BECK HOME was destroyed Wednesday night. Many personal items and furniture were blown away. Friends of the Becks came in trucks and helped them move the things that were left. [Photo by Shelly Harris]

TORNADO that hit downtown Tulia had not completely formed, but it was strong when these walls down. By noon the next day workers had cleaned up all the debris. [Photo by Shelly Harris]

STORAGE BARN belonging to C.D. Cagel was flattened. A mobile home was blown away. This building was about 1/4 mile from the Beck home. Horses were killed. [Photo by Shelly Harris]

GIN didn't explode under pressure. The wind hit a side wall pushing it down. The roof collapsed without support. New equipment had been recently installed and the building remodeled. See Farm Page for other pictures of the gin. [Photo by Shelly Harris]

Two Tornadoes Tromp Tulia

BY SHELLY HARRIS

Pinky Moreno stood in his front yard and watched the churning black cloud approach Nazareth three miles away. A funnel developed, touched down, and bounced back up. Moreno gathered his wife and three children, sat them in the corner of an inside room of the house, put a mattress over them, and went back outside to check the storm.

The funnel had reformed and was traveling due east directly toward his brick home. Suddenly the funnel veered south and touched down taking out a line of electrical poles. It struck the grain storage buildings about one half mile down the road and then plowed into the Lakeview gin.

Moreno could see cotton trailers swirl in the half-mile wide cone. The tornado continued on land for five more miles and then Moreno lost track of it in the gathering darkness. The time was 8:30 p.m. Wednesday, May 28.

Spotters had reported a tornado moving east toward Tulia. Five units of the fire department were dispersed one to the south, one unit to the west and the rest went east. They saw two funnels moving parallel, about the same size, one a little in front of the other. The back funnel was much blacker than the first one.

The dispatcher in Tulia radioed to the fire trucks, "Shall I hit the alarm?" "You better believe it" came the quick reply.

Twenty minutes later, what is believed to be the second funnel set down in Tulia's center square. This funnel was not completely organized yet. It knocked out store windows, toppled the sheriff department radio tower, tore store front signs, and dropped debris on the show lot of new Chevrolet cars.

Gathering strength it crumbled the back and side walls of a two story brick building, skipped the football stadium and tore up the dressing rooms of the swimming pool, the high school concession stand, and a fence.

Across the street it stripped a house and then reaching full force continued east.

Tommy Beck had just gotten home from work when the tornado alarm sounded. He watched the funnel approach for two or three minutes, decided it was coming toward them and warned his wife they'd better leave. She ran inside the house and gathered up an arm load of things, put them in the station wagon, and ran back for another load.

"Come on," Beck yelled. She started back for a third time. Beck grabbed her, put her in the station wagon. "Go," he commanded.

She drove off, he followed her in his pick-up. One half mile down the road they looked back. One funnel had veered off to the south, the other struck their house full force. The back wall crumbled, the roof flew off and then the house was engulfed in a cloud of churning dirt, and debris.

They watched the quarter-mile wide funnel continue east, snap a cable tower, tumble sheds and buildings across the road and continue cross country.

Nine miles further, one of the funnels crumbled a new combine like a tin can. And then they were gone.

Neighboring towns tried to radio Tulia. The tower was down and they couldn't get through. Telephone lines were down. No one knew how badly the town had been hit. Disaster units were dispersed from Canyon, Lubbock, Hereford, Happy, Kress, Silverton, Dimmitt, Olton and Amarillo.

Assistant Fire Chief, Milton Simon, with the volunteer fire department said, "Lubbock sent six units from the police department. Canyon units got here so fast they almost beat us back in town. We couldn't believe all the people who came to help."

"We needed the help," Simon said, "we couldn't get people off the street. They were driving around trying to see the damage. We were trying to block the damaged streets off."

In talking about the tornado Simon said that they saw the two funnels. "The first one hit Lakeview, it looked like to us, then it broke up, then it seemed to come down between the radio station and the elevators. When it took out the power lines it looked like fireworks."

The electricity went off at 9:15 someone said. Some said they cited three or four funnels, some said only one. The darkened skies and the nearness of night made it hard for people to tell.

