Here In HICO

Among the many problems with which we have been confronted, and in which we have not been able to form a satisfactory conclusion, one involving a question of economics is chief upon our mind this week. Perhaps someone has figured out, and if so we should like to have the answer. That question is, where does the money go that has been lost during the depression? Every time one picks up a newspaper, he finds a statement about so-and-so losing millions or billions or millions of dollars. A day or two ago it was announced that "Rockefeller Heirs' $60,000,000 Fortune Melts In Depression," and the article under the above head went on to state that the richest woman in the world had lost that enormous sum.

If a fellow plays poker and loses, somebody wins. If he bets on the horse races or the election or the weather or anything else, when he loses his money somebody else is ahead. In every phase of life, there is a winner for every loser, one way or another. Then how in thunder can the big boys lose their stakes without some of us small fry picking up at least the change that is scattered around?

Students of economics and others who may have been interested in this same problem and who have perhaps studied the thing out more than we have will undoubtedly reply that their fortunes were mere paper profits, and that they never had realized on them, but the values were merely a basis of comparison, figured on prices a few years ago. But still we are not satisfied with that answer. Paper profits are all right—the papers we are familiar with are not notorious for their profit-making capacity—still we say that might be the answer. But how can a man lose that which he has never touched? Or how can a woman lose sixty million dollars without somebody winning at least a semblance of that amount?

That's all too deep, though, and for the time being we will pass to lighter veins of thought. Think about this, though, and let us know your decision. Personally, we have made up our mind not to take the rating of a millionaire as the truth, unless we see him coming down the street in a large truck with sixty million cart wheels stacked around him, or at least with genuine currency in that amount, and at that he may have to stop long enough to let us count it unless he wants us to believe that his financial statement is padded.

In another column on this page you will find a copy of the primary ballot which will be used in Hamilton County Saturday, and setting forth the names of candidates who are asking election to the various offices. Some few perhaps have already seen a copy of this ballot, but to those who have not looked it over we would suggest that they get in a quiet place and go down the list before they go to the polls, thus asking their job easier and also that of the fellows who hold the election. It will take a lot of study to decide this year on the ones who will be best for the office sought. We have just about figured out how our ticket will look when we get through with it, but will not attempt to act as confidential advisers to our readers, for most likely they too have their preferences already.

The only thing we would urge on our constituency is that they go to the polls and vote—intelligently, conscientiously and without malice. The results of this year's elections will probably mean a lot to the people of this republic, especially in the state races, and every one who has a desire to see that the government is properly handled should register that desire at the polls Saturday to the best of his or her ability. Then and in that event, we are not worried but what the good common sense of the majority of people will be reflected in the returns, and that the country will rock along all right at least until the run-off primary.

Somehow or other we have a feeling that things are going to get better after we have selected our representatives in office for the next two years. Understand we are not making an outright prediction, but our honest opinion is that with Congress already adjourned, and prospects of the hurry and worry of elections coming to a close, people will return their thoughts to making a living and business will benefit by such action. We will have several more hectic weeks of campaigning and hallooing, and then it will be over for the time being.

MANY CANDIDATES FOR PRIMARY VOTERS TO PICK FROM

SUBSCRIBERS NEWS AND VIEWS

And still they come! Really, when we offered to send the News Review to new subscribers in this trade territory until the first of December of this year for 25c, we expected to have a hearty response, but the people have been more enthusiastic than we anticipated even in our fondest hopes, and the results have been most gratifying.

In addition to those who have been mentioned in the two previous issues of this paper, the following have made arrangements about their subscriptions, either at the special rate or our regular yearly basis.

Ernest J. Rohne, Hico Route 3, mailed in a coupon together with 25c to start the paper to their address. There is an entirely new name on our list, according to our records, and we welcome them to the great family of News Review readers.

Fred L. Wolfe, Stephenville, who has always taken the Hico paper since his removal to Erath County some few years ago, but who had allowed his time to lapse through no intention of his, got back on the list last week at the special rate, and will receive a bargain in exchange for his quarter which he so graciously tendered.

Miss Myrtle Melton, city, came in Friday morning to take advantage of the special offer, and paid a quarter to have the paper sent to her until the first of December.

Mrs. A. Platt, Stephenville Star Route, was in Friday morning to subscribe for the paper to be sent to her mother, Mrs. E. C. Ballow, who makes her home with them, Mrs. S. Kilgo, Iredell Route 1 wrote last week as follows: "Please find enclosed twenty-five cents, for which enter my name on your mailing list on your special offer."

Mrs. Dora Simpson, who is now residing at Pampa and has been a regular reader of the News Review for some time, writes as follows under date of July 12: "Dear Editor: Am taking advantage of special offer so please find enclosed coupon and 25c for which please send the paper to Herman Shipman, Route 1, Pampa, Texas. The paper is certainly a welcome 'week-end visitor' as I am on the 'Northern Plains' of Texas, quite a way from home and friends. Wishing you much success with the paper."

Mrs. T. U. Little in a nice note to the force at the News Review, sent by her young son, complimented the paper, saying she did not ever want to do without it, and enclosed a quarter to pay up to December 1st, from which time she expected to continue taking it.

V. H. Harris, Hico Route 6, wd in Saturday, having been sent by his wife to subscribe for the News Review until December 1st. If it were not for the women folks, we men would neglect a lot of things like this, but they are always loyal to their home paper and quick to see a bargain.

Dr. M. A. Beckman, Wichita Falls, while he and his wife and daughter, Laura Lee, were on a visit here to his brother-in-law, John Lackey, came in Saturday and gave us $1.50 to extend his time for another year. They left Tuesday morning for their home in Wichita Falls.

Mrs. J. Backman, Eugene, Ore., sent a money order last week for $1.50 to pay for his paper another year. She states that they find much to read in the old sheet away up there where they are.

E. E. Phillips, who travels around a great deal through the summer months while he is not teaching school, was in Hico for a visit this week and subscribed for the paper to be sent to them at Royse City, Texas. He also ordered the paper sent to Mrs. Merleena Herrin at Duffau, until December 1st on our special bargain offer.

J. F. Cooper, Iredell Route 1, sent in a quarter and a coupon to take us up on our offer of nearly five months subscription for that amount.

Mrs. J. M. Weisenhant, city, sent her little son to the office Tuesday to subscribe for the News Review until Dec. 1st of this year. Mrs. Weisenhant operates a first-class beauty parlor in the A. A. Brown home.

