HICO, TEXAS, FRIDAY, JUNE 14, 1929

WATER SYSTEM IS NEARING COMPLETION

HICO MAY GET LOWER KEY RATE ON FIRE INSURANCE

Hico's new water system, which has been under construction since January 1st, will be completed within two weeks.

The plans for the work have been approved by the State Fire Insurance Commission, and Hico is assured of a substantial reduction in Key Rate as soon as the new system is completely hooked up.

The new sewer mains which have been laid along with the construction program, are now in use and many homes are connected that could not be served before.

The disposal plant, which will be one of the most modern in the state, is about 90 per cent complete. About all that remains is the final hook-up between structures. We are advised that the store for the sprinkling filter started rolling Monday.

This work has been delayed considerably owing to inclement weather, delayed shipments and a few other things beyond reasonable control, but, considering everything, the work has progressed very well.

The construction company is very appreciative of the tolerant spirit with which the citizens of Hico have accepted the delay.

Here In HICO

My first impression here in Hico—arriving in the city at an early hour on Monday morning, and it was just the usual "blue Monday Morning"—and when a city can make an impression on a stranger on "blue Monday morning," you may know that the residents thereof are enterprising and friendly, all that I will have to say, will not, of course be "rosy" for here in Hico and all the rest of Hico's residents will be interested to know how the city looks to a stranger.

First coming into Hico, you will pass through some very fertile farming country, many of these farms displayed much care of the owners, while others like in many other sections where run-down, ill kept and had none of the appearances of the modern American farms about them. The prospects were looking good for the farmer, that had the appearance of diversified farming in evidence about his farm, but on investigation here in Hico found that there had been some disturbance in the local market of some of the farm products, that is the dairy products, but it looks like there is no need for so very much worry over this matter, for progressive citizens like we have in Hico trade territory will have a market for their milk, if only every person interested in Hico will put a shoulder to the wheel and push.

And next is the city park, that displays some more civic pride to the strangers eye. But, when you take a closer look you may see that it needs a little more caring for. The location of the park is ideal—and you may look the vast state of Texas over and you will not be able to find a more beautiful spot. It looks as if Mother Nature had done her part, by endowing the park with beautiful trees and the trickling waters of the beautiful Bosque flowing close-by. Let's not fall down on our part. Oh, of course, there will be a little expense attached to this, but as the old saying goes, "nothing is worth owning, that is not worth paying for."

Then up the hill to the school buildings. These buildings represent an investment of many thousand dollars. The schools of the city are in the hands of Christian men and women, and is undoubtedly the greatest factor in the life of the American boy and girl. Here in Hico got the impression that the entire citizenship of the city are untiring supporters of the schools—and they should be—for there is nothing too good for our children, and had it not been for our parents thinking that there was nothing too good for their children, it would have been impossible for the high standards of living that the America of today is enjoying, to have been attained in so short a time. Here in Hico urges every parent in the city that is contemplating sending his children to a school that will furnish more opportunities than the community school, to send them to Hico. This year the faculty will be more efficient than in years past, as most of the faculty members are doing work in the higher institutions of learning this summer, preparing themselves to perform their most important duties.

Now the churches, representing several denominations, the buildings are fairly nice, and the work the churches are doing is plainly evident in the act of every citizen. At the present time an old-time revival meeting is in progress at the Baptist church, the attendance has been good, but there is always room for improvement in church attendance in any community. Then, the people of the different denominations seem to have a cooperative spirit in this city, that goes to show the churches are the hub around which the lives of every man, woman and child is woven. There is no institution on earth that can take the place of the church, it is one of the most essential parts of the human life and here in Hico is very glad to find that the churches of the city work together for a better Hico. The churches of this city are very deserving of our physical and financial support—if we give the church physical and financial support, then the preachers of the city, with their untiring efforts will see to it that our spiritual life will not suffer.

The Business men and the business section of the city make a very favorable impression on the stranger. The business houses as a whole are very neat in appearance, many of the stores have nicely arranged display windows, that would be a credit to town of larger population. The goods they have on display, is of the very latest and priced very economical. The business men that here in Hico has had the privilege of meeting thus far, are men that are whole-

SECURE SHOWS FOR REUNION

PLANS BEING MADE TO MAKE THIS THE BEST REUNION

Information received today states that the reunion officials have signed a contract with the Ray Gray shows to furnish the amusements for the reunion this year. This is one of the best show companies traveling in the southwest at present, and they will have many novel features that the people of this section have not had the privilege of seeing, which will add greatly to the interest of this year's reunion.

This will be the 47th reunion of its kind held in Hico, and the entire citizenship of the city are even at this early date making elaborate plans to make this the biggest and best reunion in the history of Hico. The reunion officials urge that every citizen, when asked to render aid will do so, and this is the duty of every citizen, so when they call upon you—do your part.

There will be many noted speakers on the program, but at this time, it is impossible to give the names of any of these speakers. The committee that has this in charge, is capable, and will have one of the best programs that has ever been offered. Remember the date—August 8-9-10.

Fats and Leans Warming-Up For Big Benefit Game

Everything is going along fine for the Fat and Lean ball game that will be played in the near future. The proceeds of this game will go to the Volunteer Fire Department of Hico. All the business houses have agreed to close up for the game.

The Fats have been warming up some, but they are complaining of the heat. Manager J. E. Burleson of the Fats says they will win if it takes all the linament in town to get the "inks" out. The Leans, according to Manager H. J. Leach, have everything in their favor, and they are ready to go on short notice. This will be a hotly contested game, full of thrills and laughs.

Road Proposition Discussed by Lions

At the regular weekly Lions Luncheon of last week held at the City Cafe, the road proposition was discussed from practically every angle, and immediately after the luncheon was over, Mr. Sellers left for Iredell to attend the road meeting that was being held at that place. Mr. H. N. Everett, of Carlton, who was a guest with the Hico Lions accompanied Mr. Sellers to Iredell.

There were eighteen members present at this meeting, which is a fairly good attendance. Every member is urged to be present at the luncheon today at the City Cafe at 12:30. Mr. Sam Jones acted as secretary, as the secretary, Attorney A. C. Johnston, was absent.

The Hico Lions Club is one of the liveliest organizations in this section, having been organized only a short time, but has many worthwhile accomplishments to its credit. There will be other important matters to come up at today's meeting. Every member should be present for there is "strength in unity."

