

Huntin' AND Fishin'
By Harve Pennington

The term "live bait" refers to food used in luring a fish to a hook, trap, etc., as distinct from plugs and flies, which are imitations of food designed to achieve the same purpose. Though the latter is gaining in popularity, the use of live bait is by far the most widely used fishing technique. Live bait falls into two general categories: fresh water bait, and salt water bait. So-called "live bait" can actually be dead so long as it is fresh for fishing methods requiring it. Food used to lure fish is also called "natural bait." Most popular of all baits is the common angle worm. Few are the fish that won't bite on it. Some fishermen prefer to run the hook into the large end until the bend and the shank are covered, while others had rather bunch the worm by inserting the hook through about a half-inch from the head, and then again at intervals. The thought is that since there are many ways to put them on a hook, the fastidious fisherman is left to use his own pet method.

Look for worms in the little mounds of soil in the shady sections of gardens, or where the earth is moist. Any where the soil is black and fertile will yield them in abundance. The fisherman is cautioned to keep the worms in an open or ventilated can with a lot of dirt. Hellgrammites is a good bait for both largemouth and small-mouth bass. These are usually found in and around rocks of shallow shady streams. After hooking under the "collar" take care not to let the hellgrammite settle on rocky bottoms as it will crawl under rocks and foul a line easily. Another excellent bait, also found under rocks is the crayfish. It should be hooked through the tail.

The term Minnow generally embraces the small fish (one to four inches) of any species. Since most fresh water fish are cannibalistic, they will eat small fish. Your minnow bait therefore is a good one. It can be caught in a drop net baited with bread, cracker crumbs or corn meal. Remember not to place the hook too deeply under the dorsal fin, the minnow should be hooked so as to give a realistic wiggle in the water. This same technique applies for shiner mummies, smelt or any small fish.

Stubble Mulching

A moisture penetration check was made in the vicinity of Blanco community on two pieces of wheat land following the recent rains. They were both on about the same slope. One piece of land had a fair cover of wheat stubble and the moisture penetration from about four inches of rain was only nine inches. The other piece of land had a good cover of stubble and had been chiseled before the rain. The moisture penetration was twelve inches, with enough free moisture in the first foot to penetrate another three inches, making a total penetration of fifteen inches.

Considering that the soil would hold two inches of moisture available to plants per foot of depth, the fifteen inch penetration would have 2 1/2 inches of available water, whereas the nine inch penetration would only leave 1 1/2 inches of water available for plant use.

The average annual rainfall for the Floyd County SCD is about 29 inches. The four inches above would normally be one-fifth of the total annual rainfall. From this information we can readily see that the farm that was not chiseled would retain only 7.5 inches of effective rainfall, or about 37%. The chiseled farm would retain 12.5 inches of effective rainfall, or about 62%.

Assuming that each inch of water will produce one-half bushel of wheat, which is a very conservative figure, the additional 5 inches of water on the chiseled farm would produce 2 1/2 bushels per acre more than the non-chiseled farm. Applying this figure to a 320 acre wheat farm, the increase of stubble mulching and chiseled over one-way or no land preparation, would be 800 bushels. And 800 bushels times $2.00 per bushel equals $1600.00. Does it pay to chisel? Stubble mulching increases production by increased water intake and by covering the soil and protects it from high winds, shading the ground and reduces evaporation, breaking the fall of the raindrop, thus preventing soil from being splashed into suspension and carried off by any run-off water. The organic matter on the surface helps prevent crusting and makes it easier to obtain a good stand on planting.

All of these things put together mean an increased income plus good protection to your soil which should maintain a highly productive soil for an indefinite period.

Sid Thomas Tells Of Jerusalem

(Note: The following letter is from Sid B. Thomas Jr. who, with his wife, the former Mary Jones, is touring the Holy Land. This letter was written to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sid Thomas of Lockney and tells of conditions in modern day Jerusalem. From Jerusalem they flew to Cairo, Egypt for three days, then came back to Jerusalem and into Israel to visit the Sea of Galilee and surrounding country. From Haifa or Tel-Aviv they flew to Rome for a few days, then to Naples to embark on the USS Independence. They are scheduled to land in New York on August 11.)

THE OLD TIMER SAYS!