J. F. Jaggars, Route 4 Hico, is a trader from a way back yonder, and he came up Tuesday to trade two nice watermelons for a quarter's worth of News Review. His melons looked so attractive that we took him up at once, and we hope that he gets as much pleasure out of reading the paper as we did out of eating those melons.

A. J. Jordan, who has been sending the paper to his son at Anton, Texas, for a long time, came in Wednesday morning and paid up for the subscription for the remainder of this year.

O. H. Cross, Congressman from the 11th District of Texas, who always takes the paper, writes: "Will you please forward your paper to me at Waco, Texas, until further notice and oblige." We are glad to do so, for when he thinks about having the paper changed to his Waco address as soon as Congress adjourns each year, we know he must read the paper, in addition to merely subscribing for it.

Early Morning Fire Destroys Home of Leeth, John Farmer

Fire of unknown origin as yet undetermined at about 4 a. m. Monday of this week destroyed the residence of Doc Leeth two blocks northeast of the business section. The Hico Volunteer Fire Department members fought the blaze valiantly, but the flames had gained too much headway before their arrival for them to be able to accomplish more than keep the fire from spreading, and they extinguished it after it had been practically destroyed.

Mr. Leeth lost all his household effects, in addition to the residence, and Mr. and Mrs. John Farmer, who have had rooms there for the past several months, also lost their furniture.

The outbreak of the fire was so sudden and its spread so rapid, it is stated, that the occupants of the house barely had time to escape themselves, and were unable to save even articles of wearing apparel and small effects.

It was stated that both Mr. Farmer and Mr. Leeth carried some insurance on their loss, but the amounts were not learned.

Orville Stribbling, 18, was killed early Wednesday by a freight train which struck him as he sat on a railroad track two miles west of Carey. The track curved at that point and the engineer was unable to see Stribbling until it was too late to stop the train. Apparently Stribbling had fallen asleep sitting on the track. His home was at Estelline.

Leon Bridge Work To Be Let At Next Meeting of Board

Among highway improvement projects announced at a recent meeting of the Highway Commission, was one providing for a steel, concrete and treated timber bridge over the Leon River, between Hico and Hamilton. The appropriation of funds for this bridge has already been made, and the contract will be let at the next meeting.

Other work announced involved several miles of Highway 66 in other counties, which is encouraging to local citizens through the fact that it seems a settled fact that Highway 66 will be built at an early date according to plans previously announced, which will give Hico an artery of travel to inspire enthusiasm on the part of Hico residents. The work to be let at the next meeting on the route of 66 is announced as follows:

Palo Pinto County—Highway No. 66, bituminous macadam surface course, from two miles south of Salesville to Jack County line, 8.02 miles.

Archer County—Highway No. 66, sledged sandstone base course from Jack County line to Windthorst, 8.76 miles.

Jack County—Highway No. 66, sledged sandstone base course, from thirteen miles northwest of Jackboro to Archer County line, 12.77 miles.

Highway construction and improvement projects to cost $2,225,000 are on the tentative list of lettings for the Aug. 2 and 3 sitting of the Highway Commission Maintenance projects in eleven counties advertised for bids the same dates added $181,000 to the figure, making the total $2,406,000.

School Transfers Must Be Made By End of This Month

All transfers for the school year 1932-33 must be made during the month of July and must be in the County Superintendent's office not later than August 1st.

Scholastics between the ages of 6 and 17 are eligible for transfer. Students eighteen or over are not eligible for transfer but will have their appointment for the school year 1932-33 transferred to the school which they attend provided they have finished the school in their district and their grade is not taught.

Students who wish to transfer may secure transfer blanks from Superintendent C. G. Masterson or from Dr. C. M. Hall.

It should be borne in mind by those wishing transfers that these must be made before August 1, and the fact that the last day of July falls on Sunday makes it necessary to see about this matter at least before the end of next week.

LARGE SPECIMEN OF CUCUMBER FAMILY

J. W. Hickman of Carlton, having read in this paper about a large cucumber brought in recently by Penn Blair, brought in two large samples of some sort of vegetable which he grew at his place near Carlton.

The fruit, melons or vegetables which Mr. Hickman brought in were referred to as something like "quay," that is, that's the way it sounds when pronounced by those who are up on this variety of crops. However, we couldn't find that word in our dictionary, and they look like cucumbers anyhow, so that's what we'd better call them.

Both the samples grew from the same variety of seed, Mr. Hickman stated, but their appearance differed greatly. The larger one, which most resembled a real cucumber, lacked one ounce of weighing nine pounds, and has aroused much attention on display at the News Review office.

FIFTH SUNDAY SINGING TO BE HELD IN FAIRY

The Hamilton County 5th Sunday Singing Convention will meet at Fairy the 5th Sunday, July 31, and on Saturday night before. Singing will start at 8:30 o'clock Saturday night, and at 10 o'clock Sunday morning.

We are planning on the best convention we have ever had in Hamilton County. Everyone has an invitation to come and bring well filled baskets of dinner and we will enjoy a good old time. There will be dinner on the ground. All singers are invited to come for the singing Saturday night, and stay over for the big all day singing Sunday. If you are not there, you will miss a real day of singing.

Every one come and bring your baskets well filled and also your song books, and we will forget the depression.

—COMMITTEE.

Keeping Up With TEXAS

Two Texans were killed by heat strokes Saturday while Dallas and the Southwest broiled under a scorching sun that sent thermometers to the century mark and above in numerous sections. T. P. Adams, an oil operator, died of heat prostration at his home in Longview. C. B. Pickle, 45, a Hunt County farmer, died after being overcome by heat while working in a field near Greenville.

Lawrence N. Patton, 40, died of suffocation Saturday in a freak automobile accident south of Pampa. When his car rolled down an embankment, he was pinned in the front seat with his face against the cushion. His wife, who was injured slightly in the crash, tried futilely to extricate him. An hour later a passing motorist aided her in removing Patton from the car but he was dead.

Texas will receive $7,664,000 from the appropriation of $120,000,000 for federal aid highway projects included in the revised relief bill passed by congress Saturday, according to information obtained from the U. S. bureau of public works. Many states had not used their regular federal aid allotments for the current year because they were unable to pay their share of the projects.

Death struck fatally from three directions at Dick Key, 47, inspector for the State Live Stock Commission, who was recovering Saturday at his home in Houston. Key was at the L. H. 7 ranch in West Harris County, near Barker, assisting E. H. Marks, one of the owners in dipping cattle. The inspector was standing on boards laid crosswise over the vat. A big steer plunged into the vat and then bobbed up high enough to strike the loose boards on which Key was standing. Key was thrown backward into the poisonous vat fluid. The steer trampled him to the bottom. Other cattle were plunging into the vat. As fast as Key could come to the top another animal would plunge him down. Finally he caught a steer by the tail and the animal dragged him out of the vat. In spite of his efforts, Key said he swallowed some of the poisonous liquid. His cries attracted others.

