lence in death was more impressive than even his own hand could have described. Mother, the wife of his bosom, whom we had always looked upon as delicate and high-strung and for whom we kids felt great concern, was the calmest of the lot.

No more will he address the baby boy as "Dugan," "Sport," or "Professor"—terms used throughout his lifetime subconsciously reflecting the mood of the moment.

From the appellation he used we learned, in our younger days, to hurry, worry or scam. To the last he never lost his sense of humor.

Personally we feel that he has left us a precious heritage in being "Bill's boy," a term about which we were touchy in the impetuosity of our callow youth.

National Defense Calls for Skilled and Semi-Skilled Labor

Because national defense calls for skilled and semi-skilled labor, many who otherwise could be utilized in the defense program either are without jobs or in lower paid classifications.

The national defense training program is paid for by the federal government, offering them opportunity to become employable in industries handling national defense contracts.

Men are being trained upon the recommendation of the Texas State Employment Service and the Works Progress Administration.

Placements are handled by the Texas State Employment Service. The placement record in Texas has been about 85 per cent. Texans in the eligibility class who fail to take advantage of this free instruction placing them in a position for substantial earnings are losing a valuable opportunity.

W. P. A. Project to Index Naturalization Records Completed

The W. P. A. certified national defense project to index naturalization records has been completed in the Hamilton county courthouse, having located 388 recordings.

All records in the courthouse which might contain naturalization proceedings were thoroughly searched by the W. P. A. workers. All proceedings found will be included in a statewide index to be prepared for the immigration and naturalization service of the department of justice.

Both aliens seeking citizenship and naturalized citizens will be saved delay and embarrassment by not unnecessary court action.

The monthly Workers Meeting of the Hamilton County Baptist Association will be held with the Indian Gap church Monday, June 9, according to announcement from Rev. Alvin Swindell.

The general subject will be "Great Themes About the Church." Other periods in the program will be as follows:

Taken to Hospital

E. H. Randals was taken to Stephenville Hospital Wednesday afternoon in a Barrow ambulance, suffering from what has been diagnosed as bronchial pneumonia.

Friends and relatives who visited him Thursday said he was a little better, and that his fever had come down. If the fever can be kept down it is thought that he will recover in a short time.

To the Editor

Austin, Texas, June 2, 1941. Dear Mr. Editor:

Following the President's talk on Tuesday, I have come to the conclusion that it is my duty to call on the citizens of Texas to double their efforts to aid America.

We are going to have a big bill to pay in order to protect this land we love so well—and it will be worth every cent it costs to know that our country and those we love are safe.

Placements are handled by the Texas State Employment Service. The placement record in Texas has been about 85 per cent. Texans in the eligibility class who fail to take advantage of this free instruction placing them in a position for substantial earnings are losing a valuable opportunity.

Storm's Bolt Hits Station, Misses Agent

C. E. Latham, M-K-T relief agent sent to Hico Sunday to replace H. Smith whose retirement took effect that day, considers himself fortunate that he moved out of the way of lightning which struck that station the next evening.

Mr. Latham, who says he didn't actually dodge the stroke, was sitting at a table near the front of the office about 5:10. He got up to go across the room. A bolt of lightning flashed within a foot or two of the spot he had left immediately afterward, missing the other end of the office where he was by that time.

Frank Haggard of Cisco, scheduled to arrive the latter part of the week as regular Katy agent at Hico, will relieve Mr. Latham, who has been assigned to Dublin as relief agent. He has been with the Katy at Austin for the past eight and one-half years.

Workers' Meeting

The monthly Workers Meeting of the Hamilton County Baptist Association will be held with the Indian Gap church Monday, June 9, according to announcement from Rev. Alvin Swindell.

Mrs. C. H. Douglass Of Oklahoma City Buried Here Tuesday

Funeral services for Mrs. C. H. Douglass, long-time resident of this community, but residing at the time of her death in Oklahoma, were held at the Methodist church Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock, conducted by the pastor, Rev. Floyd W. Thrash.

Mrs. Douglass, born Laura Segrest, was born in Hico, Texas, June 1, 1885. She was married to C. H. Douglass on Nov. 6, 1907.

She is survived by her husband; two daughters, Mrs. D. R. Taylor and Miss Charlene Douglass; and one granddaughter, Dorothy Lee Williams. She is also survived by a brother, C. B. Segrest, of Hico, and a sister, Mrs. V. Hawes, of Hico.

A host of relatives and friends mourn her going and came to the services to pay tribute to her memory.

Visiting In Smokies

Mr. and Mrs. D. R. Proffitt and son, James Lee, and Mr. Proffitt's sister, Mrs. Grace Appleby, and her son, Leland, left early Sunday morning for a visit with relatives in Newport, Tennessee, and a trip which will take them through a number of interesting places.

Cards received in Hico announce their arrival in different points in Alabama and Georgia. They expect to be gone about 15 days. The force at the Magnolia Service Station Thursday said that they were "snowed under" but that they would "have to stay that way if Ray stayed out the planned duration of his visit."

Youths Wanted Now For Service In U. S. Marines

Although the U. S. Marines are offering younger men an opportunity to enlist in the Marine Corps Reserve for the duration of the national emergency only, the larger percentage of them are enlisting in the regular Marine Corps for a period of four years.

Since the lowering of the minimum age limit from 18 to 17 years, last month, many young men of 17 have taken advantage of this opportunity of enlisting in the Marines. However, Major O'Leary pointed out, while many more would like to enlist, their parents will not sign their consent papers, which is required for their men who have not reached their 21st birthday.

The parents of all young men who are interested in the Marine Corps, are particularly invited to visit their nearest Marine Corps recruiting station and let the recruiting officer explain the many advantages offered.

