no preaching in this church until the return of the pastor, Dr. Wil- liam Caldwell, on the second Sunday in September. Dr. Caldwell is spending his vacation in Chicago. Sunday school will be held at the usual hour today.

WACO BEATS TEMPLE Local Season Ends with Victory for the Tigers WACO, Texas, Aug. 26.—The baseball season as far as local games are concern- ed, closed here this afternoon, the Tigers defeating Temple in a slow and ragged game by a score of 7 to 2.

Neither Lewis nor Lovew were effective, but the latter had better support and won easily.

The season locally has been the most successful in history of Waco clubs and the attendance has been the best in the history of the city. Plans are already on foot for next year's team and it is hoped that several of this year's team will be retained.

ASYLUM ATTENDANTS HELD AT TERRELL

Bond in Each Case Fixed at $800, All Furnishing the Required Amount

Special to The Telegram. TERRELL, Texas, Aug. 26.—W. L. Smith, E. E. Johnson and J. A. Huff, asylum commissioners, charged with hav- ing caused the death of Dr. J. W. Tom- son, a patient, by maltreatment, had an examining trial here this morning before Justice T. L. Frank. By agreement of attorneys for state and defendants bail was fixed at $800. Each readily gave the bond. The defense objected to the read- ing of the testimony brought out at the coroner's inquest, and none of the facts pertaining to the manner of Jackson's death were proven in the preliminary hearing.

PANTHERS COME HOME

Season to Close With String of Ten Games Here Today the Panthers open at Haines' Park for the closing games of the 1926 season. Only by the winning of practi- cally all of the remaining ten games and consecutive losses by Temple can Fort Worth win the pennant. They can, however, and are expected to finish in second place, leaving Gardner's aggrega- tion trailing in the rear.

Dallas opens here today for a three- game series, the game being called at 4 o'clock, instead of 4:30, as erroneously announced.

Aug. 30 Temple begins a three days' series, with four games, the double-head- er being played on the opening day. Waco closes the season with games on Sept. 2, 3 and 4—Labor Day.

All Texas league teams are now playing strong games and the finish is a free- for-all before the season closes. Fort Worth, however, is not out of the running and consistent playing with the stimulus of home grounds may yet see the Panthers at the top.

CITY NEWS

Miss Esther Holder of Greenville, Texas, and Miss Juanita Kenney of Oklahoma City, are guests of Mrs. L. E. Overstreet in Missouri avenue.

Mrs. D. L. Irwin has returned from a seven weeks' visit in Denver and Colo- rado Springs.

DEATHS

C. TRAHAM Shortly before midnight last night C. Traham, aged 69 years, a patient in the home was near White Castle, La., died at St. Joseph's Infirmary as a result of paralysis of the heart. His son, Dr. E. O. Traham, was at the bedside when death occurred.

Traham had been in this city only six days before his death. The body will be shipped to Louisiana for burial.

New Yorkers Coming

Secretary N. S. Fenchbach of the Dallas baseball club has returned from New York with the good news that the New York Americans will probably come to Dallas next spring to do their training. While en route home Mr. Fenchbach stopped at St. Louis and states that Catcher Spencer is more than making good with the Browns.

City League Close

Final game in the City League race will not be played today, officers of the organization having decided to postpone the event until after the close of the Texas League season. Final game to decide the championship and the winner of the Telegram pennant will then be played.

Driving Club Progress

Rapid progress is being made in the formation of the Gentlemen's Driving Club, plans for which were outlined in The Telegram, and it is believed complete organization will be effected within a short time. As announced, land for a driving track has been secured and arrangements made for trainers and the presence of a good string of horses.

Building Permit

Building permit has been made out in the city engineer's office for the con- struction of a $4,500 two-story brick resi- dence by A. W. Montague.

THE JONES WAY

"Let not the sun go down on your wrath," is an ancient admonition worthy of obedience and admirably il- lustrated in the life of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Jones.

But first, the story— Walter Jones graduated in an Illi- nois college in the engineering course and was immediately given employ- ment by the Rock Island system in running lines near Manson, Iowa. Here he met Ella Moody, a bright, sensible girl. It was a case of love at first sight. They were soon married.

On the day of their marriage the couple made this compact: They pledged each other that they would not close their eyes at night with any difference unsettled between them. Af- ter five years of married life the pledge has been kept inviolate.

The honeymoon promises to last to the end of life.

There's more of the story— Mr. Jones was given a section of heavy work down in New Mexico, a hundred miles from anywhere. Mrs. Jones went along. They set up their tent in the railway construction camp. Mrs. Jones kept her husband's ac- counts, conducted his correspondence and, in a pinch, took the part of rod- man.

Then they were sent up to the Michi- gan peninsula, where they roughed it in the same way. Now they are down in a forsaken part of Kentucky suc- cessfully developing a lead and zinc mine.

The life of this typical American and his

MARKETS IRREGULAR

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—Abroad the markets were irregular. Paris was dull, but closed bustling with a sharp drop in Russian bonds. French rentes also showed a decline. At Berlin there was also heaviness early, but the close was firm on improved peace reports. At London cheerfulness as regards the peace outcome was reflected in the market's steadiness. Americans at that center were irregular, but with the majority advances. Arbitrage firms were fairly active here, but did a mixed business. Some arbitrage firms estimated buying on balance for foreign account as amounting to 10,000 shares. The weekly reviews of the mercantile agencies show no change on the expanding industries and business prosperity. Bank clearings while less than last week show a gain of 40.2 per cent over the corresponding week last year.

PEACE NEGOTIATIONS

AFFECT THE MARKET Uncertainty of Outlook Causes Caution in Trading—Saturday Volume Small NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—Transactions in today's stock market were upon a small scale during the greater part of the session and price movements were irregular. The tone of the opening was generally heavy, being influenced by the uncertain status of the peace negotiations and by the common expectation that the bank statement would make a very weak showing. Reading and Missouri Pacific opened at decline of about one point each and the general market showed losses of about half a point. The local traction shares were exceptionally strong and with the course of the morning rose smartly. The general market gradually developed a firmer tone and many stocks recovered a goodly proportion of their early losses. The United States Steel shares were prominent on the rally, which was, however, a fairly general movement. There was no new activity all over night relating to the market aside from that in connection with peace negotiations. The weekly report of the mercantile agencies made very satisfactory showings and a number of excellent statements of satisfactory traffic were made during the morning. It seemed to be the general view that for a midsummer half holiday the day's stock market gave a good account of itself, particularly where the violent fluctuations of the preceding day's work were taken into account. Somewhat reassuring advices were received during the morning, but there was no new activity all over night relating to the market aside from that in connection with peace negotiations. The bank statement turned out to be entirely out of line with all of the forecasts and in addition the figures failed entirely of technical proof. The decrease in actual cash shown was only $2,243,000 or about one-half of the amount indicated in the preliminary estimates.

AMENDMENT APPROVED
AUSTIN, Texas, Aug. 26.—The attorney general today approved an amendment to the charter of the Galveston, Harrisburg and San Antonio railroad. The amendment authorizes the road to construct a line commencing in Wilson county near Stockdale in a southeasterly direction through the counties of Wilson, Gonzales and DeWitt to Cuero. This is the route of the San Antonio and Gulf, which was absorbed by the foregoing road.

The Armstrong Company, if granted a franchise, will furnish at least 5000 electric lights to customers. These lights will average, the year around, at least $1.00 per light. This would make $5000 per month or $60,000 per year. In twenty-five years, the life of a franchise, this sum would reach a minimum of $1,500,000. If the Armstrong company were paying 2 per cent on gross receipts, the city would receive from the electric portion of the Armstrong franchise alone, $1200 per year or $30,000 in twenty-five years. These figures are ultra-conservative. As a matter of fact, Judge Armstrong figures that his company, under the proposed franchise, would do a business of $125,000 per year, or, in twenty-five years, $3,125,000. Two per cent, a sum very small for the free use of valuable streets and alleys, on this amount of business, would give the city a net revenue of $2500 per year or, in twenty-five years, $62,500. This is only one company. If Fort Worth will make the right start now, in twenty-five years a whole lot of corporations using streets and alleys will be paying like sums. Think it over, Mr. Citizen.

The Turning of the Lane

BY VIRGINIA DE FORREST.
(Copyright, 1905, by the Newspaper Enterprise Association.)
There lived, years ago, in the house which adjoined mine in Cliffdale, a widow and her only child. Her husband had been a drunkard and the villagers told how patiently and meekly she had borne the most cruel treatment, her only care being to shield her little son from injury, and the evil of the example his father set before him.
The first time I ever saw Margaret Leslie I was called to prescribe for the little boy, whom I found very ill. Margaret was seated beside the patient, listening to his labored breathing. He had always been a delicate child, and his little pale face was scarcely less white than the pillow upon which it rested. My medicines were powerless to stay the disease, and a few days I thought the widow would be childless.

"God spare my boy!" was her prayer from morning till night. She had been sorely tried and this was her only comfort. To my surprise the patient took a favorable turn and recovered. His mother's gratitude was fervent, but more silent than her grief had been, and I think he appreciated the pure, deep devotion of his loyal parent. He was a wayward boy, with strong passions, governed more by impulse than good judgment.
When he reached his twenty-first year he left the village in which he was born to seek his fortune in the wide world. Letters came frequently to the widow to cheer her loneliness. He went to California and the letters came less frequently. He was practicing law, and the papers he sent home often mentioned his talents and the high rank he was destined to take in his profession. Other mothers thought how proud Margaret must be of her son, but the widow felt very sad. I was her confidential friend and I knew her sorrow. Brilliant and full of interest as the letters were, descriptive of his active life and the varied scenes through which he passed, she would have given them all for one line from his heart.

