HICO, TEXAS, JULY 11, 1941

NUMBER 7

In training camps all over this nation, and serving their country on land and at sea all over the world are boys who like to hear from the folks at home while they are in the service.

Many of these boys are taking their old home papers, and if we may judge from what they tell us they always enjoy reading the news from home.

W. M. Marcum has a plan whereby those who are not getting the paper may be placed on the News Review mailing list through arrangements with the American Legion. In case you know of a boy who is not getting the home paper, see Mr. Marcum and give him the boy's address. For the present this offer is being made only on a limited basis, so if you think of a boy you want to receive the paper, see Mr. Marcum or some other Legion member at once.

The late Samuel F. Battershell, who died in January of this year, wrote a poem during the last war which appeared in a Cranfill's Gap paper Sept. 18, 1918.

Private Battershell served with the A. E. F. at Chateau-Thierry, Belleau Woods, St. Mihiel, and the Argonne Forest. His was not idle chatter when he penned the following lines, which W. M. Marcum secured from the late veteran's mother, Mrs. T. R. Battershell of Carlton, together with permission to reprint.

Private Battershell, were he living today, would be the first to maintain that today's American boys are just as patriotic, just as courageous, and just as willing to do their bit for the country they love. And by changing the word Kaiser to Hitler, we may be able to get some prediction of what they will think in case they are called upon to face an enemy as were the boys of '17 and '18.

TO WHIP THE KAISER

'Twas in the sunny month of June When at the front we landed To do our bit and make a hit, And hold the ground we stanced.

No Man's Land was quite a stream Between our land and his; Artillery guns were not far off For we could hear the shrapnel whiz.

One month passed by, and a few days more; Then the Germans thought they'd gain— They gathered in boats and large canoes, But the most of them were slain.

The hour was 12 o'clock at night, The fourteenth of July, The barrage was laid—on every spot You could see them fall and die.

At last the barrage was raised To let the Germans through, And a great surprise we had for them Was the Old Red, White and Blue.

The Third Division Regular boys Were the ones who met the front, But the enemy had our number Beat by about ten to one.

With the odds I've told about We stood and held our ground; The guns fired fast and long did last— All we could hear was our loud.

At last we got them started back, We kept them on the run, We crossed the stream, the No-Man's Land, And now we've got it won.

Up the hills, through the field You could see them all retreat, They who thought they'd drive the Yanks Were shown a great defeat.

When the war is won I'll go back home, If it is my good luck I will, But we are here to do our bit To whip old Kaiser Bill.

—Pvt. Samuel F. Battershell, Co. A, 9th M. G. Bn., 3rd Div. Reg. A. E. F., Sept. 18, 1918.

These are times when every citizen of the United States of America should do a lot of private thinking for himself or herself.

Doubtless this is already being done. Despite the apparent cheerful, care-free dispositions in evidence upon every hand, there are signs of seriousness in the air. No one can go on with "business as usual" when every newspaper he picks up—every radio broadcast he tunes in—bears tidings of the terrific struggle going on overseas.

And with the talk coming from our Nation's Capitol permeated with a distinct rumble of undertones of danger ahead for the nation itself, it would indeed be a witless simperton who continued to insist that the war does not concern us, and that by a program of isolationism we can escape the effects of the turmoil which has engulfed practically the whole of the rest of the world.

In these times we are caused to change our opinions frequently. Things we thought ten years ago, ten months ago, or even ten days ago do not still apply. We cannot kid ourselves. We are in a dangerous position as a nation. And when our nation is in danger, individuals are apt to undergo a change in their way of life and thinking and procedure to which they have been unaccustomed since the days of the last World War.

Realizing these dangers and the critical situation in which we now

Your Chance to Do Your Bit--

NATIONAL DEFENSE ALUMINUM COLLECTION

The Nation needs ALUMINUM for planes and other vital items faster than existing facilities can produce it.

Appeal is made to every home, every store, every factory—in short to every LOYAL AMERICAN to donate to National Defense every piece of Aluminum—used or new—that can be spared without being replaced.

No one is to get profit or penny out of this. Begin to select your donation now. The grand collection will be about July 21 to July 26. Watch for further announcement.

