

"CHUCK WAGON" FEED FOR PRESS MEMBERS

Canyon Will Entertain Panhandle Press on Day of Dedication of New Normal Building

The old fashioned "chuck wagon" will be revived and put into use in Canyon on April 21, when the city will entertain the Panhandle Press Association.

The "chuck wagon feed" developed in this manner: While at the meeting of the Press Association in Plainview last year Pés. Cousins, Prof. J. W. Reid and C. W. Warwick urged the association to meet in Canyon this year owing to the completion of the new Normal building.

The editors will be brought to Canyon in autos from Amarillo and shown a rousing time throughout their stay. It is hoped that it can be arranged so they will be guests at one of the musical programs to be given two or three nights during the time of dedication.

Urging Alumni Support.

The following letter has been sent out by the Alumni Association of the Normal regarding the next edition of "Le Mirage," the annual of the school: The "Le Mirage" for 1915-16 of our beloved W. T. S. N. C. is to be dedicated to the Alumni.

The committee in charge has the following suggestions to offer:

1. Write us what you are doing; put us in touch with any alumna whose address you may know.

2. Send us a short-story, a good poem—anything on any such subjects as "Our Old Home," "Our New Home," etc.

3. Subscribe for the Annual by sending J. W. Reid $1.50, and for the "Llano Estacado," (our college magazine) the second number of which will be out the last of February.

Nothing will be more helpful to the institution than an active Alumni Association. The faculty is planning a "Home Coming," to take place at Commencement, May 13, 14, 15.

This is our "New Birth." We shall now go forward with rapid strides. "Get in the game." We earnestly desire your co-operation.

Speaking of Rats.

The latest "rat story" comes from the Burroughs & Jarrett drug store where it was seen a shotgun shell from which a rat had taken all of the shot. It is certain that the rat is responsible for the missing shot as the shell was standing upright. What was in the shot that satisfied the rat's appetite is not apparent, but evidently it did not agree with him, as he went to another place and took a couple of pills of a well known brand.

CLARK IN HURRY FOR MORE SHIPS

Washington, Feb. 7.—In the first real naval debate of the season in the house today Speaker Clark took the floor and spoke for faster speed in the programme. He said that if seventeen-inch guns were being put on foreign ships the United States should have them as well as the best guns obtainable now and hereafter.

"The speaker knows," said Representative Butler, Republican, of the naval committee, "that if we want things better in the navy we have to pay the price demanded."

"That is true," replied the speaker, "but suppose we paid the full price, is that any reason we cannot build a battleship as fast as England?"

"We can," Mr. Butler replied. "We have never done so," replied the speaker.

"We will begin to build and push aside private construction," said Mr. Butler. "We can build twenty-two ships in two years and put them to sea if we can find the men to put on them."

"Do not the English build a battleship much more quickly than we do?" the speaker asked.

"Yes," replied Representative Gardner, Republican, "but not so much more quickly as is usually thought. The Texas and New York, which are the latest two of our dreadnoughts, were completed in two years and nine months and two years and eleven months from the laying of the keel. The last dreadnought of the war completed for Great Britain took only about two years."

In discussing battleship models Speaker Clark declared that congress should learn which was the best type of ship and then specify that others should be constructed on that pattern.

DUNN—this sort of nonsense has got to stop!" said Stanford Stone, with a grim meaning in his tone. "Every time these Larnigans escape from your traps, I'm beginning to think that you forget that I'm in a position to enforce the orders I give you."
"Well—I got an idea," said Dunn. "It looks good. Bean's sore—he's afraid he won't get any more money. He thinks Tom Larnigan put over something pretty raw, and he's got it in for him. So here's the lay out. Bean says that if he can get into the Larnigans' flat he can fix things so that anyone who goes inside the front door will never come out again! I say—it's worth while. Let him make good."
Dunn went off to find Bean. And an hour or so later he telephoned to Stone. "Bean's been there—and you never saw a prettier job!" he reported, enthusiastically. "He's got the whole place wired—and every wire leads to some explosive."
"Fine work!" said Stone. "I believe you've got them this time, Dunn. Well—we got Dudley Larnigan when he was district attorney of New York, and it would be a strange thing if we couldn't put these two sons of his out of the running!"

"Let him come! I've got ways of taking care of him!"

Stone was smiling as he made his way to the home of Roger Maxwell, head of the Insurance Trust and the father of Dorothy Maxwell, the girl whom both Stone and Bruce Larnigan loved. Dorothy alone knew the truth concerning Stone, and though she loved Bruce, and hated Stone, she was constrained to silence because she knew that her father was in Stone's power; that he was deeply involved in the criminal machinations of the gang that the Larnigans had sworn to run to earth. Stone had threatened more than once, that if she betrayed him he would see to it that her father was ruined, and she had, therefore, had to be content with doing what she could in secret to help Bruce. And in this, for some time, she had had the aid of Kitty Rockford, her best friend, whose betrothal to Tom Larnigan Dorothy expected to be announced at any time.
Dorothy saw Stone come in; she knew that already a number of other men, prominent in the Graft trust, were in the house.

"We'd better keep our ears open, Kitty," she told her clam. "I think these men are planning some new devilry."
"I heard Mr. Weisner talking about interference with his business," said Kitty. "He said that if any outsiders came skulking around the coal mines they'd better look out—that there was trouble enough there already without bringing in any more from outside."
"They'll talk in the library," said Dorothy. "If we slip in there now and go into the little alcove, we can curl up in that big settee. If they find us we can pretend to be asleep."
They put their plan into execution, and, as they expected, they soon heard the voices of the members of the syndicate—the survivors of the original fifteen. Stone spoke first.

"Weisner—you needn't worry," he said. "I saw Larnigan just now—me! him as he came from the station. He's taken his mother and his brother down to the country. He explained to me that he wanted them to be where it was safe and quiet, because he had to go down to Pennsylvania."
"And you'll keep him away, I suppose," said Weisner, with a sneer. "Me—I don't trust you or your arrangements, Stone. You've had plenty of chances at these Larnigans, and you've messed up every one of them! Let him come, say! I've got ways of taking care of him if he turns up!"
The two girls couldn't hear all of the conversation. It was Weisner's voice, heavy and powerful, that was most plainly audible; Stone, from a more highly developed sense of caution, pitched his tone low, so that only an occasional word that he uttered was clear and distinct. And so the two girls did not realize that Tom would be in peril even before he left New York; they thought that for him the danger would begin to be acute when he reached the coal fields. As soon as they could they stole out and managed to get away unobserved.