Farmer Proves Diversification Pays

J. H. Latham, who resides six miles south of Hico, and is one of our progressive farmers, has proven that diversification pays, and pays in more ways than one. It not only adds to the fertility of the soil, but makes it possible for Mr. Latham to have an income the year around, for if there is a downward trend in the market price of one product, the farmer that practices diversified farming can sell some one or more of his products for a good price.

Mr. Latham sold and had on display some very fine specimens of Bermuda onions, some extra fine cabbage, and beets that will compare favorably with the same vegetables that are raised in the Rio Grande valley. Mr. Latham also has a nice flock of fine chickens that he is now realizing a daily profit on.

hearted for Hico, and Hico is "bound to grow" with such "business" men boosting for it. The way they speak to a stranger and shake his hand, sounds better to a stranger in Texas than Texas Guinnan's "hello sucker" sounds to the riotous New Yorker. This friendly "good morning and warm Handshake" makes it impossible for a stranger to remain a stranger long.

Miss Frizzelle Weds Conrad Stolzenbach

A wedding of more than local interest occurred in this city Sunday afternoon, June 2, when Miss Norma Frizzelle, of Goldthwaite, and Mr. Conrad Stolzenbach, formerly of Ohio, but now of Big Springs, were united in marriage at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Hugh E. McCullough, Rev. Clarence Allen Morton, pastor of the First Baptist church, of Hico, reading the double service before an altar of fern arranged between the two entrances to the large living room.

The bridal party entered to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march, soft notes from Trameri sounding all during the ceremony. Mendelssohn's Wedding March was played as a recessional.

Mrs. Mark Fairman, of Goldthwaite matron of honor, entered first, followed by Miss Ima Ruth Kelley, of Springtown, maid of honor, and Miss Mary Florence McCullough, of Goldthwaite, brides' maid. Paul McCullough and Julian Evans, of Goldthwaite, attendants, entered with Misses Kelley and McCullough. Bridesmaids wore georgette models in pastel shades with hats and shoes to match and carried arm bouquets of roses and carnations.

The bride, lovely in an ensemble of blue de Lyon georgette with hat and shoes to harmonize, entered on the arm of her cousin, James C. Frizzelle, of Fort Worth, who gave her in marriage. Her bouquet was of pink sweetheart roses, valley lilies and bridal wreath, with shower of fern and lilies of the valley.

The groom, accompanied by his best man, Hugh E. McCullough, met the bride at the improvised altar of greenery banked with roses in delicate pastel shades, before which the impressive ring service was read. Little Miss Mary Ella McCullough, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh E. McCullough, and niece of the bride, carried the rings in two lilies.

Following the ceremony, an informal reception was held, attended by the bridal party and a few intimate friends. The three-tiered wedding cake decorated with orange blossoms, was cut by the bride and served with moulded ices and fruit punch to Mr. and Mrs. Conrad Stolzenbach, James Frizzelle and Etheridge Clifton, of Fort Worth; Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Martin, Paul McCullough, Miss Mary Florence McCullough, Julian Evans, Mr. and Mrs. Mark Fairman and Mrs. Walter Fairman, of Goldthwaite; Mr. and Mrs. Earl R. Lynch, Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Woodward, Misses Charlotte and Margaret Mingus, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh E. McCullough and little Miss Mary Ella McCullough.

After the reception Mr. and Mrs. Stolzenbach left for Big Springs where they will make their future home. Mr. Stolzenbach having for sometime been connected with a prominent oil concern with interests in that city.

Mrs. Stolzenbach is quite well known in Hico where she has visited frequently in the home of Mrs. McCullough. She is also known nationally as staff entertainer and assistant program director and announcer with station KGBR, the Brownwood Bulletin radio broadcast station at Brownwood.

GOspel SINGER COOK PLEASes IN SONG; MEETING GOING OVER GREAT

With the pastor in the pulpit last Sunday the revival meeting at the First Baptist Church opened with three conversions and additions by baptism. In the afternoon six candidates were baptized. Some four are now awaiting baptism.

The Evangelistic party arrived Monday afternoon. At the first service they were greeted with a large and appreciative congregation, which is constantly growing. The preacher, Rev. Roy S. Holloman, Bryan pastor, is bringing some wonderful gospel sermons. He is original, free and democratic yet with a deep grasp on the great spiritual import of the scriptures.

The gospel singer, Mr. Chas. O. Cook, in a most pleasing and winsome manner, is building a large choir and great congregational singing. The orchestra is rendering a very fine service, especially do the Baptist people, appreciate, Miss Leta and Masters W. H. and Walton Gandy, while not members of the local congregation, contribute their musical service. Together with them Masters Jack Vickrey and Weldon Leach give an added attraction to the music. Mr. Cook is planning special music for all the services. Miss Orion Jo Pool is presiding at the piano with grace and charm. The old timers recall with pleasure the visit of Mr. Cook to Hico some 28 years ago when he sang in a revival when Rev. J. P. Gilliam was pastor, and Dr. Geo. W. Pruitt.

The pastor, Rev. Clarence Allen Morton, announces that the Adult Personal Workers Band will meet hereafter on the lawn and the young people in the Mens' Bible Class room under the leadership of Mr. Cook. The Junior choir meets at 4 in the afternoon. The Visitation Campaign, being carried on in the homes of the members is bringing a blessing to every home. The superintendent, Mr. Make John-on, is requesting all Sunday school officers and teachers to meet school at 9:30 Sunday morning in preparation for a special service at the Sun-tion school hour at 10:00 Sunday morning. Messdames J. B. Pool and C. W. Shelton will also receive the Sunday school diplomas.

All of the B. Y. P. U. organizations will meet Sunday night 7:15. There will be no Saturday morning services but services Saturday night. The visiting evangelists will preach and sing Sunday 11 a. m. and 8:15 Sunday night. The meeting continues on next week with morning services, 10 A. M. and night 8:15. The members and officers of the First Baptist Church, together with town as a whole are highly pleased in every way with the progress of the meeting.

City Officials Attend Convention

Fire Chief Alex Smith, of the Hico Fire Department, Mayor J. C. Barrow, Lee Rainwater, S. E. Blair and Marvin Tidwell attended the State Firemen's Convention in Galveston several days this week.

A tentative and helpful program was carried out by the convention. Many suggestions were offered to better equip the fire departments of the state to reduce the fire hazards and afford better protection for the people. Conventions of this nature have been very helpful to the firemen of the state, as it gives the local firemen of each city represented a chance to study and exchange ideas with his fellow firemen, and the time is well spent when our officials attend these conventions. It shows that they are ever alert to render a better service to their community.