Kenny LaGreca and Barry Allen are graduate students working with the Institute for Disaster Research at Texas Tech. They said the funnel that hit Lakeview was about a 1/2 mile wide. They rated the wind speed of medium intensity.

"This (tornado) is an odd one. It's wide and not as strong as you would expect it to be," LaGreca said. The system that spawned these tornadoes started at Clovis, New Mexico. It was moving in a generally west to east direction.

The Lakeview Gin had belonged to Jack Straw of Olton. He sold the gin to a group of farmers in February of this year.

The Gin had been completely overhauled and new equipment had been put in. The work had just been completed and they had two trailers of cotton ready to use to "tune-up" the equipment.

According to Jack Link of Paymaster Oil Mill the damage at the gin would run about $300,000. There were also 59 cotton trailers that had been thrown together making a stack over 30 feet high.

Across the road two grain storage units were picked up and one was thrown along side the stack of trailers. The other was dropped another 200 yards out in the field. A corn field behind the grain storage tanks had been mowed to the ground in a perfect circle, the rest of the field was standing.

In town, about a quarter mile from the Beck home a storage barn was demolished. Three horses were pastured between the house and the storage barn. One was killed, the others injured.

There were no other casualties in Tulia. Mayor T.A. Hayhurst attributed that to the early warning the residents had. "We were very lucky," he said. He could not give any estimated figure for damage loss.

Weather Modification Election June 11

Two elections will be held in Floyd County during the next two weeks. The Democratic Primary will be a state run-off of three positions and is not expected to generate local voter interest.

The second election has been called by the Plains Weather Improvement Association, Inc. of Plainview to ask voter approval so that they may apply for a permit to institute a program of weather modification.

The hail suppression issue has been the subject of heated debates and called meetings. The controversy is between the farmers and ranchers who believe that cloud seeding stifles rainfall and the opposing farmers who believe that cloud seeding can control hail storms, and avert total crop loss from hail.

Voter interest in the weather modification should be high but only five precincts in Floyd County are involved. Those precincts are Almond, Sandhill, Providence, Harmony and West Lockney. There are 1253 qualified voters in those precincts.

Two years ago voters put a stop to the weather modification program in the South Plains area. A two year waiting period was necessary before the issue could be brought before the voters again.

Plains Weather Improvement Association secured 25 names on the initial petition to ask for permission to circulate a petition calling for an election. That petition had to be signed by 10% of the qualified voters in the precincts involved. There were 11 petitions distributed that were signed by 163 qualified voters. The petitions were then presented to the County Clerk who then ordered the election to be set for June 11.

The Plains Weather Improvement Association was then required to turn over a cashiers check for the estimated cost of the election to the County Clerk. The check was in the amount of $500 and is held in escrow. If the election fails that money will be used to pay the election costs. If the election carries the check will be returned and the County will pay all expenses.

Other counties that will be voting on this issue will be precincts in Hale, Lamb and Castro.

For What It's Worth

By Nancy Carthel

I have been asked many times lately, "How do you like your new job?" In answer to this, I can honestly say that I like it.

I have had a great deal to learn in a short time and have only scratched the surface on what there is to learn and that is exciting.

The main thing I like is the people. You have exhibited an abundance of patience. You have been quick to praise and slow to criticize. I do appreciate your comments both pro and con. I feel that a newspaper should reflect the feelings of a community and only through your comments can I know those feelings. I care about this town as much as anyone and want the best for it.

The most difficult part I have had to deal with is leaving my old job. The people in the Lone Star community have been like a family to me and I miss them but this new challenge has been very stimulating and I feel good about it.

I really have a renewed appreciation for the people who held this job before me. So to Edgar Hays, Jim Bob Reynolds, Joe Frank Hawkins, and Jim Huggins, I send my deepest respect for the job you all did.

And I thank Shelly Harris, publisher, for showing confidence in me. She has had the wisdom to let me learn through my own mistakes, the best teaching method of all.

The off-season basketball training for the Lockney High School girls ended Wednesday afternoon with a scrimmage. Fifty-five girls have been in the program that began April 14.

The girls have been divided into three groups. Incoming freshmen, junior varsity, and varsity. Each group has been working out for one hour each day.

