

METHODIST HAVE GOOD CONFERENCE

MANY INTERESTING MEETINGS AND GOOD ATTENDANCE.

One of the Best Conferences Ever Held in the District Closed at Tuesday Night Meeting.

The District conference of the Amarillo district held in this city from Friday to Tuesday was one of the best in the history of the district. The attendance was not so large as expected but the program was carried out almost completely and practically all the preachers of the district were present at every meeting.

The first night meeting was very small in attendance owing to a rain just at opening time. Judge F. R. Works, of Amarillo, made his masterly address upon the laymen's movement. Judge Works is lay leader of this conference and is a very able speaker. It was a great disappointment to a large majority of the local church that they were unable to hear his address.

At the meeting Saturday morning a resolution endorsing the work of Presiding Elder O. P. Kiker were unanimously passed. The bishop will be asked to return Rev. Kiker that he may continue in his able work in the district.

A memorial to the general conference was adopted prohibiting the use of tobacco among preachers. Hitherto the church has urged pastors not to use tobacco but there was no compulsion in the matter. This memorial asks that young preachers be made to take this pledge.

Hon. Champ Traylor, of Plemmons, was asked by the conference to write a series of articles for the Texas Christian Advocate on early days in Methodism. Mr. Traylor is one of the most interesting characters in this section of the state. He was a pioneer in West Texas and has gone through all the hardships of a pioneer life. His life is rich in experiences and his writings will be very interesting.

At the Saturday night service Rev. J. D. Young, representing the Southern Methodist University, delivered a very interesting address along educational lines and told about the new university. A collection was taken, $2,150 being raised. $1,000 had previously been subscribed by the local church.

The Sunday morning service at the Normal was very largely attended. Dr. Bishop was sick and President Slover, of Clarendon college, preached a masterly sermon. The attendance Sunday morning was the largest ever attending a Sunday service in the city.

Sunday afternoon Judge J. Marvin Jones, of Amarillo, addressed a meeting for young people. Mr. Jones is an interesting speaker and his address was greatly appreciated.

Dr. E. E. Robinson, of Amarillo, preached Sunday night. Dr. Robinson is one of the most eloquent preachers in the conference and his sermon was great. At the meeting Monday licenses for local preachers were renewed for the following month: Revs. A. C. Smith, Chas. R. Thomas and H. L. Johnston.

The following were local preachers whose characters were passed upon by the conference: Revs. Jno. A. Wallace, H. K. Monroe, Jno. A. Travis, D. D. Spurlock, J. M. McCoy,

PUBLIC SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENT.

PROF. E. F. KING

Prof. E. F. King, of Wolfe City was elected at a recent meeting of the Canyon school board as superintendent for the coming year.

M. J. Tand and G. J. Monroe. John A. Wallace was elected district lay leader.

The meeting of the conference was held at the Normal building Monday afternoon where some of the Normal professors addressed the visitors.

Tuesday morning delegates to the annual conference at Vernon in November were elected as follows: John A. Wallace, Canyon, C. W. Warwick, Canyon, G. A. F. Parker, Hereford, and Champ Taylor, Plemmons. The following alternates were chosen: Dr. F. M. Wilson, Canyon, and Tom Holmes, Higgins.

Higgins was elected as the next meeting place of the conference.

A strong resolution endorsing the work of the lay leader, Judge F. P. Works, of Amarillo, was adopted.

The following were elected beneficiaries of the Southwestern University scholarships: Ralph Porter, of Texline, and Miss Polly Smith, of Panhandle.

A resolution was adopted thanking Rev. F. M. Neal and the people of Canyon for the entertainment of the conference.

A memorial to the general conference to exchange the expression in the Apostles Creed from "the holy Catholic church," to "the Church of God," was adopted.

The business session of the conference closed Tuesday afternoon at 3:30.

The conference opened every morning at 9 o'clock. Until 11 o'clock business sessions were held and were followed by sermons by one of the visiting pastors. The conference convened at 2:30 every afternoon and interesting discussion lasted until 6 o'clock.

The last meeting of the conference was held Tuesday night at which time Rev. C. N. N. Ferguson, presiding elder of the Abeline district, preached a doctrinal sermon. Rev. Ferguson is one of the best known preachers in this section of the state and his address was very interesting.

Meeting Postponed.

The program of the young people's union meeting which was postponed on Sunday, May 14th, will be given next Sunday evening at 6:30 at the Presbyterian church. The public is cordially invited.

High School Alumni Meet.

The alumni of the Canyon high school will hold the annual reception and program at the high school building next Monday night. A good program is being prepared which will be followed by a banquet.

NORMAL CLOSES SUCCESSFUL YEAR

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES WILL BE HELD MONDAY.

Prospects are Bright for one of the Best Summer Quarters of any School in the State.

The third year of the Normal will close Monday morning with appropriate commencement exercises. The year excelled very greatly the two preceding ones and the prospects for a fine summer school is very bright.

Rev. J. W. Hill, of Wichita Falls, will preach the commencement sermon at the Normal auditorium Sunday morning at 11 o'clock.

The commencement exercises will be at the auditorium Monday morning at 11 o'clock.

Hilton R. Greer, Managing Editor of the Amarillo Daily News, will deliver the commencement address.

President Cousins has just returned from a meeting of the board of regents at Austin and reports that the Normals have had a very successful year and that the local school is in a very flourishing condition. He is very encouraged at the reports received concerning the summer quarter attendance.

After visiting all sections of the state, a representative of a large publishing house has written the Normal authorities that the attendance here this year will be exceptionally large.

