The eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. B. L. Mitchell fell out of a window of their home Saturday evening and broke an arm very badly.

Nell and Johnnie Gregory entertained some friends at their home Saturday evening with a social.

John Jackson Turner was born in 1901 near Iredele. He was the youngest child of Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Turner and was raised here and graduated from the Iredele High School. He attended college at Meridian and John Tarleton. A little over a year ago his health began to fail and he was taken to Austin and placed under the care of physicians in a sanitarium there. John was of a cheerful disposition, always looking on the bright side of life. I have known him all his life and can say he was a fine boy. He was of a very broad mind and very popular in school and in the sanitarium. He professed religion in 1924 and united with the Baptist Church and lived a devoted christian life. He was a great reader of the Bible having read it through eight or ten times. The sweet influence he shed from his christian life will live on and no doubt into the ages. No doubt his school mates here will remember many happy days they enjoyed with him. John was an obedient son and a loving brother as he was the baby he was petted by all. On Saturday afternoon, May 8th, at the sanitarium at Austin, he died very suddenly from acute indigestion. The sad news was sent here in a short time that John Turner was dead. The family were in Clifton and when they came home the sad news was told to them. From the time the family came home until he was laid to rest, kind friends were at their home trying to comfort them in words and deeds. The family do not weep in vain for him for they know he is at rest and watching and waiting for them. The body of this fine young man was brought in Sunday afternoon by his brother, Frank, and Mr. Rainwater, and the casket was opened and a large crowd of friends that were there to comfort them went in and looked at him. He certainly looked nice and very natural as if he should speak to all of his friends. No doubt he was looking from his heavenly home at all his loved ones and friends. His brother, Dr. George Turner, came in from El Paso on Sunday evening and remained with the family until Wednesday. The funeral of John was held in the Baptist Church Monday afternoon at 2:30 in the presence of a large host of friends. The funeral was in charge of Rev. Lester and McCauley who gave glowing tributes to his memory. Rev. McCauley had been in Meridian College with him. The floral offerings were very large and beautiful. The following were flower girls: Mrs. Pete Reising, Misses Lillie Turner, Genevieve Davis and Lazeta Sue Schoemacher. The pall bearers were: Ralph Mitchell, Jerry Phillips, David Schenck, Jim Wilkerson, John Schoemacher and Pete Reising. John leaves his parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. R. Turner, two brothers, W. F. Turner of Iredele and Dr. George Turner of El Paso, and a sister, Mrs. Willie Schoemacher of Clifton, and two nieces, Lillie Turner and Lazeta Sue Schoemacher, two nephews, W. F. Turner Jr. and Edward, and a host of other relatives and friends to mourn his loss.

The out of town relatives and friends who attended the funeral were: Mr. and Mrs. Willie Schoemacher and daughter, Mrs. Ella Olson, Mrs. Pete Reising, Mrs. Pierson, John Schoemacher, Mrs. Thelma Schoemacher all of Clifton; Mrs. John T. Wilson of Whitney; and Dr. George Turner of El Paso. The relatives have the sympathy of their friends in the loss of their loved one. He is gone from this world to a better one and is not forgotten. He was laid to rest in the Riverside Cemetery by the side of a brother and sister who preceded him several years ago.

The singing here Sunday afternoon was well attended for the day to be so bad. The singing is getting better all the time. Several from Meridian, Clifton and other places. The Bosque County singing convention will be in Meridian May 21.

Mr. and Mrs. Edmond Thompson and baby spent Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dunlap.

Mr. and Mrs. I. D. Hurt and children spent the week end in Carlton.

A light rain came Sunday which brought a norther and makes fires and coats feel comfortable. It is hoped the norther will not increase. Had more rain Monday which will be fine on the gardens and crops.

The children of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Harris who live here and Hugh Harris, Mrs. Charlie Tidwell, Mrs. Gene Conley and Mrs. Grace Fouts with their families, gave their mother mother a surprise dinner on Mother's Day which is very nice for them to do for her.

Tuesday afternoon, May 9th, Mrs. J. L. Tidwell entertained the Home Mission with a social at her beautiful home and was assisted by Mrs. J. W. Parks. We

THIS WEEK IN WASHINGTON

Washington.—The word has gone out that all of the Roosevelt program is to be rushed through Congress before the date of the World Economic Conference, which is to meet in London on June 14. A good many Senators and Representatives will want to go to London at that time, whether they are delegates to the Conference or not; and Mr. Roosevelt will, naturally, want to have some of his close advisers over there, but as long as Congress is in session he needs them here. So the big rush will be to get through and adjourn early in June, leaving less pressing matters to lie over until the regular session next December.