After five years' absence Edgar came to Cliffdale previous to settling in New York. The first time I saw him I was startled by the change in his appearance. The bright, healthy color, the dark flashing eyes and the erect, noble carriage were exchanged for thin, sallow, sunken cheeks and a slow, stooping motion. He looked ten years older than he was. He only stayed a few weeks, but when he left Cliffdale he was betrothed to Amy Graham.
A few months after Easter I went to New York, but it was some time before I had an opportunity of meeting him, but when I did I saw at once the pace he was going. There were no revels where he did not lead his clique to the maddest excesses. Gambling and drinking occupied his nights and his practice was gradually falling away from him.
One evening at a large party, given by the daughter of one of our richest Americans, Edgar and I were among the guests. One of the women, a tall, slender looking brunette, stood near me chatting with a friend. I was concealed by the pillar against which I leaned and overheard their conversation.
"Now, Julia, confess," was the first sentence that fell upon my ears. "Are you not in love?"
"Nonsense!" said the brunette. "You are always fancying Grace, that some of your friends are in love."
"Ah, but I have proof positive! There is a certain young man who is never denied admittance at your door and with whom you dance more frequently than any other of your friends. You see I know."
"Well, Grace, you shall be my confessor. I do love Edgar Leslie, and as I am his affianced wife since last evening, I need no longer blush to confess it."
I went into the supper room. There heated by the wine, was the pride of a mother in Cliffdale. I laid by hand upon his arm and soon succeeded in getting him home. The cold air and long walk sobered him and he threw himself on a sofa when we reached my rooms, saying:
"Doctor, you have saved me from disgracing myself before tomorrow."
Finding he was in this mood I talked to him and after some little hesitation he opened his heart to me. His life in California had been a sad mixture of excess and dissipation. Every letter from his mother had roused what was good in him and kept him in the right way until temptation again assailed him, and he plunged into vice to be again saddened by reading his mother's letters. His life in New York was a repetition of this.
I questioned him about Julia and found that she had construed a laughing offer, made in jest, into a serious one and he cared nothing for her. His love was Amy's. At my suggestion he wrote Julia but could not explain to Miss Julia and then began his preparation for another visit home.
Business called me abroad and for five years I heard nothing from Edgar. Margaret had been dead nearly 18 months when I came home. I found Edgar in a happy home, married to Amy and the father of a noble boy.
One evening I was speaking of his mother, "Doctor," he said, "but for my mother I should have been a miserable drunkard. No love but hers could have reclaimed me from what I was. Now her memory and Amy's love are my safeguards. When temptation comes her memory hovers to ward the evil off and my watchword now is my dying mother's blessing."

Millions in it.

By Harry Ferguson.
This morning I proposed to my banker that he loan me $100,000 for the purchase of the title of Count of Esterhazy of France, which I understand is for sale at that price.
At first the banker thought I was fooling. But he was soon convinced that I was a great financier.
"With that title," I said, "and a trunk full of coronets, knee breeches, sashes, rapiers and chocolate creams, I can sail from France, where a count is no more recognized as such, and land at Newport or Fifth avenue with ninety-nine chances in one hundred of getting $10,000,000 out of my investment in ninety days."
"The Golets, the Vanderbilts, the Goulds, the Astors, the Belmonts and the Oelrichs of Newport would receive me with open arms. They would hurry down to the metropolis in their private cars to meet me with eclat befitting my station in life. I would sit through twelve or thirteen courses by the side of the best fed hostesses in the land, dressed decollete, with tiaras and necklaces enough to buy a trunk line to the seaboard. At the functions I would be given precedence over judges of the supreme court, senators or any other product of the greatest republic on earth. The 'Four Hundred' would stampede at my front gate to take me out in their 100-horsepower touring cars, their bob-tailed tandems and coaches and their private yachts. And I would assume a languorous, haughty air and appear no altogether bright.
"Most important of all the steps in the transaction, rich debutantes and other marriageable millionairesses with jewels, low necks and trains would be presented to me. The press would immediately associate my name with the richest one. I would thus be informed who was the most lovely from a commercial standpoint. I would at an early date tell her that she was my true and only affinity, the loveliest creature I ever knew.
"Think of it! Palace and millions—a fortune in investment of only $100,000."
I told the banker that if he financed the scheme I would give him 10 per cent of the gross receipts and I would introduce him to King Edward, in knee breeches.
Knowing the title mania of rich Americans so well, he said: "I'll call the directors."
A title on a noodle head is worth millions in the American market.

SUPERINTENDENT HOGG BACK FROM EAST
Superintendent of City Schools
Prepares Report for Submission to Board

Professor Alexander Hogg, superintendent of the Fort Worth public schools, returned home Friday night from Asbury Park where he was attending the meeting of the National Educational Association. Before returning to this city to prepare for the opening of the schools, Sept. 13, Professor Hogg visited the leading educational institutions of the east, investigating educational matters.
Discussing the educational convention, Saturday, Professor Hogg said that the main thing that impressed him was the difference between the western and eastern idea, holding to the belief that while adopting any good models from the east, the schools of the west and southwest must work out their own problems in their own way.
An address by President Roosevelt on the profession of teachers was one of the features. Strong contrasts of Engineer Wallace and Secretary of State Root was made in the address, school teachers being likened to Root who took up public service at small salary and with sacrifice.
Course Discussed
An interesting discussion, and perhaps the most heated of the meeting was that between Mayor McClelland and Dr. W. H. Maxwell, superintendent of schools of New York. Mayor McClelland upheld education for the masses while Dr. Maxwell approved a higher standard, practically reproducing the recent discussion in this city regarding school matters.
Need of manual training in the schools, a topic discussed by Professor Hogg, at the Philadelphia gathering of educators thirty-five years ago was again a subject of study, a paper upon it being read by Dr. Harvey, state superintendent of Minnesota.
Schools Stand High
Comparison of Fort Worth schools with those of larger cities was also afforded in many incidents. The Washington Post during the progress of the convention quoted as a noteworthy fact the statement of Professor Hogg that men and women teachers received the same salary for the same work and that the same salary equality was maintained regarding the teachers in white and colored schools here.
Another comparison of interest was that showing the percentage of attendance in the high school of this city to be three or four per cent greater than in the schools of St. Louis.
Professor Hogg has prepared a statement of observations of eastern institutions and comparisons for presentation at the next meeting of the school board. While in the east he visited the summer school of Columbia University, New York University, public schools of Philadelphia and St. Louis and Lyndhurst, where Miss Helen Gould at her own expense affords practical educational advantages to both boys and girls.
Texas Educators There
Among Texans present at the association were Dr. Ellis of Texas University, Professor Wolf of San Antonio and State Superintendent R. B. Cousins.
While visiting eastern schools, Professor Hogg reports he found a number of Fort Worth teachers taking summer courses in such institutions, a fact, he declares, he noted with much pleasure.
Work that particularly impressed Professor Hogg upon his trip was that of Mrs. Jessup in charge of the domestic science work in New York with a corps of thirty-five principals under her.

FORGETTING WORLD WOMEN TRY TO LIVE OUT TOLSTOIN'S CREED

Quaint Sisterhood Establishes Home Among the Hills and Woods of Sussex

WRITE VOWS IN BOOK

None Has Yet Shown the Courage to Forego Scandal or Evil Speaking

BY LADY HENRY SOMERSET. (Copyright, 1905, by the Hearst News Service.)

LONDON, Aug. 26.—Among the many developments of the simple life theory the most practical is that which has just been opened in a fine old seventeenth century house, renamed Tolstol House.

There was, however, a balance over and above the sum needed, and this was given to float Miss Morton's scheme. The sisterhood devote themselves to the care of blind, deaf and crippled children, who are brought from the slums of London for change and country air.

The members of the sisterhood wear picturesque brown gowns, folded kerchiefs and no shoes and stockings. The ordinary diet is vegetarian, but those sisters who are not converted to this form of living are allowed meat. The garden supplies fruit and vegetables. The rules are very simple.

The ladies do their own work, are forbidden to wear jewelry or ornaments, are requested to bring as few personal possessions as possible, never to grumble, to take all complaints to the sister in charge, and one hour each day must be spent in meditation or the study of selected books.

But the most difficult of the rules appears to be to make right entries in the Observance Book, where the sisters voluntarily state the stage and progress of their development and record the various vows they have made against particular snares of modern life.

Many, it appears, have already signed a vow to oppose all extravagance and multiplication of daily wants, but as yet I understand, not one of these earnest Tolstolites has had the strength of mind to sign a vow, on which much stress is laid, and which runs as follows: "We forbid ourselves all scandal and evil speaking." The atmosphere of the house is singularly peaceful in spite of their reluctance to be committed to no strife of tongues.

The house itself is charming, with old oak and simple furniture, and outside are the beautiful hills and fir woods of Sussex.

French Fleet in London All London was being occupied with the reception of the French fleet, and never, I believe, has a more magnificent sight been seen than the meeting of the great navies in English waters; the channel fleet, gay with flags, the dancing yachts from Cowes, and the British battleships were a picture never to be forgotten.

The international courtesies and compliments which passed between king and admiral came like a message of hope on the centenary of Trafalgar. It was a day memorable for all time, not only for the picturesque sight, never before excelled on sea for real magnificence, but also for marking the harmony of two great nations, which will go far to control the peace of the world.

Bernhardt Talks to King

Madame Sarah Bernhardt, who has just returned to France, and received her usual greetings of flowers and smiles, and kisses, was indiscreet enough to tell a representative of the press who met her of an interview which she had had with King Edward. "He is delighted," she said, "with the entente cordiale. We are now great and good friends," he said. "But, sirs," replied Madame Bernhardt, "we have always been good friends; but we are better friends than ever, and it will last."

And then the king spoke of the great reception the French sailors would get at Portsmouth, and of the cordiality of the rejoicings at Brest.

Memoirs of Father Gapon

Nothing in the way of serial publication is more interesting than the memoirs of Father Gapon, which are now appearing in an English magazine. His mention of Verestehagin has a singular charm; the priest at the time he met the great painter was staying at a monastery in the Crimea. "The artist was living near us, close to the sea, in a small house with his children, whom he loved—a rough, strong-willed, generous man, who saw in his art a great mission. When busy with his work he refused to see visitors; even when a famous admiral begged for a short interview the artist refused."