The Commissioners Court has been made responsible for the success of the collection in Hamilton County.

It is your first chance to serve in this National Emergency.

It is a small task, but the need is vital.

Do Not Fail Your Government!

Assisting in Revival

REV. JOHN P. CUNDIEFF, Iredell Pastor. Who is assisting in the Baptist revival now in progress.

Interest Growing With Every Service At Baptist Revival

The reporter for the revival meeting now at the Baptist Church states that interest is growing with every service. The outdoor seating arrangement provided on the lawn of the church was filled Wednesday night and more seats were provided Thursday.

The Rev. Mr. Dobson is an interesting evangelist and Mr. Cundieff is doing good work in leading the music.

Three prayer meetings are held each evening just prior to the preaching service—for men, women and young people, besides the booster band of boys and girls.

People from Hico's neighboring community are seen in the congregation every night, some of them coming even as far as Dublin. The meeting will continue to July 29.

find ourselves, one is torn between two manners of thought.

The first, encouraged by defeatists and based on reports of successes of our would-be aggressor which indicate that he is invincible, causes one to fear the battle has already been lost. This is a dangerous way of thinking—one from which we should carefully guard ourselves.

The second, instilled in us since birth, inspired by the Revolutionary sons who broke away from the shackles of tyrants and set up a democratic government on this continent, makes us anxious to publicly declare that the sons of today are just as strong, and just as patriotic as their forefathers.

As one individual, we should like to see an increase in the spirit of "America First." Not only that we want to see America come out ahead of its enemies in any engagement, but a firm belief that we are just as smart, our soldiers just as brave, and our system just as sound as that of any nation on the face of the earth.

This is the spirit that brought our boys through the last war triumphantly. And we predict a return of the same spirit generally just as soon as the occasion demands. Would that there were no crisis to call for this courage, but if we correctly interpret the signs of the times it won't be long before every individual citizen will lend a hand or be forced to give up some of the things he loves so well.

July Navy Quota Of 650 Largest In Peace-Time History

North Texas and the state of Oklahoma are expected to furnish 625 apprentice seamen and 25 colored men for mess attendants for the regular Navy and Naval Reserve this month. Navy recruiting officers at Waco said this week. All enlistments are voluntary, but men in Class I-A may enlist before being drafted for Army service.

The July quota of 650 is the largest peace-time Navy enlistment quota ever assigned this district which had 358 first enlistments and 19 re-enlistments during the month of June.

Enlistment ages for the regular Navy are from 17 to 31, and in the Naval Reserve from 17 to 36, except that men up to 50 years of age who are skilled in trades or professions may be enlisted in the Naval Reserve with petty officer ratings.

Naval Reservists are obligated to active duty only during period of National Emergency. They are offered a wide selection of trade training and while on active duty have same pay and promotional opportunities as men in the regular Navy.

Methodist Church

"The Christian Life A Profession" will be the sermon subject of Rev. Floyd W. Thrash next Sunday at 11 o'clock.

Sunday school and young people's services will be held at the usual hours. There will be no preaching at the evening hour.

Accompanied by a half dozen young people, Rev. Floyd W. Thrash is attending the Christian Adventure Camp for Methodist Youth at Mother Neff Park this week. Rev. Thrash is teaching a missions course in the school. More than a hundred young people were expected to be in the camp.

Gas Line Repaired

J. E. Cozzens, line superintendent for the Texas Southwestern Gas Company which serves Hico and community, returned to the company's headquarters at Bellville last Saturday after spending two weeks here supervising work on the pipe line from the wells north of town.

The work, in which he was assisted by a crew of company workmen and by Local Manager W. M. Marcum and others out of the local office, had been in progress for about two weeks. The line was reported to be in good condition, after the repairs which are made at regular periods.

Rodeo Rangerettes From McGregor to Visit Here Monday

A caravan for the purpose of advertising the McGregor Rodeo will arrive in Hico at 10:50 a. m. next Monday, according to announcement from O. T. McGinley, chairman of the advertising committee for the event. He is highly interested in having a crowd on hand to witness the program which will be staged in the few minutes of their stay.