When a human life is at stake, Justice William Collins of New York ruled Saturday, a court should not strain at legal niceties. So he released Samuel Aron of Fort Worth from the county jail, where the 72-year-old man had spent 123 days for failure to pay a $7,000 breach of promise judgment. Aron petitioned for his freedom on the ground he had no money, and was likely to die in his cell. He set forth, when he appeared himself in court Friday, that he had lost the sight of one eye, and was suffering from stomach ulcers, lung and heart trouble and insomnia.

Galveston's annual beauty pageant, with emphasis this year on personality, will be held Aug. 6 and 7 rather than July 23 and 24, as formerly announced. Dates were changed because of the state primary election Saturday. Girls from more than 40 cities in Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Louisiana are expected to vie for the title "Miss Personality." The girl chosen for the title will be the guest of the Galveston Beach Association and American Airways for a tour of Eastern United States. The three-weeks' tour will take her and her chaperon to Chicago, New York and 12 other large cities.

As soon as President Hoover signs the unemployment relief bill, $1,044,000 will be expended in San Antonio on army construction it was learned at Fort Sam Houston, San Antonio Wednesday. The bill contains the James army housing bill for the sum of $15,104,000 to be spent on army construction in the United States and possessions and of this amount $3,577,000 would be spent in the five States of the eighth corps area with headquarters at Fort Sam Houston.

Directors of the Eagle Pass and Piedras Negras Chambers of Commerce have succeeded in securing less stringent tourist passport regulations for entrance into Mexico. With a minimum of "red tape," visitors through this port may now go to Saltillo or Monterrey after waiting only a half hour to have their papers made out and signed.

An 80,000-barrel welded tank costing $18,000 is being erected at Corpus Christi serving the oil fields northwest of that city.

OFFICIAL BALLOT WILL BE LONG IN SATURDAY'S DEMOCRATIC PRIMARY

When voters of Texas go to the polls Saturday, July 23, to participate in the first Democratic primary, they will be confronted with an extra long ballot, and a number of names of candidates offering for election in most of the offices.

In Hamilton County there are only three offices in which the present incumbent is running for re-election and is opposed, those being the offices of County Attorney, County Chairman and District Judge.

It is expected that the vote will be large in Saturday's election, for interest which had seemed to lag up to now, this week reached its climax locally, and politics furnished the major topic of conversation. Candidates have been very active during the closing days of the campaign in soliciting the votes and influence of their friends.

For the convenience of our readers in Hico and this part of Hamilton county we are listing below the names of the candidates they will vote on for the offices listed, as certified by the county Democratic committee recently, and as released last week from the county seat. ### Prominent Citizen of Carlton Passed Away Tuesday Night

J. B. Salver, a pioneer citizen of Carlton, and cousin of Mrs. Guy Aycock of Hico, passed away Tuesday night at the age of 74 years, and funeral services were held at the Christian Church Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock by Rev. Gibson, Baptist minister, also a Christian minister, whose name was not learned, and the body laid to rest in the Carlton cemetery. The burial services were under the auspices of the Masonic lodge there.

Mr. Salver, who owns a vast amount of property over the county, had been in the western part of the state on a business mission. He had planned to stay several days longer and his wife was preparing to join him. One of their daughters lives near the family home in Carlton and Mrs. Salver had gone to their home after some things preparatory to doing her packing to make the proposed trip. She went in home and found Mr. Salver had returned home unexpectedly to all of them, and had probably felt badly and had fallen across the bed, for he was lying there, and had already passed away when his wife found him. His death, according to physicians, was caused from a heart attack. Opinions were that he had probably felt ill which caused his return home so soon, but no one will ever know the truth as he had talked to no one since his return to Carlton prior to his death.

Mr. Salver had been in the gin business in Carlton for many years. He was known over the entire section as he was a pioneer of this section. He was a member of the Christian church and of the Masonic Lodge. He made friends by his kind disposition, and had a way of keeping them. This was truly exemplified by the large concourse of friends attending the funeral from Hico, Stephenville, Dublin, Hamilton and other neighboring towns.

The deceased is survived by his wife and three children. Two children have already passed away.

FIRST LIVES

by FELIX RIESENBERG

Third Installment
SYNOPSIS: Johnny Breen, 16 years old, who had spent all of his life aboard a Hudson river tug-boat plying near New York, is tossed into the river in a terrific collision which sinks the tug, drowns his mother and the man he called father. Ignorant, unschooled, and fear driven, he drags himself ashore, hides in the friendly darkness of a huge covered truck—only to be kicked out at dawn—and into the midst of a tough gang or river rat boys who beat and chase him. He escapes and, exhausted, tumbles into a basement doorway. Later, he hears the trap door slammed, a padlock snapped down—and he is trapped. Exhausted, he falls asleep. When he awakens it is day light and he looks about for a place to wash the river slime from his face, hands and body. The running water attracts the attention of a Jewish family living in the rear of their second-hand clothing store. He is rescued—taken into the family—and there starts a new life on the Bowery in New York.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
 "No, Backa, it's too hot."
 "You're fraid. That's what. You don't dast to go."
 "All right, come along," and John and Becka strolled casually from the front stoop of the tenement as Becka called, "So long! We're going for a walk," to Mrs. Lipvitch who sat on the basement steps with the twins and Mrs. Yartin while Mr. Lipvitch argued with a customer within.
 "Have you got any money?" Becka asked this frankly.
 "Lipvitch—your father," he corrected, "give me a dollar today." His hand gripped it in the bottom of the large trouser pocket, the one without the hole. He showed the bright silver coin to Becka.

"Say—" Becka clasped his arm with an insinuating pressure, leaning toward and in front of John, as she looked up into his face, for he was a head taller than the girl.
 "Say what?" he asked, shoving her back somewhat roughly in his embarrassment.
 "You're green," she laughed nervously. "Say, you are green," she affirmed, as if a great truth had just then been disclosed. "You don't have to work for nothing," she added hastily. "Pa should pay you," she urged, again looking up into his face, still holding his arm, but refraining from closer contact. The boy walked straight ahead and failed to answer. "You should get a dollar a day," Becka continued. "and board too—he would have to give it—I will make him," she said positively.