The scrimmage was to give the coaches a better look at the entire group and to allow them to make decisions regarding players for the junior varsity and varsity teams for next season.

According to coach Marsha Sharp, the off-season for the varsity concentrated on the need for improvement in the New Orleans Opera and Gulf Coast Opera.

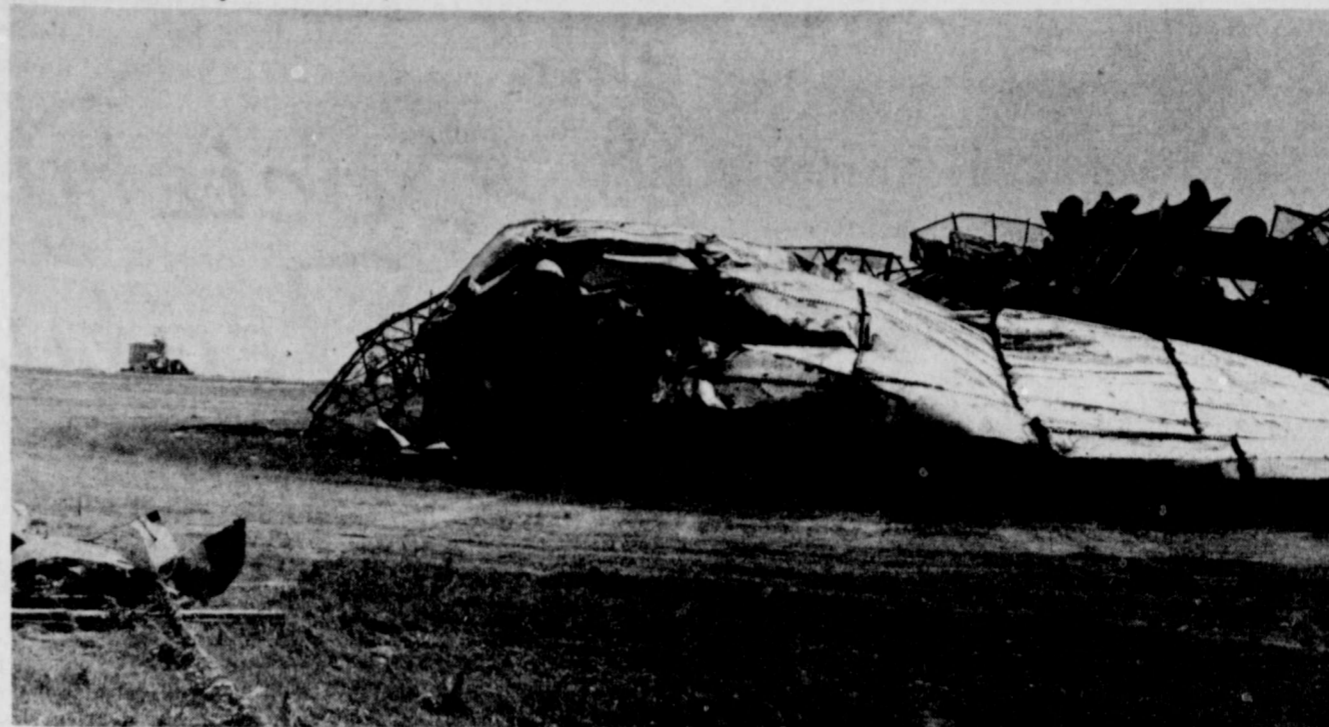

"After reviewing the statistics from the past season, we worked on full court ball advancement. We also worked on our post game and made some changes. Rebecca Evans has been moved inside to give more strength to the post position. Penny Sterling has been working on her post moves to give her more flexibility in that position. Also Shereese Clark has had a good spring and will be able to add some strength under the basket," said Sharp.

"We sat up three days strictly for shooting and concentrated on improving our set shots and jump shots. We feel that we have increased our range a great deal. Tammy Hayes and Julie Frizzell have had an excellent spring and have really improved their shooting. Roseland Hill has shown a lot of improvement in the guard position," added Sharp.

Some changes for next year will be that the JV and varsity will work out together. Tandy Medford will be coaching the seventh and eighth grade girls and Marsha Sharp will have the freshmen. Sheri Haynes will be in charge of the junior varsity and all three coaches will be working with the varsity.