"We will have with us the Rodeo Rangerettes, the Rodeo Rangers, a cowboy band, and a trick dog act, which we believe to be very good," McGinley said in a letter to the News Review this week. The boosters will come in from Iredell, and depart from here to Dublin, making stops at both those towns.

DEFENSE BOND QUIZ

Q. What is a U. S. Defense Savings Bond?

A. This Bond is proof that you have paid money to the United States Government for national defense. Your Bond bears interest at the rate of 2 1/2 percent a year, if held to maturity (ten years).

Q. Why should I buy Defense Bonds?

A. Because money talks. To dictators it speaks defiance. To friends of freedom, it says, "Here's my hand!"

NOTE—To purchase Defense Bonds and stamps, go to the nearest post office or bank or write for information to the Treasurer of the United States, Washington, D. C.

Mexico Tourists Hit Peak

Immigration officials at Laredo Saturday reported record-breaking Fourth of July tourist traffic to Mexico, during which 592 automobiles from various sections of the United States crossed the border with 2368 passengers. At one time Friday waiting tourist cars extended from the Mexican immigration office, over the international bridge and 24 blocks north on Laredo's Convent Avenue.

Reason For Late Returns

Why gathering of unofficial election returns are sometimes tardy is the vastness of Texas. Officials at one courthouse heard nothing from a precinct. They telephoned the election judge and were told he would bring in the returns when he came to town with the eggs. A Houston newspaper didn't want to wait on the eggs. It convinced the judge by telephone of the importance of quickly reporting unofficial returns.

School Apportionment $22.50

The State Board of Education Monday fixed the per capita apportionment for scholastics at the $22.50 limit, set by law. The board action, permitting the apportionment to remain unchanged from that currently in effect will mean that during the school year 1941-42 the State will contribute approximately $22,750,000 to the public schools. The State has about 1,500,000 scholastics between the ages of 6 and 18. Funds for the apportionment come from various tax sources. The board also discussed a text-book proclamation.

Skyscraper Closes Observatory

The Magnolia Building—Dallas' tallest structure—has closed its observatory to visitors as a national defense measure. Alvin C. McNabb, manager of the 30-story building, said "People were always wanting to go up there and take pictures. We didn't know whether they were friends or foes, so we concluded the best thing to do was to close the observatory."

Didn't Kill Kaiser, So Hit Hitler

Twenty-three years ago Dallas Technical High School teachers raised money to buy Liberty Bonds. World War I ended before the money was invested. Now it amounts to $1,250, including interest from the bank where it has remained. The money will be used to buy defense bonds.

Senators Still Drawing Pay

Texas Senators have voted themselves $50 a month during the legislative interim. It was disclosed Wednesday in the official Senate Journal for the session's last day which has just come off the press. The $50 may be used only for defraying expenses of the office of State Senator, such as stenographic, telephone, telegraph and postage expenses.

- Adjournment.

Making Elaborate Plans for Hico's 59th Annual Reunion and Celebration, Aug. 6, 7, 8, 9

"Cavalcade" Film to Be Brought Here For Free Showing

A Garland Adair, one-time newspaperman at Hico as well as at various other Texas towns, this week wrote S. J. Cheek, Reunion manager, that he would be glad to bring the "Cavalcade of Texas" film to Hico for the Reunion on the 6th opening night.

Adair, who is out with the film now, was contacted by Cheek in Austin some time ago, and promised to work Hico into his schedule if at all possible. It is usually shown in larger towns, but through special arrangements (perhaps inspired by Adair's nostalgic interest in Hico) the film will be brought here as an added free attraction for Reunion visitors.

"Cavalcade of Texas" is a Movietone film that tells the world the beauties and glories of Texas. It showed to capacity crowds at the New York World's Fair and at the World's Fair at San Francisco. It was prepared by masters of the show world under the direction of Karl Hobbeltzelle, noted theatrical man and patriot of Dallas who served for Texas as vice-chairman of the Centennial Commission.

The great picture is the best description of the State's industries and educational institutions that has yet been filmed. It is like touring Texas, with music and a message in keeping with the story of progress.