H. S. Commencement Exercises.

The following are the events of the week constituting the closing exercises of the public schools of the city:

On Thursday evening at 8:30 at the opera house the Class of 1913 will render the Class Play. The first part of the program will consist of the presentation of Tennyson's "Princesses" possibly about the earliest suggestion of the question of woman's suffrage on equal rights. The second part is a farce growing out of the same thought and picturing conditions in Canyon in 1925 when "women run things." This entertainment is given for the benefit of the piano fund and not for private individuals.

On Friday afternoon at 3:00 in the high school auditorium the pupils of the grammar grades, passing in the high school will render a short program and receive their certificates of promotion. The program will consist of work done in their classes during the regular year. The program follows:

- Song—Class.
- Autumn Poems.
- Song—Class.
- Winter Poems.
- Class Prophecy—Groves Kilbourn.
- Spring Poems—Class.
- Duet—Thelma McGee, Venie Moreland.
- Summer Poems—Class.
- Song.

Friday evening at 8:30 at the Methodist church the commencement exercises will be held. Beside the numbers of the class Hon. F. M. Ryburn of Amarillo will deliver the annual address. This is the largest class ever graduated from the local high school and the program will be interesting. No flowers or other gifts will be received on the stage by the graduates.

To all these exercises the public is most cordially invited.

ALL PANHANDLE FAIR.

Steps Being Taken in Amarillo to Form Organization for Fair Sometime This Year.

The old project of organizing a Panhandle fair is being advocated again this year. More practical and definite suggestions are being made than ever before when this subject was before the people. The cost of sending exhibits to other big fairs is so great that few of the Panhandle counties have attempted to send exhibits any distance. The following are the plans for the organization:

To organize a Panhandle State Fair Association with a capital stock of $50,000.

To plan an exposition along the lines of the Texas-State Fair at Dallas.

To take over Glenwood park in Amarillo, shape it for fair purposes and add from time to time permanent improvements.

To assure all taking stock annual dividends of eight per cent for the next five years, this made absolutely certain by lease contract for that period already in existence.

G. C. Wiseman Died.

G. C. Wiseman, one of the leading farmers and stockmen of Randall county died Friday morning at his home, located about six miles south of Amarillo, following an illness of short duration.

Mr. Wiseman was born December 24, 1848, at Waterloo, Ohio. He was married in 1881 to Mary Ellen Jefferies. Of this union eight children were born seven of whom are still living. Six brothers and one sister survive him.

Since 1879, Mr. Wiseman has been a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal church, and was held in high and wide esteem for his strength of character and sterling manhood. Since coming to Randall county, he has taken place in the forefront of the most substantial citizens of the Panhandle, and his passing brought deep sorrow to host of friends.

Short services were conducted Friday afternoon at the ranch home by Rev. C. C. Brannon, pastor of the First Methodist church of Amarillo. The remains were shipped Saturday morning to Illinois for interment.

Green Hardware Sold.

The P. J. Green Hardware store was traded this week to B. E. Kelley, of Altus, Okla., for land near that city. The store was bought of B. T. Johnson several months ago and has enjoyed a good trade. Mr. Green will continue to live in Canyon. Mr. Kelley will move the stock of goods to Altus soon.

District court convened Monday morning at 10:00 o'clock. Judge Browning selected the grand jury and put them to work at once. The petit jury for the first week appeared, but as there seemed to be no cases ready for trial this week the jury was dismissed. The jury for the second week which appears next Monday will probably be used for a number of cases. A large amount of business is being disposed of this week, as one lawyer put it "although we aren't making much noise, we are doing lots of work."

The following were the cases disposed of:

More Good Rains.

Thursday night over three-fourths of an inch of rain fell all over Randall county and Friday night a quarter inch fell in a major part of the county.

The weather has been warm all week and Monday 92 degrees was registered. Everything is growing wonderfully fast.

Live At Home.

The farmer's Union is inaugurating a "Live at Home" campaign among the farmers of Texas. Mr. Peter Radford, President of the Union, in discussing the subject said: "There is no reason why a farmer should buy a dollar's worth of meat during the year, but from such information as I am able to obtain, the farmers of Texas buy $26,000,000 of pork and its products per annum, to say nothing of other kinds of meats and supplies purchased that should be raised on a farm. No farmer can afford to buy a thing he can raise, no matter how cheap it may be."

According to government estimates, the per capita consumption of pork and its products per annum is 100 pounds and the Federal Census Report on hogs marketed and slaughtered in each county, give a reliable basis for production by counties.

The report shows Randall county produces 1,632,400 pounds of pork and consumes 331,200 pounds per annum.

The farmer's Union is asking that the farmers reduce the cotton acreage and "plant" hogs, raise more corn, milo maize, build silos and feed and fatten livestock on the farm and live at home the whole year around.

Randall is one of the few Texas counties that produces enough pork for home consumption.

MOLLY McDONALD

A TALE OF THE FRONTIER

CHAPTER XX.