"Suppose we went down?" suggested Dorothy. "Down to Pennsylvania? I don't believe Tom realizes the dangers he will face down there—and we might save his life! I'm sure we could be of some use."
"I'm willing," said Kitty, eagerly.
Tom, meanwhile, had gone unsuspectingly toward his flat. He meant to accept Stone's invitation. Stone could, he knew, give him valuable information as to conditions in the coal fields, and he had offered to do so. He did not see the spy who lurked in the lower hallway of his apartment house; it was with the utmost unconcern that he inserted his key in the door. He stopped for a moment, holding the door open with his foot, and bent down to stroke a cat that had rubbed against his leg. The cat, he guessed, must belong to his neighbors. Then he straightened up, and pushed the door open. But just then a mouse ran across the doormat; the cat sprang after it, in hot pursuit. Instantly there was a blinding flash; a deafening roar, and a great explosion hurled Tom half way down the stairs. He was bruised and shaken, but he was not seriously hurt; no bones were broken. And, even as he picked himself up the spy, hearing the explosion, ran off to report that he had walked into the trap.

Stone was appalled and astonished when Tom came, as he had promised to do. But he was able to conceal his astonishment and his dismay.
"You must spend the night," he told Tom. "You can get an early morning train—you might as well have one more night of comfort. I'm afraid you'll find it pretty rough down in the coal fields. The hotels are poor, and everything is upset and disgruntled by the strike, so that it will be even worse than usual."
Tom agreed, and Stone, after Tom had retired, sent for Dunn.
"He's fooled us again," he said, bitterly. "I don't know how—and I don't care! But I've arranged a last chance for you! He's in this apartment, asleep! You can get through the window—and this time take no chances!"
"Suppose I'm caught—it's murder you're asking me to do!" gasped Dunn, growing pale.

"You've done it before—and I still have the proofs!" said Stone, fiercely. "Which would you rather do—have me hand those proofs to the prosecutor, with the certainty that you'll be convicted, or take the chance that you won't be caught? Who is going to catch you? There's no one to give the alarm except myself!"
Dunn hesitated. But he knew that Stone held the whip hand.
"I'll do it," said Dunn, gloomily.
"All right," said Stone. "There's the way you can get in."
And at once he went downstairs and notified the hall boy that he had seen a burglar, trying to get into his rooms! Treachery was the very breath of life to Stone.

"I caught a burglar for you, Mr. Stone," said Tom, when he saw Stone returning, with two or three of the employees of the house. "He's tied up in there!"
"Good work!" said Stone. The man had missed his vocation; anyone who had seen him then, and had known, too, what his real plan would have been, would have been convinced of that. In him a great actor was lost to the stage. He concealed his fury, his dismay at the sight of Tom Larnigan, who had once more escaped. Tom had been too much for Dunn, that was all.
Down in the coal country Dorothy and Kitty saw much of the misery inevitably attendant upon a strike. The miners were grim and determined, certain elements among them had begun to riot and to try to destroy the property of the mining companies. The militia and the state police suppressed all violence ruthlessly, but the temper of the men was growing uglier, and there could be no doubt that, sooner or later, they would organize and seek to settle the matters in a pitched battle.

But the two girls, although they saw much that was of vital interest, did not, for a long time, discover where Tom Larnigan was, nor what he was doing. Tom, as a matter of fact, knew that he could not hope to accomplish much unless he was able to discredit Weisner. It was Weisner's claim that the shortage of coal, and the resultant high prices in the cities, were chargeable to the strikers, and this had done much to inflame public opinion against the men. Tom, on the other hand, was sure that Weisner was resorting to an old trick, and holding back great reserves of coal.

So he was making his hunt of the beaten path, looking daily, for some evidence that would support his belief, since he knew that a guess, no matter how close it might prove to be the truth, would be useless against such enemies.
And one day, on a specially built siding, he found a long string of coal cars, fully loaded. There was proof of the most glaring sort that he had been right, for, across the track, a shanty had been built by tracklayers—right in the path of the loaded cars! Tom began at once to take notes and photographs and in this occupation Weisner surprised him.

"Who are you? What right have you got to come butting in?" asked Tom, angrily, when Weisner began to abuse him.
"I'll tell you who I am—and in a hurry!" said Weisner, with an oath. "I'm Weisner—the boss of this whole country, and don't you forget it!"
Tom's anger was too strong for his discretion. In a moment he and Weisner were grappling, in a primitive, savage combat. Tom, with a fair field could have killed his opponent, but some of Weisner's henchmen hurried to his assistance, and in a few minutes Tom, unconscious and bound, was thrown into the tool shanty. Weisner, raging, went up the hill along which the siding ran, and stopped, at the top where the first car stood. Suddenly an evil light came into his eyes.
"He wants the coal moved, does he?" he snarled. "Well—moved it shall be!"
At once he sprang to the car, uncoupled it, and began to try to move it, so that, getting on the grade, it would roll down upon the shanty by the force of gravity.

And at the same moment Dorothy Maxwell, who chanced to be within hearing, understood his purpose, and suspecting that Tom was in the shanty, ran desperately toward it. The car gained momentum; Dorothy saw that she would be too late. But Kitty Rickford, nearer the bottom of the hill, understood Dorothy's frantic gestures. She ran toward the shanty, not knowing what she would see, but realizing that there was some danger for some one inside, since she could see the car racing down. And, just in time, she dragged Tom outside—and a moment later the car ploughed through the frail structure, smashing it to kindling wood.
The two girls freed Tom. And then they saw a group of men gathered on the hill about half way up. Tom went up; he returned, sober faced, in a few moments.