The artist and painter often talked together on the cliffs and beach, but the advice of the latter was: "Throw off your cassock and give it up; there is plenty of work to do in the world which needs all the energy which we can give it."

Fish Girls at Sea

The Scotch fish girls who are employed at the earl's court naval exhibition, and who come from humble homes at Peterhead, Aberdeen, have a royal time the other day when they were entertained at tea on the terrace of the houses of parliament by the Earl of Aberdeen, who thus celebrated his fifty-fifth birthday.

It was a charming idea to invite these girls from his native land to this birthday festival, and when they came they looked fully aware of the honor that had been done them.

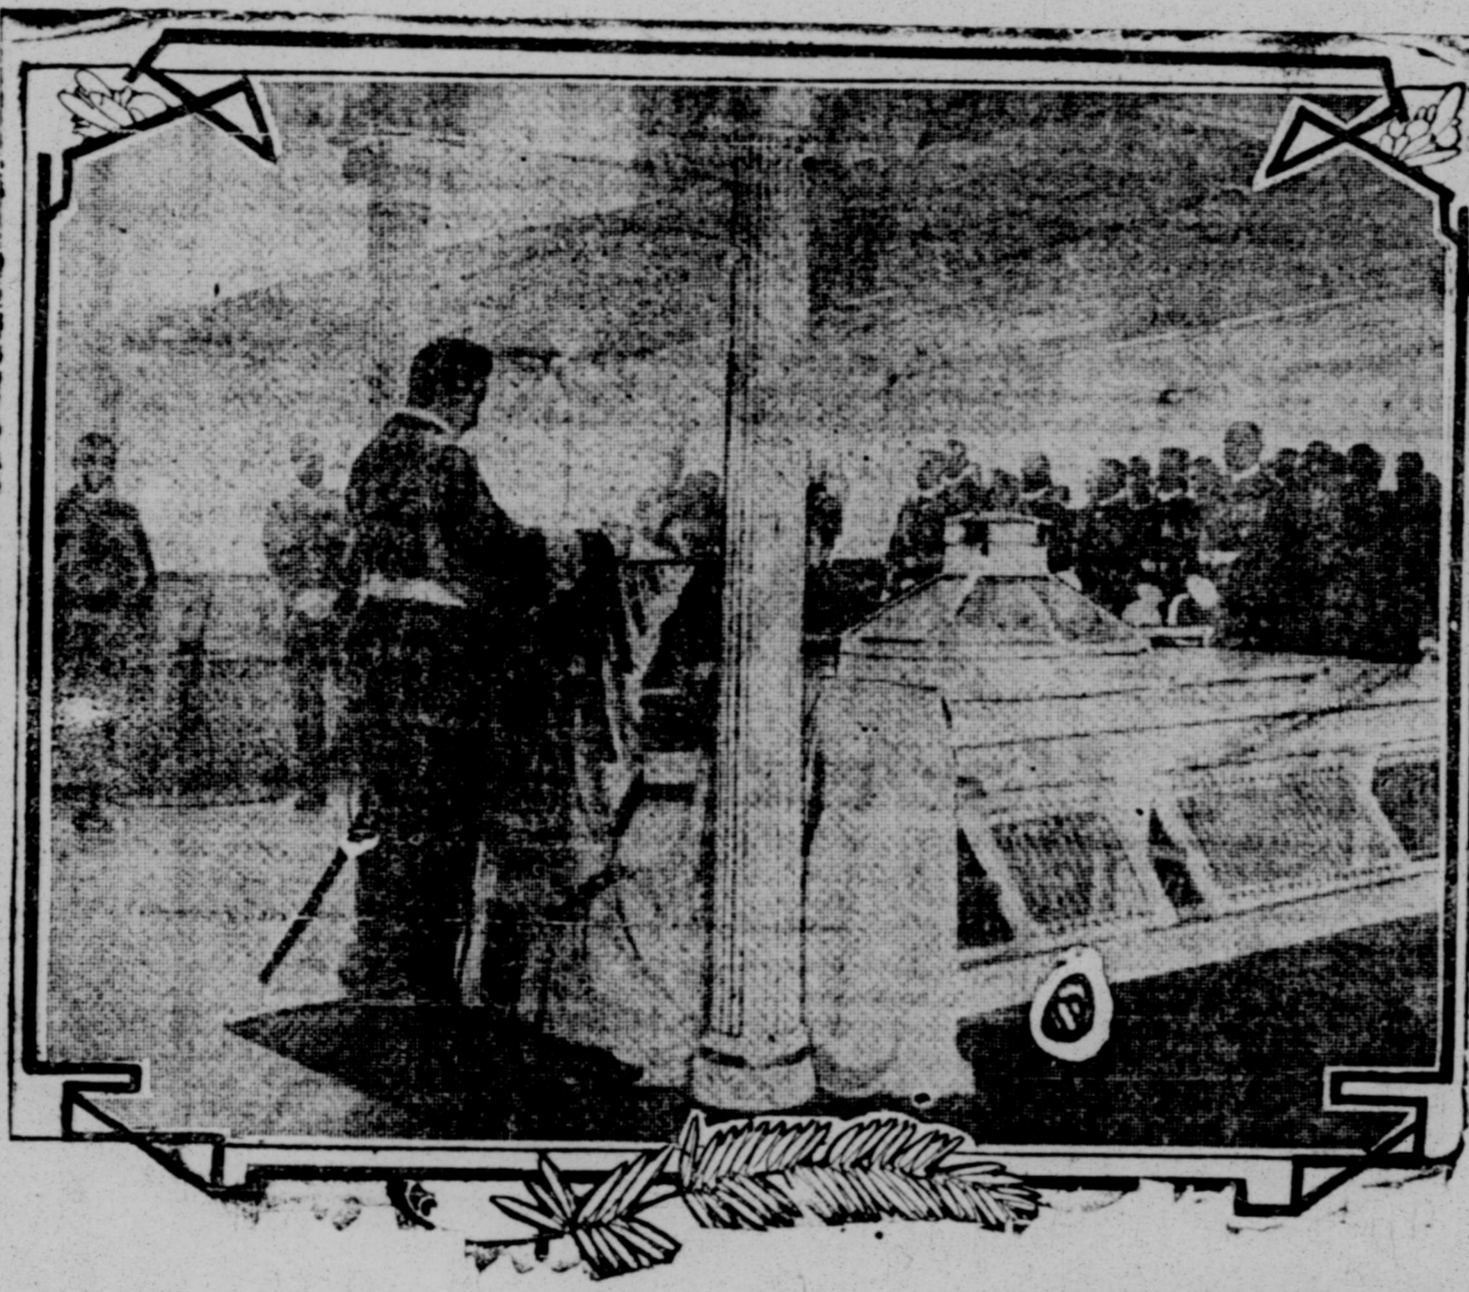

They had on their best print blouses and serge skirts, and wore large bunches of flowers. They were allowed to peep at the house of lords, who were then discussing the amendment, and one of the most outspoken of the guests confessed that she "didn't know what they were talking about," but she "thought it was a fine hoose."

Bad Season for Art

The art dealers of London have experienced one of the worst seasons on record; there have been some wonderfully high prices paid for pictures and objects of art, and there have been some notable sales; and yet the dealers who have paid extravagant prices for those works of art find themselves still in possession of their purchases. With the exception of some gems from the sale of Lord Tweedmouth's pictures, and the Huth collection, Pierpont Morgan has been a small purchaser, and few famous works of art have gone to Americans. The dealers evidently anticipated a great rush by Americans to buy, and in most cases they have been disappointed. It is confidently expected that the winter sales will see a large reduction in prices for famous pictures and other objects of art.

Judge Gildersleeve, of the supreme court of New York state, has been employing every minute of his vacation. He began with a county cricket match, being very fond of games himself, and voted the "fielding" of the cricketers the slowest he had ever witnessed. Then he sat on the bench with the lord chief justice of England and enjoyed the hearing of several unimportant cases. To a competitor at the Savoy hotel he confided the famous golf links at St. Andrew's, up north, where Mr. Balfour, the prime minister, is trying to forget the possibilities of a general election. Judge Gildersleeve longs also to visit Sandwich, where the finest golf links in the United Kingdom, after St. Andrew's, are to be found. An old acquaintance and compatriot of the judge, the wealthy General MacAlpin, was also at the Savoy hotel, where some 300 Americans are still assembled. It is by no means the first visit which Judge Gildersleeve has paid to London. Many years ago he visited this country with a representative American rifle team. The team took several valuable prizes at Wimbledon. This was before the day of the present-day rifle camp at Bisley.

Titles for Sale at a Cost of $7,500 Agency Formed for Introducing the Noble Poor to the Common Rich

Special Cable to The Telegram. BERLIN, Aug. 26.—A remarkable agency was recently established in a western suburb of Berlin. It acts as a go-between for impecunious widows or others bearing a noble name and young burghers who are prepared to pay to be adopted, and, of course, to receive an aristocratic name. The price paid for such an honor averages $7,500, and the agent charges a commission of 10 per cent.

Where a title of baron or count is offered other branches of the family are first sounded as to whether any objection would be entertained as to the introduction of common blood.

Now Count is Out Paid 3,000 Marks to Get Mythical Heiress Special Cable to The Telegram. (Copyright, 1905, by the Hearst News Service.) DRESDEN, Aug. 26.—All Dresden is laughing at the expense of Count Waldenburg, an officer in a guard regiment, who has fallen a victim to an international marriage agent.

The count, who is poor, had for some time been trying to improve his financial condition by a marriage with a rich heiress, and when a Mme Roth promised him the hand of a French princess with a dot of 70,000,000 francs he swallowed the bait immediately and paid the agent 2,000 marks commission. As the days passed and he received no answers to his letters to the princess he got suspicious and reported the affair to the police, who arrested Mme Roth at Cologne just as she was boarding a train for Paris.