The varsity will be coming off of a district championship season and returning five all-district starters.

CONSERVATION COOKIN'

"Conservation cookin'" saves time, money and energy — and "the proof" is in some actual recent tests. Homemakers and industry both share the task of making kitchen ranges more energy efficient — and recent tests prove big savings are possible and easy. Volunteers in a "conservation cookin'" test saved a whopping one-third in energy — just by the way they cooked, according to all the reports. Of course, that's the homemaker's part.

But what about industry? It, too, has a share in the task, and the appliance world is abuzz with word of new designs on the drawing boards and in testing stages — all focusing on greater energy efficiency for ranges. As consumers learn of the innovations in ranges, they can be on the lookout for them to study and compare — then consumers will be more apt to insist on the most energy-saving features for their money whenever they actually buy.

But, until industry's "brightest energy stars" hit the market, homemakers can save one-third — or more — right now just by learning the easy techniques of "conservation cookin'." Before you learn what to do, remember the "what not to do's" first — since they make the big difference. During the recent "conservation cookin'" tests, the energy wasters were found "guilty" of these practices: (1) they opened the oven door frequently, (2) they cooked on the high setting too long, (3) they turned on the surface unit, and (4) they often failed to reduce the heat during cooking.

Once you have the "don'ts" firmly implanted in your mind, it's time to concentrate on the "do's." Here's a test on the "conservation cookin'" that teaches the technique — and pinpoints your own problems all at the same time. Answer "yes" to each of the questions below, and you're already successful at "conservation cookin'":

Do you — use flat-bottomed pans that hug the surface element closely?

use a pan size equal to the size of the surface element? turn the heat down as soon as they're red?

preheat only as long as necessary — and only for products that require a preheated oven (mainly baked items containing sugar)?

resist the temptation to open the oven door unnecessarily?

keep from leaving the oven door too long?

If you had to say "no" to any of the questions, you need to change those cooking habits before you are an expert at "conservation cookin'."

Now for a peek into the industry crystal ball at what's to come in ranges. Industry is working on several design changes to improve range energy efficiency. Among those are smaller ovens, more and better insulation, no-window ovens, possibly smaller oven vents, improved oven doors and seals and flatter surface elements. In addition, researchers are studying the use of oven-construction materials that absorb less heat. All in all, these insights and developments should go a long way toward making the energy picture a bit brighter.

Arab real estate may go back to just being a lot of dry sand if our farmer's interest in farm production of fuel alcohol stays as high as it is now. In fact, if farmers can produce half as much energy as this issue has interest, then the fuel problem may be well on the way to being solved. Because of the unusual amount of attention being paid to the production of alcohol fuel from grain and other farm crops, we are setting aside the next couple of weeks to take a look at some of the facts and expert opinions surrounding what could be one of the most dynamic factors ever to influence American agriculture. There has been a lot of misinformation passed along through the media, and there are still more questions than answers, but we'll take a look at some of the known facts next week.

Floyd County Farm Report

BY NANCY CARTHLE

The area has received several rains this past week and the wheat and corn crops have benefited from them. Cotton planting is almost over and good stands are reported all over the county. There may have been some wind damage to the young plants from the recent storms. Milo planting is underway and some of it is up. Over all the county crops are in good shape.

Closing prices Friday, May 30 were Corn/cwt.-4.75; Wheat/bu.-3.45; Soybeans/bu.-5.05; Milo/cwt.-4.35-4.40.

On the Lubbock spot market, cotton prices were 1200-1400 points over for 3.0-3.2 mikes; 1250-1450 points over for 2.7-2.9 mikes; and 1050-1250 over for 2.6 and below mikes. These are over the 1979 loan.

The cheap commodity prices have been of great concern to all area farmers. Roger Poage, manager of Lon Davis Grain Company in Floydada, has given us his views on the reasons for the low prices and his feelings about the future prospects of the grain market. "We are looking at virtually the same

Sorghum Irrigation System Doubles Water Efficiency

A new system of furrow irrigation for sorghum developed at the USDA Center at Bushland doubled irrigation water use efficiency in 1979. Dr. B.A. Stewart, Research Director at the Center put together a combination of furrow dams, differential seeding and fertilizer rates along with limited irrigation to accomplish this feat. He said the system eliminates irrigation tailwater and runoff from rainfall to achieve high water-use efficiency.