"Weisner's foot caught as he started the car—caught in the brake," he said. "He was dragged along and killed."
Tom could not avert much of the trouble that followed, but Weisner's death and the government action that followed Tom's report brought about a speedy settlement of the strike. And one more name was crossed off the original list of fifteen.

The Insurance Swindlers

Suggested by JOE MITCHELL CHAPPLE, Author of "Heart Throbs."

ACCIDENTS at the Great Eastern lumber mills were of so frequent occurrence that when Big Jim Blake was felled under a heavy, collapsing timber and picked up for dead the affair did not cause more than a passing ripple in the affairs of the great establishment. The management of the Great Eastern has a habit of smothering the news of accidents—when their employees were the victims. It was in the little white cottage on Elm street, near the factory yard, that the tragedy struck home. The sadly smiling woman, with the two chubby children clinging to her skirts, who greeted the gruff workman sent ahead with the news of the accident, jabbed for a moment at her eyes with a corner of her apron and prepared to receive the motionless body in the automobile ambulance.
"Jim!" she cried. "Jim, my Jim!"
The tired eyes in the white face slowly opened.
"Thank God, Martha, for the insurance! It will come in handy for us now!"
She smiled bravely back at him. The insurance! How like the big, unselfish nature of Jim to think of the insurance and protection for her and the kiddies first! And so at 10 o'clock the next morning, when it became apparent that Jim Blake was doomed to a long siege in bed, if indeed he were to recover with his life, she put on her best Sunday bonnet and shawl and haltingly asked her way to the big brown stone building which housed the Tom Changes Clothes With the Negro Bell Boy.

Accident and Life Insurance company. It was a big building and the offices of the insurance company within were very glittering and very pretentious, but a black lettered sign coldly announced that the company had just passed into the hands of a receiver.
Mrs. Blake started back with a gasp—the kind of dry sob which comes to a woman only under the most poignant distress. The insurance company a failure! And all the little savings of three years swept away! But this was not the worst. How was the Blake family to exist during the long weeks ahead? How were Jim's doctor bills to be paid?
A strong, cheery voice spoke at Mrs. Blake's shoulder. "Is there anything I can do for you, madam?"
The little woman whirled to look into a frankly smiling pair of blue-gray eyes set in a tanned, resolute face, and Tom Larnigan, for the speaker was he, removed his hat and offered his arm.

"Let us go some place where I can talk to you," he said quietly. "I have an idea that your story is one of many which I have heard today. You see, I am government special officer investigating just such frauds as I strongly suspect the company is attempting to perpetrate now on an innocent public." He threw back the lapel of his coat and showed the little silver star of government authority, Mrs. Blake hesitatingly followed his directions. Almost before she realized it she was sobbing out her story.

"You must let me take the place of the insurance company," he insisted. "How much did your policy call for?"
She hesitated. "Twenty-five dollars a week for three months in case of disability from accident."
"Here is $100. I will see you before that is exhausted, and we will see what we can do for your husband." He rose. "Keep up your courage, Mrs. Blake. I am sure that I can help you."
"How can I ever thank you?"
"Don't try." Tom smiled again as she turned away, but as her wan little figure vanished the smile faded from his face. He had work to do—grim work. The company was one of the strongest branches of the so called insurance trust and, as such, deemed itself above the law, immune from legal investigation. Tom turned finally away, his hands deep in his pockets. He did not notice the skulking figure in the doorway of the building which glided unostentatiously after him. The fifteen kept their audacious antagonists under surveillance night and day.
Reaching his rooms, Tom saw in a newspaper a challenge from the very concern that was the object of his investigations. "The Accident and Life Insurance Company Invites Any Investigation of Its Books and Records From Any Accredited Source."
He knew that Roger Maxwell, father of Dorothy, the fiancée of his brother, Bruce, was the guiding spirit of the concern. Was Roger Maxwell implicated in a plot to defraud the public? Tom shuddered and threw the paper from him. He would take the insurance men at their word, and if there was crooked work, heaven help them!

Had Tom Larnigan been present at a gathering of the remaining leaders of the fifteen in their private office that afternoon he might have been a shade less resolute in his sudden determination. Stanford Stone, as usual was in the presiding chair, and it was his curtly grim voice which stated the purpose of the session.
"Larnigan is on the trail of the insurance trust, gentlemen. Unless we get him first he is certain to deal us another disastrous blow. I suggest that we leave Tom Larnigan's fate in the hands of four picked gun men whom I have selected for their discretion and marksmanship. Larnigan cannot escape them. They have orders to follow him to the death. If our man escapes, Brother Maxwell, the crisis must be met by you in this instance as the most interested party."
Roger Maxwell staggered as he rose from his chair, and his face was haggard when he passed through the door behind him Stanford Stone smiled sympathetically at his retreating figure.

As Tom Larnigan left his hotel in a taxicab to visit Ben Travers he noticed that two men were following him. Once out of sight, Tom spoke to the chauffeur.
"I want you to change places with me for an hour," he said coolly, showing a twenty dollar bill. "It's a joke on some friends."
For a moment the man stared, and then he winked. Three minutes later Tom, in the overcoat and cap of the chauffeur, drove slowly up to the entrance of the hotel where Ben Travers had his rooms, descended from his seat and entered the building.
The two gun men fell back with curses when they found the driver inside the taxicab. Travers welcomed Tom warmly and announced that he had bought the Daily Independent to fight graft. Tom then changed clothes with a negro bellboy and walked out to the taxicab with a trunk on his shoulders, while the two gun men, three feet away, smoked serenely, unconscious that their victim was at their elbows. For a moment Tom debated whether or not to enter the taxicab himself, but instead walked around the corner of the hotel and successfully eluded his pursuers. He at once proceeded to the Accident and Life Insurance company's offices and pushed his way into Roger Maxwell's room.

"I have come to see your books," said Tom curtly, showing his star. "I would like to start my investigation at once."
For a moment Maxwell continued his wild stare, and then he gathered himself together with an effort. "Certainly," he stammered, pressing a button, which called a secretary. "Show this man to the vaults, Jones," he ordered as the call was obeyed. Tom bowed and followed his conductor outside. Hardly had the door closed when Maxwell picked up his telephone. "Is that you, Stone?" he whispered hoarsely when his connection was established. "Young Larnigan is here to see the books. He has escaped our trap. What shall I do?"
"Where is he now?"