Molly Tells Her Story.
Her breath came in a little sob, and she sank back on the bench.
"For me? How do you mean?"
"Surely I had every reason to distrust her, to question her character, and I could not believe you realized the sort of woman she is. I felt it my duty to discover her purpose here, and to warn you if possible."
"And you have succeeded? You learned her purpose in your interview?"
"Not exactly," with regret. "My suspicion was merely stimulated. To tell the truth, we rather drifted into a renewal of our old quarrel. However, between what she said, and parts of another conversation overheard, I know there is a blackmaling conspiracy on foot in which you are involved. May I speak very frankly?"
"I certainly desire it," proudly. "I am not aware that I have anything to conceal."
"Apparently the scheme these people have on foot originated about Lieutenant Gaskins. He is wealthy, I understand."
"I have been told so; yes, I know he is."
"This knowledge, coupled with the fact of your engagement—"
"My what?"
"Your engagement. I had heard it rumored before, and Mrs. Dupont assured me it was true."
"But it is not true, Sergeant Hamlin—indignantly. "I cannot imagine how such a report ever started." Lieutenant Gaskins has been very friendly; has—her voice breaking slightly, "even asked me to marry him, but—I told him that was impossible. He has been just as kind to me since, but there is nothing, absolutely nothing between us. I have never spoken about this before to any one."
If Hamlin's heart leaped wildly at this swift denial, there was no evidence of it in his quiet voice.
"The point is, Miss Molly, that Mrs. Dupont, and those connected with her, think otherwise. They are presuming on Gaskins' being in love with you. Mrs. Dupont can be very seductive. Little by little she has drawn the Lieutenant into her net. Believing him engaged to you, they have him now where he must either pay money for silence or be exposed. Just how it was worked, I do not know. The shooting last night was done to convince him they were serious. The fact that Gaskins later denied knowing who his assailants were—each endeavored to accuse me—is abundant proof of their success." He hesitated, wondering at her silence. "What puzzles me most is why you were present."
"Present? Where?"
"At this quarrel with Gaskins last evening. As I ran by toward the scene of the shooting I passed you hiding at the angle of the barrack wall. Of course I have mentioned the fact of no one. That was why I made no attempt to defend myself when arrested."
She gasped for breath, scarcely able to articulate.
"You believe that? You think that of me?"
"I may have been deceived; I hope so; there was but little light, and I got merely a glimpse," he explained hastily.
"You were deceived," impetuously. "I was not out of the house that evening. I was in the parlor with my father when those shots were fired. You are sure you saw a woman there—him?"
"There is no doubt of that; her foot-prints were plainly to be seen in the morning. This discovery, together with the size of the weapon used, resulted in my immediate release. I saw her, and imagined her to be you. I cannot account for the mistake, unless you were in my mind, and possibly what I had heard of your connection with Gaskins. Then it must have been Mrs. Dupont. That looks reasonable. But she stays at your home, does she not?"
"She makes our house her headquarters, but is absent occasionally. Last night she was here at this hotel. Well, we are getting this straightened out a little—that is, if you believe me."
"Of course."
"Then I am going to question you. You spoke of overhearing a conversation?"
"Yes; it was after Mrs. Dupont had left. Captain Barrett came, and took her away. I was sitting here thinking when two men came into the parlor."
"Who were they? Do you know?"
"One was the soldier who drives you about—Connors; the other a black-bearded, burly fellow called 'Reb.'"
"Mr. Dupont."
"What? Is that Dupont? Lord! No wonder she's gone bad. Why, I thought her husband was a ranchman down south somewhere! This fellow is a tin-horn."
"He did run cattle once, years ago. I think he was quite well off, but drank and gambled it away. Papa told me only it is not likely he knows much. I shall have to think it all out, Miss Molly," he smiled at her confidently. "You see, I am a bit slow figuring puzzles, but I generally get them in time. You've told me all you know?"

"Everything. It almost seems silly when I try to explain what I feel to another."
"Not to me. I knew enough before to understand. But, perhaps, you had better go—hush, some one is entering the parlor."
She got to her feet in spite of his restraining hand, startled and unnerved.
"Oh, I must not be seen here. Is there no other way?"
"No; be still for a moment; step back there in the shadow, and let me go in alone."
He stepped forward, his grasp already on the curtain, when a woman's voice spoke within:
"Yes, that was what I meant; he does not know you—yet. But you must keep away."
CHAPTER XXI.

CHAPTER XXI.

Molly Disappears.

The speaker was Mrs. Dupont, but Hamlin's one thought was to prevent any discovery of Miss McDonald. Without an instant's hesitation he drew aside the curtain, and stepped into the room.

"Pardon me," he said quietly, as the two started back at his rather abrupt entrance, "but I did not care to overhear your conversation. No doubt it was intended to be private."

The woman stepped somewhat in advance of her companion, as though to shield him from observation, instantly mastering her surprise.

"Nothing at all serious, Mr. Sergeant Hamlin," she retorted scornfully. "Don't be melodramatic, please; it gets on the nerves. If you must know, I was merely giving our ranch foreman a few final instructions, as he leaves tomorrow. Have you objections?"
"Assuredly not—your ranch foreman, you say? Met him before, I think. You are the fellow I ordered out of this room, aren't you?"
The man growled something unintelligible, but Mrs. Dupont prevented any direct reply.

"That's all right, John," she broke in impatiently. "You understand what I want now, and need not remain any longer. I have a word to say myself to this man."

She waited an instant while he left the room; then her eyes defiantly met Hamlin's.

"I was told you had driven every one out of here," she said coldly. "What was the game?"
"This room was reserved—"
"Pish! keep that explanation for some one else. You wanted the room for some purpose. Who have you got out there?" she pointed at the window.
"Whether there be any one or not," he answered, leaning against the window frame, and thus barring the passage, "I fall to see wherein you are concerned."

She laughed.
"Which remark is equivalent to a confession. Dave," suddenly changing, "why should we quarrel, and misjudge each other? You cannot suppose I have forgotten the past, or am indifferent. Cannot you forgive the mistake of a thoughtless girl? Is there any reason why we should not be, at least, friendly?"

There was an appeal in her voice, but the man's face did not respond.
"I cannot say that I feel any bitterness over the past," he answered lightly. "I am willing enough to blot that out. What I am interested in is the present. I should like to understand your purpose here at Dodge."
"Surely that is sufficiently clear. I am merely an exile from home, on account of Indian depredations. What more natural than that I should take refuge in my uncle's house."
"You mean Major McDonald?"
"Certainly—he was my mother's only brother."