Facilities for erecting a screen and added seating arrangements at the park pavilion were going forward this week, and Cheek believes that the committee has been fortunate in securing this attraction for the people of this section, some of whom have seen the film in larger places, but to most of whom it will be new and interesting.

Highway Engineers Honored At Dinner Dance In Austin

Mr. and Mrs. Bryan Carl and Mr. and Mrs. Leo P. Cloud Jr. of Hico, and Mr. and Mrs. Joe T. Brown of Hamilton were in Austin Friday night as honor guests of the National Association of General Contractors for their annual dinner dance and floor show in the Capitol Ballroom of the Stephen F. Austin Hotel.

The formal affair was given in honor of members of the highway department and their ladies. Mr. Brown is resident engineer of Hamilton County and Mr. Carl and Mr. Cloud are associated with the Dean Word Construction Company engaged in construction of Highway 281 south of Hico.

At a meeting of the Association Friday afternoon, Dean Word was accorded the honor of being made vice-president of the Texas organization—Hamilton Herald-Record.

Operettas Popular

Dallas, July 8.—Gaining in favor each week, the operettas being produced at Fair Park Casino are establishing favorites among the singers and actors, and audiences are looking forward to the production of "Student Prince" which is scheduled for presentation during the week of Thursday, July 17.

Among the favorites established are Miss Nancy McLeod who is singing the title role in the current production of "Rose Marie." Another favorite who will return in the production of "Student Prince" is Robert Shafer who played the part of the Texas Ranger captain in "Rio Rita."

Supporting Shafer in "Student Prince" will be Miss Joan Roberts, who will be new to Texas audiences. Miss Roberts recently scored a decided triumph in "New Orleans," a new production presented as the opening operetta at the St. Louis Municipal Opera.

The Casino Gardens are becoming more popular each week, and the music played for the diners before the show, and the "after-theatre" dancing parties is proving one of the hits of the season.

Officer Transferred

Stephenville, July 9.—Sergeant Jack D. McCullough, who has been professor of military science and tactics at John Tarleton Agricultural College for three years, has been ordered to the Officers School at Fort Benning, Georgia. It was learned here today.

Concerning his work at the Stephenville college, Sergeant McCullough said, "This period I have spent at Tarleton is about the most enjoyable of my seventeen years of army life."

Indicating his popularity with the students, the Tarleton yearbook of 1941 was dedicated to Sergeant McCullough.

Reunion Speaker

COKE STEVENSON, Lieutenant Governor of Texas. Who will address Reunionists at City Park on August 7.

Governor-to-Be Has Definitely Promised To Come Second Day

When Coke Stevenson and S. J. Cheek got together down in Austin recently, Stevenson was lieutenant governor and Cheek duly appointed manager for Hico's 59th Annual Reunion. And when the lieutenant governor promised the reunion manager that he would come to Hico for an address on the second day of the Reunion, Aug. 7, he was grateful for the opportunity of meeting the citizens of this section at such a gathering. But when he comes to Hico he will in all probability come as the Governor of this great State through recent developments which have enhanced his political fortune.

Cheek, who served as assistant sergeant-at-arms in the State Senate while waiting for the annual Hico celebration, never lost sight of his main interest—that of seeing that the homefolks would have a program worth witnessing during the Reunion. He feels that he has been fortunate in securing a definite promise from the Governor-to-be that he will add his presence to the picnic gathering.

In order that the local public may know more about their coming visitor, whose dignified service to the State in various capacities have not placed him in the limelight, the News Review is reprinting the following feature article, written for the Houston Chronicle by Ed Rider, staff correspondent for that publication.

AUSTIN, July 2. Coke Stevenson of Junction, the lieutenant governor, will become governor of Texas as a result of the election of Governor O'Daniel as United States senator to succeed the late Morris Sheppard.

Elevation to the governorship, of course, would make any man happy. But Coke Stevenson's joy is dimmed, because Mrs. Stevenson, who has been in poor health for months, lies gravely ill in an Austin hospital.

Tall, Quiet Man

But let's take a glimpse at the next governor, a tall, quiet 6-foot man from the hills of West Texas. He's as rugged as those hills he loves so much. . . hills which have been his home all his 53 years.