"On his way to the vault."
"Let him get inside, then, and close the door!" was the curt answer.
"Close the door?" echoed Maxwell dully.
"Certainly. It is equipped with a time lock, of course. You can say it was an accident. It will be hours before it can be opened again."
Roger Maxwell hung back the receiver and paced the floor, with his face lashed in cold perspiration. It would be deliberate murder! Maxwell approached the vault, glanced stealthily over his shoulder and then lurched toward the heavy door. There was a clang of metal and then a hoarse cry of dismay from the clerk at the nearby desk, who sprang forward just in time to catch Maxwell's reeling form.
"For God's sake, what have you done, Mr. Maxwell? Tom Larnigan is inside!"

"It was an accident," stammered Maxwell. "Get help at once. Don't stand there staring!"
Hours later when three experts from the safe concern opened the vault they found the body of Tom Larnigan stretched on the floor. A physician, who had been hastily summoned, knelt over the form and shook his head solemnly. "Dead," he said.
Meantime, the evening newspapers on the streets were shrieking the latest sensational developments in the Larnigan case, and the story of the "accident" in the offices of the insurance company, which had resulted so disastrously. Bruce Larnigan, convalescing from the injuries, which for a time had threatened an untimely death, crumpled the paper convulsively. "The scoundrels!" he hissed. "The murderous scoundrels!" There was no doubt in his mind as to the cause of the tragedy and its purpose. "But I'll have them yet! I'll hound each one to his grave or prison if it costs the remainder of my life to do it!"

Had any one been fated to look on Roger Maxwell at that moment the spectacle presented by the usually spruce, dignified looking insurance president would have been a shock. Maxwell, huddled over his desk, was seeking, as a last resort to ease his conscience of its burden, by telling the truth to a dead man, whose lips could never open against him in real life. Summoning a messenger the president directed the boy to carry the envelope to the Larnigan home. It was not until then that Roger Maxwell prepared to leave his office.
At the Larnigan cottage the occupants were clustered in the living room, listening with bated breath for the rumble in the street which should announce the arrival of the black wagon with the body of the son and brother. But hour succeeded hour without the expected sound. Bruce was on the point of persuading his mother to retire when a hurried step sounded outside, the front door was flung open, and Bruce was facing his brother Tom.
Tom grinned at the other's stare and fung his arms over his mother's shoulders. "It takes a hard knock to kill a Larnigan," he chuckled. "Suspended animation, old man. I looked dead enough, but the doctor suspected the true facts and managed to bring me around in his office." A half hour later Tom was summoned to the door by a peal of the bell. A messenger boy extended a long envelope. It was the confession of Roger Maxwell—the confession that had never been meant for living eyes. Tom caught his hat from the rack and let himself softly out of the front door. He was determined if possible to keep the confession from Bruce—Bruce who would give his life to avoid giving Dorothy Maxwell pain.
Roger Maxwell, in his library at midnight, started to his feet with a cry that was almost a shriek. Tom Larnigan stood before him. "Go away!" he moaned. "Go away!" Slowly, accusingly, Tom extended the sheets of Maxwell's confession. Maxwell rumped to the floor. Tom darted to his side just as Dorothy entered the room. "I fear your father is very ill," he said gently. "Better call a doctor."
"But—but—how"—Dorothy stammered.
"I will explain all later," said Tom evasively.
The early morning newspapers carried the news of the apoplectic seizure of Roger Maxwell and announced that his life was despaired of. Bruce hurried to the Maxwell home. Dorothy met him with a sad shake of her pretty blond head as he sought to take her in his arms.
"Not now," she said, motioning him away.
Without a word Bruce turned and made his way back to the street. How was it all to end?

ON BILL OF RIGHTS.

We should dedicate ourselves anew to the maintenance forever of the vital forces of the Bill of Rights. It was largely due to the wisdom of Jefferson and Madison that the first ten amendments to the Constitution of the United States were added; in fact they were adopted almost concurrently with the Constitution itself, and but for these amendments the Constitution would probably never have been ratified by a sufficient number of the states to put it into effect. These ten amendments are often referred to as the Bill of Rights, because they are a guarantee of the maintenance of human liberty and representative government under our federal system, as well as in some respects construing the Constitution itself as to the character of government created under it and the principles to be maintained by it.

In them we have religious freedom and freedom of speech or of the press, and the right of petition; protection against unreasonable searches and seizures; no person to be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law; the right to a speedy and public trial by an impartial jury; the enumeration of the constitution of certain rights shall not be construed to deny or disparage others retained by the people. This tenth amendment to the Constitution, which is one of the most vital things in all the Bill of Rights, so far as the maintenance of the autonomy and independence of State Government is concerned, has been the victim of more assaults by political quacks than all the other provisions of the Constitution combined.

From the beginning of the government there have been those of the type of Alexander Hamilton, aristocratic in their tendencies and without faith in the capacity of the people for self-government, who have advocated a strong central government, concentrating its powers at Washington City and controlling the liberties, properties, rights and habits of the people from this great central power house. And likewise there has been another school of political thought in this country holding the principles of Thomas Jefferson, who preached the doctrine of individualism, who held that all men were created free and equal, that all governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed, and that the people were abundantly able to direct the energies of government in every department thereof and could be safely trusted to do so. Jefferson's theory of the separate independence and capacity of the citizen was likewise extended to the separate sovereignty and capacity of the states. He believed in local self-government; in the selection of the people of representatives to carry on the affairs of government, legislative, judicial and executive. He fought with all the power of his great brain the Hamiltonian idea of a centralized power to direct the affairs of the people, especially in local matters, and believed earnestly in the efficiency and wisdom of both the ninth and tenth amendments to the Constitution.

OUR PUBLIC FORUM

Peter Radford

ON THE LIBERTY OF JEFFERSON.