Family Size Farm Ownership Is Aim Of F. S. A. Program

Tenant purchase loans, for which applications are now being taken at the Farm Security Administration office, are intended to help worthy tenant farmers to buy family-size farms, according to Mr. Guy Shively, farmer and chairman of FSA's tenant purchase committee.

Farmers who practice "live-at-home" farming will be first choice for these long-term, low-interest loans. This means that the family that raises most of its food and the livestock and poultry feed on the farm will have the best chance.

The Erath County tenant purchase committee, of which Mr. Shively is chairman, helps to choose families to whom these loans are made. It also helps to value the farms which they buy.

Families to whom these loans are made pick out the farm they hope to buy and they are not restricted to fully-improved farms. The loan may include funds to build or repair the home, barn, and for other improvements.

Other members of the tenant purchase committee are W. E. Miller, Star Rt., Stephenville, and C. L. Yarbrough, Rt. 1, Bluffdale. Applications for these loans may be made at the Farm Security office located in City Hall, Stephenville, Texas.

Special Service At Baptist Church Next Sunday Night

The service will be held at 8 o'clock and the pastor states that everyone is invited.

Ray Cheek Injured

Ray Cheek, carried to the Dublin Hospital Tuesday night following injuries received when his car left the road between Carlton and Dublin during a heavy rain, was expected home Friday if his condition continued to improve.

Ray's left arm was badly lacerated from broken glass from the car window. He was pretty weak Wednesday when visited by his employer, H. E. McCullough, and Dr. H. V. Hodges, having suffered considerable loss of blood. Ray's many friends here hope that he will not have any serious permanent results from his injuries.

Fishermen, Walk

L. A. Powledge, whose farm along the Bosque is always the congregating point for fishermen of all ages, requests the News Review to state that owing to the condition in which the overflow left his farm no one is going to the river in cars now.

Mr. Powledge requests that those wanting to fish leave their cars at the road and walk down to the river. He says they are welcome as long as they are willing to do this.

Keeping Up With TEXAS

Snow Joke to Amarillo. The first day of June brought snow to Amarillo. The weather observer said he had "six witnesses" that a small amount of snow preceded a rain and hail-storm.

Texas Senate Votes to Adjourn. The Texas Senate Tuesday set June 7 as the day for sine die adjournment of the Legislature. By a voice vote, the Senate adopted a concurrent resolution providing for adjournment on that date, next Saturday. Woman Flies Alone. Mrs. Alford Wolverson of Groesbeck became the first woman pilot to solo in Limestone County when she took a Cardwell flying school plane up alone recently from the Mexia airport. Mrs. Wolverson's flight came after eight and one-half hours of dual instruction. She is taking the flying course under the civilian pilots' training program through Westminster College. Her husband, who also is a flying enthusiast, is taking more advanced training and made his first solo cross-country flight Sunday.

Texas Peanuts Under Quota. Although peanut growers in Texas failed to give the two-thirds majority in favor of the national peanut marketing quota at the referendum held on April 26, the growers as a whole in the fourteen states participating in the referendum approved the national quota program by a vote of 62,462 to 9,388, and the program was thus approved by the required two-thirds vote. The vote in Texas was 3,827 in favor of the quota and 2,283 against.

New Speed Law Unconstitutional. It's still against the law to drive more than 45 miles an hour—despite legislative attempts to raise the maximum to 60 miles. At least, that's the opinion of the Attorney General's Department. It was announced Tuesday. The department held the law unconstitutional because of a technical defect in its caption. A bill was introduced in the House to correct the caption, and no opposition to it was anticipated.

Returns From Long Trip. G. A. Holland, former mayor of Weatherford, passed through Fort Worth Tuesday en route home after a 3,000-mile automobile trip on which he delivered four rattlesnakes to the Washington, D. C. zoo. The rattlesnakes which he gave to the Washington zoo were captured by Holland in the hills of Parker County.

Hood River officers informed Cariker they checked up the suspects on a circular sent out from his office. Wear Alexander, farmer of Boyce, was the victim of the swindle.

The ROAD to BAGDAD

by GEORGE JIBBS

CHAPTER II

SYNOPSIS
On board the Orizaba, Camilla Dean, beautiful American girl, has made the acquaintance of Joseph Asad, wealthy Syrian, and Michael Gay, American engineer going to the East to establish a bus line over the desert from Damascus to Bagdad. She becomes especially interested in Ronald Barker, who comes aboard at Marseilles, because the night before she has heard three men whispering outside her window that he must be put out of the way before the boat reaches Alexandria. Camilla meets Barker, tells him what she has heard and, to satisfy her curiosity, he tells her that he is an American educated at Oxford and now much interested in the Palestine situation.

"What I can't understand," Barker told Camilla, "is how people aboard the ship found out that I was expected. You see, I was not on more deliberately, east of Suez I am not generally known as Ronald Barker, but as someone quite different."

He paused and she waited, but he said nothing more for a while. Evidently he thought that he had sufficiently gratified her curiosity.

"The name of Barker was the one they used," she said experimentally. "It's quite extraordinary, because I left England at a few hours' notice and flew direct to Marseilles just in time to catch the Orizaba."

"Only a wireless from London could have preceded you," she suggested. "Your enemies must have received a message before the ship reached Marseilles."

"Excellent. I shall have to give you a letter to Scotland Yard or, better still, take you on as my assistant in this particular job."

"How thrilling! Will you?"

"At any rate you can help me find from the purser the list of those who came aboard at Marseilles. I'll have to get permission about private wireless messages."

The conversation with Mr. Diston, the purser, who examined the list of passengers for them, revealed little. The people who had come aboard at Marseilles were a party of three American tourists, a Spanish Assyriologist bound for Beirut, and an Armenian rug dealer of Paris and Damascus. The latter, the purser said, was an old man named Temyan, utterly respectable, who traveled on the Orizaba back and forth twice a year.