NOT A GOOD "MIXER" IS PRINCE OF WALES AT QUEEN'S PERIL

King's Eldest Son Still Clings to Limited Circle of Old Friends Indignation

Copyright, 1905, by Hearst News Service. BY PAUL LAMBETH

LONDON, Aug. 26.—There has been tremendous excitement in court circles over the choice which the Prince of Wales would make in the individuals who are to accompany him on his tour through India.

Now that everything has been settled everyone has realized that the prince refuses to entertain the idea of adding to his list of friends. It is an open secret that the king would like to see his son and heir become obdurate and stick to a small circle of "chums" of old days and women friends of his wife.

Commander Godfrey Fawcett and Sir Charles Cust, both of the British navy, are still the prince's dearest friends, and both of them are going to accompany his royal highness on the tour to India.

Commander Fawcett much dreaded the last tour to Australia with the prince. In those days he almost disliked his royal master, who has a way of chaffing unmercifully any one he takes a particular fancy to. Commander Fawcett was always the butt for the prince's little jokes and horseplay, and as he never could retaliate he became a little weary of it. Now, however, he has grown to adore the prince, as all do who are in his household long, and is looking forward keenly to the Indian tour.

Queen Alexandra has been busy making wonderful baby garments for Prince John, the prince's latest born. One beautiful robe she has made entirely of Valenciennes lace out of her majesty's Valencienne collection, and she has taken up to Scotland with her all kinds of materials to make further presents to her grandchild.

Actress Has New Job

Americans passing through town on their way to Scotland or to Continental "cures" are telling amusing stories of the doings at Ostend, which is beginning to regain some of its lost popularity. The shah of Persia and the countess of Roselyn (nee Anna Robinson, the American actress) were the most talked about people there last week. The shah admired the beautiful countess, but the latter was so busy keeping her husband away from the baccarat rooms that she did not appear to notice the admiration of the shah's Persian suite. The countess made a fixed rule that the earl should not play baccarat more than twice a week and then only for certain hours. As she holds the purse strings her conduct was considered wise.

Ostend swarmed with motor cars—but the general crowd who cannot afford motor cars or baccarat no longer visit Ostend. Americans are to be found everywhere on motor cars in England, France, Holland and Belgium.

Locusts Destroy Growing Crops in Italy Special Cable to The Telegram. (Copyright, 1905, by the Hearst News Service.) ROME, Aug. 26.—There is great distress among the peasants in the country surrounding this city, who fear a famine this winter.

Time and again the country has been swept by swarms of locusts which have destroyed every green leaf in sight. The wine crop will be a total failure, as will the fruit and vegetable crops.

Yesterday an enormous swarm of locusts came up from the south and descended upon the suburbs of Rome, leaving the trees of the parks absolutely bare of leaves and in two cases stopping trains by dropping on the rails en masse and making them too slippery for the wheels to get hold.

Special Cable to The Telegram. BERLIN, Aug. 26.—Germany may soon have female soldiers if Professor Hans Eschelbach succeeds in persuading the members of the reichstag of the soundness of his opinions.

In the current number of the well-known magazine, "Nord und Sued," Mr. Eschelbach has written a remarkable article which is being widely discussed all over Germany.

In full earnest he advises to make every young woman serve three years in the army before she is allowed to marry. Every young man has to serve, why then should the women go free, is his way of reasoning. "Woman," he writes, "was for centuries considered an inferior being. First treated as a slave, a mere chattel, and afterward as a doll, she is now emerging from her dependence and demands equal rights with men.

"Slowly but surely she has fought against old prejudices and has conquered them all. She is today the recognized equal of man. She has the same rights, but she escapes one of his most onerous duties.

"We recognize today the right of the state to rear the young man away from his work and make him serve as a soldier for two or three years. That he may be able, in time of need, to fight for his country, is the state's duty. He is a military clockwork for that length of time and is forced blindly to obey officers who are not always as agreeable as women might be. Why, then, should we not who now enjoy every privilege that man has, be exempt from this duty?

King Peter in Scandal

Belgrade is talking of nothing else today but a scandal in which King Peter plays a prominent part. Some time ago a Russian, Colonel Protopapan, who fought for the independence of Serbia, returned to Belgrade and was awarded 500 francs by the government as a reward for his former services to the country.

A few days after his arrival he asked for an audience with King Peter, against whom, he said, he had a claim of 12,000 francs, which he had advanced him years ago, while he was still plain Prince Karageorgewitch. King Peter refused to receive him and when the colonel insisted he was expelled from the city, and went to Budapest where he now is, and where he has written in a daily paper an article which has made King Peter furious.

In 1873, the article states, Prince Peter Karageorgewitch and one of his numerous mistresses, Mile Lenany, were living at Nice in a cottage belonging to a hotel proprietor, Turandi. Prince Peter, who then as now was always in debt, at the time owed the lawyer at a daily paper 500 francs, and M. Turandi 5,000 francs. Not being able to pay, the couple disappeared in the dark of the night, but had to leave all the baggage behind. The lawyer immediately seized the trunks and publicly stated that unless he received his money the prince's trunks would be sold at public auction.

Greatly alarmed, because one of the trunks contained papers of the greatest importance, Prince Peter begged Colonel Protopapan to redeem the baggage, which he did, the prince asking him to hold the trunks until security until he could pay the 25,000 francs.

A few weeks after the colonel was approached by two agents of King Milan, who offered him 200,000 francs if he would allow them to photograph the papers contained in the trunks. This offer he indignantly refused. Months passed and he heard nothing from Prince Peter, until one day he received a dispatch asking him to come to Belgrade.

When he had hurried to that city he was received by an agent of the prince, who said that he was at the point of death at Ostend, and was worried about the papers. He then foolishly gave up the trunks against a cash payment of 600 francs and the prince's note for the remainder.

When he came to Belgrade to get his money, King Peter sent him 500 francs, but when he tried to get the larger amount he was unmercifully conducted across the frontier, and permission to see the Russian ambassador was refused him.

The colonel now threatens to lay bare a number of scandals from King Peter's life which will force him to abdicate. Sorcerers Cause Excitement Considerable excitement has been caused in the town of Dinsburg, in Prussia, by the trial of two "sorcerers," a man and a woman, who called themselves "professors of the black art," and who had extracted large amounts of money from credulous persons by "raising the devil" and weird incantations and mysterious rites.

They brought their clients into a dimly lighted room, thick with odor of evil-smelling herbs and sulphurous fumes. The sorcerers, clad in black and scarlet robes, then glided in. As she entered her considerable disappeared, and the ceremony began.

Long incantations were gone through, and a mystic appeal was intimately made to the inhabitants of the lower world. After a long silence the appeal was answered in a high, shrill, tenor voice by a song of "The Prince of Darkness" pronouncing the destiny of the client.

The sorcerers, whose name is Sibben, and his Satanic Majesty, who was called Bened Bonne, were shown to be impostors in a curious manner. Bonne was engaged to sing at a local concert. His performance was but half finished when an agitated member of the audience denounced him as Satan, with the result that both the impostors were arrested and put on trial. They have been sentenced to three years' imprisonment each.

OUR LAY SERMON Master of human destinies am I? Fame, glory and fortune on my footsteps wait.

There are few of us who take the proper advantage of opportunity. We are too often either blind to its advances or indifferent to its overtures. We sleep when we should be awake and hustling, and fail to connect with the hand extended in our direction that would lead us to a complete fruition of our fondest hopes and desires.

There are many individuals in this world who doubt the reality of opportunity. They may have met with a few reverses or have been afflicted with blindness from birth. At any rate, it is a very difficult matter to get the conception through their soul that opportunity has ever passed anywhere near their vicinity, much less to come close enough to tap gently at their door.

But it is a fact that opportunity comes to each and every one of us. We may not be disposed to acknowledge the fact or recognize the opportunity, but the fact remains that there are opportunities around us all the time for the material betterment of our condition. All that we have to do is to be able to recognize the real opportunity after having prepared in advance for its coming.

The young man who has started out to achieve business success, but has to work his way from the very ground on which the ladder of success is resting, will never find his opportunity around the saloons, gambling halls and other places of questionable character. He must continually bear in mind that opportunities such as he seeks to grasp as a lever to use in climbing to higher altitudes cannot be found in such places. He must acquire a reputation long before he can anticipate opportunity. If that reputation is not what it should be the coming of opportunity is going to be seriously delayed or presented in a different attitude.

Every citizen of Fort Worth should take a deep and abiding interest in the auditorium and market house matter. Both of these enterprises are very essential to the city.

CITY ELECTION TUESDAY

A city election will be held in Fort Worth next Tuesday for the purpose of determining whether or not the proposed Armstrong franchise shall be granted. Unusual interest is felt in this election, from the fact that aside from the important principles involved in the franchise question, it is the first time an election has been held under the new referendum clause of the city charter.

Heretofore the custom has been for the city council to pass upon the matter of granting all franchises, but popular sentiment seemed to demand that this power should be reposed directly in the people, and for that reason the referendum was adopted and these questions now go direct to the people, who in their sovereign capacity shall be granted. This is a decided innovation in municipal affairs, and the result of Tuesday's election is being anticipated with much genuine interest.

The Telegram earnestly desires that the people of Fort Worth, in the form of the qualified voters, will turn out to the polls in full force at the Tuesday election. The importance of passing upon the question of the proposed franchise is second only to the matter of the referendum itself. It is felt that the referendum plan is also very largely on trial. If the people turn out and vote as they should turn out and vote, it will serve to demonstrate the wisdom and propriety of the referendum plan. On the contrary, if the vote cast is not a thoroughly representative one, it will disclose the fact that the people do not really desire the referendum and its adoption has been a mistake, and the power of granting franchises should be returned to the city council.