Grand Master of Masonic Lodge Visits Here

Threshers Running Capacity in This Section of State

Since Monday morning many threshers have been running at capacity in this section. The weather has been very favorable this week and with a few more days of favorable weather most of the grain will be threshed, but even at this early date there has been a fairly brisk movement of grain. It was feared by many that the rains of a few weeks ago, would do serious damage to the grain, but a very small per cent of it was damaged. The 1929 grain crop, according to many of the farmers will be of a good grade and the yield per acre will be average or above.

People in a position to know say that by the end of this week that there will be a very brisk movement in the local grain market. There is slightly lower price prevailing than last year on account of a large acreage and the good yields over the entire country.

Swimming Pool to Open Here Soon

A deal was consummated the first of the week whereby Mr. C. E. Brown of Wichita Falls, Texas, acquired the ownership and management of the swimming pool, and he plans to open within the next ten days. According to Mr. Brown, he will make many improvements, including the installation of a new electric motor for the pump.

Mr. Brown is an experienced swimming pool operator and will no doubt render his patrons an ideal service. He states that he has adopted rules that will make the pool one of the best managed pools in this part of the state and that these rules must be obeyed. Mr. Brown has accepted a very novel plan for selecting a name for the pool, as he is going to let the public name it, and will award the person submitting the most appropriate name. The best name to be decided by judges.

Trail of '98 Now Showing at Palace

Gold for this "yellow stuff" men commit murder, lie, betray themselves, their fellowmen and God Almighty, so strong is the urge for the possession of Gold. The Trail of '98 is one of the best pictures filmed in recent years and cost millions of dollars, but the producers have been ably rewarded for they have put before the people of today one of the most epochal and stirring events in the history of Alaska's existence. The cast is made up of the world's most famous artist, with Dolores Del Rio in the leading role. She startled the American public with her beauty and her adaptability to the role she plays in the Trail of '98. She can plunge her admirers into the darkest of illusions, then she can produce a sense of mirth that no other is capable of doing.

The Gold Rush is on at the Palace, a matinee will be given Saturday afternoon.

Mrs. J. W. Fairey, who was taken to a hospital in Waco Wednesday night, underwent a serious operation Thursday morning, from which she is recuperating.

ENTIRE SYSTEM IS STRENGTHENED

"Two years ago specialists in Louisiana advised me to come to San Antonio to recuperate from a bad spell of malaria, which had poisoned my system and left me in a run-down

MRS. E. PRUDHOMME condition. My complexion and eyes had turned an unhealthy, yellow. Everything I ate gave me trouble, instead of strength. Constipation kept my system from throwing off poisons. I was almost hopeless. "Sargon did more for me in less than a month than all the medicines I used in five years. My friends say they have never seen such a remarkable change in anyone in such a short time. Every trace of indigestion is gone. My food gives me the proper nourishment and I have gained five pounds. I feel good all the time. "Sargon Soft" Mass Pills overcome constipation in a natural way. They not only have rid me of constipation in a natural way but have driven the malarial poisons out of my body. "I take the greatest of pleasure in telling all my friends about it." The above statement was made recently by Mrs. E. Prudhomme, 616 W. Woodlawn, San Antonio, Texas, who is highly regarded by her friends and neighbors. Sargon may be obtained in Hico at Porter's Drug Store.

A TEXAS COTTON IN WORLD-WIDE DEMAND

"The coming of the dairy cow to the cotton fields of Texas does not imply a serious challenge to the supremacy of the traditional cash crop of the state," points out a writer in Texas Opportunities for May. "The invasion of the dairy cow—as well as the rapid progress of other elements in diversification—means an improvement in the quality of the cotton grown. Larger staple, tougher fiber, larger yield and quick maturing are being sought by Texas cotton growers as never before. Every indication points to the perpetual security of the position of cotton as the dominant source of agricultural revenue, on which so much of the destiny of Texas hangs.

The article deals with the selective breeding of the famous Greer-Wichita variety, with the elaborate tests to which this cotton is subjected, of the uses to which it particularly lends itself, and of the market demand it is finding among spinners at home and abroad. Last Summer agents of the French Government inspected Southern breeding farms and decided to foster the growing of Greer-Wichita cotton in the French Colonies. It is said that the experimental equipment at the breeding farms at Iowa Park is more complete than that of the United States Department of Agriculture.

"There are almost literally a hundred and one paces through which this cotton is being put constantly," resumes the writer. "They are applied with a view to determining its milling qualities, and to searching out means for constant improvement. The laboratory examination is more stringent than the mills themselves impose and it assures accuracy in supplying spindle needs. It is said that some of the Carolina mills have reduced the cost of production by using Greer-Wichita cotton. And the Worth Mills are notable among the Texas factories that are finding it advantageous to use this cotton in tire fabrics."

OUR GREAT NEED (By W. A. Huckabee)

Oh, what a contrast there is between the evangelist and preacher of a few years ago, dealing out fearlessly the thunder on, terror of the law, as well as the mercy of the loved, and the nice present day dude (many of them) with a beautiful little steel ribbed metaphysical essay, sprinkled with rosewater theology, telling his congregation, if you don't repent, (to a certain extent) and be converted (to a certain degree) you will be damned (in a measure). Now what we need is this fast fashionable worldly and degenerate age is men called of God, not of men, not for an education, not for popularity (the fearless preacher is not much popular), but is called of God and has the work on his heart. The church does not need sensational preachers, but sensible Biblical preachers. The gospel is the power of God unto salvation to all who believe it, to the few and gentle.

This is the patriotic period of the year—Memorial Day just past, Flag Day coming this month, and Independence Day—the Glorious Fourth—next month.