"It seems to me that the smallest package in the world is a man who's all wrapped up in himself."

the father is in town trying to peddle his melons, grain or fruit to an already crowded market. It's not hard to understand the reason for their simple culture. If it's easier and closer to drive the sheep and goats in front of your car, they do it. If its expedient to take the donkey with the grain sacks down the crowded streets, why not? And if its convenient to make a toilet out of the main street, or not to put screens around the windows, or not take a bath, then these are the things to do.

On the whole, it seems that the Christian Arabs are perhaps better educated and have, generally, better living conditions than the Moslems. Both are sadly in need, both economically and in the field of education.

We arrived 6 days ago, and were fascinated at the start, by the stone-chippers that work outside our window. They do nothing from sun-rise to sun-set but sit cross-legged in front of the piece of rock they are working on, and chip it with a hammer or chisel. When they get it to just the shape to fit the particular hole, it's put upon the building or fence, for which it was hewn. As they are skilled labor, they get $1.50 a day!

Another element of their culture that is very picturesque, is the sheep and goat people. These animals are herded usually in a mixed group, from hill to hill, with the shepherd living with them. They come to know him so well that he can call each one by name. At one watering place where we stopped there was five different groups of the animals each standing and waiting patiently until the shepard gave the word, then going on in the water after a word from the shepherd, they would move out, and the next little group go in. The grass they live on is very short and burned. It doesn't look to me as if a whole hill would keep a cow alive.

Still another distinctive element is the Bejoun family, the gypsies of the desert. They are nomads, travelling where they please, and living back off a way from towns, in isolated tents, always by themselves. It is common knowledge that all of the adults of this people have at one time, been forced to drink a camels vomit for water. If the camel has been watered within the last 2 or 3 days, its not supposed to be too bad.

In spite of all the hard conditions, this is still a Holy Land and a Holy City. It is Holy to the Moslems, Jews and Christians alike. To the Moslem, it is the place where 2 of their prophets ascended to heaven. To the Jew, it is still the chief city of their Promised Land. To the Christian, it is the land that gave birth to an Eternal story. This is why pilgrims of all three faiths visit it each year by the thousands.

Practically all of the traditional sites have been covered with churches of all nations, from Russian to Egyptian; therefore it is very expensive to make the rounds. All of the hundreds of tourists do nothing all day long but run around asking "where was the crucifixion?" "Where was the tomb," etc., and then "How do you know?" That way, it seems to me misses the very heart of what Jerusalem has to offer, for the question is not at all "Where?" but "Why?" If we keep in mind the "why," no amount of Moslem mosques or swindling guides steals away the charm of Jerusalem.

HEART-FELT RELIGION (No. 2)

Week before last we began a study of the heart that is in the conversion of man. We found that it is at least three different divisions: INTELLECT, REASON, understands and believes, WILL, which purposes and obeys, EMOTION, which trusts, desires and loves. Does the "scriptural" heart, then, have unchangeable feelings in conversion? How does the heart part in conversion? Let us notice these questions

1 Cor. 15:1-2 Paul says, "Moreover, brethren, I declare unto you the gospel which I preached unto you, whereby ye have received, and wherein ye stand: By which also ye are saved if ye keep in memory what I preached unto you, unless ye have believed in vain." The heart that Paul preached unto the Corinthians worked the heart of man but notice how it worked. It had to do with their intellect. They heard the words spoken by Paul and they understood and believed the things preached. It had to do with the Will of their hearts. They obeyed and obeyed the things commanded. Where is the hint that they had a feeling better felt than there is an insinuation that they were converted by their intellect? Yes, Friends, the Corinthians had a heart religion, but it was not a feeling that was converted, it was the nature of man. It was not a thing that made a break of nature.

Now let us notice the case of the Romans. In Romans 1:18 we read, "Know ye not, that to whom ye give yourselves servants to obey, whether of sin unto death, or of obedience unto righteousness? But God he thanked, that ye were the servants of sin, but ye have obeyed from the heart that doctrine which was delivered you. Being then free from sin, ye become the servants of righteousness: notice that the same thing took place with the Romans had taken place with the Corinthians. The Gospel had been preached upon them. They had believed with their intellect, they had obeyed it with their hearts. Now they could trust in the promise of God.