Later that afternoon the dollar in his pocket had been given him grudgingly, gruffly, by Channon Lipvitch. And this only after an argument with Becka.
 "All right, don't give it him," she retorted to his repeated protest. "When he finds out—you look out. You ain't so smart," she warned. "John can sue you for damages, for lack wages, some day. Give him something now—five dollars," Becka had argued.
 "No! No!" Lipvitch knew the danger, also the expense.
 "You got to. You got to pay him something today," Becka was insistent, and, as John entered the Emporium on his return from errand a few doors away, Becka bent a parting glance of warning on her father, her eyes threatening exposure as she nodded meaningly at John. Lipvitch had his hand in his pocket. He fingered a coin, a half, then in a prudent flood of generosity he seized a silver dollar.

"Here, Chon," his throat was husky. "Here, Chon, I got something be you." He spoke rapidly. "A dollar—you earned it—vages, Chon—remember, vages," he repeated, handing the boy the large coin, thrusting it toward him impulsively, as if afraid John would not accept. "Ant remember, Chon, I don't charge you nothing, nodding a tall fer board. You ged it all fer nodding."
 Thereafter an interval of pregnant silence, Becka having again linked John's arm through her own, doing so with a small laugh, a friendly, forgiving laugh, they walked out on Broadway at a point where its wholesale commercial aspect stretches northward.

To America, New York was Rome, and still is; the feudal city of the Western world, taking tribute from the ends of the earth. Other cities may attempt to dispute this, but New York, true to its name, keeps rising new and fresh and more powerful from its own continuous disintegration, shafts of steel and stone springing up out of the dusty demolition constantly under way. The wrecks and mistakes of the past feed ambition, flaring to higher and dizzy achievement.
 Never was the town so young and bright and hopeful as on the summer night when John and Becka, far from their environment walked on air, and literally rode on it, as they sped upward on the West Side L. The squat, green-bellied steam locomotive puffed and wheezed, blowing its whistle as it approached the curves, where Becka with an "Oh!" clung close to John; they sat in a cross seat by an open window. "clank" and "clink"—a secret carefully kept from Channon Lipvitch, but which perked slyly to John. And to prove it Becka showed John a photograph that brought a hot flush to his face. "Silly," she cried, "I'm an actress, you know." But for all that a coolness sprang up between them, and John refused tickets to the show.

And, as another side line, Sol Bernfeld began to match John against likely boys in clandestine boxing bouts of the lower city, taking him from hall to hall on Saturday nights, acting as his manager. These adventures were a relief to the growing dislike he felt for the Clothing Emporium and its cloying sameness. Fighting had become second nature to him. He liked the heat of combat and his craving for the excitement of the fight grew with his success.
 It was late in November when Sol Bernfeld matched John against "Rasper" Jorgan, known to the Greenpoint section as "Polack Wonder." The boys went to weigh in at one hundred and thirty-three rinds, and got ten rounds in one of the preliminary Forgiven—With the cool moist lips of Becka pressing eagerly against his own.

Lilly Kirkin saw you," Becka, in tones of pouting banter, was accusing John. Suddenly he found himself forgiven, forgiven for things he had never done, for lapses he had not committed, for things he had never even thought about, forgiven with the cool moist lips of Becka pressing eagerly against his own, striking all protest of innocence, or of revolt.
 His voice rasped. He choked and struggled, vibrant with the contact, holding Becka with convulsive strength. The first drops of rain found them oblivious to the coming storm. The boy, ill clad, hard in body, with few ideas but those of strife, released the girl; her sudden "Oh!" coming with the return of breath almost crushed out a fier John jumped up, picked up her straw hat, and pulling her by the arm led her to the bole of a huge sycamore whose broad leaves promised some shelter from the rain. Quick flashes of lightning, followed by harsh, rumbling peals of thunder, were punctuated by the puny cries of women running from the park as sudden swirls of cool air and rain whipped about the trees. Then John and Becka, like Paul and Virginia in the story, naked, not of body but of mind, raced beneath the trees and the lashing of the storm for the park gate at Fifth Avenue and Fifty-ninth St. They took the east side L, down again into the familiar closeness of the slums.

The end of September, in the city of perpetual change, brings with it the first refreshing whisper of cooler air; a new vitality springs to life among the heat-wearied dwellers in the city. Sol Bernfeld had come back from the road after questionable success in providing crayon enlargements of family album portraits, with the Paris Snicy Package as a side line. The snicy package being a bulky surreptitious envelope, sold sealed "Against the law, you know, to show it, to be opened by the purchaser "Strictly in private." It was a suggestive package, retailing at twenty-five cents, or two bits, and sold wholesale to cardy choppers on trains at seven, flat, a gross. Sol sold few of the enlargements but did get rid of his entire stock of snicy packages to the farmers and their hands, even disposing of them to women by the simple process of refusing to tell them what he was selling.

 On his return to the city, Sol found Becka in a receptive frame of mind and John Breen pursuing his way in dogged siltence. Becka's efforts, balked by his awkward inexperience, had at least served to place him upon a meager wage in the size of which she evinced small interest. She soon walked out with Sol, then earning, as she boastfully confided to John, the princely salary of twenty-five dollars a week as runner for a Bowers burlesque show. And, furthermore, she was to appear in the chorus, of a leg show, "in tighties"—a secret carefully kept from Channon Lipvitch, but which perked slyly to John. And to prove it Becka showed John a photograph that brought a hot flush to his face. "Silly," she cried, "I'm an actress, you know." But for all that a coolness sprang up between them, and John refused tickets to the show.

And, as another side line, Sol Bernfeld began to match John against likely boys in clandestine boxing bouts of the lower city, taking him from hall to hall on Saturday nights, acting as his manager. These adventures were a relief to the growing dislike he felt for the Clothing Emporium and its cloying sameness. Fighting had become second nature to him. He liked the heat of combat and his craving for the excitement of the fight grew with his success.
 It was late in November when Sol Bernfeld matched John against "Rasper" Jorgan, known to the Greenpoint section as "Polack Wonder." The boys went to weigh in at one hundred and thirty-three rinds, and got ten rounds in one of the preliminary bouts before the famous Samson Sporting Club. It was the most ambitious bout yet secured by himself, forgiven, and the purse, so Sol stated, was to be twenty-five dollars, to the winner. If John won he would split with John, taking ten dollars for his share, and John Breen, glancing curiously at the typewritten letter from the trainer of the Samson Sporting Club, wondered at the queer kind of printing, for he had never seen a typewritten letter before and he was ashamed to admit that he could not read a word, a deficiency Manager Sol Bernfeld was thoroughly aware of.