SOY BEANS EXCELLENT TO FATTEN LIVE STOCK

Soy bean hay has proved a very satisfactory roughage to fatten cattle, but it is not believed that much benefit can be derived from feeding the soy bean stems which have been left in the field until the beans mature, says a writer in the Prairie Farmer. Horses and stock cattle will chew and consume a great deal of this threshed bean straw, but I do not believe it would be profitable to try to force fattening cattle to eat it. In fact, if they were getting plenty of corn I do not believe they would eat it. Some kind of hay, shock corn, or silage is almost essential in fattening cattle, particularly during the preliminary feeding period while getting them on full feed. Of course the shorter the feed the shorter may be the preparatory period. After fat cattle are entirely upon full feed of corn it is possible to feed them on from two to four pounds of hay per head per day. It is possible, also to feed them some concentrated supplement to corn. At prevailing prices, cottonseed meal seems to be a much cheaper supplement to use. Miss Jahnne Copeland left this week for Eastland, where she will spend the summer with her grandfather and while there will attend summer school at a local institution of learning.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Oliver Rosamond, of Dallas, have announced the arrival of a lovely baby daughter, Patricia Annette, born Thursday, May 30 at St. Paul's Sanitarium in that city. Relatives and friends of the family here, especially "Grandmother Anna," are delighted over the announcement of this wonderful bit of news and are eagerly looking forward to a visit from the little lady and her mother in the near future. Mrs. Rosamond will be remembered as Miss Louise Driskell, who was reared in Hico.

TO THE MENS BIBLE CLASS, FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH, HICO, TEXAS

How emblematic of human life is the hour glass. Swiftly and rapidly the sands trickle on numbering our days. Man cometh forth as a flower, he puts forth the tender leaves of hope; tomorrow blossoms and bears his honors thick upon him, the next day comes a frost, which nips the shoot. But thru the scent of water there is hope that it will live again. Such has been the lot and life of Brother Charley Pool, the esteemed and honored brother in the flesh of our friend and fellow class member, Brother J. B. Pool. Being apprised of this sad intelligence we humbly bow in submission to God's will and pray for Divine Comfort for our brother and the kindred in this hour sorrow.

Be it resolved that a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of our Class, a copy be handed Brother J. B. Pool and a copy be given the Hico News-Review for publication.

Respectfully submitted,
J. W. Richbourg, Chairman.

HAS NEW PLAN FOR FINANCING ROAD BUILDING

Austin—A plan for financing highway construction and maintenance from a gasoline tax and registration of motor vehicles which he said would yield the state a revenue of approximately $35,000,000 in 1930, was divulged today by Representative Leonard Tillotson, Sealy, who said he was prepared to present bills carrying his ideas into execution. Tillotson's financial program calls for a four-cent gasoline tax in excise form, all of which revenue would be diverted to the state highway department. Gasoline for farm machinery and vehicles which do not use state highways would be exempt. Fees on passenger cars would be slashed 50 per cent. Revenue from this source would be allotted to counties, none of which would be allowed to receive more than $250,000. The excess over this maximum would be deposited to the credit of the state. "This system would give the highway department an average income of $42,500,000 over a 10-year period beginning with 1930," Tillotson explained, basing this estimate on a $2,000,000 income annually in gasoline consumption and registration fees.

CLEAN UP!

With the passing of the "April showers," which were delayed one month this year, there is no superstition or prophesying about this warm weather sign.

When warm weather has come to stay (until cold weather returns this autumn) every owner of property and tenant should instinctively feel his duty to remove the evidence of the winter's ravages and to aid and augment nature in her work of rehabilitation.

Every warm weather clean-up program should include disposal of the winter's accumulation of litter and decayed vegetation, repairing and repainting of buildings, and landscape gardening. Landscape gardening is no longer associated with large estates alone.

Cleanliness about the person or the home costs nothing. A community clean-up need involve no expense, except of a moderate amount of labor on the part of the householders. If there ever were excuses for uncleanness they were removed long ago.

What is the compensation of a community clean-up campaign? It improves the general health of the community by removing deposits that are breeding places of disease germs and disease carrying insects. A clean town is a better place in which to live than one that is unsanitary and unsightly. And the best community advertising is the appearance of being "cleaned-up, painted-up and planted-up."

SAFETY IN MOTORING

The innovation of all-steel bodies is one of the greatest steps forward in automobile development in recent years. Already millions of cars are so equipped.

The great railroad lines have scrapped their wooden passenger cars which splintered to bits in accidents, and replaced them with steel coaches. The automobile industry is doing the same thing with the result that driving safety is increased.

Automobile accidents multiply as more and more cars come into use. It is therefore essential that every possible safety factor be adopted.

TAMPERING WITH TEMPERAMEN

There is a continual endeavor on the part of minority groups in this country to ape European customs and make "paternalism" instead of "liberty" the slogan of the land.

Our crime record is cited as showing failure in our moral structure. We are told that in England private ownership of guns is not allowed, hence less crime.

In order to reduce deaths by automobiles one might again cite England and say that compared to the United States proportionately few people enjoy the luxury of a car, hence there are fewer deaths from this cause. Therefore, by making conditions in this country the same as in England, the auto death toll would be reduced.

In all these comparisons one important fact which spells the difference between America and Europe is overlooked, namely, the temperament of the people. This nation was founded because of the urge for freedom—to escape restrictive laws and class privilege. As a whole our people have been a straight-thinking, straight-living and straight-shooting nation. Hunting, shooting, fishing, automobiles, guns, horses and the open country have been symbolical of the American life.

There is nothing wrong in owning a gun. Therefore it will be hard to make a nation of gun owners accept such restrictions to their personal liberties. Punish the man who uses a gun wrongfully just the same as you would punish a man who uses an automobile wrongfully, but don't make the law-abiding suffer for the errors of the wrong-doer.

PROFITS ESSENTIAL TO SERVICE

Just as it is true that nothing is free, so it is true that any business, to be successful, must be operated upon a basis of profit. Public utilities are no exception to the rule even though engaged in serving the public universally and continually.

"As a business, the utility is required to produce enough revenue to pay the operating costs for quality of service which it can merchandise readily, to pay wages to capital sufficient to insure a ready flow of new capital as needed, and to provide some surplus," says M. S. Sloan, President, New York Edison Company. "It can not be a successful and desirable public servant unless it is a business success."

Too many of us worry about the big things of life. If each of us does his bit, the big job will be done all right.

CENTRAL TEXAS NEWS LETTER

American Legion Posts of Central Texas are swinging into action this summer with unusual vigor. Temple and Waco Posts will unite Friday night, June 7th, in a carnival and ball at the Cotton Palace, proceeds of which will send the Waco drum and fife corps to the Legion's national convention at Louisville, in September. Every two tickets sold for the carnival and ball will "roll 'em a mile" on their way to Louisville, and the Legion has adopted a cartoon as a feature of their campaign, showing the drum corps driving a six-horse caisson at the run toward Louisville, with the slogan "Keep 'em rolling". Ex-service men will recognize the reference to the great marching song of the world war, "The Caissons Go Rolling Along."