Another reason for the desire for an early adjournment is to give business and industry a chance to get used to the changes in conditions brought about by the new sort of laws which will all have been put in force by early June. So much of the legislation which has been adopted so far gives the President broad discretionary powers that many business leaders and industrialists are waiting to see how the President intends to use these powers before going ahead too fast with their own plans.

A Heavy Program
With the Farm Relief bill out of the way, and its attached amendments giving the President full control over currency inflation, the Muscle Shoals bill, the railroad reorganization bill, the banking reform bill including some sort of insurance to depositors, the public works bill to provide more employment, the measure for direct financial gifts to states and municipalities for unemployment relief, the measure to prevent the sale of worthless securities and the bill giving the President great authority over private industry, including the power to advance Government funds in some cases, ought to provide both houses plenty of work to do in a month or so of time. On top of these it is expected that the President will ask—and receive—broad and final authority to adjust tariffs, negotiate trade treaties and make binding settlements in the matter of the war debts.

There is little doubt that Congress will continue to give Mr. Roosevelt everything he wants. There is no possible doubt that he has fired the imagination of the mass of the American people as no other President has done since the famous "Teddy" and Congress knows that. There are many men in both houses, of both parties, who do not at all approve all of the projects which the President has put up to them, and who see great danger in giving the Executive so much more power than the Constitution contemplated, but they do not express their opposition publicly, because they are aware that the bulk of their constituents are with the President.

Glass and Borah
Only one outstanding Democrat has had the temerity to voice his opposition to any of Mr. Roosevelt's major policies. That is Senator Carter Glass of Virginia. Mr. Glass was greatly desired by Mr. Roosevelt as Secretary of the Treasury. He declined for reasons not clearly stated at the time, mainly, it was said, because of his advanced age and poor health. But there was no sign of age or illness when this little giant rose in the Senate to denounce the proposal to permit the President to reduce the amount of gold in the United States dollar. Mr. Glass said that he did not object so much to the currency inflation proposals, but he regarded as a dishonorable evasion of our obligations even to consider the project of paying gold debts in depreciated gold dollars.

Regardless of the firm belief of Mr. Roosevelt's friends that he will never use that power, that he only wants it for trading purposes in negotiating monetary questions with Europe, Mr. Glass was as vigorous as any man has been in Congress at any time in his opposition to the measure. He failed to carry the Senate with him, and his friends are suggesting that his defeat may impair his influence.

Another note of opposition to the Administration was sounded by Senator Borah, who challenged the right of the Government to demand the return of gold to the Treasury. "If I had five thousand dollars in gold I would refuse to give it up and there is no legal power to make me give up what is my own," Senator Borah said, in effect. But that, again, was one man's expression, against an overwhelming majority which will do the President's bidding whatever he asks.

Where We Are Heading
The general policy of the Administration is beginning to take shape. As disclosed in talks by members of the Cabinet and others it appears to contemplate the Government. The anti-trust general control of all business by laws are on the shelf, or soon will be.

Trade agreements to regulate not only trade practices but prices, as well as hours of labor, are to be encouraged if not dictated by the Government. Regulations designed to give the wage-earners in industry not only good working conditions but short hours and a fairly high minimum wage appear to be a part of the program. Agreement to such regulation will undoubtedly be a condition imposed if industries are to be aided by grants of funds or credit by the Government.

The main objective is to raise prices and keep them up, so that wage-standards may be kept up and the purchasing power of all the people maintained at a high level; to cut production to pretty close to our domestic needs and to open the doors to the importation of foreign goods in order to enable our foreign debtors to pay their debts to us.

TODAY and TOMORROW

WASHINGTON ... one industry
I was in Washington for a few days recently, and what impressed me most was the utter ignorance of the people of Washington about what is going on in the rest of the world.

Building industry is booming, constructing new Government buildings. Government employees are working every day, yelping mildly about a small reduction in salaries. Streets are crowded with cars, driven with the utmost recklessness, and most inefficient traffic regulation. Stores are doing as good business as ever, at prices much higher than in New York. Rents are almost up to the highest level.

