A LITTLE FUN Jokes to Make You Laugh

Habit
 "Sir, when you eat here you do not need to dust off the plate."
 "Beg pardon. Force of habit merely. I'm an umpire."

He Knew Trees
 City girl: "Oh, these lovely oaks, what would they say if they could talk?"
 Country boy: "They would probably say, 'Excuse us, Miss, but we are hackberries.'"

Circumstantial
 Conductor—Here, you must not smoke in this car.
 Passenger—I'm not smoking.
 Conductor—Well, you have your pipe in your mouth.
 Passenger—Yes, and I've got my feet in my shoes, but I'm not walking.

Dad Was Stumped
 "Dad, the teacher told us the law of gravity keeps us on the earth. Is that true?"
 "That's correct, son."
 "Well, then, how did we stick on the earth before that law was passed?"

Twas in a restaurant they met, Romeo and Juliet.
 He had no cash to pay the debt, So Romeo'd what Juliet.

Rules of the Game
 "Bessie, what do you mean by shouting and storming about like that?" demanded mother, as she came into the room where the children were playing.
 "Why can't you play quietly, like Ted? He isn't saying a word."
 "Of course he's not. It's his part in the game to play like that. He is being papa coming home late at night, and I am you."

At the Ball Game
 A young woman was at the ball game with a university graduate, and naturally the talk ran upon books. By and by there was a lull in the conversation, broken presently by the young woman, who said: "What do you think of Fielding, Mr. Smith?"
 "Oh," was the answer, "fielding is important, of course; but it isn't worth much unless you have pitching and batting."

Goes "South" in Winter
 The American was on a hunting trip in the Canadian woods and he suffered from the chilly nights.
 "Gosh," he said to his guide, "it must get pretty cold up here in the winter."
 "Sure does," replied the guide, "goes to forty-five below zero."
 "I don't see how you stand it."
 "Oh, I always go South for the winter."
 "Yes, where do you go?"
 "Down to Chicago!"

Returning the Compliment
 A stately and venerable professor one morning, being unable to attend to his class on account of a cold, wrote on the blackboard:
 "Dr. McKenzie, through indisposition, is unable to attend to his classes to-day."
 The students erased one letter in this notice, making it read:
 "Dr. McKenzie, through indisposition, is unable to attend to his asses to-day."
 But it happened a few minutes later that the professor returned for a box he had forgotten. Amid a roar of laughter he detected the change in his notice, and, approaching the blackboard, calmly erased one letter.
 Now the notice read:
 Dr. McKenzie, through indisposition, is unable to attend to his asses to-day."

Poultry Facts By F. W. KAZMEIER, Poultry Breeder, Bryan, Texas.

More About Coccidiosis
 At this season of the year this disease undoubtedly causes much trouble and loss. The idea is not to try to cure it, but to prevent it. Like in the case of many other diseases, sanitation offers the most hopes to prevent it. Without sanitation a cure or prevention is hopeless. Here it is—before putting any chicks into the brooder house, clean it thoroughly, then wash it out with plain water—next wash it thoroughly with scalding hot lye water. When dry, follow this up with a good spraying of entire inside of house, with a strong disinfectant, or better still a special disinfectant, made for this purpose. Keep the chicks indoors, on wire floors or on littered floors, in that case, clean out, regularly once a day. In the case of wire floors cleaning out every other day is satisfactory. Use screen doors; screen every door in the house. Keep screen doors open, also shutters or windows, on south, east and west so that direct sunshine can strike the chicks as well as the floor and sides of the house. Keep feeding and drinking vessels, clean; yes, daily cleaning is useless, unless they too are kept clean and free from coccidiosis germs. This disease is easily handled, but it takes daily and thorough cleanings to do the job. Once a week cleaning will not do the work, unless you use the later developed method of spraying the litter daily with a specially developed disinfectant for this purpose.

Growing Healthy Pullets
 You can not grow healthy pullets and permit them to run on contaminated ground. Any ground upon which chicks have been running in any number the past three years or four years is contaminated. There is no practical way of raising chicks on clean ground, unless on a large farm, where only a few chicks are raised each year, in movable houses, moved each year, using the four-year system. There is no practical way, as far as we know now, of disinfecting ground to kill germs, except by not raising any chicks on it for at least two years. Worms and coccidiosis in pullets transform an otherwise profitable pullet into a positive money losing pullet. The wise idea is to prevent them from becoming infested, rather than treating them after being heavily infested. Such treatment, even though it may accomplish its purpose, leave the pullets far from first class condition. Don't forget that. A pullet once heavily infested with worms or coccidiosis, even after later apparently cured, will never again be as good a pullet as she would have been had she always been kept free from this disease and parasites. The idea is to raise them under such conditions so they will not become infested.

Raising Your Turkeys
 What I have said above, means even more to the raising of turkeys. Read it again carefully. Turkeys appear even more to be subject to these troubles, and if you can not raise them on clean ground, keep them in doors at least first 6 to 10 weeks and follow above sanitation suggestions.

HOW BIG IS TEXAS?

A Texarkana newspaper gives the following statements as to the size of the State of Texas:
 When you settle down behind the wheel or handlebars of your favorite vehicle for a vacation trip from Texarkana to El Paso, get settled good—for do you know that Texarkana is closer to the capitals of 15 states than it is to that western border of Texas?
 You must know that Texas is a big State and El Paso a "fur piece" from Texarkana when you stop to consider that the following capitals are closer: Tallahassee, Fla.; Atlanta, Ga.; Nashville, Tenn.; Frankfort, Ky.; Indianapolis, Ind.; Springfield, Ill.; Des Moines, Iowa; Jefferson City, Mo.; Lincoln, Neb.; Topeka, Kan.; Oklahoma City, Okla.; Little Rock, Ark.; Baton Rouge, La.; Jackson, Miss.; and Montgomery, Ala.
 It has also been established that Dalhart, Texas, in the extreme northwest of the Texas Panhandle is closer to North Dakota than to Brownsville, Texas, and nearer to six State capitals—Santa Fe, New Mexico; Denver, Colo.; Cheyenne, Wyo.; Lincoln, Neb.; Topeka, Kan., and Oklahoma City, Okla.
 El Paso is closer to Los Angeles, Calif., than to Beaumont and Port Arthur, Texas.

It was a few years after the close of the war between the States, in 1870, that Mr. Scarborough as a young man left the home of his parents in Mississippi. In 1883 he was instrumental in the organization of the First National Bank and became its first cashier.