These are the principal reasons why the Telegram insists on the voters of Fort Worth turning out in force and doing their whole duty in the Tuesday election. They have the right now to pass on this matter for the first time. There is no opportunity for any man to say he opposed the Armstrong franchise but the city council was false to its obligations in granting the franchise, when such would not have been the case if the wishes of the people had been properly respected. It is a proposition that is directly up to the people, and the people must decide whether or not the franchise shall be granted and the referendum perpetuated.

So far as the franchise itself is concerned, The Telegram advises its readers and the public generally to vote it down. This advice on the part of The Telegram is not predicated upon any enmity or ill-will toward the gentleman and his associates who are seeking the franchise. It is based upon the fact that this valuable concession is sought without adequate recompense to the city, and failure to specifically name figures which will obligate the furnishing of gas and electricity to the consumer, similarly to the terms of the franchise which Dallas people enjoy.

The citizen who goes into business pays rent or buys property for his business house or factory. Why not the corporation which uses the streets and alleys, has the benefit of street and alley grades, of the sewers, etc. It is up to the citizen!

Among Exchanges Arsenic is supposed to render one immune to yellow fever, and certain New Orleans saloons are serving an arsenic pill with each drink of whisky. VERSSES THAT RING

HAVEN'T YOU FELT THAT WAY? Haven't you often worn goggles of blue, And seeing life's sham and its shame, Felt it was all a big scramble, and you Might as well get into the game? That nothing much mattered but a bunch of cash, And the man who was good was a jay, And the whole blooming country was going to smash, Haven't you, haven't you felt that way?

SCIENTIFIC MARRYING A cup of common sense is worth more than a tub full of theory. And this is a modern instance— For many years it has been argued by scientists that the human race is in danger of going backward because of mismatched marriages. The argument is usually by analogy, thus: Breeders of animals are very careful to mate them in such a way as to keep the blood pure and to improve it. But human beings are mated regardless of blood and breeding. Therefore, for the sake of prosperity—so the argument runs—there should be some authority to forbid marriages that do not come up to the physical standard. There is some truth in this. But it is not the whole truth, as "Animal Medicine" aptly points out. This common sense magazine questions, in the first place, whether any man or set of men be wise enough to say who shall and who shall not marry. There may be cases where the decision would be easy, but not ordinarily. Because— There have been marriages where the couples have had every apparent qualification that have turned out badly. On the other hand, marriages seemed lacking and these marriages have produced fine children and happiness. And so this journal concludes that what is needed is not more restrictions on marriage, but less. Speaking of the animal theory of selected breeding it is shown that the breeders' selection is not for the good of the animal but for the pleasure and profit of the breeder. Also that wild animals are stronger and more perfect than the domesticated and highly bred. The animal instinct is proven to be the better guide. It is also shown that the natural selection of mate, as is the custom in this country, produces a better type than does the European and Asiatic custom where the selection is usually made by the parents. Nature is a wise old dame.

STORIES ABOUT MEN A friend wrote to Mark Twain asking his opinion on a certain matter, and received no reply. He writes a few days later, and writes again. His second letter was also ignored. Then he sent a third note, inclosing a sheet of paper and a 2-cent stamp. By return mail he received a postal card on which was the following: "Paper and stamp received. Please send envelope."

THE LATE THOMAS B. REED told the following story: Dr. Reed of Indianapolis, Ind., who was in court one day, one time was opening the Sunday morning service at his church with the usual prayer. While he was in the midst of the prayer a stranger entered the church and took a seat in the back. Dr. Reed was praying in a low voice, and the man in the rear, after straining his ears for a while, called out: "Pray louder, Dr. Reed, I can't hear you." Dr. Reed paused, opened his eyes and turned them around, all they rested on the man in the rear; then he said: "I was not addressing you, sir; I was speaking to God."

NORA, THE WISE

CLASS IN ARITHMETIC STAND UP.

Berlin seems to be the center at present of animal prodigies. "First Consul," the man-imitating ape, was a late reigning sensation. Hans, the educated horse, performed marvelous feats of intelligence. But Nora, the beautiful canine whose picture is here shown, surpasses either of these.

Nora's owner is the noted painter, Emilio Rendich, who first called attention to Hans.

Nora's strong point is mathematics. Arithmetical sums stated in words or written on a blackboard are worked out with unvarying precision. The problem is stated as follows: "Now, Nora, pay attention to me. Multiply four by three, add one and deduct seven. Now give me the answer."

Nora promptly responds with six quick barks and stops after the sixth without any visible sign from Herr Rendich. Nora solves all sorts of arithmetical problems in the same prompt and correct way.

The curious part of the performance is that Nora has been known to work with the same precision and accuracy with strangers in the absence of Herr Rendich. Many observers of the dog have declared these achievements are inexplicable unless it be conceded that the dog possesses intelligence identical with that of human beings.

FRENCHMEN TO HONOR MEMORY OF FRANKLIN

Monument to Distinguished American Will Be Erected at Cost of $12,500

BY PAUL VILLIERS. (Copyright, 1905, by W. R. Hearst News Service.) Special Cable to The Telegram.

PARIS, Aug. 26.—The municipal council of this city has unanimously voted to erect a statue of Benjamin Franklin at Passy.

Already a street in that part of the city, formerly known as Rue Neuves-des-Minimes, bears the name of the famous American, who from 1777 to 1783 inhabited a small pavilion of the Hotel de Valenciennes, now situated in the Rue Raynouard.

It was while living here that Franklin first conceived his idea of the lightning rod. The statue to be erected is to cost 50,000 francs and French and American sculptors will be asked to compete.

There is at present a disposition among court gossip to believe that King Alfonso of Spain will never become engaged to Princess Patricia of Connaught, for the simple reason that the latter absolutely refuses to be coerced into the engagement, and now it is being gently hinted by way of a feeler that the young king of Spain is really in love with Princess Ena of Battenburg.

German Press Bitter.

In spite of the assurances of the kaiser and his government that Germany has not the slightest intention of provoking war with France, a great part of the German semi-official press continues to publish articles evidently intended to arouse the hatred of the French people and endanger the friendly understanding between the two countries which had begun to supersede the bitterness caused by the Franco-Prussian war of 1870-71.

At the very eve of the conference which is to settle the orocco affair, German military engineers are working night and day to place in position new guns of the most formidable type in the disappearing oroped towers of the great forts Kaiserin, Haeseler and Kronprinz, near Metz.

It has also become known that every night train loads of shells and ammunition arrive in the fortresses from the arsenals at Kiel. The three forts named are so situated that they command the French frontier and the railroads on French territory as far west as Pagny.

The work of renewing the heavy guns was carried out with the greatest secrecy and might have been completed undiscovered but for an explosion of a shell in one of the forts which killed several soldiers and necessitated an investigation which attracted the attention of the press.

Story of Nebogotoff's Surrender. So many different reports of the surrender of the squadron commanded by the Russian Admiral Nebogotoff in the battle of Tsushima have been printed and so many harsh things said of the commander himself that it is only just to give publicity to the true story of the surrender as told to a French journalist by the captain of the admiral's flagship, Nicholas I., who has just returned to St. Petersburg.

"How the rumors ever started that the sailors mutinied," the captain said, "I do not understand. There is certainly not one word of truth in them. Our sailors were from the very day we started, eager for fight and Admiral Nebogotoff was very popular with them, while Robestjensky was rather ill liked because of his too strict discipline."

"Not once did the commander in chief board any other vessels but always remained aboard his flagship, so that most of the men did not even know how he looked. Admiral Nebogotoff, however, regularly inspected every vessel inside and out, but only once did he and Robestjensky meet face to face.

"Otherwise they invariably communicated by signals. Until the battle began the men on all our vessels had been in the best spirits possible, and not one had any doubt that we would win. What happened during the first day of the battle all the world knows. Robestjensky sent a torpedo boat to order us to follow him to Vladivostok.

"This we did, but when morning dawned we saw ourselves surrounded by a Japanese squadron of twenty-eight vessels. Our ships Nicholas I., Orel, Senyavin, Apraxin and Isumrud immediately lined up in battle formation, while the Japanese opened fire from a distance of fifty cable lengths. We could not return the fire, as the distance was too great.

GRAVE TROUBLE FORESEEN

It takes but little foresight to tell that when your stomach and liver are badly affected, grave trouble ahead, unless you take the proper medicine for your disease, as Mrs. John A. Young of Clay, N. Y., did. She says: "I had neuralgia of the liver and stomach, my heart was weak and I could not eat. I was very bad for a long time, but in Electric Bitters I found just what I needed, for they quickly relieved and cured me."

for our guns, and Nebogotoff gave orders not to shoot. A council of war was held on board the flagship, and suddenly the white flag was hoisted.

"In spite of this the Japanese continued to fire, probably because they had failed to notice the flag. At last the shooting ceased and a Japanese torpedo boat came alongside. Admiral Nebogotoff and his flag officers went aboard and were taken to the Japanese commander. When we saw this we were struck with terror, for we all preferred to fight.

"An hour and a half afterward Admiral Nebogotoff returned, gathered his personal belongings, and the command was turned over to a high Japanese officer. "We were all on deck and the men were crying in despair. Nebogotoff himself was deeply moved and said with a voice trembling with emotion: "I did not want to surrender—but what else could I do, and I did it only to save the terrible loss of two thousand human lives."

"It was a crushing blow to us all. Nobody said a word. Admiral Nebogotoff then, turning to the sailors, admonished them to behave in an orderly manner and not start drinking, but nobody understood him, so feeble was his voice.

"From one group of men came curses; the gunner, Kuraseh, who stood next to me, sobbed like a child, while two officers, Tachetwerchin and Dyburski, tried to destroy the cannon, but they were stopped by the admiral who had promised on his word of honor to destroy nothing.

"As soon as the cruiser Isumrud noticed that we had capitulated she started northward at full speed, followed by three Japanese cruisers. They did not reach her; she ran aground in Olga Bay.