"We'll have a talk with Monsieur Temyan," Barker said.

"Won't you let me in on the secret if you find anything in the wireless room?"

He laughed. "I've always said that the only requirement for a good detective or secret service operator was a devouring curiosity and a considerable amount of impudence."

"Of which do you think I have the most?"

"It's difficult to say."

He wanted to be polite to her, for the sheer force of her magnetic interest had made him say a lot of things he had had no intention of saying about himself. She had been a great help to him, put him on his guard against men who were bent on mischief, and he was very grateful to her. On his way down from the wireless room he decided to take her still further into his confidence.

And so, when he joined her again on deck, he brought out the wireless messages. "The East has taught me fatalism, Camilla Dean. I wonder if you'd care to look at these wireless codes I've picked out."

"Thrilled!"

"This one is to the Spanish Assyriologist Jose Serrano and bears the London mark." He handed her a typed message and she moved to the light of the smoking room window. "Dog, Orizaba, Sagauche. Three words, that was all."

"Can't make a thing out of it," he said. "Can you?"

Camilla puzzled. "Rather clever, if it means anything. Have you any ideas?"

"None. It's too short unless it's in twisting the letters."

She squinted at it up and down and sideways. "No good. Do you know who Serrano is?"

"Yes. He was pointed out to me by my steward. Small man, stubby brown beard and bald head—walks with a stick."

"And the other message? To whom was it addressed?"

"A man named Mohammed Ali. But the queer thing about it is that there is no such person as Mohammed Ali aboard the Orizaba."

"That's a swell idea. Didn't the wireless man know to whom it was delivered?"

"That's the second queer thing about it. He tried one or two people, but he didn't succeed in delivering it. He showed it to me just because it was queer."

He handed the message to her and she read, "Koran embrassez royale antique khorassan. What on earth can that mean?"

"Did you read it backward? No, that doesn't make sense. The first letters? K-E-R-A-K. That spells

Quickly Camilla said, "And, now it is time to turn to—"

Kerak. That doesn't mean a thing to me either. Kerak. What's Kerak? It might be Arabic."

He tried to keep the look of interest out of his eyes but she did not miss it. "You've discovered something. What is it?"

"Nothing. Nothing at all." She peered at him keenly.

"Kerak," she said again, frowning. "Kerak. I remember now—here on the ship an article about Syria in a magazine. In the ship's library. El Kerak! I have it! A bandit who roams east and south of the Lebanon Mountains, terrorizing the natives. This article said he was a kind of oriental Robin Hood, little better than a thief and an assassin, but with moments of great generosity."

"Did it say that?"

"It's curious," she gasped. "Wait a moment!"

And before he had time for a word in reply she had darted into the companionway.

In the corner of the saloon were the bookcases and magazines. In a few moments Camilla had found what she had come for, a copy of the Geographic Magazine for the month of July of the previous year. An article by an American newspaper man. She skimmed the pages rapidly. Pictures of the Lebanon Mountains, views of Damascus, camps of Bedouins . . . and then—here it was—El Kerak, a photograph of the Syrian bandit of the flap of his tent; another one, a better one, a candid shot in the full blaze of sunlight as he was mounting his horse, possibly taken without his knowledge. He wore the conventional flowing white robes and kaftiyeh, a small mustache and an incipient beard. She gave a gasp of surprise and rose, aware that Barker had followed her from the deck outside and now stood beside her chair.

"Mr. Barker, I've made a discovery. Please look. Pictures of Ronald Barker in masquerade. Excellent pictures and the likeness unmistakable."

He took the magazine from her hand, turned over the pages and then, "Astounding resemblance, isn't it?" he said, almost too carelessly this time.

"Very. The mask is off. Admit it, Ronald Barker."

He seemed really disturbed and she had a good deal of quiet pleasure from her triumph. He took the magazine from her fingers again, looked at the pictures, then, putting it under his arm, turned toward the door of the gangway.

"Come," he said quietly. "Let's go out on deck again. Do you mind?"

They reached the rail where they could continue their conversation beyond the reach of listeners. "I suppose I might attempt to carry out what I'm afraid you've got the goods on me as we say in the U.S.A. I'm sorry you've found me out. You see, I've moved about in Syria and Palestine with the utmost freedom and now, possibly, I'll have to find a new personality, a new identity."

"I hope that won't be necessary," she said quietly. "We'll end that story now." She took the magazine from his fingers and dropped it into the sea. He glanced at her and then muttered the one word, "Thanks."

"But you've got the story; I may as well tell you. There's a price set on El Kerak's head by the French and by the British—"

"—which they will never have a chance to pay."

"Exactly," he finished.

There was a silence made more definite by the wash of foam and the rising wind. "Well," he said at last, "what are you going to do about it?"

"What can be done about it? Nothing. And what's the answer to Kerak? It's just a huge joke. Who is Mohammed Ali?"

"He may be anyone. It's a name as common in Mohammedan countries as John Smith is in the United States."

"And the wireless operator could tell you nothing?"

Barker shook his head. "He received the message and tried to deliver it, thinking it was a mistake. But Mahmoud Dacod, the only person with a similar Egyptian or Arabic name refused to receive it."

"And the sender?"

"A certain James Robinson; address, Harwich Crescent, London, England. That ended the investigation."

"Well, what's the answer?"

"The answer is that you're not the only one who knows my secret. The answer is that someone in London, perhaps someone aboard the Orizaba, knows who the bandit El Kerak is and who I am."

He turned inboard slowly and faced her with a gravity she had not been aware of before. He took her by the elbows and held her firmly. She did not resist him. Indeed, she could not. For there was both strength and gentleness in his grasp. She felt herself drawn closer to him—closer to him because of that service.

