Cotton Promotion Meet In Floydada January 5

FLOYDADA Cotton producers of Floyd County will hear reports on the marketing and progress of commodity when Cotton Incorporated held an annual report meeting at 7 p.m., Thursday, January 5 at the Massey Community Building here. Cotton Incorporated is the fiber company of American cotton producers, Doyle G. Warren, county Extension agent, said.

Warren said the meeting will center around a specially-made color-sound motion picture giving a company-wide view of 1977 accomplishments. This will be followed by a brief update by a key member of the Cotton Incorporated staff.

The marketing outlook for 1978 also will be discussed.

There will be ample time for questions and discussion, and producers are encouraged to bring their wives, Warren said. He said the wives will be especially interested in parts of the film dealing with textile and product development.

The annual report meeting will give producers a firsthand look at what Cotton Incorporated is doing for them in production, textile and economic research, Warren said. It also will show the marketing, merchandising, and advertising efforts carried out by the company on the behalf of the producer.

The apartments, located north of Lockney General Hospital on Main Street, were completed last May.

Also Friday morning, the housing corporation voted to hold a stockholders meeting. Date of the meeting will be announced later.

Hackberry Lake—Lake Of Historical Fact, Tradition

By Felicia Applewhite
 Most anybody around Cedar Hill, north-east of Lockney, can tell something about Hackberry Lake is about two miles north and one-half east of Cedar. George Taylor is one of the ones that can tell you some things.

To begin with George's grandfather Ceph Fortenberry's first home on the Plains was a half dug-out on the north-east side of the lake. Early-day air conditioning was made possible by putting a dwelling on the north-east side of a lake because much of the summer wind was from the south-west.

It was on the window sill of this half dug-out that George's grand-mother found a rattle snake stretched out in the sun. There was no screen on the window to keep him out.

Fortenberry homesteaded there because of the lake with its bountiful supply of water.

The location and name of the lake were publicized by word of mouth by families moving west in frontier times. It was a good camping place because of the tall, waving native grass for stock and for plenty of water for all purposes.

"Mama and papa were early-day settlers coming to Floyd County in 1890 as homesteaders. Our house was near a big lake. Often freighters and travelers, passing through the country, would camp near our house so they could water their horses from out lake," says Peet, Fortenberry Kelly.

Such Plains lakes were a wonder to people coming here. Hackberry was of special interest because of its size and of the amount of water it held. Too, this lake looked "mighty good" at the end of a long, and often hazardous journey by wagon from other parts ending in a laborious climb up the steep Caprock.

"I don't know exactly where Hackberry's name came from," says Taylor. At one time there could have been hackberry growing there. Near there, under the Cap it grows well. There is still a hackberry growing in the corner of J.A. Welch's place not far away."

The Hackberry Lake location had an advantage that Ceph Fortenberry was soon to learn. This location afforded a means for him to make a living for his growing family. He tells about it in "The Fortenberry Family record."

He found that he could get wood for the hauling not far from hackberry Lake just under the Cap. He sold it to people in Estacado, Floydada, Emma and Della Plains. Too, there was "a small town of Lockney northeast of Della Plains."

"I made a living hauling wood from the canyons," he wrote. "Lots of the wood was used to burn, but if we saw a tree that was good for posts, we cut it into posts. Wood haulers would come fifty miles to get the wood."

"We were paid about 5 dollars a load. I don't think I sold very many loads for less than five dollars. There was usually a cord or a cord and a half in every load."

"I hauled wood from the canyons for six years. During the first four years, I hauled a load every three days."

"The Fortenberry holdings expanded, so as the Fortenberry children married one by one, each was given a quarter section of land.

Many exciting and interesting experiences of these children and of the grandchildren are told in the family book in connection with Hackberry lake

"We were over there at the lake one time," says Taylor, "with a shot gun. We were really too small to have a gun. There were three of us—my older brother, my younger brother and I. My older brother was accustomed to resting the muzzle of his gun on his toe."

"Accidentally, he triggered the gun and shot two of his toes off. Excitedly, I started to unload the other chamber, but my brother told me to lay the gun down and go for John Kelly."

"I ran a mile to get John. Just as John and I were coming up, a preacher came by in a Model T. John stopped him. He took my brother to Lockney to Dr. Henry."

Antelopes, turkeys and other wild birds furnished food for early settlers around Cedar Hill and Hackberry vicinity. It took some "know-how" and some effort to get and to preserve such food. Some boys carried birds wires. Birds in the winter came to where horses had been fed and had scattered grain on the ground. When enough of the birds were busy eating, the boy would throw the wire into them and kill three of four to be dressed for eating.

"My mother," says Taylor, "knew the ways of preserving and cooking food. She said when they were coming wedding in fellowship hall of the church. Assisting as hostesses were Mrs. Wayne Hill, Mrs. Gene Tyer, Mrs. Wesley Roddy, all of Hale Center. Serving at the bride's table was Terri Tyer, Hale Center; Debbie Tarwater of Midland, and Beth Thompson of Dallas. At the groom's table serving were Rhonda Jordan, Floydada and Kerri Cochran, Pecos, both sisters of the groom.