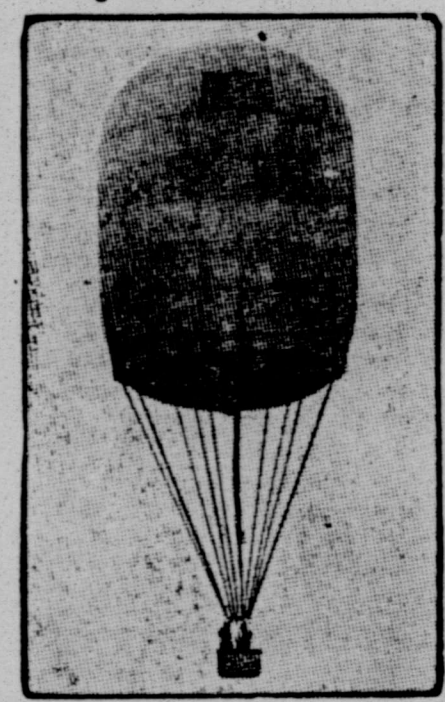

"Entirely unexpected to us all came the hoisting of the white flag, and I can say nothing about it. Some day we shall know all. I feel sure, however, that Nebogotoff did right and that with our old vessels and poor guns we would have had no chance against the Japanese."

HINTS FOR HOME ENTERTAINMENTS

By Edith A. Brown

BY EDITH A. BROWN.
(Copyright, 1905, by Joseph B. Bowles.)
The possibilities for the celebration of a wooden wedding are as numberless as the sands of the seashore. Wooden novelties are so easily obtained and details which may make the entertainment novel are so easily carried out that this celebration of this fifth year of wedded life is most attractive.
At this season of the year a wooden wedding celebration can be made a bit unusual by having a forest as the setting for the affair. Gather together a few friends for an informal evening by sending out invitations printed on shavings and wrapped in green leaves, to bring out the forest idea.
The rooms of the cottage must be decorated in branches and leaves, with leaves strung for curtains. If the entertainment may be celebrated near the house. Whether the forest yard of a summer home or the depth of the forest, itself is chosen for the entertainment, amusement and novelty can be introduced by having an amateur production of some of the scenes in Midsummer Night's Dream or Forest of Arden scenes from As You Like It. Where the friendships are close and the productions are given with a view to fun, nothing is more interesting than amateur theatricals, and this could easily be carried out in these scenes from Shakespeare, since historians tell us that the original productions of the work of the bard were given with no stage setting but those of nature.

If the entertainment is given in the forest, the refreshments, of course, must be of picnic style, and served immediately following the theatricals. If in the yard of the home, the same idea may be carried out, but if in the home, the dining room should be made as nearly like a forest as possible, with its decorations of branches and leaves. The table should be left bare, except for many green leaf dollies. The centerpiece may be sticks crossed in imitation of the crane. Hang from this a small wooden bucket filled with wood vines or flowers. Light the table with green candles set in wooden candle sticks and shaded with green leaf shades. The refreshments may be as elaborate or as simple as the host or hostess chooses—a nut salad would be appropriate, as would potato chips, olives, chocolate or caramel ice cream. If the brown idea is carried out, paste the green, with chocolate cake and coffee and finally bon bons made to represent acorns.
All of these must be served on wooden dishes with wooden knives and forks and spoons.
If a contest is desired the following, with the spaces to be filled in by names of woods, may be used:
A Fable of the Forest
The day wind met the night wind at twilight. The day had been fair, but the night came on with a sudden coolness which told of advancing storms, and the clash of the meeting resounded throughout the forest.
"Whence comest thou with thy cold breath?" cried the day wind.
"I come from the _____, where the strong current from the north seas carries past the message of the ice-bound to the land of flowers," said the night wind. "Whence goest thou?"
"I go to the east, to come again with the morning sun. But thou—thou hast met me and taken away the warmth within me. And now I must tarry here to _____ for the night among the _____ trees, who will take away the cold and bring back again the warmth for another day."
The night wind wrapped closer its _____ hood cloak, and watched the day wind shivering at its breath. "I am not _____," it said, cynically. "I know thou lovest me not. For thou comest like a _____ footed maiden, with flowers springing up for a carpet for thy feet and scattering sweet scents upon the breeze. Thou sendest to the four corners of the globe sunshine and gladness and maketh of my memory but _____—es. Thou slapest my back with a velvet-wrapped _____ rod, and thou drivest me away with a smile. Aye, even the night wind may be the _____ that turns."
The day wind lifted high its head and _____ with dignity.
"Thou flatterest me, good friend," it answered. "It is true that the flowers give me greeting, that the trees clap soft hands at my coming, that the _____ gladly gives forth its sweet stream when I blow my warm breath upon it, but these are but sweet influences; little did I reason that thou, with thy might and thy power shouldst envy me these things. Thou givest me courage, good friend, thou makest me to know that sweetness may be strength. See, here come the first _____ rays of my guide, the sun. I turn upon thee and I smile." Slowly the night wind faded.
The key to the spaces is found in the following words: Beech, pine, fir, ebony, poplar, sandal, ash, birch, worm, rose, maple, red.
As prizes for the contest the woman guessing most of the words correctly may be given a wedding bouquet of shavings, and the man Dutch shoes. Just before the evening closes auction off the souvenirs of the evening. These will be hung from a tree placed in one of the rooms and will be wrapped in a manner to hide their shape. They may be toy rolling pins, mixing bowls, potato mashers, coffee mills, bits of furniture and the man other tiny reproductions of the larger pieces of household goods in wood.
A Progressive Solitaire Party
A progressive solitaire party really sounds much less interesting than it is due. While the social card game is much fun the game of solitaire where the player or "old Sol" wins or loses, is fascinating. The party is

YOUTH'S HISTORY OF AMERICA.

"Now, Henry, you may tell me where Chicago is?"

"In the State of Illinois."

"That used to be so, but it was changed several years ago. The State of Illinois, as well as several other states, are now in the Beef Trust. James, you may tell me the difference between Bunker Hill and the Beef Trust?"

"In the one case we licked the British, and in the other the Beef Trust licked us."

"Correct. Sarah, you may tell me who originated the Beef Trust?"

"A band of patriots who found that patriotism was being held too cheaply in America. They raised the price about 15 per cent. Anyone who can afford porterhouse steak now is a real patriot and ready to die for his country."

"That is right. Charles, were the people for a time opposed to the Beef Trust?"

"They were, and much injustice was done them. The government even went so far as to indict some of the greatest patriots connected with it."

"And what followed?"

"The said greatest patriots took a skip to Europe, enjoyed the liberty of free governments for a few months, and then returned to find a chance to raise prices again and convince the people at large that they were the original Liberty Bell, and that the minute they stopped ringing Chicago is!"

A Patriot.

American independence would be a thing of the past."
JOE KERR.

Won't Take Long.

Yalevard—I think you have merely been flirting with me, and I'm going to tell you my mind—
Miss Summers—Well, please go ahead; I can spare two or three seconds now just as well as at any time.

STILL AT IT.

"I thought," said the little man with the loud voice, "I thought the President was after the railroads and their unjust rates."

"So he is," was the reply. "Have you got a case?"

"I have, sir. I weigh only 110 pounds. The fare for me to Chicago is $5."

"Well?"

Get Killed, Sir—and Even Things Up.

"Well, the fare for a fat man weighing 250 pounds is just the same. Shouldn't he pay more or I pay less?"

"It looks that way at first glance, but when you come to consider that if you are killed they pay as much for a small man as a big one you see where the equity comes in. Get killed, sir—get killed and even things up."

JOE KERR.

HOW HE WAS CRUSHED.

A dundish young man sat on the end of the seat of an open car with a sense of proprietorship, when another dundish young man jumped upon the footboard and stared at him for a moment and then said:

"Thir, why denth you hitch along?"

"Why should I hitch along?" queried the other.

"Because, thir—because I hlep. If you will pay attention you will see thath I hlep. I have had a front tooth taken out, thir. Yes, sir, I have had a front tooth taken out so as to make me hlep, and I demand, thir—I demand thath you hitch along and give me the end seat."

"You are way off, my hleping friend. Can't you see thath I have just had my ears manieured, and thath they are of a beautiful pink?"

"Oh, I thee," said the hleping young man. "Yes, thir, I see, and I will admit thath pink ears beat a hlep, and I will climb over you and thit down and feel duly crushed."

JOE KERR.

BRINGING IT HOME.

"Ma," said the twelve-year-old boy, who was poring over the daily paper, "it tells here about a man who sold the government crop reports to speculators and made a big pile of money. Was thath wrong?"

"Why, of course, it was wrong."

"Will he go to Heaven?"

"Certainly not."

"Will He Go to Heaven?"

"If pa had sold crop reports instead of being a bookkeeper at $18 per week, would he have gone to Heaven?"

"No; but you see—"

"What, ma?"

"He'd have left money enough behind so thath the rest of us could have gone there!"

JOE KERR.

Particular Percy.

"I'll not go in to bathe today; I quite give up the notion. I shall wait until some other time, when nobody's using the ocean!"

HER IDEA.
Mrs. Newwed—Ethel, dear, here comes your new papa up the road.
Ethel (critically)—Was thath the best you could do, mamma?

ON THE SEASHORE.

She (after the quarrel)—I suppose you want your ring back.
He—No, keep it. I don't know any girl it would fit unless she wore it on her thumb.

NATURALLY.

Miss Subbubs—All the flowers in the garden are in bloom now, except the "four-o'clocks."
Mr. Wise—Maybe you forgot to wind them up.

POOR HENPECKED MISSIONARY.

Cannibal Chief—Why is thath missionary so willing to die?
His Cook—We captured his wife this morning and we've chained 'em together.

"Did de gang fire Dopey Digs fer votin' de Prohibition ticket?"
"Naw; he proved he was full when he done it."

THE REST BY MAIL.