"I have been a fool," he said. "I have talked to you as I have never talked before to a woman, letting you guess secrets that are a part of my work in Syria. Why did you make me talk? Don't you realize that if you tell what you have heard you may ruin me?"

"I'll never tell—Your secrets are safe with me."

"If you mean what you say, give me a pledge of your loyalty. Kiss me on the lips. It is the only thing that will do."

His grasp seemed to grow gentler as well as firmer and she slowly yielded. It was a kiss that seemed to have a more poignant meaning than the mere spirit of a pledge or a threat, and she forgot for the moment in that dim corner of the deck where they stood that it was only the day before yesterday that she had met him. Slowly she drew back, her head bent in a sudden realization of what had happened to her. He made no effort to hold her again, just stood, his arms at his sides.

She turned away for a moment to regain her composure and found that she was more shaken than she had thought.

"I," she gasped, and then, as words failed her, thrust forth a hand—the hand of friendship. "I—I won't betray you," she said.

He had taken her hand quickly, but she broke away from him and moved, smiling, into the moonlight which seemed suddenly to make things clear to them both. It was the assurance of her smile that restored him to sanity. And her level brows and calm gaze seemed to convince him that she was not of those who kiss and tell.

"Don't you understand," she asked, "that I couldn't betray you now?"

He was silent, aware of a fine moment. "Thanks," he said.

And that was all of the incident. Extraordinary for Camilla—a mixture of the madness of the East of which he was a part and a kiss of earnest assurance that made the affair and its results inevitable.

"And now," she said, "it is time to turn in."

"Until tomorrow."

Camilla and Barker walked aft just as the figure of Nicholas Stephanov, the friend of Joseph Asad, emerged from the shadow where he was pacing the deck and smoking a last cigarette.

At the companionway to her stateroom Ronald Barker left her. "Good night," he said gently.

"Be careful," she whispered.

He laughed lightly and disappeared in the shadows.

Camilla went into her stateroom, closed and locked the door but did not switch on the light. She sat on the edge of her bed looking out of the French window and listening. Familiar sounds—the room steward fussing around with his dishes, the heavy tread of a deckhand of the mid-watch going the rounds, the ship's bell striking twice. She looked at her watch—one o'clock.

WITH THE COLORS

[The following letter from a former Hico boy in the service of his country is published in the belief that it will be interesting to our readers. Others having similar letters are invited to submit them for publication—ED.]

Lowry Field, Colo., May 8, 1941.

Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Hardin, Hico, Texas.

Dear Mother and Dad:

I just got your letter a while ago and was so glad to get it. I sure wish I could have got to come home, but I couldn't. I am not going to try to come home any more until August, when it looks like I may get a furlough.

I had a pretty nice time yesterday, when I went to Albuquerque, New Mexico, in a B-18 bomber. I stayed there about three hours. We flew 15,000 feet going over there, and we flew over Pike's Peak. It sure was pretty. All of the mountains were covered with snow. It took us three hours to go over there. There were three B-18 bombers that came back together. We flew formation. It sure did look pretty, flying side by side. We got about one-third of the way back and ran into a storm, then we got lost. We had to go to 25,000 feet to get out of the worst part of the storm. The other two planes went some other way—we don't know which—they all just scattered out to keep from maybe colliding with each other. I nearly froze to death, and it makes you feel shaky. The lightning just played all over the planes. We had to fly 25,000 feet all the rest of the way. Then we thought we were over Lowry Field, but we were lost. The clouds were right on the ground. The pilots told us all to put on our parachutes for the gas was getting low. There were seven of us on the ship. I put my parachute on and got to the back door so just in case he did give the word I could be the first one to jump. We flew about a hundred miles east of Denver and finally got an opening to where we could see lights under us. Then we flew pretty low. They were afraid to come through the clouds near Denver on account of flying in the mountains and taking a chance on cracking up. It took us five and one-half hours to get back. We finally landed at nine o'clock at night. Just as we got near the runway the engines went dead. I nearly passed out, but we landed on one engine and made it O. K.

I will tell you lots of things that happened on that trip when I get to come home. I think I got all the riding I want for a while.

Well, I can't think of anything else to write now, so answer real soon for I love to hear from home. Lots and lots of love.

Your son,

LUCIAN H. HARDIN.

the ROAD AHEAD

Old Man Texas is today looking ahead and planning.

Beside the great farming and ranching country which Texans have built, he sees a new industrial empire here.

Already the start has been made. Some industries, such as petroleum, are now showing what can be done to utilize Texas' vast natural resources. Today this industry refines with Texas labor over four-fifths as much oil as the State produces. Its products make up nearly one-half of all Texas manufacturing. Altogether petroleum provides the living for almost one-sixth of our people.

But this is only a beginning.

Texas has many other raw materials, unexceeded by any other State. Texas has in oil and gas the cheap and dependable fuel supply essential to industry. Texas is the gateway to Latin America, our new foreign market.

Each new industry means more jobs. It makes added tax values for our State and local governments, bigger payrolls for our workers, and greater prosperity for you and every other Texan.

TEXAS MID CONTINENT OIL AND GAS ASSOCIATION

YOU'RE MY BOSS

From general manager on down, our entire organization is trained and equipped with the single object of making your electric service as convenient, useful and trouble-free as possible.

We know that it takes more than generating equipment, power lines, poles and transformers to provide good electric service. It takes understanding, cooperation and a genuine interest in the customer's needs. That's why my company conducts a continuous program of employee education... why we hold meetings at regular intervals to discuss ways and means of serving you better... why we are paid for submitting suggestions that will result in more efficient operations.

Your good will is our most valuable asset and we know that we can hold it only so long as we give you satisfactory service and make it easy and pleasant for you to do business with us. If at any time our service is not all that you think it should be, we welcome your constructive suggestions. You're the boss and we want to please you.