Washington has but one industry, the Government of the United States. It is so detached from the rest of the country that it might as well be in some other nation. It is difficult for the men who run the government to realize how bad conditions are elsewhere, when they see evidence all around them of great prosperity.

I have long believed that it was a serious mistake to locate that seat of government away from the center of business and industrial activity. If I could do it, I would move the Capitol and the White House to Chicago, which is where they ought to be if they are really to represent the American people effectively.

LAND - safest investment

In spite of the fact that many owners of real estate have suffered great losses in the past few years, land remains the safest, soundest investment in the long run. The supply is limited, for one thing. Increasing population means increasing demand for land. Every baby born on Manhattan Island increases the value of the Woolworth building.

The time to buy land is now. Dollars are high now; they will be much cheaper shortly. Land is cheap now; it will be much higher before long. The time to buy anything is when everybody else wants to sell. If you own land, hold on to it; if you have dollars, buy land with them for safety.

Don't speculate in land! Pay for it and hold it. Don't speculate in anything on which you can't always realize something at a moment's notice. You can't move land around; you must wait until someone wants that piece at that spot. So buy land intelligently, in the path of the movement of population. Regard it as an investment for your children rather than as a way to make yourself rich over night.

The world's greatest and most enduring fortunes have been made by buying land and holding on to it.

EDUCATION - learn to work

My friend Walter Lippman, who also writes a column and, curiously enough, picked the same title for it as this column of mine, wrote something recently which seems to me the best statement of its kind I have ever seen:

"The truly educative process," said Lippman, "consists in learning to deal with reality, that is to say with people and objects and events that are not the mere projection of one's own wishes. Education is a matter of putting away childish things, of discovering that events do not respond to words, of learning that the world is not in us but that we are in the world."

Most of us live in a world of "wishful thinking." We'd like to be rich, and we dream of what we would do if we were rich, but we aren't willing to take all the trouble and worry on ourselves that anyone must take if he is to attain riches. Education, as Mr. Lippman points out, ought to teach youth that it must work for what it gets.

Too many young people grow up these days with the idea that the world owes them a living. The world owes nobody anything for which he does not give a commensurate return in labor of one sort or another.

COMPETITION - new order

For a great many years the United States has been committed to the principle that free competition in business and industry is, in the long run, the best way to get ahead. We set up anti-trust laws to prevent combinations and insure competition.

All the signs point to the discarding of all regulations prohibiting trade combinations and the establishment under Government supervision of groups and associations of manufacturers and producers to fix prices and determine all other trade conditions.

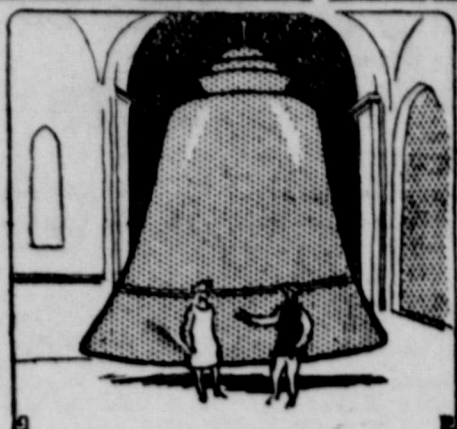

That is, of course, going to make it harder for the ordinary man to get himself established in a competitive business or industry. It will result in the best men becoming employees instead of independent business men and the less than best dropping out of sight in the mass of humanity.

That may be better for the social order, if we conceive that to be a system under which all humanity will eventually occupy the same plane of activity and income, but I greatly fear that when we take any steps to stifle the initiative of the individual and to limit his opportunities we will be abandoning the fundamental principle that has made America what it is.

Soldier and Sailor Dead Remembered by Boy Scouts

This scene will be re-enacted in Arlington on Memorial Day

BOY SCOUTS of Washington and vicinity are planning their annual pilgrimage to Arlington National Cemetery to place an American flag on each of the thousands of graves so that none will be forgotten on Memorial Day. From the beautiful marble sarcophagus of the Unknown Soldier to the simple marble headstone which the Government provides for each man who saw military or naval service, none will be overlooked. Memorial Day, designated in 1868 in a general order of John A. Logan, commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, was originally set aside for the decoration of graves of Union Soldiers of the Civil War.

but it has been extended to include the dead of other wars. May 30 is observed as Memorial Day and is a legal holiday in all States except Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, and North Carolina and South Carolina. Several dates are observed as Confederate Memorial Day in the Southern States.