"I think I have heard somewhere that the Major's only sister married a man named Counts."
She drew in her breath sharply.
"Yes, of course—her first husband."
"You were a daughter then of her first marriage?"
"Of course."

"But assumed the name of Carson when she married again?"
"That was when you met me."
"The change was natural enough," he went on. "But why did you also become Vera in place of Sarah?"
"Oh, is that it? Well, never attempt to account for the vagaries of a girl," she returned lightly, as though dismissing the subject. "I presume I took a fancy to the prettier name. But how did you know?"

"Garrison rumor picks up nearly everything, and it is not very kind to you, Mrs. Dupont. I hope I am doing you a favor in saying this. Your rather open flirtation with Lieutenant Gaskins is common talk, even among enlisted men, and I have heard that your relations with Major McDonald are peculiar."
"Indeed!" with a rising inflection of the voice. "How kind of you, and so delicately expressed." She laughed. "And poor Major McDonald!—Really, that is ridiculous. Could you imagine my flirting with him?"
"I have no recollection of using that term in this connection. But you have tongue influence over him. For some reason the man is apparently afraid of you."

"Afraid of me? Oh, no! Some one has been fooling you, Dave. I am merely Major McDonald's guest. I wonder who told you that? Shall I guess?"
Before he could realize her purpose the woman took a hasty step forward afraid, something unknown to you, which he does not desire you ever to know."

"Yes," softly, "that must be true."
"No; it may not be true; it may all be a lie, concocted for a purpose. A clever woman might so manipulate circumstances as to convince him she held his fate in her hands. We must find that out in this case."
"But how, Sergeant Hamlin? He will not tell me."
"Perhaps she will tell me if I can reach her alone," he said grimly, "or else that husband of hers—Dupont. He'll know the whole story. It would give me pleasure to choke it out of him—real pleasure. Then there's Connors, just the sort of sneaking rat if he can be caught with the goods; he is driven by some threat. What can it be?"

"You have never spoken to him of your suspicions? Asked him?"
"Yes and no. I tried once, and shall never forget the expression of his face. Then he turned on me in a perfect paroxysm of anger. I never even dared hint at the matter again."
The Sergeant stared out into the street, not knowing what to say, or how to advise. Almost unconscious of the action his hand stole along the rail until it touched hers.
"If the woman has not ensnared him by her usual methods," he said soberly, "and I think myself you are right about that, for I watched them together in the dance hall—I did not comprehend what it meant then, but it seemed to me he actually disliked being in her company—then she has uncovered something in his past of which he is afraid, something unknown to you, which he does not desire you ever to know."

"Yes," softly, "that must be true."
"No; it may not be true; it may all be a lie, concocted for a purpose. A clever woman might so manipulate circumstances as to convince him she held his fate in her hands. We must find that out in this case."

only it is not likely he knows much. I shall have to think it all out, Miss Molly," he smiled at her confidently. "You see, I am a bit slow figuring puzzles, but I generally get them in time. You've told me all you know?"
"Everything. It almost seems silly when I try to explain what I feel to another."
"Not to me. I knew enough before to understand. But, perhaps, you had better go—hush, some one is entering the parlor."
She got to her feet in spite of his restraining hand, startled and unnerved.
"Oh, I must not be seen here. Is there no other way?"
"No; be still for a moment; step back there in the shadow, and let me go in alone."
He stepped forward, his grasp already on the curtain, when a woman's voice spoke within:
"Yes, that was what I meant; he does not know you—yet. But you must keep away."
CHAPTER XXI.

Molly Disappears.
The speaker was Mrs. Dupont, but Hamlin's one thought was to prevent any discovery of Miss McDonald. Without an instant's hesitation he drew aside the curtain, and stepped into the room.

"Pardon me," he said quietly, as the two started back at his rather abrupt entrance, "but I did not care to overhear your conversation. No doubt it was intended to be private."

The woman stepped somewhat in advance of her companion, as though to shield him from observation, instantly mastering her surprise.

"Nothing at all serious, Mr. Sergeant Hamlin," she retorted scornfully. "Don't be melodramatic, please; it gets on the nerves. If you must know, I was merely giving our ranch foreman a few final instructions, as he leaves tomorrow. Have you objections?"
"Assuredly not—your ranch foreman, you say? Met him before, I think. You are the fellow I ordered out of this room, aren't you?"
The man growled something unintelligible, but Mrs. Dupont prevented any direct reply.

"That's all right, John," she broke in impatiently. "You understand what I want now, and need not remain any longer. I have a word to say myself to this man."

She waited an instant while he left the room; then her eyes defiantly met Hamlin's.

"I was told you had driven every one out of here," she said coldly. "What was the game?"
"This room was reserved—"
"Pish! keep that explanation for some one else. You wanted the room for some purpose. Who have you got out there?" she pointed at the window.
"Whether there be any one or not," he answered, leaning against the window frame, and thus barring the passage, "I fall to see wherein you are concerned."

She laughed.
"Which remark is equivalent to a confession. Dave," suddenly changing, "why should we quarrel, and misjudge each other? You cannot suppose I have forgotten the past, or am indifferent. Cannot you forgive the mistake of a thoughtless girl? Is there any reason why we should not be, at least, friendly?"

There was an appeal in her voice, but the man's face did not respond.
"I cannot say that I feel any bitterness over the past," he answered lightly. "I am willing enough to blot that out. What I am interested in is the present. I should like to understand your purpose here at Dodge."
"Surely that is sufficiently clear. I am merely an exile from home, on account of Indian depredations. What more natural than that I should take refuge in my uncle's house."
"You mean Major McDonald?"
"Certainly—he was my mother's only brother."