Mr. Stevenson is an innately modest man. In his political and economic philosophy he is conservative.

He lives on an 8000-acre ranch 17 miles from Junction. He was born on a ranch in 1888, just 25 miles from his present home.

Nestling beside a peak in the high hills, Mr. and Mrs. Stevenson have built a beautiful two-story home, not in a month, not in a year.

Home Burned Down

Their old home burned down in 1923, while he was in his first session of the legislature, and he told Mrs. Stevenson then: "We'll build a new house that can't burn down." It is an enduring structure of stone, native stone from their own hillside, sturdy as a castle in old Scotland, from which the early Stevensons came to this country.

Year by year they added to their house, working with their hands, adding to its comfort and beauty. Mr. Stevenson's study is on the second floor, with windows on three sides, letting in light, and all shelves jammed with books—another lighthouse.

College man? No. He studied law. (Continued on Page 8)

Picnic Promises Fun and Interest From Opening to Finale

A program of events that will be interesting to young and old is being worked out for Hico's 59th Annual Reunion, dates of which were set early this year for August 6, 7, 8, and 9.

Decision was made early this week to have a mammoth parade at 2 o'clock in the afternoon of the opening day. S. J. Cheek, 1941 manager, who has made successes of so many of the past picnics, considered this an important part of the celebration, especially this year when patriotism is paramount. Cheek has named Grady Barrow chairman of the parade committee, which gives assurance that a lot of effort will be put into the affair. The chairman requests that anyone who has ideas about adding interest to the parade will confer a favor upon him by discussing them with him. He expects to name a number of other members of his committee in the near future.

Work started early this week at the park where the Spring flood waters from the Bosque did considerable damage, and Cheek promises that when the crew gets through with its work, in which the city is cooperating, the site will present a neater appearance and will take care of the crowds better than for the past several years.

A contract has been signed with LaDeane Attractions, of which Toke McFarland of Houston is manager. McFarland has kept in close touch with developments, and promises to bring to Hico an array of riding devices, shows and other entertainments that will even exceed in appearance and number those he brought here last year upon his first engagement in this section.

"I want the citizens in general to discuss with me their ideas about the Reunion," said Manager Cheek in taking the task in hand. "We have always enjoyed loyal cooperation, almost one hundred per cent, and with the same brand of loyalty again this year we can attract and entertain people from over a wide radius, who have learned to expect Hico to entertain them in the late summer of every year." Cheek pointed out that the enterprise was a non-profit arrangement, and that the reason for past successes was the spirit of cooperation displayed by the public in general.

The complete program of events will be carried in the big circular which will be off the press the latter part of this month. Announcements of added attractions which are planned but not yet definitely assured, will be made from time to time through the paper.

Everything Set For July 16 Opening of Valley Mills Picnic

Everything is in readiness for the opening of Valley Mills' 32nd Annual Reunion, according to H. G. Bishop, editor of the Valley Mills Tribune, who has requested the News Review to give publicity to the event. The picnic will start Wednesday night, July 16th, and will continue through Saturday night, July 19.

"New attractions have been booked for this year, carrying new shows and riding devices that have never exhibited here before," says Bishop, adding that "there will be a sensational free act each night of the celebration."

What came near being a fatal accident to some little boys happened here Saturday morning between 10 and 11 o'clock. Some little boys got a firecracker and put it in an old can that contained some gas which was behind the filling station run by Mr. Whitley. One of the boys lit the cracker. When it went off, there was a very loud explosion. It blew the top off the can and blew it off of the ground, sure made a blaze. The people close by went up to see what the trouble was. Everyone was badly scared. If the boys had not gotten out of the way, all would have been blown up. The explosion shook some houses and also some on the north side. I was glad that the boys got out safe. The little boys didn't know the danger of it. It is hoped they will not do this any more.

The Fourth passed off here very quietly. All the stores were closed and the merchants enjoyed the day off. Some went visiting and some remained at home. A good many went to Glen Rose.

TELLS ABOUT TRIP
Hamilton, Tex., July 5, 1941.