FIFTH AVENUE
 Let us go back, in an orderly way, and sketch the story of the Van Horns as generally understood; the myths of the new city are its "old families," running back two or three or even four generations.
 Guysbert Van Horn, great-grandfather of Gilbert, was a man of hard common sense and the son of no less a man than Peter Van Horn, who came over from Holland as a young man, preferring an English colony, with Dutch traditions, to life at home.

Guysbert was a man of frugal habits and of strong religious convictions, when drunk or sober, in fact a man well calculated to prosper in the new New York. His son, Van Winkle Van Horn, proved a true son of New York. Born in 1800, he married a Lambert and determined to found the Horn fortune on the future of the city. He believed New York would eventually grow northward, in spite of its width from river to river. In the fact of much contrary advice he bought cheap land far to the north in the tract of Greenwich Village, and he held on.

The only son of Van Winkle—the Van Horns ran to only sons—was Brevoort Van Horn, father of Gilbert. So this family tree had its simple roots back in the rocky soil of Manhattan.
 So at the time we make the acquaintance of the last of the Van Horns, as he was generally called, Gilbert Van Horn was forty years of age; his hair was iron gray and he might easily have passed for a well-preserved man of fifty.

Here's a new collar that will give new chic to one of your summer dresses at very, very small cost. You may make it to match the trimming of a dress or to match a hat and wear it with any one of several dresses as a substitute for jacket or other wrap.

The collar consists of a strip of side pleated silk and a band of the same silk used for the top of the pleating and tie strings for the scarf. For the pleating you will need a piece of silk about ten inches deep, 75 inches long to make a strip of pleating twenty-five inches long. The strip of silk for band and ends should be 45 inches long. Cut the strip of silk two and a half inches wide so that when folded over lengthwise, stitched 1-4 inch from either side and drawn right side out, you will have a band one inch wide. The 25 inches in the center should be used as a band on which to mount the pleating.

You may make a scarf of this sort of plain colored silk crepe to wear on a figured dress or of dotted or otherwise printed silk crepe to wear with a plain toned dress. To wear as a very light evening wrap or scarf you might make the pleating of light toned chiffon.

Two short ends and one long side of the big piece should be finished with a narrow flat hem or machine picot and should then be taken to the professional pleater to be laid in fairly wide side pleats.

TO THE VOTERS OF COMMISSIONERS' PRECINCT NO. 3, HAMILTON CO.:

Hico, Texas, July 18, 1932.
In asking the voters again for their support, I invite a consideration of all my record as a County Commissioner.

Our county is in good financial condition. We have improved our roads. Tax renditions have been lowered.

The tax records show that Hamilton County has not exceeded $10,000,000 except in 1929-1930. In 1931 the rendition was $9,778,904. On January 13 of this year the Commissioners Court placed on the county records an order authorizing the Assessor to make a 10 per cent cut on all real estate valuations. We also reduced the salary of all officers that we are authorized to, by 10 per cent.

During this year we have reduced the general fund from 25c to 20c. Our tax rate is now the lowest of any in adjoining counties. By reducing the general fund rate instead of the valuations we reduced the fund that supports the Court House, Jail, Poor Farm, Jury and other incidental expenses; and left the School and Roads unaffected as these are of most direct benefit to the people.

I call attention to the fact that the rate of tax, as well as the amount of tax you pay, Hamilton County has the lowest rate except one, of any county in this section, and that county is Comanche, which has 47c. Comanche County has only a 15c road tax and we have 25c, and if that county imposed for roads as much as Hamilton their rate would be 57c, as compared with Hamilton's 51c. Coryell County, which is much talked of as a standard of comparison, has a tax rate of 67c. Figure for yourself, your taxes at 51c and then figure them at 67c, and see the difference.

Thanking you for the favors you have extended me, and hoping again for your vote, I am, Sincerely yours,

S. A. CLARK

CHANGING THE CONSTITUTION

The conventions are over and the Presidential campaign of 1932 is under way. By the time the spell-binders of both parties have begun to get into action it may be that people will get all excited over such important issues as tax reduction and government economy, and a lot of the other things which both parties endorse in different language in their platforms.

As long as there is so much talk and excitement in various parts of the country about this question, it is probably just as well to take steps to find out whether the people of the United States, or any considerable majority of them, want to change the dry laws or not. We don't see how anybody can take exception to that proposition.

The only way to bring them out is by the means that both parties propose, that of submitting an amendment to conventions called in the different states solely for the purpose of considering a change and so giving every voter a chance to vote for either wet or dry delegates as he prefers.

THE ROAD IS LONG, COMING BACK

The only thing that keeps most of us from realizing our own possibilities and of getting the highest satisfaction out of life is fear. There are very few human beings in the world who are not afraid of something, and as long as one is afraid of anything he cannot achieve perfect happiness.

Very few people in these days have the perfectly natural physical fears that surrounded the lives of our ancestors. But who of us has not some mental fear, fear of something that has not happened but which we think may happen to ourselves or our loved ones?

In the past two or three years the people of the United States have been the prey of a new kind of fear. They have been afraid that, in the popular phrase, the bottom had dropped out of everything. They have feared that never again would they have a job, that the factories that have shut down would never start up, that they would never be able to sell the products of their farms—those and a thousand other fears which have no relation to common sense or reality seemed to take possession of perhaps the majority of Americans.

We see signs that this widespread fear is beginning to disappear. We do not believe it ever had any real foundation, and we believe people are waking up to that fact. If we are right, and hope and courage are beginning to replace fear, then we have made a good start toward the return of good times.

The Worst Spot On the Road

THE INDISPENSABLE FOODS

When the family budget must be curtailed, the amount of care exercised in buying foods must be increased. Certain foods are essential to the health of both adults and children. Among these are cereals, citrus fruits, leafy vegetables, eggs and—most important of all—first-quality milk.

Milk in its various forms contributes more than half the total calcium consumed in the ordinary American diet. It is the greatest of the bone builders. According to health authorities, better health is often enjoyed by thin children who have been properly fed with milk and fruits, than by children of normal weight who over-indulge in filling and fattening foods.

FIT ROAD BUILDING TO ECONOMIC NEEDS

The Tenth Annual Asphalt Paving Conference, to be held in New Orleans the week of November 28 or December 5, will, in recognition of present economic conditions, be devoted largely to phases of low-cost road construction. The major subjects for discussion will include the salvaging of all pavements which are in need of resurfacing or replacement, by utilizing inexpensive types; the urgent necessity of designing roads in proportion to their importance—eliminating the "over-designing" evil.