"Well," said Stebbins, as he met Yorkes on the street the other day, "you have had a vacation."
"Yes; was away two weeks."
"Have a good time?"
"Very good, indeed."
Mr. Stebbins stood for a moment as if he wanted to inquire further, and Mr. Yorkes looked at him as if ready to answer, and then both passed on. The next morning both received postal cards by the same mail from each other. Stebbins wrote:

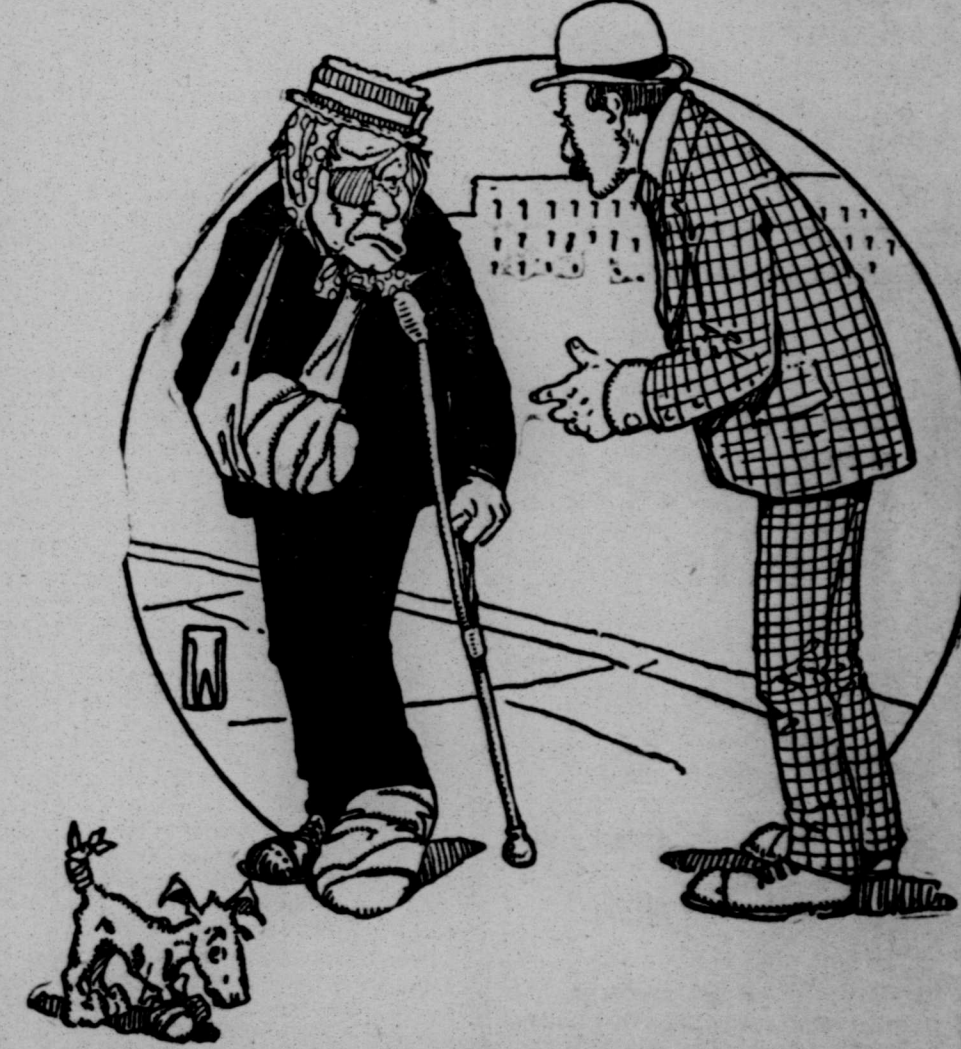

Received a Postal Card by the Same Mail.

"I meant to ask you if you caught any fish?"
And Yorkes wrote:
"Knowing what you wanted to ask, let me inform you in advance thath there was no lake, no bait, no lures, no fish and no fool."
JOE KERR.

Never Stops.

He—Man has a perfect organ of speech.
She—So has woman.
He—No, she hasn't. Hers is made without stops.

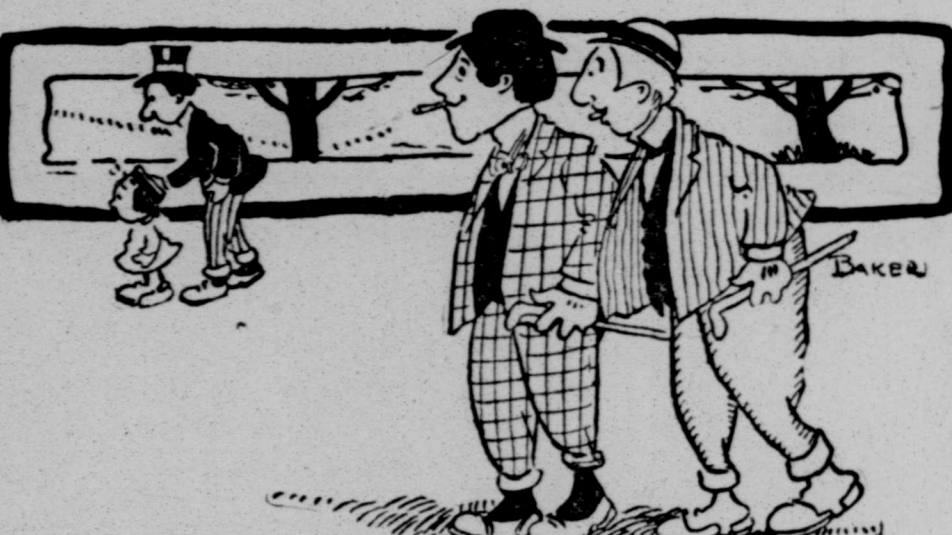

What do you think of this as a sample of woman's higher education? You don't mean it has caused your condition? Thath's just what I mean. My wife has been taking lessons in physical cultura.

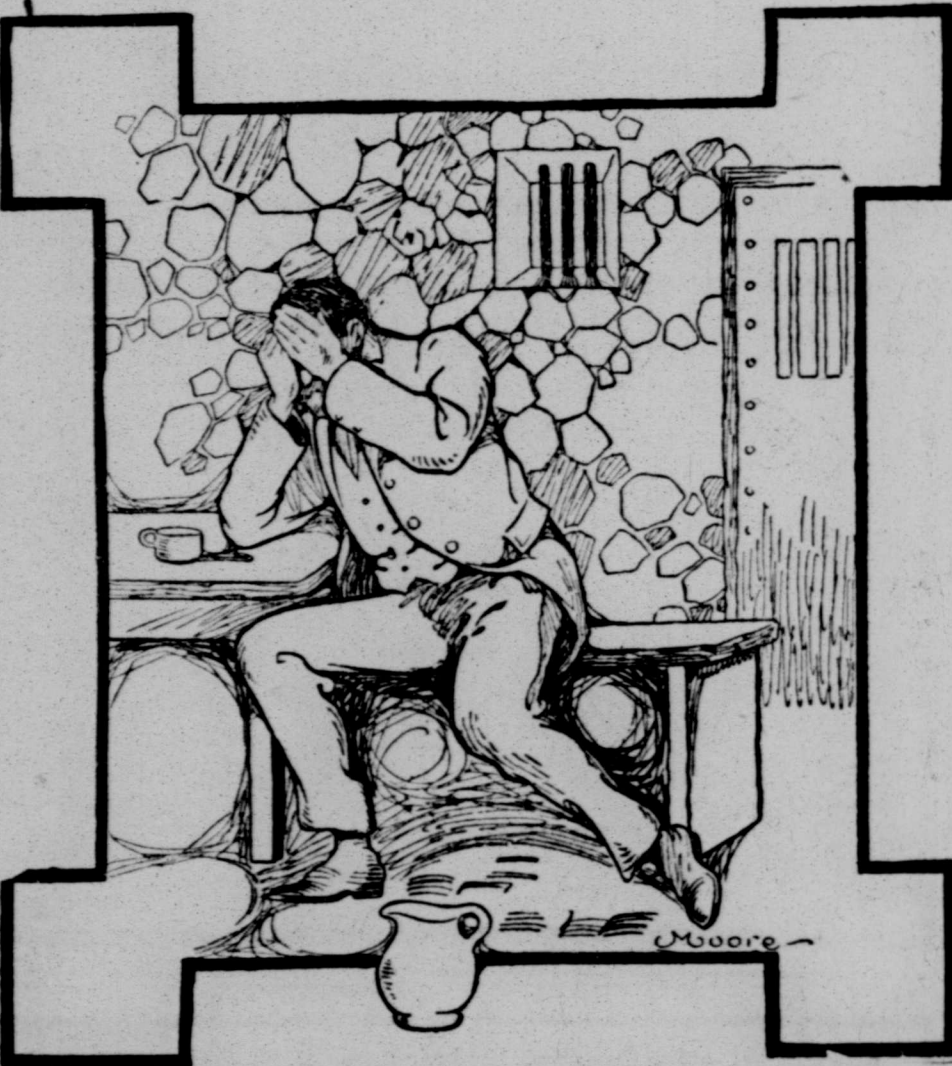

SHE KNEW HIM.

He—Foogle says he's deeply in love with Miss Thomas.
She—Don't you believe it. He's too shallow to be deeply in love with anyone.

EXPENSES HEAVY.

Hi—Are you going to spend all summer in town?
Di—Yes, my wife is doing all the spending out town thath I can afford.

The Man doth sorely weep, Behind the prison bars; But he would surely thank His very lucky stars,

Would he but raise his eyes And look about and see A friend who's come to help Him gain his liberty.

GRAIN

Special to The Telegram.
CHICAGO, Aug. 26.—The wheat market was extremely dull during the early part of the session. There was no news to turn opinion from the bear side of the market.

Corn was influenced somewhat by the break in wheat and the trade was light. Prices were steady at a decrease of 1-4 to 1-2.

Oats were the only cereal that did not show a loss at the close, trading being active in the May option during the early session and prices were a shade higher.