"I think I have heard somewhere that the Major's only sister married a man named Counts."
She drew in her breath sharply.
"Yes, of course—her first husband."
"You were a daughter then of her first marriage?"
"Of course."

Building Under-Ground Silo.

M. A. Bingaman was in the News office Thursday afternoon and says that he is building an underground silo 30 feet deep and 18 feet across. He has done practically all the work himself. He says that the digging was easy for the first 20 feet and then he struck clay. Down 20 feet he found a petrified bone of a buffalo and has been wondering how it got down that deep. He says that he will cement the silo later in the season when he gets time. He was unable to cement as he went down, as Mr. Bainter advocates, on account of the cold weather when he started.

Mr. Bingaman has lived in Randall county four years, coming from Falls City, Nebraska.

He likes it well and says he has cleared $1,000 each year he has lived here. He is farming 300 acres by himself, has up-to-date farm machinery and works his land well. He double listed all his land this year.

The Quality Kind.

A traveling salesman for a mail order printing firm walked into one of the court house offices this week and asked the official where he got those fine embossed letter heads. The official told him they were only PRINTED—printed by the RANDALL COUNTY NEWS. He was very much surprised and said it was an extra fine job. IT WAS ONLY ONE OF OUR COMMON EVERY DAY JOBS. The Randall County News believes in QUALITY printing and every job we turn out has the stamp of quality upon it. Is your printing the quality kind, or just the ordinary kind that the MAIL ORDER HOUSES DO? Leave your work printing at home and get the QUALITY kind. It costs no more.

W. O. W. Initiation.

The W. O. W. lodge had a great "blow-out" Thursday night in which 93 Amarilloites joined in making merry and furnished the degree team to do the work. The Amarillo lodge came down at 8 o'clock in a special train and paraded around the square, headed by a real goat (used later in taking the victim through the degrees.) This degree team is one of the best in the state and put on the work in fine shape. They brought three candidates with them and seven local candidates were executed.

After the regular work a banquet was served by the local boys.

Catamel!
-Dangerous!

Is a warning that should be placed on every package of that drug. Any reputable physician will tell you that mercury should not be taken into the system and that it is only used by Doctors in extreme cases and then great care is used to eliminate it as soon as possible on account of the danger, both of salivation and the bad after effects of the drug. The frequent use of calomel, or mercury in any form, generally causes Rheumatism and other ills as an old age heritage.
Don't take Calomel, Salts, Castor Oil or nasty tasting Mineral Waters. When you are sick tongue coated, your head aches, and you feel bad generally, your Liver is out of order. You need PODOLAX. PODOLAX does not gripe nor sicken, tastes good and every bottle guaranteed to give entire satisfaction or you get your money back. 36m6. (Advertisement)

TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

After letting our subscription list run on a partial credit basis for nearly three years, we find that it is a money losing proposition and hereafter all subscriptions must be paid strictly in advance. The United States postal department is getting after paper with delinquent lists and we find that it is a better plan to require all subscribers to pay in advance.

Laws are not made for the just and righteous man. The law which says a man shall not take his neighbor's life does not effect the righteous man. Similarly, the man who intends to pay for his newspaper will not be effected by this new ruling. But we have found that there, some people even in fair Canyon who will ask us to send the News to them and they will be "around to settle in a few days."—Verily, many of them cometh not. In fact when a year is past many of say they never ordered the paper and refuse to pay for it. Delinquent subscriptions are collectable by law, but we don't like to take that method. We would rather follow the plan of pay in advance. You to get the paper if you pay for it, we to keep it unless you do.

Notices have been sent to all delinquent. We want you to settle up to date and as far in advance as is convenient.

Hereafter your paper stops the issue your time expires unless your come around and see us.

RANDALL COUNTY NEWS.

It is reported that a number of cases of hog cholera are in other sections of the Panhandle gotten from hogs shipped in. The Panhandle needs more hogs, but farmers should be very careful in buying hogs to see that they are absolutely free from disease. There has seldom been a case of cholera in the Panhandle country and it would be a shame to bring in a lot of infected hogs and distribute them among the farmers. Every man who buys hogs should insist on a clean bill of health from the seller. The only successful way to fight disease is to keep away from it. Make the man who sells the hogs show very clearly that they

Advertisements Are the Guideposts Showing Way

By HOLLAND.

WOULD you travel the road that leads to Prosperity? Then read the advertisements. They are the guideposts pointing the way. Disregard the advertisements and you are likely to go wrong, and even if you finally reach your destination you do so only after needless delays and unnecessary traveling.

The traveler who would disregard guideposts, who would not examine them at every opportunity, would be called foolish. He would get little sympathy when he complained of time lost going the wrong direction.

The man who neglects to read the advertisements is disregarding guideposts and is taking unnecessary chances and is delaying his own progress.

are free from disease.

The Hale County Herald, of Plainview, published a 44 page Industrial Edition last week. The edition was one of the largest and the best specials ever published in this section. It will bring thousands of dollars to Plainview and cost the business men of the town very little compared with the benefits to be derived. Editor Brown has developed the Herald wonderfully during the past year and is now publishing from 12 to 16 pages weekly.

A few years ago if a man advocated good roads the perpetual crank asked what kind of an auto he had. Today it is a recognized fact that good roads will increase the price of land almost as greatly as the telephone and rural route. The farmer is one of the greatest advocates of good roads that we have today. Randall county roads are good in most places but there a few bad places that need fixing. Let 1913 be a record breaker for good road making in Randall county.