A GOOD COMMUNITY HOBBY

A good community hobby is the fire department. And it is a hobby that pays every citizen dividends. The days when second-rate "assembled" apparatus and untrained or partly trained volunteer personnel, were adequate, have definitely gone. Fire hazards grow greater every year.

community's insurance against disaster—and, from the standpoint of value, are as essential as a fire policy.

The fire department is worth any citizen's time. It should be cultivated, trained and equipped in accordance with the highest standards. It should be publicized in the local press. It should be given every opportunity to perfect itself to the greatest possible degree.

A dollar spent for standard apparatus is money in every citizen's pocket. The number of towns that have been saved from absolute destruction by first-class fire departments would make a long list.

4-H CLUB NEWS

Club Girls on Big Tour

Four dresses of their own making are giving four 4-H girls an educational tour of shrines of American history which is to cover 3,500 miles and last for three weeks. Each of the four was winner in their class at the national style revue, a feature of the National 4-H Club Congress in Chicago last December.

The tour started at Urbana, Ill., and continued eastward to Washington, D. C., where the party dropped in at the last day of the National 4-H Camp. While in this vicinity the party will visit the homes of Washington and Jefferson. Homes of favorite American authors are also in the itinerary.

IN LITTLE OLD NEW YORK

Another New York church is installing devices to aid persons whose hearing is impaired. One church here reserves the front pews for persons who can't hear well.

More men are wearing flowers in their lapel buttons here. The explanation is to be found in the number of girls selling flowers on the street. You can buy a gardenia for a nickel here.

There is a company here which manufactures pipe organs for private use home installation and although it is hard to explain, this company is doing quite well.

The Commodore Grill is one of the swankiest in the great Commodore Hotel here. There is also a Commodore Grill over on Avenue A and East Thirtieth Street. It's a lunch wagon.

Taxicab drivers here are complaining that they are getting few 10-cent tips these days. The nickel tip has returned. Waitresses in low-priced restaurants have a similar complaint. Bootblacks who are accustomed to nickel tips say that now they frequently don't get anything extra.

The better men's hat shops are displaying gray derbies. It's a question whether they'll sell very many. However, there was a time when only followers of race tracks wore light gray hats with black bands. Today they far outnumber all other styles of hats.

They are trying to revive interest in wood-burning in one of New York's department stores. It must be all of 20 years since you watched your big sister ply this decorative art on cigar boxes and leather sofa cushions. It was rather a dangerous business over an alcohol lamp in those days. But now it is done with a pyroelectric pen and is very safe and rapid.

New York requires a daily supply of from 20 to 25 carloads of spinach.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

RED SEA DELIVERANCE

Lesson for July 24 Lesson Text: Exodus 14:10-16, 21, and 22. Golden Text: Exodus 15:12.

The experience of God's saving power in a life does not mean that the conflict with sin is at an end. It explains why so many Christians fall in the hour of crisis. Here are two million former slaves, each one of whom had experienced in a marvelous way God's delivering power. They had found peace and security at a time when all Egypt was plunged in sorrow and tears, and yet, even with the memory of this mighty Passover miracle, they are so soon in a panic of fear and distrust.

Israel, we dwell upon the difficulties before us, substituting reasons for dependence upon God. While the sound of the chariot wheels of the Egyptians draws nearer and nearer and the fear of Israel reaches despair, the most unexpected of all things takes place. Unable to turn back because of the pursuing host, hemmed in by mountains on either side, let the Red Sea open, a God-given highway stretches before them; so that the slow moving host of men, women, children, and beasts of burden may pass over unharmed and in peace.

"HEART STROKE"

In all accidents, I have found the ounce of prevention to be worth many pounds of cure; the best time to lock the garage securely is before the car is stolen. Heat stroke—being overheated until we succumb—is a most unfortunate accident. Of course the results of such a thing, depend on the strength and "resistance" of the victim, the condition of heart, liver, kidneys and other vital organs, as well as the age of the patient, and the extent or degree of over-heating.

The accident may occur in the hay-field, at the bench in the shop, or in the canning-factory, in the super-heated retail store—in fact anywhere that the heat may be overpowering and the toil too exacting for the worker. It is only proper here for me to touch the subject in a general, yet practical way.

Symptoms—of course collapse of the bodily energy. The pupils of the eyes may be dilated, indicating brain-weakness; the pulse rapid, the breathing deep at first. Severe forms soon develop shallow breathing, with irregular and feeble pulse, and the pupils may become contracted, with mental aberration. Involuntary evacuations may occur, with muscular twitchings, cold sweat, and even convulsions—depending on the severity of the heat-stroke.

First Aid—remove the patient to the coolest place available, where air circulates freely; open the clothing; Give plenty of cool—not iced—water, if the patient will accept it. Notice that, in extreme cases of collapse, the temperature falls below normal, and cold sweat occurs—the appearance of a fatal issue; it then becomes necessary to apply warmth to the body. The attendants should do everything possible to turn matters "about face." That is safe to do always. Call the Doctor.

Always—Something Happens

A man whose son graduated from college in June was asking what I thought about a post graduate course in Harvard Business School.

"I don't assume any school can teach a boy how to succeed," he said. "What I want is to have my son learn something about the history of the business."

He proceeded to illustrate from his own experience. Until 1904 he was a newspaper reporter, but that year he took a job with the manufacturing concern of which he is now the head.

In 1907, when he was just beginning to get under way, along came a panic. "We cleared away the wreckage and started again," he said, "but in 1910 there was a strike which tied up our plants, destroyed part of our property and disrupted our trade."

familiar with this sequence of events, if he knew the ups and downs not only of modern business through the ages. Maybe he could come into life without the illusion which has handicapped so many of us—that there is any such thing as "normal" in the sense of permanently settled conditions and uninterrupted progress.

I thought these were very wise remarks. As far back as I can remember I have been hoping and planning for a time when I should be "comfortably fixed." At first I thought if I could ever accumulate $20,000 in good safe bonds I'd have an income of $1,000 a year and then I could look out with philosophic calm upon the foibles of the world.

The only progress I have made during the past three years has been in health. I try to ride horseback more, swim more, play more golf and keep generally tough and supple. I'm quite sure that as long as I live I shall have to keep hustling—that just about the time I get everything nicely fixed something will happen.

An inquiry from the Brownfield Chamber of Commerce for the name and address of a Texas manufacturer of tin cans had to be answered that there was no such Texas establishment. Continental Can Company some time ago was reported planning a can factory at Houston, but the project so far seems only in the planning stage.