It is one of the luxuries of an American citizen to be permitted to discuss government and it is likewise a necessity if the United States is to hold its position among the powers of the earth, for in our system of government the destinies of the nation must rest upon the patriotism and wisdom of the citizen. We need efficient citizens, as well as efficient soldiers, for it is better to settle problems of government and society at the ballot box, and around the fireside, than on the battle field. It is as important that we understand the Declaration of Independence and Constitution of the United States as that we know how to point a gun or build a ship. To prepare for War requires an act of Congress, to prepare for citizenship requires only the act of the individual, and it is the imperative duty of every citizen to study government.

The Declaration of Independence declares that all men are endowed by their Creator with inalienable rights of life, liberty and pursuit of happiness, and the Federal Constitution affirms that our government is formed to insure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity, but what is liberty, and when is freedom of one person, class, sect or section oppression to another? Liberty and Tyranny are the same substance. They are the north and south poles of freedom. No man can be oppressed except by the liberties of another and no man can have civilized liberty without the consent of others.

Thomas Jefferson told King George that liberty was a divine gift and that the people were its custodians; that government was instituted to secure for the people divine rights; that all men were created equal and that rulers must get their rights from the people—not the people from the rulers. Jefferson then proceeded to form a government by the people that could give to its citizens a larger amount of liberty than any other nation on the globe. But governments are limited in liberties they can grant to any one citizen or class. A pirate has more liberty and an outlaw more freedom than it is possible for a government to grant its subjects.

Jefferson believed in giving God Almighty a free hand in making men, but when the liberty of any person or persons clashed with that of the community then the majority must rule. He was willing to trust all the people with liberty, but unwilling to trust it to any part of them. The Constitution insures liberty to the people as a whole, but nowhere does it give any person, class or section liberty to subordinate the welfare of the commonwealth to their selfish interest. It is always "the people" who are guaranteed liberty and never any part of them. Our government was formed by men feeling from hyphenated liberties and to subdivide liberty is tyranny, un-American and offensive to Republican institutions. It is only the man who puts "Citizenship first," Federal, State and Community, in the order named, that is capable of enjoying the liberty of Jefferson and the Americanism of Washington.

ON ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE.

Ex-Senator E. G. Senter of Dallas, who has perhaps given more careful study to the administration of Justice than any other citizen, when asked if reforms (which every thoughtful citizen must recognize as essential to preservation of government) could be brought about by the legal profession, of which he is a distinguished member, said in part:

"Seven years ago I told the lawyers in the State Senate, who blocked all efforts to improve court procedure, that they were hastening the coming of a time when the people would take this subject into their own hands. The plain English of it is that at heart they do not want any material change in the practice and the sooner the people find this out the quicker tangible results will be obtained. The real truth is that a large element among the lawyers consider that the privilege of delay is the most important feature of the law, and present conditions are perpetuated because they permit delay. It is unfortunate that the lawyers of this state take so little interest in the conditions which exist in the courts. Whatever interest they do take is wasted in mere complaints which do not seek and do not tend to produce results.

There is but one way to accomplish anything in bringing about the reform of court procedure and that is for the people of this state to tell the lawyers to get out of the way and let them take a try at it—to make plain to every candidate for the Legislature that if he does not assist in getting results upon this subject, he may expect to be beaten hereafter for every office to which he may aspire and particularly to hold to a rigid responsibility every member of the judiciary committees of the house and senate. The man who declares himself unable to suggest an improvement upon present conditions is unfit to be a member of the legislature and no excuse should be accepted which seeks to absolve any member of the legislature from this responsibility. The people could not do a better work next year than to defeat several gentlemen who will be candidates, who proclaimed their sympathy with this cause when it was presented to the legislature and who quietly got out their clubs and sandbagged every proposal which meant anything. When the politicians of this state learn that it means political outlawry to stand in the way of reform there will be no need for meetings of the bar association to get results. Every member of the legislature will get busy just as soon as it meets, and it requires no prophet to foresee that many of those who have been most active in the past in preventing court reform will be just as active in the future in assisting to procure reform.

It is up to the people to take control of this movement, if they want results. Lawyers can and should assist, but if they take charge of it nothing more will be accomplished in the next quarter of a century than has been accomplished by them in the past twenty-five years. The people have waited long enough upon them. The lawyers should take back seat now, and give the public a chance.

Henrietta Crossman in "The Supreme Test."

Mrs. Violet Logan, a widow, is deeply interested in improving the conditions of the poor. Madge, the sister of James Semple, a woman hater, is the only one who vindicates sympathy for her work.

On a visit to the slums, Violet meets Molly Phelan and her sweetheart, Maurice. Madge tells Violet how her brother came to dislike women. He was married once and had a baby girl. Then his wife eloped with the child, only to be killed a short time later in a railroad accident. They never knew what became of the child. Through her trustee's speculation, Violet loses all her money and goes to live with Molly. Semple makes the discovery that he has come into the money which the widow lost and is an innocent party to her misfortune, and turns the securities into cash, arranging to put them in trust for Violet. Violet learns from railroad officials that Molly is Semple's child. Madge then makes the discovery that her brother is the one who brought ruin upon her friend, Violet, and tells the widow about it.

Molly and Maurice overhear this confession and determine between them to make Semple, believing him a hardened villain, to give up the money he got from Violet. Maurice enters Semple's house and threatens him. Molly informs Violet of Maurice's plan to make Semple confess his guilt. Fearing Maurice may be in danger, the two start for Semple's house to interrupt the proceedings. They rush into the library, where Semple has overpowered Maurice. Semple declares his intention of turning Maurice over to the police. Violet tried to dissuade him, and then commences her tirade against the man, telling him that he is the real robber—that he took her money and now would ruin the life of this young man, who is simply trying to defend a friend. She then tells Semple that Molly is his daughter and wonders if he would send the future husband of his daughter to prison. Maurice, in the meantime, has discovered the papers beneath the book. He shows them to violet, who is astonished to learn that Semple has been putting her money in trust for her. Madge arrives with the police, who declares that a minister is needed. Violet leaves, taking Molly with her. Semple proposes to the widow and is accepted.

State Press in Dallas News—A popular Texas pastor, who is progressive notwithstanding his piety, has sent a circular letter to certain persons of his acquaintance, asking each of them to help him with a "frank and honest answer." Here are the questions—State press being one of those to whom the minister applied:

1. What do you consider the most dangerous tendencies and dominating sins of our times? 2. What can the church do toward remedying matters? 3. If you put the emphasis in your work?