Where is the difference a criminal sneaks out into the alley and sets your house on fire and is sent to the penitentiary. A suffragette walks down the street smashing windows and places infernal machines in public and private buildings. A criminal is a criminal—where can you draw the distinction between these two?

The silo is the farmer's manufacturing plant. It converts what might become worthless forage into feed as good as spring grass, and increases the value of the grain by at least fifty per cent. This feed in turn manufactures fat and fat manufactures dollars—big American dollars which we all like and too many people worship.

The glorious rains continue to fall and prosperity increases with every day. Come to Randall county this year.

The Dallas Democrat says that Tom H. Ball will be our next governor of Texas. We're for Tom.

Who's Who in Panhandle.

The panhandle of Texas has four of the 18,794 most prominent Americans according to the latest issue of Who's Who in America. Two of these come from Amarillo, one from Canyon and one from Stratford. The Amarillo representatives are B. G. Lowrey, of the Lowrey-Phillips schools, and Bishop Edward Arthur Temple of the Episcopal church. President R. B. Cousins is the Canyon contribution to the nations galaxy of great men.

But the man who gets the most space of the Panhandle representatives is John Randolph Leonard, of Stratford, who in 1900 was nominated for President of the United States on the United States Christian Party ticket.

Mr. Leonard, whose occupation is given as that of a retired farmer, has had an interesting career. Born near Waynesburg Green county, Pa., he fought under Jim Lane in the Kansas war for free state in 1856 and was engaged in numerous skirmishes. He fought throughout the Civil war with the 93rd Illinois volunteers. He lived in Ainsworth, Iowa, before going to Stratford, and helped organize the United Christian party at Davenport, Iowa, March 8, 1898.

Presbyterian Church Services.

There will be no services at the Presbyterian church next Sunday at 11 A. M. but the regular evening service will be held preaching by the pastor. On Wednesday May 21st at 8:30 P. M. the session has called for a congregational meeting for the election of an Elder and for general conference for the work of the church. The pastor is very desirous that every member of the congregation be present and that means all the young members as well as the older ones. TO THE STUDENT

If you are not doing good work find the cause. One of the most frequent causes of dullness is school work or other mental labor is eye strain. If your nerves give you trouble it is probably due to unconscious eye strain. Your eyes may be under strain without you realizing the fact. What is a good light for others may not be sufficient for you. Some people require twice as much light as others for comfortable study. If you are not doing good work try a better light. Do not use a hot oil lamp near your head. Get a cool electric.

Moisture is Abundant.

"Outlook is bright for one of the best years in the history of the Panhandle during my residence here," said H. J. Weber, a prosperous farmer of Randall county, who was in Amarillo yesterday afternoon on business. "The recent heavy rains were followed in my section by a generous down pour Thursday and Friday nights. The fall in Randall county was heavier than here, and my big plows were stopped today on account of it. There is an abundant supply of moisture, and with rains at intervals during the next two months a bumper harvest will be assured.

"No, I'm not planting oats or wheat. Kaffir and milo are good enough for me. And this year I intend to market my crop on the hoof. I have just purchased a bunch of steers, and will put these in fat shape for fall and winter marketing. I've tried this method before, and know it pays better than selling the grain crop by the old method.

"The fact is stock-farming is destined to prove the most profitable line of agricultural endeavor in this section. In time it will make this one of the richest countries under the sun. All that is needed to succeed at this is intelligent, foresight, business methods, and planting proved crops in connection. In this phase of agricultural development, I believe the silo is going to cut a large figure. But the "on the hoof" plan pays without the silo, and I advise all Panhandle farmers to try it out, but the silo and "on the hoof" will be a greater success."—Amarillo News.

Polled Hereford Cattle.

Welton Winn, of this city is not only the originator of the Improved Texas Guinea hogs, but away back 27 years ago he was the originator of the Polled Hereford cattle. This breed may be briefly termed, the improved Hereford cattle with the horns bred off. A publication has just been circulated by the American Polled Hereford Breeders' association, of which Mr. Winn is a member, on "Polled Herefords and Modern Beef Making." Mr. Winn wrote one of the principal articles in this edition which is as follows:

In the Polled Herefords we present the ideal beef breed. Herefords are equalled occasionally, but never excelled, for the range, under all conditions. No man has ever had the temerity to argue there was any breed better for all the varying conditions and vicissitudes of cattle growing on the range than the Herefords. From the range to the feed lots the Herefords continue in the front ranks of the procession. And finally the last we hear is that a bunch of "prime white faces" topped the market for that day. Under our new conditions the cornbelt and the stock farms in other sections of the country must furnish the beef supply, but as in all the past, the Herefords stand ready to take the lead in meeting these new demands.

At this juncture we come to the parting of the ways. The horns, though dressed, polished, and often artificially bent down, must go. We have no further need for horns with their danger and injury to human beings and stock, besides economy in space in barn and feed lot demand the Polled Herefords. Shall we meet this new demand with saws and other painful devices, or shall we meet it with Polled Hereford bulls that will breed the horns off? This is nature's way, brought about by a long line of scientific breeding by some of our most progressive breeders of the time. I consider the Polled Herefords the climax of beef cattle breeding. The work has just begun, and we expect great progress as the years go by. Let no Polled Hereford breeder be discouraged. Remember the horned family has a century and a half of effort county and precinct officers within the State of Texas shall hereinafter be compensated by the payment of a salary to be fixed or provided for by the Legislature.