The long chiffon sleeves were full and ended at the wrists with tight, wide lace cuffs. The three-quarter length veil of chiffon flowed from a Juliet cap. The bridal bouquet was of white roses and baby's breath.

The bride's table was covered with an ivory linen cloth appliqued with sheer linen flowers. Punch was served from a silver punch bowl. The three-tiered cake was covered with off-white roses, centered with a miniature arrangement in a china bride's slipper which had been used on the bride's parents' wedding cake. A centerpiece adorned the table: a large ivory candle in a hurricane lamp surrounded with a candle ring of off-white carnations and greenery. Other appointments were crystal and silver.

Nonsmokers Have Right To Breathe Clean Air

Smokers have a right to pursue their habit. Nonsmokers have a right to clean air. Sometimes these rights clash.

The American Medical Association's pamphlet: Smoking: Facts You

Should Know, points out that a person doesn't have to be a smoker himself to suffer ill effects from cigarettes. A nonsmoker in the company of a smoker breathes in smoke from the burning end of the cigarette as well as the exhaled smoke.

FLOYD COUNTY DAY CARE CENTER
December 16, 1977

Dear Friend,

As we near the end of another year, we look back on our most successful year of taking care of the children of our community.

Our average daily attendance last year was 35 and in the busy summer months we took care of over 50 children many days. A total of 7,426 children attended the Center this year.

The financial needs of the Center have been met, mostly through the contributions of individuals, organizations, and businesses. Our budget this year was $25,737.06. Of this amount only $6,675.34 came through the Government Commodity program.

At this time our board of directors, our coordinator Betty Fuller and I sincerely appreciate your help in maintaining the Center another year.

We thank you for your help and wish for you and yours a very Merry Christmas and Blessed New Year.

Sincerely Yours,

Wendell Tooley

Charles Stenholm Speaks To Abilene Farmer Rally

Charles Stenholm, candidate for Congress from the 17th Congressional District, told farmers assembled at the Farmers Rally in Abilene on December 14, that few people, a short time before the rally, would have believed that so many would attend the meeting to show support for farmers. But the turnout, Stenholm said, proved the deep concern that farmers and other members of the community had for the farm crisis.

Stenholm, while remarking on the success of the rally, closed his speech with the questions, "What next? What happens today and tomorrow? How do we begin to achieve those very worthwhile goals that you are here today to demonstrate your interest in achieving?"

As a farmer personally involved in the problems of present day agriculture, Stenholm has prepared and offers his own answers to the questions that he asked on December 14. "Those farmers in the 17th Congressional District who have participated in the recent rallies and tractor parades should be justifiably proud that they have been peaceful and have demonstrated widespread understanding and support for a solution to the farm price dilemma. The question now is, 'Where do we go from here?'"

Farmers have the attention of the nation. We must now act positively and responsibly. We must not become party to any violent action; any obstruction of local retail operations; or any activities that are disruptive or abusive to our customers. We must keep in mind the absolute necessity of maintaining and expanding foreign and domestic markets, and above all the general welfare of this nation. Our proposals must be supported by a large majority of farmers, but they must also be supported by consumers, and a Congress and President dominated by advisors from more populous sections of this nation.

The consumer must understand that bankruptcy or other factors drastically reducing production will surely mean skyrocketing prices. The consumer is working in his or her own interest when supporting a fair profit for producers. Every business must have a profit to continue to operate. If there is any doubt in your mind concerning the seriousness of the farm cost-price squeeze, the plain facts are that the possible loss of independent farmers threatens the very fabric of our agricultural productivity, and if that fabric is destroyed, so will be the nation.

Such a critical situation demands leadership and immediate action by those who can take steps to correct this dangerous economic situation, which undoubtedly can affect the future of America. We must, however, realize that we did not get into this situation overnight; and we will not get out overnight. I am today proposing a 4 point program for us to build upon; a program that calls for meaningful participation by every farmer and a renewed understanding of the free enterprise system on the part of every consumer in the United States. Point Number 1: Farmers should immediately curtail all sales of non-perishable commodities at current prices. Farmers should then agree on an orderly marketing plan drawing on the abilities of all talents available. This plan should include a pricing structure that includes a reasonable profit and be consistent with domestic and foreign competitive factors. To Clarify what is said above, farmers should begin placing their products on the retail shelf with a reasonable markup and sell when the free market can use it and is willing to pay a fair retail price. If farmers must throw a "sale" to move inventory, let it come later, but not today. Very few retail merchants can stay in business by selling at 50% off the year around. Point Number 2: Our problem is simply stated: we have produced too much for today's market. Any practical long range solution demands reducing production to bring supply in line with demand. Therefore, advocating a minimum across the board reduction for all major crops.