The case of small towns threatened with isolation because of the Highway Commission's desire to build "air-line" roads and "Get the tourists from one border of Texas to the other in the shortest possible time" was taken up last Saturday by the Central Texas Press Association in its monthly meeting at Waco. A resolution was adopted which declared the small town to be an indispensable part of the economic and social structure of this State, and opposed any action which would "unreasonably sacrifice" the opportunity of the small town to profit by tourist trade. The editors further went on to record for development of the small town through colonization, by encouraging farmers, particularly livestock farmers, to come here from other sections, where they are using land worth $200.00 an acre to produce less than they can garner on $60.00 land here. Both the highway and colonization plans were turned over to an activities committee, which will report concrete plans at the next regular meeting.

World-wide attention was focused on Central Texas when every delegate to the International Rotary convention at Dallas this week was supplied with a copy of "The Central Texas," a pamphlet published the latter part of April by some twenty Central Texas towns, which gives the first complete history of farm and industrial development in this section. This pamphlet was described by a high official of the Texas Power & Light Company as being the "greatest piece of advertising ever done for Central Texas," and placing it in the hands of the delegates from every state of the union and many foreign nations is expected to have a forceful influence in directing new men and business this way. It is an important preliminary step to the colonization work suggested by the Central Texas editors at their last Saturday meeting.

A movement to advertise the Waco-Cisco highway as one of the most beautiful scenic routes in the Southwest was begun Monday, when delegations from Dublin and Meridian met at Waco with E. C. Woodward, state highway engineer, and afterward formed a highway association. Permanent organization will be effected at a second meeting to be held in Meridian next Tuesday. The Waco-Hico-Cisco Transportation Co., with a capital of $50,000, was granted a permit last Saturday to operate over this route and will put on a number of large busses and a more frequent service, buying out Black's Bus lines.

ROUGHAGE IN DAIRY RATION CUTS COST OF PRODUCTION

Many dairymen, in their effort to increase the production per cow, have acquired the habit of feeding too much concentrated grain feed, says O. E. Reed, chief of the Bureau of Dairy Industry of the United States Department of Agriculture. More net profit per cow can be made under some conditions, he says, by feeding a limited grain ration or even a roughage ration in preference to a full grain ration.

To demonstrate this statement, Mr. Reed cites the results of an experiment by the bureau at Huntley, Montana. In this experiment three plans of feeding were compared. Ten cows were fed over a three-year period on each of the following rations: for one year (1) roughage alone, consisting of corn silage, roots, alfalfa hay, and irrigated pasture; for another year (2) the same roughages and limited grain ration of 1 pound of grain mixture to each of 5 pounds of milk produced; and for still another year (3) the same roughages and a full grain ration of 1 pound of grain to each 3 pounds of milk produced.

On the first ration, when production was figured to maturity, the cows averaged 478 pounds of butter fat, on the second ration 584.1 pounds, and on the third 619.9 pounds. At the prevailing prices for feed and for milk and butter fat, the returns over cost of feed were $161 per cow on the first ration, $185 on the second, and $132 on the third. The limited grain ration was therefore, the most profitable, with the roughage ration a close second.

Another Legion event, of at least equal importance with that at Waco, will be at Groesbeck the first week in July. Groesbeck post of the Legion is erecting a monument to the "Dough-boy" on the lawn of the Limestone county courthouse, funds from the July program going for this purpose. Details will be announced next week.

GROWTH OF OIL HEAT

In 1919 the first approved oil heater for homes was listed and five years later there were less than a dozen types. But so rapid has been the progress of the industry since then that today some 100 types of domestic oil heaters are approved by the fire underwriters. Sales of these domestic and the potential market is estimated at 2,000,000 new units.

The modern American home builder is finding automatic heat essential. It has established new standard of service, efficiency, cleanliness, economy.

THIRTY-SIX WORDS TELL TARIFF STORY

President Hoover said to Congress: "No discriminating against any foreign industry is involved in equalizing the difference in costs of producing at home and abroad, and thus taking away from foreign producers the advantages they derive from paying lower wages to labor."

There is, as the President says, no discrimination against the foreign industry in providing for equalization of the difference in the production cost—it is simply a matter of protecting our own interests.

"How do you get rid of these cooties?"

"That's easy. Take a bath in sand and rub down in alcohol. The cooties get drunk and kill each other trowing rocks."

Threshing time is here and is time for you to build your grainery. Why not build a grainery and hold your grain, the difference in the price of grain now and this winter will more than pay for your grainery, this has been tested out, time and again.

"And so you are the artist whom my wife is posing? What sort of a model is she?"

"Well, I find her very apt, to say the least."

"That's funny. I always find her very apt to say the most."

It was the evening after the night before.

"How did you find yourself this morning?" (asked one wan participator of another.

"Easily," was the reply. "I just looked under the table and there I was."

CHAPTER VII

The Last Cruise of the Poor Old Pinmore

One night, the breeze having become light, we proceeded under a cloud of sail. It was a night such as you rarely find anywhere but in the tropics. The four scintillating stars of the Southern Cross twinkled merrily down upon us. Our sails were full, and the waves murmured past our bow. The sky was a gorgeous spread of blinking stars, and Old Man Moon was so bright that he seemed to be laughing and chuckling. The buccaneer's deck was crowded. We sat around in genial fraternity, officers, prisoners, and crew, each with a goblet of champagne.

"What ho, a light!" My night telescope at my eye, I saw a ship. On the horizon, brightly outlined by the light of the moon, stood a stately three-master.

Our flash signal flared out across the water.

"Heave to—a German cruiser." Unable to make us out, she little guessed that we were nothing more than a sailing ship, from which she could easily escape by slipping through the night. We were confident she would take us for an armored cruiser easily able to catch her and blow her out of the sea with a broadside.

We waited at the rail to see what would happen. Presently, we heard a splashing of oars. Out of the darkness came a hail, the jolliest hail I have ever listened to. It was in nasal seaport French.

"What a relief! Instead of a Boche cruiser, I find you are an old wind-jammer like ourselves. But why the joke? Your signal fooled us completely. I suppose you want to tell us something about the war."

"Come on board," I replied. "We have lots of news."

We were in our shirt sleeves, and looked like ordinary seamen. On deck he said proudly:

"I am a Frenchman. As though we couldn't have guessed it."

"A Frenchman? Fine. How is France doing?"