Dear Editor and Rollie:

I (Mollie Carpenter) it used to be, but now Mrs. J. J. Harvey) want to tell my old Hico friends about a trip Mr. Harvey and I and my son-in-law and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Billy Thomson, of Brownwood took to Oklahoma.

We went to Brownwood Saturday and the four of us left at 12 p. m. and 7 a. m. found us in Cordell, Okla. There was a homecoming of three old pioneer families there, the Creaswells, Hatchetts and Brownfields. I was one of the Creaswells. They have a beautiful park there. All brought basket lunches and we had plenty of iced tea and were so tired and hot we sure did enjoy it very much. It had been just 48 years since I had been to a picnic there. People and times have changed a lot, as there weren't any cars then.

The first person I saw was my brother, who lives in Long Beach, California. He was sure surprised to see me, as I didn't tell anyone I would be there. I saw some of my kin and some friends whom I didn't know, for it had been so long since I saw them last.

They have had lots of rain there. We saw several combines running on Sunday trying to save the grain between showers.

Old Texas sure looked good to us when we got home. There are so many nice shade trees here, and so few there.

Corn is later there than it is here; also gardens.

As I am in a hurry, I will quit for this time.

Sincerely,
MRS. J. J. HARVEY.

There's nothing mysterious about the way advertising works.

It's like the salesmen who go from house to house looking for customers.

Advertising does the same job on a larger scale.

It's quicker — reaches more people — at a lower cost per call.

In other words, it's a time saver, which means it's a money saver as well.

CHAPTER VII

SYNOPSIS
Charming Camilla Dean reaches Egypt on a pleasure tour with a party of other Americans. On the voyage she has many admirers, among them the wealthy Syrian, Joseph Asad who, as Camilla learns, is in reality Hassan Isar, a leader of fanatical Arabs in Palestine. On the boat too, she meets Ronald Barker, half American educated in England, known as El Kerak, mysterious leader of tribes opposed to Hassan Isar. Camilla accepts the attentions of Joseph Asad in order to obtain information helpful to Ronald Barker, and goes with Asad to view the Pyramids by moonlight. Eluding Asad, she goes out on the rocks to enjoy the quiet. There Ronald Barker appears in the costume of a native camel driver. He tells her he is going to Jerusalem where he hopes to see her later. The next day Camilla and Slim McManus, fellow tourist, visit the antique shop owned by Mahmood Daoud, one of Ronald's enemies.

When she mentioned the name of Ali Afdal his face broke into a dazed wrinkle and became what he intended to be a smile.

The most fascinating city in the world, the object of her Eastern pilgrimage, was now unimportant to Camilla beside the impulse to get to Jerusalem and Ronald Barker at the earliest moment. She packed her bag and waited in the lobby for the time when they would take the afternoon train to Jerusalem. Slim joined her and ordered a coffee instead of a cocktail because Camilla ordered one and they sat watching the people come and go like the strutters of Peacock Alley, keeping an eye for Barker who would come from the Green Mosque. Three persons entered the hotel in earnest conversation—Asad, Kitty Trimble and Mahmood. Without seeing Camilla and Slim, they went into the cafe.

Slim watched them suspiciously as they disappeared behind a screen. Slim flicked his cigarette accurately into a Japanese vase. "Well, it's no business of mine," he told Camilla. "All I know is that you or Barker can call on me for help if you need it. I like Ronald Barker, he's half American and a regular guy. I don't like that bird, Asad. I think you've fallen for that guy, Camilla. I used to think I was in the running. It seems to me it might clear the air a bit if you'd tell me just how we all stand."

She smiled. "I like Ronnie a lot, I love Joe a little, but I adore you, Slim."

Slim flushed, snubbed out his cigarette in a dish. "Say, quit your kidding, Camilla."

"Then don't ask me impertinent questions. And if you promise not to tell anybody I'll let you into a secret." She paused and examined the toe of her slipper. "You see, Slim, we're getting out into Joe Asad's country now. I encouraged Asad to go on the tour with me. But I'd rather have him where I can keep an eye on him—at least until I hear from Ronnie at the King David Hotel."