Now, we could go on and on with the teachings of the scriptures and show example after example of conversion in the book of Acts. We do not find such a "heart religion" as many teach today. You will not accept the doctrine of any matter other than religious matters. In other words you want evidence that is concrete. Why not demand evidence in religious matters? God has given evidence in the scriptures but not in some mysterious manner or in a way that is contrary to the nature of man. Why will you not pray for God to come into their "hearts" and that has promised that if we will open he will come and dwell with us. Why did Christ say "Behold, I stand at the door and knock." Yet men plead and cry unto Him and say that their hearts - does Christ have to be persuaded? How is man persuaded other than through the reasons, understands, believes, intends, purposes, obeys? Will you not be persuaded to obey the doctrine of Christ? When you obey from that form of doctrine, you will be made free from sin if you obey from the heart. Why not with faith in Christ, repentance from sin, and with Christ in Baptism unto death, raised in a new life? This is the form of doctrine that Paul preached the Romans free from sin. This was a heart religion that the Romans had.

Marketing Hogs Must Be Done Carefully

College Station. — A live hog weighing 200 pounds is worth more than $50 at most markets but a dead one represents a loss instead of a profit. And warns, E. M. Roggenbrecht, swine husbandman for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, thousands of hogs will be dead when they reach the market unless special attention is given to making their summer trip to town a comfortable one.

He says hogs should not be disturbed prior to shipping and that loading and shipping should be done either early in the morning or evening when it is cool. Never over feed prior to shipping for hot weather coupled with nervous digestion can make the trip to town costly from the standpoint of losses.

Clean, wet sand makes the best bedding and it's a good idea, points out the specialist, to give the sand an extra wetting after loading. Check the truck to make sure there is sufficient ventilation to prevent suffocation but watch for heavy wind drafts which will cause the hogs to pile up.

Load the hogs slowly and quietly driving them with a broom or a canvas slapper. Never use a whip, club or cane, says Roggenbrecht, for bruises are expensive.

While in transit, the hogs should be checked at least once per hour. Fast or reckless driving gains little time and is seldom worth the price that is often paid.

The important thing, says Roggenbrecht, is to get the hogs to market in top condition. Dead hogs can take the profit from an entire shipment. And finally, says the specialist, don't overload. The few extra head crowded into the truck may prove to be very expensive passengers.

G-A School Bill Brings Drastic Changes In Texas

This is the first in a series of three articles explaining the minimum foundation, or Gilmer-Aiken, school program. The writer was a member of the original Gilmer-Aiken Committee, has been superintendent of schools at Texarkana for 33 years and is chairman of the Texas State Teachers Association's legislative committee.

By H. W. Stilwell
A 1947 legislative fight over teachers' salaries led to complete reorganization in 1949 of Texas' public school system and gave the state, almost overnight, a high ranging in education.

Texans had been working toward such a goal for more than a century. Mirabeau B. Lamar and Sam Houston both had urged high quality, state-supported public schools. The State Constitution directs the Legislature to "establish and make suitable provision for the support and maintenance of an efficient system of public free schools."

Three years after Houston's victory at San Jacinto, the state made the first important provision for appropriating lands to be used in establishing a permanent endowment for a public school system. Texans have sought better schools ever since; passage of the Gilmer-Aiken school reform laws in 1949 climaxed a long struggle.

In 1947, when the Legislature studied a proposed $2,000 minimum salary for teachers, its attention was called to the rising cost of education, the failure of the public schools to reach nearly one-third of the school age children in Texas and unsatisfactory methods of distributing state funds for education. These things, coupled with a shortage of qualified teachers and the prospect of a rapidly-growing population, prompted the late Gov. Beauford Jester to suggest a comprehensive study of public education.

Senator A. M. Aikin, Jr., of Paris and Representative Claud Gilmer of Rocksprings sponsored a resolution which created an 18-member committee to make such a study. This committee, of which former Senator James E. Taylor of Kerens was chairman, worked for eighteen months — and drew on the advice and suggestions of an estimated 100,000 laymen — before making recommendations to the Legislature and to the Governor.

This resulted in the introduction of the three Gilmer-Aiken bills and a dramatic legislative fight, which lasted five months, over them.

Their passage started a new era in public school education in Texas. Under the minimum foundation program, every child of school age in Texas is guaranteed a minimum standard of education, including nine months of schooling a year. More than 400 school districts had previously had shorter school years.