To test his new system, Stewart and his co-workers, Don Dusek and Jack Musick divided a 1900-foot long field into three water management sections. The Pullman clay loam soil had been fallowed since wheat harvest the previous year. The upper half was adequately irrigated. The next one-fourth was used as a tailwater runoff section, and the lower one-fourth of the field was managed as dryland.

Grain sorghum was planted on 30-inch beds. Six pounds per acre were seeded in the adequately irrigated area, 3 pounds per acre in the runoff area, and 1.5 pounds per acre on the lower or dryland section. Anhydrous ammonia was chiseled perpendicular to, and prior to building beds at 180 and 90 pounds per acre on the upper half and lower halves of the field.

Furrow dams were built every 10 feet length of the field. Alternate furrows were irrigated and dams washed out as water progressed down the furrows. Dams were "notched" in the middle to prevent water from washing over the beds.

Five irrigations each equivalent to 1.5 inches on the entire area were applied on a 14-day schedule. Irrigated furrows received 12 gallons of water per minute for 12 hours to achieve the proper amount of water. During the five irrigations, water advanced from 1000 to 1500 feet down the field, breaking dams as it went. Irrigation water advanced the most when irrigation came after a rain.

The total irrigation water applied was 7.5 inches during the five waterings. None of the irrigation water or 9 inches of rainfall ran off the field. Dams on the lower or dryland part of the field and that were not irrigated held all of the rain. "The upper part of the field was adequately watered and the field became increasingly dry with length," Stewart said.

The new system was compared to fully irrigated sorghum using 24 hour sets on every row where 24 inches of irrigation water were applied. Seeding rate was 6 pounds per acre on the entire area. About 8 inches of the 24 ended up as tailwater. On this part of the study, 1 of the 9 inches of rainfall also ran from the field.

The two methods of irrigation were compared to dryland, with a seeding rate of 1.5 pounds per acre. No water ran from the dryland area.

Yield on the new system averaged 6510 pounds of grain per acre. Fully irrigated and dryland made 8300 and 3040 pounds per acre of grain. With either full irrigation or dryland, yields were the same the entire length of the field. "With the new system," Stewart said, "yield varied with the distance irrigation water moved down the field." On the upper end, yield exceeded 8000 pounds per acre and was equal to fully irrigated. Yield started to decrease at 1000 feet down the field and was the same as dryland on the lower end.

"The new system doubled irrigation water-use efficiency by eliminating tailwater and runoff from rain," Stewart said. With adequate irrigation 222 pounds of grain were produced per acre inch of irrigation water. With the new system, sorghum yielded 463 pounds of grain per acre inch of irrigation water.

Growers who want to try the system have one problem to remedy. They must figure out a practical way of changing seeding rate while going across the field. In this study the researchers used a six-row planter that had a single-chain drive for all boxes. Seeding rate was varied by changing sprockets. Stewart says seeding rate could be changed by planting either one or two rows per bed.

Stewart said advantages of the system are (1) runoff is prevented; (2) irrigation sets are moved on a 12-hour schedule regardless of water advance; (3) more land is irrigated during wet times and less in dry weather; and (4) water is utilized most efficiently.

The researcher figures the new system should work on sorghum, cotton, and sunflower crops that are grown under both irrigation and dryland. Stewart encourages farmers interested in increasing returns from limited water to give the new system a try.

EXPORTS CONTINUE HIGH:
Exports of 212,300 running bales of upland cotton during the week ended April 27 brought the season's total to 6,567,400, compared with 4,360,200 a year ago. New sales for the current marketing year delivery were 97,300 bales. Sales of 129,400 bales for 1980-81 delivery included 33,200 to China and 21,300 to Hungary.

An alcohol fuel symposium that will key in on small-scale production of ethanol from grain will be held at Texas A&M University July 1-2.

The symposium is being sponsored by two organizations of the Texas A&M University System—the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station and the Texas Agricultural Extension Service—along with A&M's Center for Energy and Mineral Resources.