"Ah! France, she is victorious, or will be very soon. Ravi de vous voir. He fairly bubbled over with delight when we offered him a bottle of champagne. Being homeward bound, he was in a frolicsome mood.

He was such a cheery, convivial soul that I hated to break the bad news to him. I left the progress of events to do that. He wanted to have a look over our ship. So I ushered him aft to my cabin, and threw open the door. He took a step forward and recoiled. On the walls were pictures of the Kaiser, Hindenburg, Ludendorff, and Von Tirpitz, and a large German flag.

"Des allemands!" he groaned.

"Yes," I said, "we are Germans."

"Then we are lost, per Dieu!" "Yes, per Dieu, you are lost."

He stood with his forehead in one hand. His despair was both tragic and comic to behold. I tried as best I could to say a few words of cheer.

"Well, Captain, you are not the only one to lose your ship during the war. Tomorrow I, too, may be sunk, or the next day."

He replied in the most doleful tone imaginable.

"It is not so much the loss of my ship. But it's that I feel I have only myself to blame for it. In Valparaiso, where I lay in port with my Duplex, two of my fellow captains warned me not to start until they had cabled our owners for final instructions and news about U-boats and cruisers. Possibly our owners would instruct us to keep off the usual course, they said. But the wind was fair, and I thought it best to take advantage of it. So, without waiting for a reply from our owners, I sailed from Valparaiso ahead of the other two captains. And now, because I did not take their advice, I have lost the Duplex, my ship. Mon Dieu, what an ass I was! Now they will report it to my owners, and I will never get a ship again."

"What were the names of your friends' ships?"

"The Antonin—"

"The Antonin under Captain Lecoq?"

"Yes. And the La Rochefoucauld."

"Orderly," I called in German, which the captain did not understand, "bring up captain numbers five and nine."

While we waited, I invited my mournful guest to have some more champagne, but he refused and continued holding his head and moaning.

A knock at the door.

"Come in."

And in walked the captains of the Antonin and the La Rochefoucauld. They had been on board ten and three days respectively.

The captain of the Duplex sighed. "Eh, tout la France!" he cried.

"Full of ironical enthusiasm, he raised his glass of champagne and saluted them. Then with joy that he made no effort to conceal, he clasped the hands of the two captains whose advice he had scorned and who had encountered the same fate as he. They returned his welcome with a grim humor.

The presence of these three captains aboard the Seeadler represented a loss of ten thousand tons of salt-petre destined for French powder mills, and a saving of hundreds, perhaps thousands of German lives.

One Sunday morning, we sighted a large British barque and started after her. She thought we were playfully challenging her to a race, and tried to run away. I don't know whether we could have caught her in a straight sailing ship against sailing-ship contest; at any rate, our motor gave us the edge.

A strange feeling came over me as we gained on her and as her line became more distinct. It was a sense of sadness and of vague, dimly dawning recollection. Had I seen that ship before? Was it possible?

"Signal and ask her for her name," I called.

Our signal flag went aloft. The reply came back:

"Pinmore."

Ah, my old Pinmore, on which I had made the longest and most harrowing voyage of my life. Memories swept over me of those endless storms and of the disease on board, beri-beri, scurvy. My whole being seemed to leap back to the days of my youth. Homesickness seized me. I could not say a word to Leudemann, who stood beside me.

"No use, the ship must be sunk," a harsh inner voice told me.

It was hard for me to sink any sailing vessel, but doubly cruel to have to sink my old ship. I felt as though she were a kind mother. No sailor with any kind of sailor's soul in him will raise a hand against his own ship.

We took her as we had taken the others. When her crew came aboard, I looked for familiar faces. There were none. The skipper, Captain Mullen, came up to me with a humorous, seamanly air.

"Well, Captain, our hard luck is your good luck."

"Lucky?" I felt like saying. "Do you call this lucky?"

He was a typical old seaman, afraid neither of enemy in war nor storms at sea. The seven seas had been his home. Like the sailing ship, the old-time windjammer captain is vanishing.

Captain Mullen was indeed like the king of a vanishing race. He swaggered down below, and saluted our other skippers with a jovial air. He soon became the leading figure of the "Captains' club."

When every one had left the Pinmore, I had a boat take me over to her. I clambered aboard and sent the boat and its crew back, telling them I would give them a hall when I wanted them again.

"Why does the Count want to remain alone aboard her?" I heard one of them say.

I went to the fore-cabin. There was my bunk, the same old bunk where I had slept night after night for months and had tumbled out countless times at the command "all hands on deck" while those endless storms bore down upon us. I paced the planks on deck where I had stood watch so often.

It seemed as though I had never seen that deck save in a storm. Those gales had left so deep an imprint on my memory that it gave me a sense of strangeness to see the sun shining on the Pinmore's planks and a slowly heaving sea around.

I remembered a cunning little cat I had once owned on board her. The captain's wife wanted it. The steward got it for her. I told the steward that if he did not bring it back to me I would go to the captain. The steward laughed at me. I determined to complain to the captain about the steward and his wife and demand my cat back. I could see myself as I had wrathfully strode along the deck to the cabin.

The sight of the door made me stop. I mustered up my courage and advanced again. I ventured just far enough to peep in at the door, which was ajar. The skipper was sitting there reading a paper. One glimpse of the master, and all of Phelax Ludige's bravery oozed away. He turned and tiptoed away. I never did get my cat back, and forever after held a grudge against the steward.

I could still feel the old enmity. If I could have found that steward, I would have let him know how the end of a rope felt. I went to the cabin and half opened the door. It was much as when I had seen it last. The bright rainbow glow of the colored skylight gave me an old familiar feeling. Something restrained me from entering. I did not dare go in then. I would not do.

At the stern I looked for my name which I had once carved on the rail. I found it, half effaced by time and weather. I read it slowly, spelling it out as a child spells its first lesson: P-H-E-L-A-X L-U-E-D-I-G-E. I looked at the compass, beside which I had watched for hours. The compass is a sacred place to a sailor.

"This ship," I thought, "carried me safely. The storms were wild all the way from Frisco around the Horn to Liverpool. They wanted to take us every man aboard, but the good old Pinmore fought against wind and waves over leagues and leagues of dreary waste and brought us safely to port. Yes, she was our mother, our kindly protecting mother."

The deserted ship with an unguided helm rolled back and forth. The rigging creaked and groaned. It seemed to be a voice, a voice that hurt me. Every spar seemed to say:

"So here you are, Phelax, back again. Where have you been all these years? Where is all the crew? What do you want here, alone? What are you going to do with me?"