The cost of the program depends on school attendance which determines the number of teachers to be employed and the amount of operating costs; the training and experience of teachers which determine positions on the salary and the number of school children transported in school which determines the transportation costs.

Thus, the cost of education can rise only in proportion to the increase in the number of children attending school. The standard of teacher employed, State financial aid is provided in accordance with local communities' ability to support public education. Ability is measured by an economic index formula in the law.

The minimum foundation program sets certain basic standards for the public schools. These standards, below which no school can fall, determine the amount of money. Each local district contributes to the cost in proportion to its ability, and the state provides the additional needed to maintain the minimum standards.

MYSTERY FARM NO. 9

Can you identify this North Floyd County farm? This aerial view was made last fall while cotton was being harvested as you can tell by the trailer-load of cotton in the foreground. Also some clue to the direction the house faces may be found in the shadow of the plane making the picture also in the foreground. The first person identifying the farm by calling The Beacon office will receive two tickets to the Plains Theatre or Seale Drive-In. Handley Shop & Pump Co. will give the original photo of this scene to the owner or occupant if they will call or come by The Beacon office not later than Monday and give us some information concerning the farm.

My righteousness I hold fast, and will not let it go; my heart shall not reproach me as long as I live.—Job. 27:6.

What may we expect now that an armistice has been signed in Korea? Has anything been settled in the Korean war? Most of us are not well enough informed to know what to expect of that stalemate but there are several predictions that apparently can be safely made. One is that the armistice will not lead to real peace. The United States will continue to prepare for war. We cannot afford to do anything else in the present world condition. As some national leaders have said recently we may live under the threat of war for 40 years. Of course a real revolution in Russia would solve the world's peace problems quickly but perhaps that is too much to hope for.

A second prediction that can safely be made is that President Syngman Rhee of Korea will not get his unified Korea. We know that neither the Communists nor the United Nations will agree to give up the part of Korea they now hold and it is not reasonable to believe that the Communists will agree to a free election to determine the form of government for the entire country since they would no doubt lose such an election.

We can be very thankful, however, that actual war has ceased for the present and that our boys both in the fighting line and in prisoner of war camps may be coming home soon. We can be thankful also that our boys are not dying in battle as they have been for the past three years. Compared to a fighting war there is a blessing even in an uneasy armistice.

The rains came. Although a little late yet Floyd County is fortunate that we received enough to break the drought for the present at least. The rumor that the editor's absence from the county last week was responsible for the rain is completely in error. We spent our first night away from Lockney at Abilene and it rained seven inches there that night. Doesn't that indicate that the editor's presence is not a hindrance to the rain?

In case you are of the opinion that the only cotton in Texas is on the Plains you are mistaken. The cotton in the immediate Abilene area is good and with recent rains is almost sure to make good. Also in the Austin Temple-Waco-Corsicana-Ft. Worth area there is lots of good cotton. Much of it is in full bloom and it appears that they will also make cotton. In the Houston-Galveston area plenty of rain has fallen but they apparently do not go in for cotton very much. In the Corpus area where cotton has been produced in large quantities in past years, much of it has been plowed up this year due to the drought.

The school teacher situation may get worse according to a survey made by the State Teachers Association recently. This survey shows that there will be only 2,550 new teachers available for approximately 8,000 vacant teaching jobs in Texas next September. For one reason or another the annual turnover in teaching personnel is nearly 25%, the association says.

RENEWAL OF A BEAUTIFUL FRIENDSHIP

With Our EXCHANGES

TRIBUTE TO A PREACHER

The other day in Emporia, the longest funeral procession that has formed in 10 years followed the Rev. John Jones three long miles in the hot July sun out to Dry Creek Cemetery. Now a funeral procession may mean little or much. When a rich and powerful man dies, the people play politics and attend his funeral for various reasons. But here was the body of a meek, gentle little man — a man, "without purse or scrip." It won't take 20 minutes to settle his estate in probate court. He was a preacher of the gospel — but preachers have been buried before this in Emporia without much show of sorrow.