Various issues relating to the production and use of ethanol will be discussed, including feedstocks, processing requirements, use as fuel in engines, by-product use, and legal, economic and financial aspects.

Information will be presented on a number of ongoing projects related to alcohol fuel, including agricultural residue combustion-gasification as a heat source for distillation, development of sweet sorghums as feedstock for ethanol production, operation of a small-scale ethanol demonstration plant, use of ethanol in diesel and natural gas-driven engines, ethanol-gasoline dual fuel systems, and economics of ethanol production.

Among speakers will be Dr. Neville P. Clarke, Experiment Station director; Dr. Wayne A. LePort, agricultural engineer; Dr. L.O. Schake, researcher in feedlot management, and Dr. E.J. Soltes, researcher in wood chemistry, all with the Experiment Station; Henry P. O'Neal, Extension agricultural engineer; Texas Commissioner of Agriculture Reagan Brown; and Rep. Dan Kubiak, vice chairman of the House Agriculture and Livestock Committee.

Anyone interested in attending the symposium is encouraged to pre-register by June 23. Registration forms and additional details on the program can be obtained at the County Extension Office.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socioeconomic level, race, color, sex, religion or origin.

TEXAS FORAGE, GRASSLAND COUNCIL ORGANIZED

The Texas Forage and Grassland Council was organized at the recent Texas Animal Agriculture Conference at Texas A&M University. Jack Barton, president of the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Houston, was elected president. Overall objective of the council is to promote grassland and forage crops and to bring them to the forefront in Texas. Forage provides 85 percent of the nutrition of Texas beef cattle and 65 percent of the nutrition of dairy cattle. Hay ranks fifth in value among Texas agricultural commodities.

HORSE FEED ECONOMIZING

Horsemen can economize on feed for their horses by choosing feeds that are simple, yet adequate, said an Ohio State University. Feeding a horse is all a matter of providing energy and protein; this can be done for 60 to 70 cents a day. Horses do not need grain for adequate energy and protein, and feeding rations high in energy but low in protein and minerals will make for fat horses with poor skeletal development. Horses do not require special minerals but should be provided free access to minerals.

grain prices we had seen the cost of production had risen so great deal. The government keep the commodities prices down. We have programs in effect that divert payments. "On the supply and demand side, we have too large a supply of cheap prices. The government has hurt the market all does hurt," added Poage. "The government has played the embargo in an effort to stabilize but Poage said that have much effect on the of the wheat in this sold by the time this Asked about the the grain prospects for said, "In the area from we are looking at cotton and cattle. The price big difference. Grain prices cotton prices up. Even prices were higher. I would be grown because energy cost of irrigation will go into effect this year higher loan prices."

Storage Increase

Secretary of Agriculture land recently announced amount a farmer may amount farm storage facility has been increased to $100,000. The loan authorized to reflect construction and material.

Under this program loans by the U.S. Department of Agricultural Stabilization and Service to help farmers or rental on-farm storage and to obtain needed handling equipment.

The maximum loan is the cost of the structure. Under the new maximum aggregate outstanding Bergland said. A minimum of 15 percent of the paid in cash by the loan is disbursed.

Loan repayment terms maximum of seven equal payments over a period of Prepayment may be made without penalty.

Farmers must apply to county ASCS office within time the items to be delivered to the farm. The amounts are available as filed beginning May 13. No change is being current method of needs or in the loan Agricultural Stabilization and Service approval or reallocation.

the organization in Lubbock. They named eight persons to be on the drop committee, and nine to be on the grievance committee.

On April 9, 1979 the organization was incorporated. This was done so that the funds would be tax free. "All money used by Crime Line is donated", Nelson said. "Money has never been a problem. Checks come in every day".

The Crime Line program is co-ordinated through the police department. "But the organization is run strictly by the citizens," Nelson said. The main cost is the private telephone line.

That line is open 24 hours a day, manned by Nelson or his partner. He emphasized that it was important to have a person familiar with police procedure to answer the phone. "They have to know what information is necessary to get an indictment. It is a one time chance (to talk to the informant) you have to get every thing you can get" Nelson stressed.