We have been having some real summer days but at this writing a light shower has cooled the atmosphere with good indications of more rain.

The Baptist revival closed Sunday night. There was very good attendance throughout the meeting.

The big day at Dry Fork church services, dinner on the ground and singing in the afternoon Sunday, was fully enjoyed by some few people of our community.
Herman Driver of Dry Fork was a guest of Miss Rosa Lee Lambert Thursday night.
Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Hicks and daughter, Gladys, accompanied by two other daughters, Mrs. M. H. Johnson, of Dry Fork and Mrs. J. A. Hendricks made a business trip to Hamilton Saturday.

TO THE VOTERS OF HAMILTON COUNTY:

I want to thank the good people of Hamilton County for the many courtesies shown me and the wonderful encouragement given me during my campaign for Tax Collector.
I have worked hard making a house-to-house canvas of this county trying to see each voter personally; but I know I have missed a few and I take this means of earnestly soliciting your votes and renewing my solicitations to those I have seen. Don't forget to vote for me Saturday!
Sincerely,
R. J. (BOB) RILEY
Candidate for Tax Collector

NAMES . . . nation-wide study
What is the commonest name in America?
Right—it's Smith. But in Brooklyn, N. Y., and the Borough of The Bronx there are more Cohens than Smiths, and in the Bronx, almost entirely populated by Jews, there are also more people named Schwartz and Miller.
A study of the telephone books and city directories of the whole nation has just been made, and shows that the names which appear most often are, in order of their frequency, Smith, Jackson, Brown, Williams, Jones, Miller, Davis, Anderson, Wilson and Moore.
Smith is a universal name. It means the worker in metals and it is the same whether written Smith, Schmidt, or Faber. Johnson is usually Scandinavian in this country, but is also English and Scotch. The Browns may have started out as Brauns or Le Brun, but are more likely to be of English descent. Williams and Jones are straight Welsh, as are the Davises.
The Millers are another international family. Mueller and Moulinaux being other spellings. The Andersons and Wilsons are Scotch, of course, and who ever heard of a person named Moore who didn't trace back to the Emerald Isle?
STAMPS . . . and their value
Many readers have written me to ask the value of old stamps in their possession since I wrote something about the prices some rare stamps bring. I am not an authority on stamps, but experts tell me that the value of any given stamp is what it will bring at auction, where stamp prices are fixed.
Most stamp dealers are honest, but one man who sent a very rare stamp to a dealer found himself victimized. The dealer paid him $165 for the stamp, then sold it for $7,500. The original owner sued the dealer and the courts have ordered him to pay the difference.
The best way to find out whether an old stamp has value is to send a photograph of it to the American Philatelic Society, Denver.
PAPER . . . from the mills
Within three miles of my home farm stand the ruins of the mill in which the first woodpulp paper ever manufactured was turned out. A young German engineer came into this paper-making region of the Housatonic Valley in Massachusetts about sixty years ago with an idea that revolutionized the newspaper business and immensely cheapened all kinds of paper.
We still make most of the highgrade writing paper, and all the paper on which money is printed, in the mills of Berkshire county. Linen and cotton rags, such as the clippings from the shirt and collar factories in Troy, provide much of the base material for writing papers, but most of the paper on which books are printed and all that is used in newspapers, is made of wood.
Canada makes most of it, because Canada still has great spruce forests and we have cut most of ours down. But Dr. Charles A. Herty, famous chemist, has found out how to make white paper from southern pine, and the time will come when the big "newsprint" mills will be in Florida and Georgia instead of in Canada.
DEATH . . . as a penalty
Italy was the first modern nation to abolish the death penalty for crime, nearly eighty years ago. Under Mussolini the death penalty was re-established for certain crimes against the government, and two men were executed a few weeks ago, one for trying to kill Mussolini with a bomb.
This is sure to stir up discussion again of the effectiveness of capital punishment. We have it in almost every State, but it does not seem to prevent murder.
Italy still punishes ordinary murder with only 21 years of prison, but executes those whose acts threaten the sovereignty of the State. I personally think that if anybody is to be legally killed it would be better to inflict the death penalty on those who murder for their personal gain. The American view is—in theory at least—that the safety of the individual is more important than the safety of the Government.
SNAILS . . . what are they?
Many an unsophisticated tourist in France has eaten and enjoyed what the bill-of-fare called "escargots," only to learn afterwards with disgust that he had eaten snails. This popular French delicacy is under discussion in Paris, where the officials are trying to decide whether they are game, fish, or domestic animals.
The wild snails of Burgundy are getting scarce, and snail-lovers invoked the game laws to protect them. But, said the logical French functionaries, anything that you pull off a wall with your fingers cannot be "game." One friend of the snail said they might be classified as "horned beasts." Another said they should be grouped with oysters and other shell-fish.

SONG
By Thomas Love Peacock
Oh! say not woman's heart is bought
With vain and empty treasure.
Oh! say not woman's heart is caught
By every idle pleasure.
When first her gentle bosom knows
Love's flame, it wanders never;
Deep in her heart the passion glows,
She loves, and loves for ever.
Oh! say not woman's false as fair,
That like the bee she ranges!
Still seeking flowers more sweet and rare,
As fickle fancy changes.
Ah! no, the love that first can warm
Will leave her bosom never;
No second passion e'er can charm
She loves, and loves for ever.

During the fifty-sixth Intercollegiate A. A. A. track and field championships held in Edwards Stadium, Berkeley, Cal., William Carr won the 440-yard dash in the amazing time of 47 seconds flat. On May 16, 1931, at Philadelphia, that great athlete, Ben Eastman of Leland Stanford Junior University, ran the same distance in 47.4 seconds. That time was to have been submitted by the Amateur Athletic Union of the United States to the International Federation governing track and field athletics, for adoption as a world's record. The original time for the distance made by a college athlete back in 1876 was 56 seconds. In 1916 J. E. Meredith of the University of Pennsylvania ran the distance in 47.2-5 seconds.

Ellsworth Vines, Jr., not yet 21, climbed to the pinnacle of tennis greatness in defeating H. W. (Bunny) Austin to win the British singles championship. By winning the championship on his first attempt, Vines becomes the third in all the long history of Wimbledon to accomplish that feat. Gerald Patterson of Australia did it in 1919, and Big Bill Tilden in 1920. Vines will defend his title as American singles champion at Forest Hills in September.