The reason so many people lined up behind the hearse that held the kind old man's mortality was simple; they loved him. He devoted his life to helping people. In a very simple way, without money or worldly power, he gave of the gentleness of his heart to all around him. We are apt to say that money talks, but it speaks a broken, poverty-stricken language. Hearts talk better, clearer, and with a wider intelligence. This old man with the soft voice and the kindly manners knew the language of the heart and he spoke it where it would give zest to joy. He worked manfully and with a will in his section of the vineyard, and against odds and discouragements he won time and time again. He was infinitely patient and brave. He held a simple, old-fashioned faith in God and his loving kindness.

When others gave money — which was of their store — he gave prayers, hard work and an inspiring courage. He helped. In his sphere he was a power. And so when he lay down to sleep hundreds of friends trudged out to bid him goodby with moist eyes and with cramped throats to wish him sweet slumber.

And then they turned back to the world to make money — to make money — what a hollow impotent thing! What is a man profited if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul? The above editorial was written in 1901 by the late William Allen White and appeared in his Emporia (Kansas) Gazette. —Thoughts for Thursday in Tulsa Herald.

GOLF TOURNAMENT

The first Golf Tournament has been completed for the Petersburg Golf Club. They say it was a grand success, we wouldn't know what it takes to make a successful golf tournament unless it is a lot of intestinal fortitude to walk from five to ten miles in the heat of the day hitting a little two ounce ball, looking around, find it and swat it again, and finally hemming it up and knocking it into a little hole about the size of the top of a small tomato can. A man will play golf in the heat of the day but his wife can't get him to mow the lawn after sundown or in the cool of the morning, too much work, and it is tiresome. A golf player will also follow the little ball over a 160 acre pasture, walk his sox down into his shoes and sweat like a nigger at an election but can't chop three rows of cotton. Yes, golf is a funny game, or it is the player? More power to the local Golf Club, may it straighten some of the kinks out of the backs of some of the 'ol flub-dubs and make them feel like a new man. —Petersburg Journal.

A GOOD MOTTO

"LIE, STEAL, DRINK AND SWEAR!" That motto was used 50 years ago in the weekly Wiarton (Ontario) Echo. Under the motto was the editor's explanation: "When you lie, let it be down to pleasant dreams; when you steal, let it be away from immoral companions; when you drink, let it be pure water; when you swear, let it be that you will support your hometown paper, pay your subscription, and have your printing done locally." To all of which we add a loud "Amen." — Thursday in Post Dispatch.

50,000 Scouts Make Jamboree One Big Party

(Note: The following form letter tells of what went on out at the Boy Scout Jamboree. You'll find it interesting.)
 Dear Edgar:

Now don't go calling me lazy just because I'm sending you this kind of a letter. Wait'll you get a hint of the schedule of what we're doing and seeing down here, and you'll marvel that I've even got time to lick the stamp. Boy don't think I'll ever live long enough to forget this Jamboree down here in California.

Well Hollywood has built a lot of big cities and then smacked them down again a year or so later but even the movie makers who come out to Irvine Ranch have their mouths hanging open. This fabulous Jamboree "city" was built to stay up just one week, but it's got everything a city has except brick and steel.

They're gonna roll in 90 freight cars loaded with food and stuff, then another ten carloads of charcoal for cooking. Just think we're gonna eat 1224 steers! And when it comes to passing the fried chicken, nobody gets the wrong end. We're eating 50,000 chicken legs—no wings, no giblets, and no neck!

Scouts from pretty near every part of the country brought something here that would make 'em homesick, except that the Jamboree will only last one week. They got entrances to camps that look like gateways to fabulous resorts. And flags! Man, they must have a hundred times as many different flags here as you'll find in the United Nations. Even the tents are painted in gay colors—painted with chicks, bucking brones, light-houses and other colorful stuff.

This part of the country would be something to write home about even if we were not having a Jamboree.

They've got enough orange trees to stretch from here to Mexico, which they do.

We had a terrific show here the first night. Must've seen twice as many visitors as Scouts, but they got a big outdoor arena which gobbles up 150,000 people without much trouble. They put on a spectacular "Pageant of the West" with honest-to-goodness covered wagons, raiding Indians and everything. You'd never believe what they put on the stage here—complete western town, railroad trains, and a powerful lot of et ceteras. Hollywood could, and probably did learn something.

There's lots of strange-looking gadgets and stuff being swapped here. Lots of fellas are talking about how some sharp traders palmed off pine cones at the Jamboree in 1950 as "genuine Alabama porcupine eggs." No telling what the joker will be at this Jamboree, but there's bound to be at least one. The other day a fella from Texas said he wah having a few dinosaurs shipped in for swapping. Perfectly straight faced too.