PEACE AND THE CHURCH

It seems quite possible that when peace is finally restored to the world, it will be accomplished by the church leaders of this and other countries.

This is indicated by the intelligent attitude toward the complicated problem of a future durable peace which is taken by the Federal Council of Churches in a memorandum issued to guide churches throughout this nation in their discussions of the subject.

The council emphasizes that any permanent peace depends upon our government and the governments of other countries studying all proposed legislation on foreign trade with the view of determining its effect upon other nations.

The memorandum urges recognition of the fact that in this shrinking world "what one nation does in relation to its raw materials, markets, immigration or money, may vitally affect millions elsewhere" and that a "sovereignty system which accords the right to use economic power irresponsibly has become an anachronism no longer consistent with peace."

Because of the calm, fair-minded attitude assumed by most church leaders, they have proven in many instances that they can achieve agreement on issues which would violently disrupt any conference of politicians or diplomats.

The possibility of the churches being able to achieve a durable peace of which the governments themselves seem incapable is summed up in the federation's memo with this statement: "The church has actually demonstrated a capacity to function internationally which peculiarly qualifies it to contribute toward the healing of the nations."

SACRIFICE A LA 1941

So far, this "great sacrifice" which the government says we are going to be called upon to make has been about as much of a hardship as it is for a woman to give up her winter hat for Lent.

The farmers, who thought they would be called upon to "give until it hurts," are now slated to be on the receiving end of more government aid than they have ever had before.

Labor, which feared it might have to postpone its ambitions for pay increases, has been left free to use defense production as a lever for forcing such increases.

The white collar employees, who thought they might have to begin wearing hair shirts, are finding that defense means more opportunities and better pay.

The industrial leaders, who still feel they are the ones who are going to be called upon to do the real dollar sacrificing, are at least having a "respite before taxes" which is giving them an opportunity to store up a reserve for a rainy day.

We know heavy taxes are coming, cutting of government expenditures is coming, scarcity of some products is coming, price increases are coming and other sacrifices are due soon.

But when you go to a good movie, there's no sense in not enjoying it thoroughly because the previews of Coming Attractions aren't good.

This WEEK IN WASHINGTON

Washington (NWNS)—The largest radio audience which ever listened to any program is believed to have heard the President's friskside "chat" to which reactions have poured in from all over the world.

The President's plea to the American nation has not, however, consolidated opinion in Washington, where the debate between interventionists and isolationists has become more furious than ever, with the isolationists realizing that they are in the minority but still arguing that they have the backing of the American people who are opposed to a fighting war.

There are many congressmen who have not given a clear expression of their opinion on the great issues at stake, some of them waiting for a further insight into public opinion and others waiting for the authentic report on the present state of our defense program which the President is scheduled to make in the next few days.

The President is required by the lend-lease law to make a report on the progress of our defense program every 90 days. The report which he is now preparing will cover its progress up to about the twentieth of May. It is expected that the report will not specify the kind of materials already sent to Britain, but will give information on just how many dollars worth of goods actually have arrived in Great Britain.

A large number of government officials are following the progress of our defense program with keener interest than the developments of the war in Europe itself, realizing that whatever part we play the safety of this nation depends on a miracle of production only possible by a united effort of the whole nation.

The shipyard strikes on the Pacific coast, brought about by a comparatively small group of machinists who were seeking a wage increase from $1.12 an hour to $1.35 an hour, have resulted in angry demands from people in every state for congress or the President to take action to make such a condition impossible in the future.

Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the maritime commission, proposed the use of federal forces if necessary to bring about a resumption of work in the shipyards and other navy officers have suggested that the yards be taken over by the government.

Plainly worried over our shipping situation, Admiral Land, who recently gave out figures which were interpreted to show that few ships carrying goods to Britain were being sunk, explained in a speech to navy men, "No matter how the figures are given out, so many believe they are interpreted as misinterpreted, our shipping service is serious to the point of desperation. We need ships, ships and more ships."

Emphasizing the scope of the production job we have, Mr. Stacy May, chief of the Bureau of Economic Warfare, and other OPM officials, this can only be done by putting every community in the nation to work on defense production.

Civilian organization which has again and again been referred to by government leaders as vital to the success of our defense program, but which has not been adequately defined or crystallized, has been stimulated by New York's Mayor La Guardia, recently appointed by the President as director of civilian defense. His job is to mobilize the people so that all of us can work to support the defense program.

Most officials in Washington consider the very mayor to be a good man for the job, because of his great energy and organization ability, but there is considerable objection to permitting this important job to be a part-time job. Mr. La Guardia, in addition to his new appointment, is continuing his time-consuming occupation as the mayor of the largest city in the world.

THE HOUSE OF HAZARDS . . . MacArthur

By LYTLE HULL Our South American Trade

One of the big fear-squawks we hear from our business men nowadays is that a Nazi-dominated Europe will take away all our South American trade. What South American trade? Look in any reference book and compare our trade with that continent to Europe's trade with it prior to this war. Here are a few enlightening figures: In 1938 we had 17.6 per cent of Argentina's import trade and 8.5 per cent of her exports; 34 per cent of Peru—imports 34.3 per cent, exports 26.8 per cent. In 1939 we had 31.1 per cent of Chile's imports and 30.5 per cent of her exports. With the smaller Latin American countries our trade percentages were fortunately a little higher. Not much of a showing with the one spot on earth where we should have been breaking our necks to build a trade which would have made us hemispherically self-supporting. The one spot on earth where—with a little business ingenuity in the past—we could now get everything we need which we don't produce at home.