Little had I dreamed when I was a sailor on this fine barque that one day I would walk her decks again, not as a seaman, but as the commander of a raider.

Returning to the Seeadler, I shut myself up in my cabin. In the distance I heard the roar of a bomb, and I knew that my old Pinmore had started on her last cruise.

CHAPTER VIII

The Life of a Modern Buccaneer

Although our old jolly-boat was a raiding auxiliary cruiser, she also degenerated into a breed of passenger ship, too. Our passengers were our prisoners. That made the situation somewhat unusual and added a bit of spice. I've served as an officer aboard a dozen or more liners, and have seen all kinds and strata of society aboard, including dull delightful, ill-natured, jovial—both the quick and the dead. Yes, I have had some splendid passenger lists on voyages where every hour was gay and bubbling with fun. But no group of passengers on a liner ever enjoyed such happy comradeship as did we aboard our buccaneering craft. The fact that we were captors and captives only seemed to make it all the jollier. We took the greatest pleasure in making the time agreeable for our prisoners, with games, concerts, cards, and story telling. We tried to feed them well, and I think we did, which helps a lot, as you'll agree. We didn't throw it at them either. In fact, we served special meals for all the nations whose ships we captured.

One day our own German chef cooked, and that boy was some cook, as you say. The next day an English cook, then the French chef, then the Italian to make us some polenta. The English food was the worst. It usually is. On the other hand, the Americans fed their sailors best of all. It's long been a tradition on Yankee clip-pers. In the old days, the American sailing ships were famous for frugal work and much brutality, but the food was good. Today the work is not bad and there is no brutality, but the food is still good.

The prisoners seemed to appreciate our intentions thoroughly. They wanted to do everything they could for us in return. Feeling of patriotism should have made them hope for our early destruction. But more elemental sentiments of gratitude and friendship obliterated the more artificial passions of war hatred. I am sure that very few of our passengers wished us any ill or gloated in the hope of our being sunk by the cruisers of their nations. I think it really hurt many of them to realize that the day probably would come when we would be caught and go down under a rain of Allied shells. That magnificent Frenchman, the captain of the Charles Gounod, kept aloof from the general fraternizing, and scrupulously kept up his manner of cold politeness and stately hostility toward us, but even he thawed out a few degrees, although he tried hard to keep from showing it.

There was only one of our prisoners who behaved himself in any way that could be considered improper. That was Captain Lecoq who had cherished hopes that we would run afoul of the British cruiser. You see, the skippers aboard were quite free to go where they liked on the ship, except that I asked each one, as he came aboard, not to go into the fore part of the ship, and I explained why.

"My magazines," I said, "are in the forward half of the boat. I do not want you to know exactly where they are placed. After you are released, you might reveal the secret. Then, one of these merry days, if some cruiser takes a shot at me, and if the location of my magazines is known, they'll aim right at that spot. A shell there and up in the air we go. I must ask you to give me your word of honor that you will not go into the forepart, else I will have to keep you confined."

Each skipper gave me his word, including Lecoq.

Captain Lecoq broke his promise. He not only went secretly into the forepart, but he made sketches of the layout there. Captain Mullen of the Pinmore saw the sketches, knocked Lecoq down, and reported him to me. I berated Lecoq soundly.

"And as a result of your dishonest-action," I said, "when I release my prisoners and send them off to some port, there will be one Frenchman who will remain behind, and that Frenchman will be you. You will continue your cruise with us. You know where my magazines are, and I cannot trust any promise that you now give me."

He turned a bit green around the gills at that, but there was nothing he could say in reply.

Our only woman aboard, the skipper's little bride, grew melancholy. We did everything we could to make the time pleasant for her, but she pined for the society of other women. It was rather a trial for her to be so long the only woman among several hundred men.

"Count, I do so wish there were a woman aboard that I could talk to," she said to me a bit coaxingly one day. "Why don't you catch me one?"

I always like to oblige a lady, particularly one so charming and agreeable as she, but catching another woman was a game of chance with us. You don't often find fair company aboard freighters, especially in tropical waters. However, I said:

"Madam, we will do our best."

At times I used to amuse myself by joining the crowd on the lookout in the rigging. It was a misty day, and nobody had much of a chance of seeing anything. Then it cleared a little in the west, and Boarding Officer Preiss, who was beside me, thought he saw a ship. I instructed the helmsman to steer in that direction, and after fifteen minutes a large British barque appeared through the mist. As we drew near her, I saw a white figure on the deck. Sure enough a woman.

"Madam," I shouted, to the Canadian skipper's bride, "get ready to welcome your companion. She'll be paying you a call in a few minutes."

Everybody, prisoners and all, swarmed on deck to witness the exceptional capture. The Seeadler bore down on the unlucky barque.

The captain looked curiously at the crowded figures standing at our rail, of every color and race. They waved gayly. Our gramophone blared out, "It's a Long Way to Tipperary."

"Hello," he shouted through his megaphone, "collecting volunteers?"

He thought we were picking up war volunteers from the Atlantic islands.

"Volunteers?" I called in return. "Oh, yes."

Our prisoners laughed a bit.

"Any news of the war?" he asked. Officers and sailors and the woman on his deck craned their necks for a reply.

"Much news of the war," I responded. "I will signal it."

They stared, awaiting the signal.

"C-I-D," our signal flags went up; "heave to or I will fire."

I could see the captain rapidly thumbing the pages of his book. His head jerked up suddenly. His binoculars focussed themselves on our mast-head where the German flag now waved. Our gun mask dropped, and the cannon peered forth. By Joe, but it raised a commotion on the deck. When she saw it, the woman darted into her cabin. The sailors ran to the boats. Even the helmsman deserted the wheel. The captain was the only one who kept his head. He seized the helm with a firm hand, and the ship bore to.

Our guests were always interested in the prospect of having new additions to their company. They had an ever-ready, cordial welcome for fresh arrivals. This time, the coming of a second feminine passenger made the occasion a gala one. Everybody put on his best manners. The members of our "Captains' club" marshaled their forces on deck, ready to greet the officers and the lady from the captured craft with suitable dignity and formality.

Our little woman put on her best clothes and asked me for a nosegay from a supply of artificial flowers we had captured. The newly arriving woman, who scarcely knew what to expect aboard our dreadful pirate craft, was surprised when she was greeted not only by our Captains' club with all of its stately courtesies, but also by a brightly smiling young woman who presented her with a bouquet of flowers that made up in brightness of color what it lacked in sweetness of perfume, since they were imitation ones.