Speaking of swapping, everybody talks about hopin to see a Scotsman here, so he can swap him something for a kilt. There's a few Canadians here, even though they're having their own Jamboree the same time we are. There's a Norwegian in a light blue outfit that makes him look like a fly boy.

I heard there's a Turk with a fez, but haven't seen him yet—gosh there's 50,000 guys around here, nobody's gonna meet up with every one. Did see some Indians though the ones with turbans not feathers.

They got an awful lot of ocean here and an awful lot of California touching the ocean. A beach a full mile long has been reserved just for us, and when nearly 25,000 yelling Scouts hit the surf it looks like the tide's coming in twice as fast.

Well guess that's about all there's room for except to tell you we're eating good, sleeping good, and having a wonderful time.

Yours,
 Udell Cunningham.

DECENTRALIZED COOKING

Decentralized cooking is becoming popular in the new modern automatic kitchens. Cooking and baking units are divided and placed at waist-level for the housewives' convenience. Cabinet manufacturers are meeting these new demands for tap-o-matic handles, insulated doors, adjustable shelves and new finishes.

Red Tape Cut On Securing Mexican National Labor

If Texas cotton cannot be harvested by local labor this year and farmers are forced to contract for Mexican Nationals to get the job done, they will find a considerable amount of red tape snipped from old procedures, the Texas Employment Commission announced today.

Effective July 1, the procedure, which originally took from five to six weeks to obtain Mexican Nationals, will be shortened to the extent that farmers will be able to get these workers in a week or ten days, TEC said.

Not only has much red tape been eliminated, but the farmer's cost has been reduced—from $15 per worker to $11 on the original contracts and from $7.50 to $5.50 for recontracting, the agency pointed out.

Under the old contracting procedure, farmers submitted orders all the way from 30 to 60 days in advance of actual need. This procedure worked a hardship on the farmer because information given today possibly would not be valid 30 or 60 days hence because of weather, crop conditions or some other reason. On top of all this, the order for Mexican Nationals had to be reviewed and approved by the Washington office of the Bureau of Employment Security. This delay was cumbersome and irritating to the farmer. This plan has been junked for one more workable. Now, the farmer need only go to an office of the Texas Employment Commission and places an order. If TEC determines that local or migratory workers are not available to do the job at the time and place specified by the farmer, then the local office will prepare an "Authorization to Contact Mexican National Agricultural Workers." The farmer will then select one of three Receptional Centers—El Paso, Eagle Pass, or Harlingen—where he intends to pickup his workers, and the local office of the TEC then mails the authorization to that point. The farmer then must send his check ($11 per worker) to that Reception Center. As soon as the check is received by the Reception Center, machinery is set in motion to get the workers from the interior of Mexico. The farmer is notified by the Reception Center when the workers are available, TEC said. The farmer must also submit a "Statement of Housing and Facilities," which describes the housing and living facilities offered. These must meet minimum standards for the number of workers he needs.

A farm employer who used Mexican Nationals in 1952 will not be required to furnish such statement this year, provided he does not request more workers than he had in 1952. If he does need more workers than he used in 1952, a new Statement of Housing and Facilities will have to be furnished, TEC said.

As under the old procedure, workers are contracted to individual farm employers and associations on the basis of individual need, however, under the new system, allocations are made on the basis of a total agricultural area need. The state has been divided into six Agricultural Areas set up on the basis of similarity of crops grown, climatic conditions, type of soil, the traditional movement of farm labor, and certain other factors. The areas are High Rolling Plains of the Texas Panhandle; Black Prairies-Cross Timbers areas; Diablo-Edwards Plateau; Rio Grande Plains; Lower Rio Grande Valley, and the Llano-Coastal areas.

If, after determining the number of workers locally available, the migrant workers normally flow into the area, Mexican Nationals contracted in that area. If a shortage results from the above factors, a ceiling of Mexican Nationals will be located to the area sufficient to set the shortage. Crop conditions or other factors in an area create a ceiling of 10% or more in supply. The ceiling for Mexican Nationals may be revised if necessary. Farmers desiring information concerning contracting of Mexican Nationals should go to the nearest Texas Employment Commission office.