The fault does not lie with the South Americans. It rests upon the shoulders of our own business men and shippers, who "didn't have time" to bother with developing the production of those less important wares which today we are beginning to need so badly. They only had time to invest themselves in the obvious moneymakers like coffee and nitrates and oil and precious metals, and they let the vast bulk of the trade go to the British Empire, Germany, Belgium, France, Italy, The Netherlands, and Japan.

Now, roughly speaking, a country can only buy the equivalent of what it sells. South America, let us say,

Successful Parenthood

LET CHILDREN SHARE HOME WORK

There are many hopeful signs that boys and girls are again thinking of learning in the old-fashioned sense of "a lamp to light the way to wisdom" rather than as a road map to material success. And they are being taught that only as the individual uses his gifts for the good of all is he realizing his true worth.

There is just as much emphasis on individual development as in the days when work and study were directed toward the goal of a big income. But the rewards and aims today's young people seem to have in mind are strikingly co-operative in nature.

That is why today's parents must bring up their children in a home atmosphere of shared responsibilities, of encouraging each child to find his own means of contributing to the happiness of all. The world he will live in will expect co-operation from him. He will be a misfit if he is unable to think of any but his own wants.

To guard against this do not make the child's wishes law in the family, for if everyone gives up to him he will naturally feel he is the most important person in the world. He must have his share of consideration, of course, but not the whole.

CANADA—OUR NEIGHBOR

Dominion's tobacco industry developed by Loyalists in Ontario is important contributor to national income

By MARTIN L. PETRY

TIME and again this correspondent, in discussing with Americans their sojourn in Canada, has found they are delighted with their visits but sometimes there is one complaint—of all things, the scarcity of American cigarettes. This does not mean that the Canadian smoke is not as good as ours but, like an avocado or an olive, a taste must be acquired for them.

Strangely enough, the wants of the American in Canada are easily gratified for in most parts of the Dominion, and particularly in Ontario, there are as many American products available as he finds in his own home town. With cigarettes, however, it is different for the tariff has virtually barred them and they are to be had in a few places only, limited in quantity and rather high in price. So the Canadian tobacco industry has flourished and cigarettes have been developed for the domestic taste.

Several Americans, training with the RCAF at Manning Depot in Toronto, recently told the writer that they had acquired a taste for the Canadian cigarette and now their only concern is what kind of a cigarette they would get overseas. It is amusing to find that the Canadian feels the same about the American cigarette—he is perfectly satisfied with his own brands. For brief visits Americans usually take their own as each traveler is permitted to pass the customs with 200 cigarettes, duty free, and incidentally, fifty cigars and two pounds of smoking tobacco in addition, if desired.

Canada's tobacco industry has become an important contributor to the national income, the total value of manufactured products totalling $90,600,000 in 1939, according to figures just released by the Department of Mines and Resources at Ottawa. For that year the consumption amounted to 7,571,800,000 cigars and 165,700,000 cigars and 34,400,000 pounds of other manufactured tobacco.

Saxon L. Johnson Among Enlistees in Navy From Dallas

Naval Training Station, San Diego, Calif., where he will receive recruit training before further transfer to a Navy trade school or ship of the fleet. Navy recruiters in the Post Office building at Waco where Mr. Johnson passed a preliminary examination for enlistment, stated today that men considering military service now have an opportunity to enlist in the Regular Navy for a career and retirement at an early age, or in the Naval Reserve for immediate active duty followed by release from active duty as soon after the emergency as their services can be spared.

AAA Secretary Corrects Statement Made Erroneously

Contrary to reports published widely over the state, the Agricultural Adjustment Administration will not make parity payments on castor beans. C. W. Hinyard, Hamilton County AAA secretary, has been advised by B. F. Vance, Administrative Officer in charge of the AAA in Texas, that erroneous reports have been circulated to the effect that he issued a statement that the AAA would make parity payments on castor beans.

"I do not know the source of the report," Mr. Vance said, "but it certainly was in error. At no time have I made such a statement. The AAA has no plans to make payments of any sort in connection with the castor bean production. The National Defense Commission has asked that the AAA relax restrictions on castor bean production, and that request has been complied with. At the same time, the AAA is not guaranteeing any fixed price on the sale of castor beans and is explaining to farmers that they may increase their production in accordance with AAA regulations, but they do so without any guaranteed price return."

The AAA official explained that the regulations are being amended so that "no deduction from payments will be made for excess soil-depleting acreage up to five acres or five percent of the farm's cropland, whichever is greater, when such excess acreage is due to the planting of castor beans. Additional information can be obtained at the county AAA office, Mr. Hinyard said.

HOME EC. SUMMER CLASS PLANS WORK FOR SUMMER

The Home Ec. summer class plans to do much work this summer. There are 25 in the class of two sections, one meeting on Tuesday and the other on Wednesday.

We have made new curtains and painted the kitchen space. We are rather proud of the fact that we paid for the paint, brushes, rods and the other things out of money we made from banquets.

Almost all other organizations in our school have had help from outsiders and we have earned the money for our activities.

At the present we are sponsoring skating in the gym. We still sell cold drinks, candy and gum also. Plans are to sell ice cream in the near future. So all of you bring a little extra change along when you skate.

Upon listening in on some of the conversations at class, we learned among other things the girls plan to quilt, can, sew, cook, build clothes closets, paper rooms, recover old chairs, paint different equipment and many other things too numerous to mention.

We wish to extend to each of you a cordial invitation to visit us on our Achievement Day, which will occur some time in early August.

Don't forget to come out and skate. CONTRIBUTED.

FASHIONS FOR SUMMER FUN

SUMMER fun depends upon cool clothes and cooling drinks—and here are four ways to enjoy yourself when old Sol's rays begin to beat down. They are the latest styles in summer sports togs, and a new streamlined 1941 Frigidaire with extra large capacity for bottled beverages. The new refrigerator is as definitely styled for beauty as are the costumes.