Hector Dyer, of the Los Angeles Athletic Club, recently ran 100 meters in 10.4 seconds. That's equal to the world's record. The Olympic record is 10.6 seconds.

Germany is planning to send a representation of 125 athletics and officials to the Olympic Games.

Flags of fifty nations will flutter from the ramparts of Olympic Stadium in Los Angeles when President Hoover proclaims open the Games of the Tenth Olympiad on the afternoon of July 30.

During the days and nights of the Olympic Games celebration, competitions will be held in fourteen branches of sport: track and field athletics, boxing, wrestling, weightlifting, fencing, field hockey, cycling, modern pentathlon, yachting, swimming and diving, gymnastics, equestrian sports and shooting.

Baseball originated in the United States in 1839. The dimensions of the diamond has not been changed to date.

Grapefruit Salad Dressing
1 cup salad oil, 1-3 cup grapefruit juice, 3-4 teaspoon salt, dash of pepper, 1-2 teaspoon sugar. Mix all ingredients and shake in a covered bottle until thick.
The taste and character of such flavorings as lemon, almond, orange, are accentuated and heightened when combined with a few drops of vanilla.

Frozen Custard
Four eggs, one pint of cream, one pint of milk, half pound of sugar, two ounces of chocolate. Put the milk over the fire in a double boiler; add the chocolate, grated. Beat the eggs and sugar together until light, add them to the hot milk, cook one minute, take from the fire, add the cream, and a teaspoon of vanilla. When cold, freeze. This makes a frozen custard.

Cranberry Juice Cocktail
3 cups water
1 cup cranberries
3-4 cup sugar
Pick over and wash cranberries. Add water. Let cranberries cook until they burst, then strain. Next bring juice to boiling point, add sugar, and cook two minutes longer. Then chill and serve ice cold in beverage glasses.

Washington, D. C.—The most exciting question among political gossips is: Will Congress try at this session to adopt a constitutional amendment on prohibition for submission to the States next fall?
Both parties in their national conventions have pledged themselves to the submission of such an amendment. Why can't it be done right away?
The difficulty will be in framing an amendment which can obtain a two-thirds vote in both Houses, which is the majority required by the Constitution for the submission of a constitutional amendment.
The Democratic platform calls for an amendment, explicitly repealing the Eighteenth or Prohibition Amendment, although coupled with this is the demand that "the Federal Government effectively exercise its power to enable the States to protect themselves against importation of intoxicating liquors in violation of their laws."
The Republican platform, however, specifically says: "We do not favor a submission limited to the issue of retention or repeal," and declares that the proposed amendment should contain provisions retaining in the Federal Government power to preserve the gains already made in dealing with the liquor traffic, while allowing States to deal with their problem as their citizens may determine, subject to the power of the Federal Government to protect States where prohibition may exist.

The Necessary Vote
To submit a constitutional amendment would require the affirmative votes of 290 members of the House of Representatives and of 64 Senators, two-thirds of the membership of each House. Neither party has enough votes in the present Congress to put such a proposal through as a party measure.
The Democrats have 218 Representatives and the Republicans 214. If every Democratic representative could be counted upon to support a wet amendment at this time, it would still take the votes of 72 Republicans, in addition, to put it through.
In the Senate neither party has a majority; there are 47 Republicans, 47 Democrats, one Farmer-Labor Senator, and one vacancy. It would take all the 47 Democrats and 17 of the Republican Senators to give a two-thirds vote of approval to such an amendment.
Nevertheless, it is possible that something of the sort might be done during this month of July if a determined effort were made to get rid of the subject now, and so remove it from the Presidential campaign permanently. In view of the apparent popular interest in this subject, so the exclusion of all other campaign issues, those who would like to see the election result turn upon questions of economics and deep-seated political principles would be glad to have the prohibition topic wiped off the boards immediately.

To achieve that result, it is believed that a great many drys and middle-of-the-roads would be willing to make concessions and modify their personal views, if any hope were held out that by so doing a constitutional amendment which would put the whole question up to the people of the States could be drafted and adopted at this session. That is regarded as much more feasible, strange as it may seem, than the amendment of the Volstead act at this session, even though it would require only a majority of each House to change that.

The Democratic Proposal
The Democratic party platform proposal advocates the immediate modification of the Volstead act to legalize the manufacture and sale of beer and other beverages "of such alcoholic content as is permissible under the Constitution." The Volstead act declares that any beverage containing more than one-half of one per cent of alcohol is intoxicating and is, therefore, illegal.
The contention of the wets is that an alcoholic content of six or seven per cent, which was the average strength of lager beer in the old pre-prohibition days, or even of ten or twelve per cent, which is also about the proportion of alcohol in the so-called "light wines," is not in fact intoxicating, as such beverages are ordinarily used. The Democratic party's proposal is to amend the law and legalize beverages with an alcoholic content higher than the present one-half of one per cent near-beer.

Some observers predict that there will be a more bitter fight over that proposed than there will be over the constitutional amendment. There are many members of Congress in both Houses and of both parties who are uncompromisingly dry. They will accept and vote for a constitutional amendment putting the question up to the States, because they believe that it will be impossible to obtain the ratification of such an amendment by three-fourths of the 48 States. There are more than twelve states, they believe, which will never ratify prohibition repeal, either through the Legislatures or by conventions elected by the people; and it takes three-fourths of the States to ratify any change in the Constitution.
So while wets and drys find themselves in harmony on the question of resubmission, the drys still think they are strong enough to block any attempt to make the statutory restrictions on liquor any wetter than they are now.

Mrs. Joe Rogan, 4-H pantry demonstrator of the Berry Creek Home Demonstration Club in Williamson county has passed on to the neighbors what she learned in a meat canning school last fall. She has given 23 canning demonstrations in which 3600 containers of meat were put on pantry shelves.
Coleman—A small depression-lifter in the form of a capon club has been started in Coleman county under the direction of C. V. Robinson, county agent, who reports more than 1000 cockerels caponized and growing out for a late winter market. The movement is spreading from the Rae Community where it was begun in protest at the unprofitably low broiler market. Eggs have been hatched at a considerable saving by arranging with a local hatchery to hatch eggs on a 10-tray club basis.
Tentative plans for the establishment of a paper mill in East Texas continue to be laid. Experiments have proven that cotton linters and wood pulp from young pine trees in the proportions of 10 and 90 per cent make a very satisfactory book paper. Young pine alone produces a good newspaper and old pine and rice and wheat straw make a good kraft paper. A lot of Texans believe paper mills will be one of the major industrial developments of Texas within the next decade.