"And then?"
At this moment Edgar Willing entered the corridor, scattering his flock, sending the tourists at once to their rooms to have their baggage ready for the porters and themselves for the taxis to the station.

Asad and Kitty Trimble joined Camilla and Slim. "You had I couldn't do the honors of Cairo," he said. "I've been so busy—"

"Yes," Camilla replied with a smile at Kitty. "I noticed that."

Slim stood on the sidelines, grinning. It seemed to him that more than ever Camilla would have to watch her step—especially as Joe arranged that Camilla and Kitty Trimble should dine with him on the train. But Slim invited himself to that party. He had made up his mind not to let Camilla out of his sight.

It seemed extraordinary to see an ocean liner, all her lights glowing, rise suddenly out of the midst of the desert, until Asad told her that they had reached the Suez ferry at Kantara where they changed to the French train that was to take them on to Jerusalem. As they left the canal and the rickety train plunged along the crooked rails of Allenby's famous route into the darkness, the inquietude that Camilla had been aware of since last she had seen Ronald Barker seemed to grow with the miles.

From the railroad station at Jerusalem to a modern hotel in bright colors with a porte-cochere and bell-boys in fake Turkish costumes. At the desk she found what she was looking for—a note from Ronnie—but she did not open it until she reached her own room.

"Come to the stall of Amazah in David Street. Next to the oranges on the right side, going east from the Jaffa gate. Bring a guide and ask for Ali Afdal."

No signature—not even an initial. She glanced at her wristwatch. Ten o'clock. She took Slim into her confidence and he volunteered at once. He said he didn't need a guide. He knew the dump. Asad had disappeared, probably on one of his mysterious missions to some mosque or high Arabian dignitary.

For this she was thankful, taking coffee with Slim and hurrying off in a taxi after making sure they were not observed or followed.

At David's Tower Slim and Camilla dismissed the taxi and went on foot into a narrow street little more than an alley, a dark street of shadows striped with sunlight, with narrow alleyways leading into dark passages, others leading to little courtyards with glimpses of palms and bright sunlight beyond the gloom.

On the right down the hill was a pool of bright sunlight where Camilla saw a pile of oranges spread for customers. This was the place, she was sure. She laid restraining fingers on Slim's arm, asking him to wait in a tobacconist's shop while she went forward. An old Jew sat in the mouth of the stall, a Jew in a skullcap thumbing the pages of a book. He looked up as she stopped before him and spoke the name "Amazah" as he uncrossed his back and then crooked it again in a courteous bow.

When she mentioned the name of Ali Afdal his face broke into a hundred wrinkles and became what he intended to be a smile. And then he made a gesture, "Ali Afdal—yes," pointing to a door beside him, an ancient wooden door letting into a wall that seemed to protect a garden.

There were olive trees in the garden and stone pedestals of what had once been a temple. As she entered a figure rose from a bench and greeted her—an Arab, she thought, and was about to ask him where Ali Afdal was when the Arab behind his stains and robes was suddenly Ronald Barker himself.

He embraced her eagerly, explaining that he had remained in native costume since she had seen him last, for he had heard in Cairo that there were other Arabs in Jerusalem determined to destroy him.

"It's worse than I thought," he muttered, shaking his head. "Asad's crowd has been too clever for me. But at least I can now move with my eyes open. Did Asad ask you any questions about me?"

"Yes, lots. But he didn't get the right answers."

"Where is Asad now?" he asked.

"I don't know. He disappeared from the railway station in a taxi. I haven't seen him since."

"Who brought you here?"

"Slim."

"Where is he now?"

"Just a few steps away in the tobacconist's, watching. He's been a real friend to you and to me."

They had been talking in lowered tones, but as she sat beside him he now spoke almost in a whisper. "Camilla, I'm going into a situation of considerable difficulty. I think it's safer for you not to be connected with me in any way. If I had my wish I'd prefer to send you by train down to Haifa."

"Nonsense, Ronnie. I'm perfectly capable of protecting myself."

"I'm not sure of that. I could provide you with a police escort wherever you go, but the sight of our constabulary stirs up trouble."

She was awake now to the seriousness of his tone and manner. "What makes you think something will happen to our party?"