LIVESTOCK

MARKET REVIEW FOR WEEK
The general market of cattle for the week has embraced about the same in numbers as the week previous.

Steers have been scarce all the week and in consequence the supply has never been equal to the demand.

But prices have been steady with the close of one preceding Friday, and for the rest of the week some advance was noted.

Large enough to fill orders, prices ruling steady to a shade stronger.

But prices have proved to be higher this week than last, following up the advance begun then.

Calves have come forward in good numbers and are being sold at a heavy price, until the middle of the week, when strength was shown all around.

Hogs put on a good advance during the week, the highest point reached in two years.

Friday the market dropped back to which it was the first of the week, receipts of less quality hogs.

The stocker trade is assuming large proportions, prices running from $4.50 to $5.

Ships are strong to 25c higher, with very light receipts.

STEERS

The cattle run was made up principally of calves and cows, very few steers being on the market.

Two loads of these were sold at $2.80. They average 1,000 pounds. This sale was held to be steady with the week.

COWS

Among the cow supply was one load of very well finished animals that sold at $2.25.

The general run was only medium staff. The week closes steady with the advance noted Friday.

How White Mice Became White.

BY MARY GRAHAM.

Mamma Grey Mouse was seated near her cozy nest that held her little ones. She was telling stories to them, and had just about exhausted her supply of yarns when one of her children peeped out of the nest and said: "Please, mamma, tell us the story of how the White Mice became white. I overheard you relating it to Mrs. Long Tail the other night when you and she were hiding from the cat."

"And how they all did eat!"

corner where they could have slept even at bright noonday, had they desired to do so, for it was always the color of midnight here. The nest, of red, you might call it, was made of the most exquisite materials mortal mice ever beheld. It was composed of moss, of velvet, of soft satins, rare old lace and dainty laces. These materials were found by Mr. and Mrs. Grey Mouse in a huge wooden chest that was stored in a vaulted underground chamber leading from the cellar. One day in their ramblings about their domain they chanced to spy this chest, and straightway laid their sharp teeth to one of its corners. The result was that soon they had a door into the chest that would admit their bodies. So, in they went and found there the beautiful fabrics and lace I have just mentioned. They set to work to cutting up these things and carrying the bits to the corner where they built the nest I have told you about.

Gertie's Birthday Present, and the Threefold Pleasure it Brought. By Helena Davis.

Gertie Bryan's birthday fell on August 23d. The anniversary of her papa's birth came just three days later. The Bryans were not wealthy people. If one counted their wealth by dollars, but they were rich in love for each other and in possessing noble, unselfish characters. Mrs. Bryan managed her little house with the aid of one servant, a maid of all-work, and the ready assistance of Gertie, her 12-year-old little daughter.

The Bryans did not go to the country during the summer, but remained in their cozy little flat which was made quite fresh and "summery" by white linen "slip-overs" on the furniture, and flowers and ferns in the wicker boxes and on mantel and dining table. But when the heated term set in for earnest Mr. Bryan said one evening, as he gazed himself by an open window overlooking a burning street: "How I wish we could afford to take occasional trips down the river—just to smell the freshness of the country and see the green trees and fields."

But business had been so dull for Mr. Bryan the past year that the family had been obliged to curtail expenses in every way possible, and no little summer excursions had been planned for by them. "Why, almost every Friday we have had an event of much importance in the household of Bryan, for Gertie was the only close together—papa's and mine—I think we might postpone the celebrating of mine for three days and have a double birthday party on August 25th."

Then they both laughed, and after a little more coercion on Gertie's side the argument was closed and Gertie had won her mother's approval of her plan, and her promise that the money, instead of the suit, shoes and parasol, should be hers on her birthday. "But, dear," persisted Mrs. Bryan, "half the pleasure gotten from a present is in the surprise accompanying it. Now, there is no surprise awaiting you."

glittering gold coin lying in a white bed of soft cotton such as jewelers use for packing gems in. She threw her arms about her father's and mother's necks and gave them thanks and gratitude in the form of kisses and caresses. Then, as the dinner progressed, Mr. Bryan made bold to ask Gertie what she intended buying with the $10 gold piece. "Something which will give me untold pleasure," said Gertie. "But you must be patient, papa, and mamma too," she added, a shy look at her mother, "for I shall not complete my purchases till the end of the week."

A Favorite. A darling little maiden Lives in our tower. This darling little maiden Was never seen to frown. Her face is always placid, No tear-drops fill her eyes; She never pouts nor teases, Nor frowns nor loudly sighs. She's quite a little treasure, So say both Flo and Polly; But who would be just like her? For she's only a wax doll. ANNA COLLINS.

The Gay Trio of Hoppers. Three jolly froggies, Quite dandy and gay, Went out for a stroll On a fair summer day. Their hearts were as light As the birds that fly down As they strutted along Through the streets of Frog Town.

"There is our hostess," exclaimed Mrs. Bryan.

and papa wish to make me very, very happy you will give me the money those things would cost. Yes, on my birthday; if you'll just give me the money and tell me to buy a present for myself—the thing that I most desire. And Gertie put her hands carelessly on her mother's cheeks, and said: "But, Gertie, dear, you've been wanting the white suit, shoes and parasol all summer long, and you're so disappointed if you don't get them."

place it beside her plate. After all, it's a pretty idea. And to Mrs. Bryan's great relief, she was not called upon for further explanation. And the following day—Gertie's birthday—passed just as it had been planned. Mrs. Bryan came home early in the afternoon and accompanied his wife and daughter to an art museum where two hours were spent delightfully. They returned to a dainty little dinner, which Gertie had brewed, holding 12 lighted candles one candle for each year that Gertie had lived, occupied the center of the table in a mass of white glory. And beside Gertie's plate was a tiny, gay, be-ribboned pasteboard box on the top of which rested a card bearing the names of the donors, with a sweet message of love and heartfelt wishes for many happy returns of the day.

val upon your parents and sisters to come and see my gift. Here's a quite enough for a hundred mice. "So, saying, off the two scampered, getting bold indeed since not a sound nor sight had come to frighten them. They joined the others of their family and dilated on the deliciousness of the new food they had partaken of, urging their parents and sisters to go with them to the spot and see and eat for themselves. But it took some coaxing, and much assurance that there was not the least danger to encounter before the cautious old ones and their three daughters could be induced to go above stairs. At last, however, they were persuaded to go, and seven gray mice trailed or, to only up the stairs and went in a body to the pantry. And how they slipped! In a twinkling from the time they ran up the stairs they returned to the cellar with stomachs so rounded out that their closest friends would not have recognized them. The next day there came into the house two men servants, stoking their noses into every corner that a mouse might creep to. They found a mouse hole behind the great wine cask where Mr. and Mrs. Grey Mouse with their family were located. After going pretty thoroughly over the cellar the two servants entered the vaulted underground chamber and discovered the mouse hole eaten in the oak chest. "Ah, ha!" said one. "The little pests have been here. Then they picked up the chest and carried it above stairs. Then a woman servant came hurrying down into the cellar and burst herself at something in the corner where the chest had stood. "Now, my small friends, we'll see how you like that," she said, and then she departed.

Little Biographies of Big Men. Among the names of the greatest explorers of Arctic regions is that of John Davis, whose great achievement will live forever in the strait that bears his name. John Davis was born at Sandridge, England, "on the left bank of the Dart, between Totnes and Dartmouth" in the year 1550. One of his boyhood friends was Walter Raleigh, who afterward was knighted by Queen Elizabeth. This friendship, begun in youth lasted throughout life. John Davis was married to Faith Tuford, daughter of Sir John and Lady Tuford, September 24th, 1582. The record of this marriage is still to be seen on the old parish register at Stoke Gabriel. It was on June 7th, 1585, that two small sea vessels sailed out of Dartmouth harbor to go in search of a northwest passage to China and India. These ships constituted John Davis' Arctic expedition. The names of these vessels were "Sunshine" and "Moonshine." Davis commanded "Sunshine," a ship of 50 tons, and his crew consisted of 11 seamen, one carpenter, four musketeers and one boy. The "Moonshine," of 35 tons, was commanded by William Bruton. On July 20th the rugged mountains of Greenland were sighted. Of this ice-covered land Captain Davis said: "It is the land of Desolation. The hideous noise of the ice and the loathsome view of the shore bred strange conceits among us. On July 23rd land was sighted in 61° 15' N. This land proved to be a group of islands. Davis found himself on the shores where now are located the Danish settlement of Godthaab. Here he had his first acquaintance with the Eskimo. Taking the four musketeers on land, he bade them play while he, in company with his companions of the ship's crew, danced to the music. This conduct was an overture of friendship toward the natives who had demonstrated a hostile feeling for the newly-arrived people of another world. But friendly relations soon existed between Davis and the surprised natives, and the Eskimo explorer had some trade with them in a business way. After pushing northward as far as 69° 40' N. Captain Davis found that his stock of provisions was giving out; so on August 23d he turned his ships homeward, entering Dartmouth harbor September 8th. It was during a voyage to the East India in the year 1604 that the great navigator lost his life at the hands of Jap-

Old Lion's Fright. Once there was a lion bold, Feared not man nor beast; And he stalked forth—so 'I'm told—For some kind of helpless prey; But in vain he searched all day. Toward the eve he came upon A shifty, silent pool; Then he stopped to rest a bit, And thought—his tongue to cool; But he saw his image there Mirrored in the water clear. He was frightened so, 'y'm say, That he turned and fled Through the dying light of day, Roaring as he sped; For he thought the water clear Was a horrid monster's lair. M. D. W.

work cut out for his successors. He lighted Hudson into his strait. He lighted Baffin into his bay. He lighted Egged to the scene of his Greenland labors. But he did more. His true-hearted devotion to the cause of Arctic discovery, his patient scientific research, his loyalty to his captives, his dauntless gallantry and enthusiasm, form an example which will be a beacon-light to maritime explorers for all time to come."