These are questions to which every layman and sinner of any pretensions to thoughtfulness would say, on the spur of the moment, he could return immediate answers. But after he began seriously to turn them in his mind his assurance would fade. We all know what is the matter with everything and everybody until we are brought to feel some small portion of responsibility for a part of the trouble. For instance, "What are the most dangerous tendencies, what the dominating sins of our times?" Now, no man can answer this dual question with justifiable positiveness. The rule is to hate according to prejudice, to fear according to weakness. If we hate automobiles, probably we shall say splurging on borrowed money is the most dangerous tendency visible today. But that would be only a guess. The automobile is not an evil—it is its attractiveness that captivates too many. Some of our alarmist friends say "loose living" is the most to be feared tendency. But, as a matter of fact, in proportion to population there are more clean homes and less moral laxity in the twentieth century than in any century that has preceded it. Others say that military preparedness is fraught with the gravest sort of dangers to our personal liberties and republican institutions. But we know, after a moment's deliberation, that a self-governing people are never enslaved, and that never was the voice of the majority so potent in government as it is in this good year. "What," asks question number 2, "can the church do toward remedying matters?" Very likely the church can do very little toward remedying any matter until public opinion has prepared the ground. The church is extremely conservative, therefore it follows rather than leads the vital reforms of a general character. The church's mission is to the individual. It offers him personal salvation. The church teaches some things which are accepted unquestioningly by individuals, but which men in the mass reject. Much of such rejection is silent, a little vulgarly vociferous. To change that rejection into acceptance is the work upon which the church has been engaged all its life, and which it will continue to engage in. And it will succeed in the future, as in the past, in attracting those temperamentally adapted to churchly teachings. Also probably it will fail in the future, as in the past, to win those temperamentally opposed to church teachings or activities. "If you were a minister," runs the third question, "where would you put the emphasis in your work?" Who knows? Where does the doctor put the emphasis in his work? Or the lawyer? Some of these professionals specialize, but the general practitioner puts the emphasis first one place, then another. Perhaps that is what a preacher must do. But how would it do for some good men of the pulpit to say less concerning the glories of the next world and more concerning the desirability of this? How would it do for them to demand less of faith and more of works? Why not grant the would-be churchman a little more liberty of opinion and demand of him a little less circumscription of his social liberties?

Congressman Nicholas Longworth of Ohio sees disaster ahead if the European war ends before a new tariff is arranged. Congressman Nick is the husband of Alice Roosevelt. He bobs up twice a year, the Washington correspondents take notice, and then Nick makes his bow and disappears. Former Boss George B. Cox made Nick a statesman; Nick's father made the son, a multimillionaire. Alice Roosevelt and a marriage license made Nick a national celebrity. Ohio Republicans in the Cincinnati district keep him in congress.—Fort Worth Record.

Lost?

I call no fight a losing fight If, fighting, I have gained some straight new strength; If, fighting, I turned ever toward the light, All unallied with forces of the night; If, beaten, quivering, I could say at length: "I did no deed that needs to be unnamed; I fought—and lost—and I am unashamed."

The guests were usured into a contest of hidden flowers. At the close it was found that Miss Florence Johnson and Miss Renne Craig had found the greatest number of flowers. Then we were presented with a bow and arrow and given three trials at shooting a heart. These hearts held the secrets of our fortunes, and there was much excitement as each one's fortune was announced.

Following was a contest of roses, in which Misses Zerah McReynolds and Allie Ellis made the highest guesses.

Then we were reminded of the fact that this is leap year, and we should have some practice in writing proposals. These were collected and read. Miss Zerah McReynolds was awarded a box of candy for the best one. We drew half hearts and after matching repaired to the dining room. The table was decorated in hearts, cupid and candles with dainty place cards. A two course luncheon was served, featuring hearts.

As we returned to the parlor, we drew numbers which entitled us to comic valentines, bearing the same number. The guests tried to excel one another in expressing to Misses Buie their pleasure in the delightful hours they had given us.

Do You Buy "Junk?"

Don't Stop! this does not mean pig-iron, scraps or other discarded wearing apparel, when applied to the exhibition of moving pictures. It means, and very appropriately, a program made up of old and INDIGENT films that should have been laid quietly to rest forever. This class of film is "JUNK." If you are not careful where you spend your good money "JUNK" will be sold to you. In fact it will be forced upon you and you must sit and see it or get out, and no money back.

There are a great number of moving picture theatres that follow the rule of giving you a large pretentious feature on a certain day, paying a high rental price for it and showing it at no advance of admission and without question losing money that day. Don't think for one minute you are ahead. These exhibitors simply do this to get "YOU COMING TO THEIR HOUSE". You do go the next day expecting a treat, and find a program of "JUNK." You go again and find the program "JUNK" and by the time YOU reach that special day again YOU have paid DEARLY for that special feature.

Now why not attend a moving picture theatre where each day's program is as carefully selected with BRAND NEW interesting photoplays as the next day? You will always get your money's worth if you patronize Photo Playhouse.

He's not after your ready cash; he has an important subject to discuss—the biggest subject that can be applied to your business. Listen to him, even if you don't BUY; you may learn something.

Suffered From Lame Back, Weak Kidneys and Dizziness.

Dear Editor: "Last winter I suffered terribly from lame back, weak kidneys and dizziness, and uric-acid in the blood caused rheumatic pains. I sent to Dr. Pierce of Buffalo, N. Y., for his new remedy, 'Anuric.' As soon as the box of tablets came by mail I commenced taking them, and reaped untold good from their use." (Signed) MRS. KATE THOMPSON.

Note—This "Anuric" is adapted especially for kidney complaints and diseases arising from disorders of the kidneys and bladder, such as backache, weak back, rheumatism, dropsy, congestion of the kidneys, inflammation of the bladder, seeping urine and urinary troubles. BROOKS ALTERS VIEWS AS TO PREPAREDNESS

Declares in Speech at Galveston that he would Support President's Plan.