Section 2. The Governor of this State will, as directed by the Constitution, make publication of this proposed amendment in the manner and for the time required by the Constitution, the amendment to be voted upon by the qualified electors for members of the Legislature of this State at the general election to be held for State officers on July 19, 1913, the returns of which shall, as provided for in the Constitution, be made to the Secretary of State, the result ascertained and proclamation made as provided for in Section 1, Article 17, of the Constitution. There shall be written or printed on the ballot to be used at such election "for the adoption of Section 58, Article 16, as an amendment to the Constitution, providing a salary compensation for certain officers and fixing term of office at four years;" and also "against the adoption of Section 58, Article 16, as an amendment to the Constitution for certain officers and fixing their term of office at four years;" and those favoring the adoption of said amendment shall erase the language "Against the adoption of Section 58, Article 16, as an amendment to the Constitution, providing a salary compensation for certain officers and fixing their term of office at four years;" by running a pencil or pen through the same, and those opposing the adoption of said amendment shall erase the language "for the adoption of Section 58, Article 16, as an amendment to the Constitution, providing a salary compensation for certain officers and fixing their term of office at four years;" by running a pencil or pen through the same.

IS IT YOUR KIDNEYS?

Don't Mistake the Cause of Your Troubles. A Canyon Citizen Gives a Valuable Hint.

Many people never suspect their kidneys. If suffering from a lame, weak or aching back they think that it is only a muscular weakness; when urinary trouble sets in they think it will soon correct itself. And so it is with all other symptoms of kidney disorders. That is where danger often lies. You should realize that these troubles often lead to dropsy or Bright's disease. An effective remedy for weak or diseased kidneys is Doan's Kidney Pills. Read the experience of a resident of Canyon who has tested Doan's.

T. A. Ridgway, farmer, Canyon, Texas, says: "I suffered from too frequent and profuse passages of the kidney secretions. Since using Doan's Kidney Pills I have much better control over my kidney action. I can recommend this remedy highly for weak kidneys."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Tax Notice.

Austin, Texas, May 5, 1913.
Mr. Worth A. Jennings,
Canyon, Texas.

My dear Sir:
We are in receipt of your annual settlement papers for the year 1912, and I note you return uncollected on the tax rolls the sum of $873.24. By reference to your list of delinquent or insolvent tax payers, I find the following affidavit:

"I, Worth A. Jennings, Tax Collector of the said county, do hereby certify that within list of delinquent and insolvent tax payers is correct, and that I have exhausted all resources to collect the taxes shown herein, as required by Chapter 129, Act of the 29th Legislature, and by section 10, Chapter 103, Acts of the 25th Legislature, and Articles 5173, 5174, 5175 and 5175a, Revised Statutes of 1895, and that I am entitled to credit for the same as uncollected taxes."

I will thank you to advise me at your earliest convenience as to what levies, if any, have been made by you upon property owned by these parties in an effort to collect these delinquent and insolvent taxes due the State. I will also thank you to advise me as to what levies have been made, if any, in your efforts to collect delinquent and insolvent taxes for the years prior to 1912.

The funds in the State Treasury are now exhausted and it becomes my duty as superintendent of the collection of taxes for the State to call on each of the tax collectors throughout Texas to exhaust every resource provided by law in the collections of these several amounts due the State.

You are hereby instructed to notify each of these parties that the amount which they are due the State must be paid within thirty days from the date of notice, otherwise you will proceed to levy and sell a sufficient amount of property owned by these delinquent tax payers to satisfy the State's claim. In this connection, I beg to refer you to Articles Nos. 7621, 7622, 7629 and 7630 of the Revised Statutes of 1911.

Upon receipt of this letter, you will please send out notices to each of the delinquent tax payers, to which you will attach a copy of this letter, so that each of these citizens who are indebted to the State for taxes, may be apprised of the conditions that now exist in our State Treasury and respond to the needs of the State at this critical time. Thanking you in advance for prompt attention to this important matter, and with kindest regards, I am,

Yours truly,
W. P. LANE,
State Comptroller

The above letter is published for the purpose of advising all parties who may be delinquent, as to the conditions of the States finances, and trusting that they will come forward and settle these accounts without forcing the unpleasant duty upon me, of having to go out and make levies.

Very Respectfully,
WORTH A. JENNINGS,
Tax Collector.

He knewed drawing away, "but I'd like to know why you were so anxious to prevent my looking out. Do you know whom I thought you had there?"

"As you please," rejoicing that the girl had escaped notice. "That little snip of a Molly. You made a hit with her all right, and she certainly don't like me. Well, delightful as it is to meet you again, I must be going." She turned away, and then passed to add over her shoulder: "Don't you think it would be just as safe for you to attend to your own business, Sergeant Hamlin?"

"And let you alone?"

"Exactly; and let me alone. I am hardly the sort of woman it is safe to play with. It will be worth your while to remember that."

He waited, motionless, until assured that she had passed down the hall as far as the door of the dining-room. The sound of shuffling chairs evidenced the breaking up of the party. In preparation to return to the ball-room, if Miss McDonald's absence were to escape observation, she would have to slip out now and rejoin the others as they left the house. He again turned down the light, and held back the curtain.

"The way is clear now, Miss Molly."

There was no response, no movement. He stepped outside, thinking the girl must have failed to hear him. The porch was empty. He stepped from one end to the other, making sure she was not crouching in the darkness, scarcely able to grasp the fact of her actual disappearance. This, then, was why Mrs. Dupont had failed to see any one when she glanced out. But where could the girl have gone? How gotten away? He had heard no sound behind him; not even the rustle of a skirt to betray movement. It was not far to the ground, five or six feet, perhaps; it would be perfectly safe for one to lower the body over the rail and drop. The matted prairie grass under foot would render the act noiseless. No doubt that was exactly the way the escape had been accomplished. Alarmed by the presence of those others, suspecting that the woman within would insist on learning whom Hamlin was attempting to conceal, possibly overhearing enough of their conversation to become frightened at the final outcome, Miss McDonald, in sudden desperation, had surmounted the rail, and dropped to the ground. The rest would be easy—to hasten around the side of the house, and slip in through the front door.