The squared off shoulder is still good in sportswear. At the left is a shorts outfit of rough, creamy linen worn with a softly tailored coat. The big patch pockets have loose, unstitched edges. The waistline is nipped in at the back with a jaunty bow of the same material. The pleats stop at the hips and the belt is of black patent leather with a soft white kid buckle. The draped bodice of Indian-patterned crepe has pearl buttons.

The girl in the center is wearing a striped brown and white chambray with short pleated skirt. A man tailored cotton sports blouse is worn under the casual, fitted jacket.

A new and feminine slack ensemble in chocolate brown linen is worn by the girl at the right. The smartly cut, highwaisted trousers join a snugly fitting bodice. Broad shoulder straps and a sun back are covered by a loosely hung jacket. Another attractive touch is the brown hand embroidery on the huge white linen pockets.

All three girls are wearing the consciously-clumsy clodhoppers so appropriately with casual sports costumes.

SEES BROTHER, TWO NEPHEWS, AND A GRANDDAUGHTER GRADUATED FROM STATE UNIVERSITY AT AUSTIN

There were lots of attendants at the graduating exercises of State University in Austin this week. But few of them had gone there for the purpose of seeing as many relatives get their degrees as did Mrs. O. E. Meador of Hico.

Mrs. Meador and her daughter, Mrs. R. Lee Roberson, and the latter's daughter, Joan, went to Austin Monday to visit in the home of Mrs. T. G. Reed, another of Mrs. Meador's daughters.

Mrs. Meador and Mrs. Roberson had the pleasure of being present at Texas University's graduation program, when Phineas Gilliland, Bill Gilliland, Bob Gilliland and Miss Helen Foote were among those receiving their degrees.

Phineas Gilliland is Mrs. Meador's brother; Bill and Bob Gilliland are her nephews; and Miss Foote is her granddaughter. Helen will remain in Austin working on her masters degree, after having received her B. E. A. She will be employed at the offices of the State Highway Department. Her many friends in Hico, where she has visited often, are highly elated at news of her progress, as well as being interested in the efforts of the other three graduates.

Revival to Continue All Next Week at Pentecostal Church

Evangelist Wilson Hebert has announced that his meeting will continue all this week and next week at the Pentecostal Church in Hico. The evangelist was called to Hillsboro Wednesday by the illness of his wife, but wired back Thursday morning that he would be back that night to continue his work.

Mrs. Dottie Lynch, pastor of the local church, requests publication of the following article about the meeting:

"There is a great interest stirred and the house is being filled each evening. Brother Hebert is delivering soul-stirring messages each evening at 8 o'clock. This revival is being favored with good old-time singing. The evangelist announced that Friday nights will be set aside to pray for the sick."

Rev. Hebert will speak on the following subjects during the meeting, such as:

- "The Light House and the Lost Sermans"
  - "Will God's Great Prophetic Clock Strike Again in the Near Future?"
  - "Will Hitler's Kingdom Be Crushed?"
  - "There is a Great Noise Coming Upon This Earth Soon."
  - "Strange Happenings Will Take Place Soon."
  - "Will the American Soldiers Be At the Battle of Armageddon?"
  - "Men Will Be Scorched With Great Heat Because They Refuse the Call of God."
  - "Who Shall Make the Great Eternal Failure?"
  - "If the Righteous Scarcely Be Saved, Where Shall the Ungodly And Sinners Appear?"
  - "What Will the Year 1943 Bring to This World?"
- All these subjects will be discussed by the evangelist each evening. Mrs. Lynch says, adding that the public is cordially invited to attend.

Relax Your Face, Neck, Shoulders

The physical laborer knows what hard work will do towards making the muscles of his back, arms and legs tense and tired, but very few students of office workers realize that the same fatiguing tension can affect the muscles of his face after any length of time spent in concentrated effort. Many of us who practice relaxation of all other parts of the body never give a thought to rest for wrinkled foreheads, pursed lips, neck and shoulders that have been held stiff and rigid. Yet a tired face and neck can make one tired all over.

Whenever you are faced with a particularly trying piece of work on closely printed pages or long rows of figures, take time out about once every half hour for limbering up the muscles of the face and neck, and resting strained eyes. Make a few ugly grimaces, stretching the mouth wide open and going through some chewing movements a dozen times or more. Stretch the neck forward and back, then from side to side until there is a distinct pull on the muscles along the shoulder line. Drop your chin on your chest, setting the jaws sag in complete relaxation. Rotate the head from left to right four times, then four times more from right to left. Open and close the eyes several times in rapid succession.

View Farm-Ranch Problems

CONG. LYNDON JOHNSON, hard-hitting and fast moving candidate for the United States senate, wasn't too busy in a 2,500-mile campaign swing last week to stop for a chat with A. S. Brokaw of Carlsbad, prominent Tom Green county stock farmer. Together they discussed Johnson's stand for all-out support of Pres. Roosevelt and his pledge to the farmers of Texas to work as senator for full parity prices on farm products, rural electricity for all Texas farmers and ranchmen.

HOUSE and HOME

Too often we put off doing over windows because we think it's going to cost too much, whereas perking up the windows is perhaps the least expensive of any household refurbishing. Then, too, we may have a problem window that discourages us, so we just go along and overlook a golden opportunity to make a most effective change. Perhaps you have a triple window in your bedroom that is the proverbial "thorn in the flesh." Try using just one pair of over-draperies with very soft full glass curtains. Choose colorful hangings with a soft hued background but with a couple of warm tones in the pattern. Then, instead of using the drapery material for the valence across the top of the windows, use ruffled swag valences if wide, as so often is the case, with the side ones narrow, tie back the center curtains and let only the end ones hang straight. This treatment softens the effect of the many straight lines produced by the woodwork around the windows. For a north room, choose cream-colored net rather than pure white. It is important, too, to choose a material that will drape in soft folds. Point d'esprit is a good choice.