Galveston, Texas, Feb. 3.—"If I were sitting in the United States Senate today I would vote to support President Woodrow Wilson in his preparedness program," said Dr. S. P. Brooks of Waco, candidate for the Democratic nomination to the United States Senate.

"I would yield in my judgment to that of the President, who, I am now convinced, is in possession of information which the public does not share, but which prompts him to make his appeals to the public for its support."

Dr. Brooks, who is making a preliminary canvass of the State, preparatory to launching his campaign in an opening address at Marshall on March 2, arrived in Galveston this morning and spent the day with friends here. He will leave tomorrow and go to Houston where he will spend the day.

"I definitely made up my mind in support of the President's preparedness policy today, after reading in the morning papers his speech of yesterday," said Dr. Brooks. "President Wilson is a lover of peace, as shown by his past record, but he is an able President, and were I in an official position to support him, I would do so, for I am firmly convinced that we

BURROUGHS & JARRETT

Santa Frick.

New York World's Largest City.

While Christmas shoppers, rank on rank, were thronging to the stores, the head push of a Pittsburgh bank quite calmly closed its doors. Some forty thousand children had their savings treasured there, and many a little girl and lad was filled with black despair. "Perhaps," the urbane cashier cried, "in seven years or so, the grim receivers will divide the assets—I don't know." The heartsick little children wept, their cheeks with tears were soiled, as wearily they homeward crept—their Christmas time was spoiled. Then Henry Frick reared up and said, "This will not do, I swear; the kids shan't weeping go to bed—they'll have their money now!" Aladdin rubbed his wondrous lamp, in smoky old Pittsgrad, and bade the children woe decamp, and made their Christmas glad! The children, rescued from the hole by him, no doubt declare: "A man may have a large 'bite soul, e'en though a millionaire!"

New York is now the largest city in the world. Even London reluctantly admits the fact. In spite of the European war there has been a continual flow of immigration to American shores and as New York is the logical gateway of the nation, many remain there.

On the other hand, war has continually drained London. With the conscription law practically assured there will be a still greater drain on the population of that city.

The last census of the United States gave Greater New York a population of 5,253,885. London has claimed a population of 7,253,963, but this included the police district not properly a part of the municipality of London.

HE LIKED THE SKYSCRAPERS

High Buildings Receive Critical Approval of Sheik Recently Arriving in New York.

Sheik Sayid M. Wajth Gilani, lineal descendant of the prophet Mohammed and imperial Ottoman religious commissioner for the Philippines, has arrived on the Spanish liner Manuel Calvo from Barcelona.

As the liner came up the bay the sheik gazed at Manhattan's skyscrapers and remarked what fine places they would make from which to offer up a Mohammedan prayer. The immigration officials accepted him as a sort of Mohammedan Billy Sunday, and, as he fulfilled all their requirements, let him enter Uncle Sam's portals.

The sheik, although a descendant of the prophet, is as fair as an Anglo-Saxon. He speaks many languages, including English, well, and but for a turban and oriental robes thrown over his European dress, one might have mistaken him for a well-to-do man of the continent. He is forty years old and a born diplomat. He even carried him with copies of his book, "What Sayeth the Sheik-ul-Islam?"

"I have spent several years in the Philippines," said the sheik, "working among the 500,000 Mohammedans there, the majority of whom are Moros. I am going to tell Americans about my coreligionists and bespeak for them consideration of the people of this great country."—New York World.

FEELING EFFECTS OF WAR

Trappers Suffer Because of the Absence of Demand for Furs in European Markets.

With an almost complete absence of demand from Europe which is the chief market for furs, from the costly black fox and glossy beaver to the humble skunk and muskrat, combined with a material decline in the values of the higher-priced pelts; the lot of the fur dealer and trapper of the Canadian Northwest is not a highly remunerative one at present. The supply is very good, according to reports from the North, which fact may tend to force prices still lower. One business house which has been doing considerable trade with northern trappers and fur-dealers reports that many of the well-known fur traders in northern British Columbia and the Yukon are unable to pay their bills, because they have been unable to obtain anything like reasonable prices for their furs. It is anticipated, however, that there will be a demand for moderate-priced furs in the near future. A prominent dealer in Vancouver has pointed out that when times were good people were willing to pay high prices for the best furs and that they now require furs having the same artistic effect, but at a very moderate price. Black furs will be much in demand in Europe and elsewhere because of the almost universal mourning. Other furs, like the white fox, musquash and lynx, will be dyed black to meet the demand.

This Man Lucky.

Some men are gifted with luck when the double hoodoo is around. A well-known New York lawyer took his wife to the theater. Shortly after entering the playhouse she discovered that her $600 diamond bar pin had been lost from her dress. Hubby scouted around the theater lobby and on the street. He was just about to return to his seat when he saw what he thought was his wife's pin on the floor near the entrance. Picking it up he found it was a bar pin of pearls and diamonds, even more valuable than the one his wife lost. At intermission time the lawyer again strolled out and happened to glance at the floor near the box office. There, in plain sight, lay his wife's pin. His wife was overjoyed with hubby's luck, and is thinking of sending him out to look for a few rings and brooches.

Sumatra's Tea-Growing Industry.
The island of Sumatra, now in course of development as a tea producer, and reported to be capable of producing heavy yields from mature plants, has followed up last year's introductory period by larger supplies, and the industry has received much encouragement from the abnormally high values of the past year. The teas have already secured a "good will" in the market. The area under tea now approaches 8,000 acres, nearly all of which have been opened out on the east coast from Assam seed.

Births in War Time.

It is a popular belief that more boys than girls are born in time of war. According to a well-known London doctor, however, there is little ground for such an idea. He declares he worked in a district where the strain of war was felt very much because it provided a large proportion of its population to British fighting forces. He found in six months of cases he attended 55 per cent of the births were girls and 45 per cent boys.