Assured that this must be the full explanation, the Sergeant's cheerfulness returned. The company of officers and guests had already filed out through the hall; he could hear voices laughing and talking in the street, and the band tuning up their instruments across in the dance hall. He would go over and make certain of her presence, then his mind would be at ease. He passed out through the desert hallway, and glanced in at the dining-room, where a number of men were gathering up the dishes. Beyond this the bar-room was crowded, a ruffian lined up before the slop bar, among these a number in uniform—unattached officers who had loitered behind to quench their thirst. Hamlin drank little, but lingered a moment just inside the doorway, to observe who was present. Unconsciously he was searching for Dupont, half inclined to pick a quarrel deliberately with the fellow or with Connors, determined if he found the little rat alone to frighten whatever knowledge he possessed out of him. But neither worthy appeared. Having assured himself of their absence, Hamlin turned to depart, but found himself facing a little man with long hair, roughly dressed, who occupied the doorway. The hooked nose, and bright eyes, peering forth from a mass of untrimmed gray whiskers, were familiar. "You keep the junk shop down by the express office, don't you?"

"Yep," briskly, scenting business in the question. "I'm Kaplan; vot could I do for you—hey?"

"Answer a question if you will, friend. Do you recall selling a haversack to a traveler on the last stage out for Santa Fe in June?"

"Vel, I do no; vas he a big fellow? Maybe de you vat was killed—hey?"

"Yes; his name was Moylan, post-sutler at Fort Marcy."

"Maybe dot vos it. Why! you vant to know—hey?"

"No harm to you, Kaplan," the Sergeant explained. "Only I picked it up out there after Moylan was killed, and discovered by some writing on the flap that it originally belonged to a friend of mine. I was curious to learn how it got into your hands."

The trader shrugged his shoulders. "Vud it be worth a drink?" he asked cannily.

"Of course, Frank, give Kaplan whatever he wants. Now, fire away."

"Vel," and the fellow filled his glass deliberately. "It vas sold me six months before by a fellow vat had a black beard—"

"Dupont?"

"Dat vos de name ov de fellar, yes. Now I know it, I saw him here again soon. You know him?"

"By sight only; he is not the original owner, nor the man I am trying to trace. You know nothing of where he got the bag, I presume?"

"I know nothing more as I tell you already," rather disconsolately, as he realized that one drink was all he was going to receive.

Hamlin elbowed his way out to the street. He had learned something, but not much that was of any value. Undoubtedly the haversack had come into Dupont's possession through his wife, but this knowledge yielded no information as to the present whereabouts of Le Fevre. When the latter had separated from the woman, the old army bag was left behind, and, needing money, Dupont had disposed of it, along with other truck, seemingly of little value.

The Sergeant reached this conclusion quickly, and satisfied that any further investigation along this line would be worthless, reverted to his earlier quest—the safety of Miss McDonald. Merely to satisfy himself of her presence, he crossed the street and glanced in at the whirling dancers. There were few loiterers at the doorway and he stood for a moment beside the guard, where he was able to survey the entire room. Mrs. Dupont was upon the floor, and swept past twice, without lifting her eyes in recognition, but neither among the dancers, nor seated, could he discover Miss Molly.

Startled at not finding her present, Hamlin searched anxiously for the Major, only to assure himself of his absence also. Could they have returned to the fort as early as this? If so, how did it happen their guest was still present, happily enjoying herself? Of course she might be there under escort of some one else—Captain Barrett, possibly. He would ask the infantryman.

"Have you seen Miss McDonald since supper?"

The soldier hesitated an instant, as though endeavoring to remember. "No, I ain't, now you speak of it. She went out with that kid over there, and he came back alone. Don't believe he's danced any since. The Major was here, though; Connors brought him a note a few minutes ago, and he got his hat and went out."

Hamlin drew a breath of relief. "Girl must have sent for him to take her home," he said. "Well, it's time for me to turn in—good-night, old man."

He tramped along the brightly illuminated street, and out upon the dark road leading up the bluff to the fort, his mind occupied with the events of the evening, and those other incidents leading up to them. There was no doubt that Miss McDonald and her father had returned to their homes. But what could he do to assist her? The very knowledge that she had voluntarily appealed to him, that she had come to him secretly with her trouble, brought strange happiness. Moreover, his former acquaintance with Mrs. Dupont gave him a clue to the mystery.

Yet how was he going to unravel the threads, discover the motive, find out the various conspirators? What were they really after? Money probably, but possibly revenge. What did the woman know which enabled her to yield such influence over McDonald? What was the trap they proposed springing? The Sergeant felt that he could solve these problems if given an opportunity, but he was handicapped by his position; he could not leave his troop, could not meet or mingle with the suspected parties; was tied, hand and foot, by army discipline. He could not even absent himself from the post without gaining special permission. He swore to himself over the hopelessness of the situation, as he tramped through the blackness toward the guard-house. The sentinel glanced at his pass, scrutinizing it by the light of a fire, and thrust the paper into his pocket. Hamlin advanced, and at the corner saluted the officer of the day, who had just stepped out of the guard-house door.

"Good evening, Sergeant," the latter said gently. "Just in from town? I expect they are having some dance down there tonight."

The guests, on entering, were passed from the receiving line to the committee on entertainment, Misses Willard, Pickerill, MacMillian, Hale and Cousins, in whose capable hands no guest suffered a dull moment, but was kept busily cudgelling his puzzle—loving brain or cultivating his love for the beautiful harmony of sounds.