As soon as the forsythia has finished blooming you can prune it. Cut back the old shoots and encourage as many new low-growing canes as possible by removing some of the old ones in the center and letting some light down through the top.

As evergreens start to make new growth they may be pruned. If the plants aren't overripe and you wish to keep them compact and in good shape, cut only the new growth back about one-half. Of course, if the trees have become overgrown they will have to be trimmed back two or three years' growth.

The under side of the leaves of those perennials susceptible to blight should be sprayed with Bordeaux mixture. Phlox especially needs attention. Lillies may be taken care of with sulphur dust. Delphinium, too, is benefited by a dusting of sulphur.

Hold the dust mop over a damp newspaper when you shake it in the house and dust won't fly back over the floor you have just cleaned.

The old adage "haste makes waste" certainly holds true in the home laundry. From the very minute the clothes are sorted for washing until the final putting away in chest and cupboard, methodical organization is of prime importance.

First of all take plenty of time to remove all stains. Through removal of stains before putting the articles into water insures spotless clothes. Keep the stain removers and the necessary utensils near the place where you sort the clothes.

The temperature of the first water in which the clothes are immersed is of great importance, too. Hot water "sets" some of the soil found in clothes, making it difficult and often impossible to remove. So, if you soak your clothes be sure that this water is tepid and then put them into a hot suds. If you put your clothes directly into the sudsy water, then this water should be just luke warm and the next water which is the first rinse water, hot.

If your water is soft you will not need a water softener but if you have hard water you will save soap if you soften it with soda or some other water softening agent. To determine the amount of softener, follow the directions on the package. It's a good idea to soften at least one of the rinse waters.

When you use bluing, remember that a little goes a long way. Never try to add bluing to water after clothes have been put in. Mix the bluing of your choice thoroughly with the last rinse water and then put in a few articles at a time, keeping them moving in the water. If they stand they may become streaked. A small amount of bluing does much to keep clothes snowy white.

Starching is the last step and an essential one. Use the starch just as hot as you can bear your hands in it. If you cover the starch as soon as it's made you will have little trouble from scum. A thin starch penetrates the fabric and gives a fine finish when the article is ironed. By measuring both starch and water you can be sure of having uniform results.

If you put clothes through the wringer straight, hang them on the line straight and fold them straight, when you take them off the line many wrinkles will be eliminated and you will save yourself many minutes of ironing time.

Stop, Look, Listen

Although I have always insisted that worry is a dangerous habit, there are times when I am inclined to think that a little serious worrying might have a wholesome effect upon some lives. Many men and women go along during their twenties and thirties with no thought for the years ahead. They break every known law of careful living, making no effort to stop short. During early life the ill effects of indiscretions may be only temporary because the powers of recuperation are stronger, so the careless ones continue on their merry way as if disease and broken health were things that could happen only to the other fellow—never to themselves.

Now fretting too much over one's physical condition is not a good thing, but the "why worry?" attitude can likewise be carried to extremes and often leads to gross negligence. A happy medium between some habit that can be easily corrected. Worrying about it won't cure the trouble, but it certainly will be a step in the right direction if it forces you to give a thought to the future and the rooting out of faults that exist in the present.

SIX INCH SERMON
REV. ROBERT H. HARPER

It was from the city where the disciples were first called Christians and where the first gentile church was formed that men went forth to inaugurate world missions. After Paul and Barnabas had returned from bearing a contribution from Antioch to the distressed saints in Jerusalem, and had brought John Mark with them, the Spirit in some manner spoke unto the church in Antioch and said, "Separate me Barnabas and Paul for the work whereunto I have called them." And after fasting and prayer the chosen two were sent forth.

Barnabas and Paul went to the nearest seaport and set sail for Cyprus, an island in the Mediterranean, 80 miles away. The war in the middle east has made the names of this and other islands in that region familiar to all. After the disciples had preached in the Jewish synagogue in Salamis, they went to Paphos. Sergius Paulus, the proconsul, desired to hear them, and when the sorcerer, Bar-Jesus, tried to prevent this, Paul condemned him as a son of the devil who would prevent men from hearing the truth. And the man was smitten with temporary blindness.

The proconsul, when he saw what was done, believed, "being astonished at the teaching of the Lord."

Remember that it is now possible for us, by apathy and indifference, to prevent men from hearing the truth. Certainly there is need of a greater missionary zeal and activity among all the churches. May we have such a rich experience of Christian grace that it will be our natural prompting to join in any way that we can in the spread of the Christian gospel!

Infantile Paralysis Can Be Expected to Increase in Summer

AUSTIN, Texas, May 29.—"Infantile paralysis can be expected to occur more frequently during the next three or four months," declared Dr. Geo. W. Cox, State Health Officer. "This disease is always more frequent during the hot months."

"The germ responsible for infantile paralysis is so small that it escapes detection even with the most powerful microscopes. The first symptoms are usually vomiting, headache, fever, stiffness of the neck, pain in the legs, irritability and drowsiness. Complete recovery may follow such an illness. In more severe cases, the germ penetrates the nervous system, resulting in paralysis of nerves controlling one or more groups of muscles. Some remarkable recoveries have been noted."

"Flies or other insects have not been demonstrated to play a part in the spread of this disease. Infection spreads from person to person with the droplets attending coughing and sneezing. Children and grown people who are healthy may be carriers of the germs. When present in epidemic form, about one child in a hundred is likely to suffer an attack."

"Early recognition and diagnosis are essential. The use of immune serum may be a factor in preventing paralysis. A period of complete rest is essential for muscles that are affected. If parents note any symptoms of illness in their children, the family doctor should be consulted at once."