The State of Texas. To the Sheriff of any Constable of Randall county, Greeting:

You are hereby commanded to summon the heirs of Mrs. L. L. Palmer, deceased, whose names are unknown, to appear at the next regular term of the District Court of Randall county to be held at the Court House thereof in the City of Canyon on the 3rd Monday in February, A.D. 1916, being the 21st day of February A.D. 1916, then and there to answer a petition filed in said Court on the 29th day of Dec. 1915, in cause No. 381, wherein Lulu Tension and husband, C. L. Tension, May Alexander and husband, R. T. Alexander, Matt Brends, for himself and as the administrator of the estate of Jessie Brends, deceased, are plaintiffs, and the unknown heirs of Mrs. L. L. Palmer are defendants, the cause of action being alleged as follows:

That the plaintiffs are the heirs, and only heirs, at law of Jesse G. Palmer and Ellen C. Palmer, who died intestate in Cook Co., Texas, in February, 1878; that Mrs. L. L. Palmer was the surviving wife and sole beneficiary of G. W. Palmer, deceased, who died testate in Randall County, Texas, November, 1906; that by the terms of the will of the said G. W. Palmer he bequeathed to the said Mrs. L. L. Palmer, deceased, all of his estate, both real, personal and mixed, and appointed her sole executrix of said will; that she qualified under said will and took possession of the estate of said G. W. Palmer; that G. W. Palmer and Jesse G. Palmer were brothers and at the time of the death of Jesse G. Palmer he and G. W. Palmer lived in Cook County, at which time they were partners engaged in farming and ranching in said county, the two families living together. That they were the owners of 500 acres of land in said county. The said Jesse G. and Ellen Palmer, father and mother of the plaintiffs, owned an undivided one-half interest therein, the said G. W. Palmer owned the other undivided one-half interest; that they also owned in partnership a lot of cattle, horses, farm tools and implements; that after the death of Jesse G. and Ellen C. Palmer plaintiffs continued to live with G. W. Palmer, who continued to use and enjoy the estate of the said Jesse G. and Ellen C. Palmer, then the property of the plaintiffs as the sole heirs at law of the said Jesse G. and Ellen C. Palmer. That thereafter the Cook county land was sold for consideration of $4,000.00 cash, all of which was retained by the said G. W. Palmer, as well as all of the personal property which was also sold; that after the sale of said land and property in Cook County, G. W. Palmer moved to Hemphill County and purchased land with the monies derived from the sale of the property in Cook County, as well as cattle, horses and farm implements, etc., taking the title of the same in his own name; that he continued to use and enjoy said property until 1899, when all of the same was sold for a consideration of Hemphill County property G. W. Palmer moved to Randall County, taking with him all of the consideration received from the sale of said Hemphill County property; that thereafter the $12,000.00; that after the sale of the said G. W. Palmer died testate and by the terms of his will Mrs. L. L. Palmer qualified as executrix and took possession of all of the property and estate of the said G. W. Palmer, including that which belonged to the plaintiffs, and which was held in trust by the said G. W. Palmer for the plaintiffs; that said trust was never repudiated during the life time of G. W. Palmer; that by reason of these matters plaintiffs allege that their interest in the estate of G. W. Palmer is a charge upon the estate, and likewise a charge upon the estate of Mrs. L. L. Palmer, asking for a judgment against said estates, and for general relief, and all costs of suit.

You are further commanded to serve this notice by publishing the same once in each week for eight successive weeks previous to the return date thereof in a newspaper published in your County, but if no newspaper is published in said County then in the nearest County where a newspaper is published.

HEREIN FAIL NOT, but have you before said Court on the said first day of the next term thereof this writ with your return thereon showing how you have executed the same.

Given under my hand and the seal of said Court at the City of Canyon this the 29th day of December, A.D. 1915.

T. V. Reeves, Clerk District Court, Randall County, Texas.
A true copy I certify.

The P. & O. No. 111 Lister

This Lister is known by farmers wherever sold as P. & O. No. 11, but the improved type is called No. 111 on account of important improvements.

There are many of them in the hands of farmers than all other makes combined—over 2,000 sold by one dealer in one county in West Texas. The special features on this Lister made it desirable of its kind for preparing for row crops; it is now almost universally used for plowing for small grain crops by listing and re-listing, leaving the ground in oval waves, which not only catches and holds the moisture but prevents the loose soils of the West from blowing away.

The adjusting link on front end of beam is an important exclusive feature on the No. 111, absolutely preventing the point from running below the desired depth. The wheels are provided with dust-proof tires, an immense help in the sandy loam lands of the West.

The feeding device absolutely deposits the seed at a depth of any of the row crops, besides can be equipped for both corn and cotton. You will have to see this wonderful improvement to appreciate it. The tilting hoppers allow change of plates without emptying them. Furnished with either disc or shovel covers.

This Lister has embodied many other important features that will convince you that it is the best on the market.

The P. & O. No. 123 4-Wheel Lister

This Lister has all the advantages of the No. 111 and in addition has rear wheels. This is desired in many localities as it enables the operator to see the seed as planted. The rear wheels have cushion springs to hold them in line with the row and following the unevenness of the ground and conform to the ridge without straining the rear frame, snapping, also, the Lister to remain in proper working position at all times. The friction lock disengages automatically, allowing the wheels to center and turn round in a very small space.

We manufacture the most complete line of Two Row Implements on the market. Ask your dealer and if you cannot be supplied through him, write us for circular and special introductory offer.

Old Age Annuities.
In 1908 the Canadian Government inaugurated a system of annuities which at first was under the management of the Department of Trade and Commerce, but is now a part of the Postoffice Department. The object sought was to provide old age pensions for Canadians on a voluntary instead of a compulsory basis. Under the system now in operation no one can begin to receive a Government annuity until 55 years of age, although the purchase of such annuity is absolutely the property of the person for whose benefit was bought. It can not be mortgaged, sold, traded or in any other way endangered.

Every resident of Canadian is free to contribute to and enjoy the advantages of the system. There is no exclusion on account of sex, no age limit, no medical qualifications as to health or strength. The annuitant pays what he can, when he can; but the officers in charge do all that their official duties will allow to insure the regular payment of premiums as agreed. If for any reason the annuitant has not been able at 55 years to pay the cost of the smallest annuity allowed, his money is not forfeited, but is returned to him with interest. The calculations for this system are based on 4 per cent interest com-