The two women immediately became the best of friends, and the convivial spirit aboard made our happiness complete.

The captured barque, the British Yeoman, carried a rare store of provisions, including some live pigs and chickens. She also had two pets, a curious pair—a rabbit and a pigeon. We promptly adopted them and called the pigeon "the dove of peace" in honor of the spirit aboard our raiding ark.

Our floating hotel was about full. If we wanted to take any more guests aboard, we would have to get rid of present company. The old pirates would have had a plank-walking ceremony. That was a sure way to prevent inconvenient information from getting around. Undoubtedly, it would have enabled us to keep our existence still secret. We were buccaneers in a sense, but not quite that bad. We would have to take other measures. When our prisoners got to port and our freebooting career became known, cruisers, of course, would set out after us. They would make the narrow Atlantic much too hot for us. We would have to seek other waters. The broad Pacific remained. We did not want to hold our prisoners for the always rough passage of Cape Horn, where, in addition, there were likely to be cruisers on watch, keeping a guard for suspicious ships that might be trying to take the shortest route from Euro-

How to Raise Poultry

By Dr. L. D. LeGear, V. S., St. Louis, Mo.

MAKING TURKEYS PAY

Comparatively Scarcity at Times of These Fowls When Most Wanted In-crease Profitable Market; Problem of Raising Birds Not as Difficult as Ordinarily Supposed.

"Can't these provide naught but this eternal turkey for our board, Goodman?" quoth dame Prudence Pennyfeather in a bit of pet. "Methinks this gloomy forest is full big enough to have in it all birds and beasts created since the Deluge!"

Goodman Pennyfeather snatched up his blunderbus and retorted a bit acidly. "Beasts and birds there are plenty in yon forest and hostile Indians, too—while turkeys in plenty are at our very door. Nae-the-less, I shall try again to appease thy impatience."

That might have happened in Pilgrim days. Even right after the Civil War wild turkeys were so numerous in some parts of the country as to constitute an actual pest. They raided grain fields with such devastating effect that it was a problem to cope with them. Now quite the reverse is true.

Of course no one is surprised to learn that the wild turkey is practically extinct. One would think, however, that the periodical demand created by our great national feast days would cause poultry raisers everywhere to devote considerable part of their time to turkey raising. I believe the reason that such is not the case is to be found in the oft repeated story that turkeys can only be raised successfully on great ranches and that at best, they are so delicate and temperamental as to make them very hard to handle.

For those who have hesitated to take up turkey raising, or who have tried and failed, I want to make a number of recommendations. I shall give a short digest of these recommendations and will be glad to answer questions from any one writing me in care of this paper.

For breeding purposes use only the thoroughbreds. Select the strongest and healthiest birds. Do not mate more than 10 or 15 hens with one male. Use incubators for best results. You never have to wait for an incubator to get broody and it will give the most uniform results if properly regulated. Use no eggs over ten days old. Practically all the big commercial turkey raisers use artificial brooders. The most up-to-date ones can be closely regulated so that, barring accidents, results are fairly certain. It is always a gamble, however, to brood young poulters with such temperamental creatures as turkey hens.

A brooder house on skids is ideal as it can be moved about to fresh ground from time to time. Stake off four temporary runs, one on each side of the house, and rotate the poulters from one run to the other. Leave them about a week in each run. Between 200 and 300 poulters can be accommodated in a 12x14 brooder house. For heat, use a hard coal stove or any other heating arrangement that will maintain about 80 degrees.

When poulters are about 8 weeks old they may be transferred to rearing grounds, about an acre being set aside for each 150 to 200 poulters. These grounds should be where chickens have not been allowed to run and should be fenced so chickens cannot get in with the poulters.

Feed nothing the first 24 to 36 hours; 36 to 48 hours, short grass on the sod, tender greens and buttermilk or sour skim milk; 48 to 60 hours, feed eggs boiled for 30 minutes mixed with equal quantity of dry, stale (never mouldy) bread crumbs. Feed this every two hours, removing it in 20 minutes. On the third day feed as on the second and continue same diet on the day following with addition of mash composed of finely ground corn-meal, wheat bran, wheat middlings and beef scraps in equal parts by weight, or a baby chick starter commercial mash may be fed instead. Feed the mash in hoppers with plenty of green pean waters to the Pacific. We might be shelled and sunk, but it would have been scarcely humane to take a chance of going down with all our prisoners on board. So we arranged it in a way that would enable us to get a good start on our trip around Cape Horn before the cruisers could get word of us.

The French barque, the Cambroune, came along. You should have seen her heave to and her yards come banging down when our German flag went up and we signaled the inevitable: "Stop or I shall fire."

Her captain exhibited all of the usual Gallic despair at the prospect of losing his ship. We looked the craft over. She was large and roomy and had aboard a large stock of provisions.

"No," I said to her skipper, "we are not going to sink your ship. She will go right on to port."

"Eh?" He was immensely surprised. "She will take our prisoners?"

"I will be delighted, monsieur, to have them as my guests."

They won't be your guests, Captain. You will be the guest of the new captain of the Cambroune."

"I will not command my ship?"

"Not at all. I have a Captains' club aboard. You, as a prisoner, are now a charter member. Your ship is my prize. I will select a member of the Captains' club as her skipper."

He was very angry. It hurt him nearly as much to be removed from the command of his ship as to have her sunk.

stuff always available. Continue this mash feed with plenty of greens at all times. From day to day feed a little scratch grains, gradually increasing the quantity. Scratch grains should be given sparingly, however, as young turkeys do not require a great deal of feed. See that a good supply of fresh clean water is always near by. Never allow poulters to drink from stagnant pools.

When poulters are about eight weeks old, shift to rearing grounds if the weather permits, and put on following ration: Equal parts of corn meal, ground oats, wheat middlings, wheat bran and beef scraps fed in hoppers. Give birds plenty of skim milk to drink. Keep shell and grit before them at all times and never stint on fresh green stuff of suitable kinds. My experiments prove that baby turkeys can be successfully raised on feeds that are successfully fed to baby chicks. If your present method of raising baby chicks is successful, use the same method with your baby turkeys which should be successful also.

Finally, enlarge your runs from time to time and keep moving flock if possible to provide fresh feeding grounds.