"Many things. Since the British took charge, the Arabs dislike Americans, too. The French Foreign Legion doesn't interfere with them so long as they break no laws. Camilla, you've got to understand that Syria isn't Egypt or even Palestine. Syria has a French mandate. The French are rather jittery since that flare-up down at Beirut. They're not anxious to stir up trouble with a powerful sheik like Arif—or his son, Hassan. Arif has great influence with the desert people. The French want to keep his friendship—"

"But what difference will that make so long as I keep the friendship of Hassan?" she asked significantly.

Ronnie Barker paced the flagstones, aware of a note of defiance in Camilla's voice. He glanced up at her with an expression she had not seen on his face.

"I thoroughly believe," he said with great deliberation, "that your affair with Hassan gives you a great deal of pleasure, as well as excitement that his attention flatters you, that danger intrigues you."

"Really?"

"It's true. You like being near the edge of disaster. In the United States girls are accustomed to having their own way, to ruling their men by flattery, and they play the game to win. But in Turkish countries it's not the same thing. A woman is less than a man. A girl can't play with men in Moslem countries as she does in the United States."

"I can't permit you to go any further in this affair with Hassan."

She frowned angrily. "Permit it I don't like that word, Ronnie Barker. You don't want my friendship with Hassan Isar. Well"—she shrugged—"I do want it. Even if I'd never met you I'd want it. I'm very fond of Hassan. He's always kind and considerate. I began trying to do you a service. Now I intend to cultivate Hassan's friendship whether I do you a service or not."

"Camilla!"

He paused abruptly and she never learned what he was going to say. For sounds of contention came through the door of Amazah's fruit stall, voices raised in anger and the sounds of blows.

Ronnie ran to the door and peered out at a scene of wreckage and turmoil where Arabs, Jews and blacks surged around the tall figure of Slim McManus who, bare-headed, was pushing and striking right and left at the antagonists, one of whom had clambered on his back in the hope of pulling him to the ground. Finally, as Ronald Barker rushed in, he saw Amazah and his scattered oranges, a momentary diversion took place as two British constables in neat blue uniforms came hurrying down the steps. By this time Slim was wiping the blood from his face, ready to aim a blow at the figure who rushed out of Amazah's doorway toward him.

"Steady on there, Slim," came Ali Afdal's voice in English. "I'm Ronald Barker." Slim was so astonished at this familiar voice emerging from a native costume that he stood staring, unable to say a word.

Meanwhile a larger crowd had gathered again at the right of the constables, peering from every window and doorway, voices and hands raised in angry protest.

"Let me go," whispered Ali Afdal to the constable in English and added something that made the man comply at once.

"My oranges!" wailed Amazah. Slim grinned. "Keep your shirt on, Toots," he said, taking out his wallet. "I'll buy your oranges, if you'll stop making a noise." He handed the man a pound note and the wailing ceased.

"You're American?" the constable asked. "What are you doing here?"

"Just seeing the sights."

"What started the trouble?"

"Well, you might say it was a young man in a white linen suit and a tarboosh. He tried to get familiar with the young lady I was with and I may have jostled him a bit."

"Where is he now?"

Slim peered over the heads of the crowd. "Seems to have gone."

"Do you know who he was?"

"Never saw him before. But I can't have any one insult my girl friend. You wouldn't stand for that, now would you, constable?"

The constable pulled at his small mustache and agreed that he wouldn't. "Well, you'd better take your girl friend back to the hotel and we'll forget it."

"Thanks, old man. I'll do the same for you some day." Slim looked around for Ali Afdal but he, also, had disappeared.

Ronnie Barker paced the flagstones, aware of a note of defiance

PATRIOTISM AROUSED

The re-dedication of this nation to liberty, as carried out on the Fourth of July, is believed to have done more toward uniting our people than anything that has been attempted since the war in Europe started.

On the afternoon of the Fourth, when the strains of the Star Spangled Banner were heard throughout all the land at the same moment, being played by town bands and orchestras as well as over the radio networks, Americanism indeed seemed to bloom as it had never bloomed before.

Our national anthem once again proved its power to inspire our love of country, to make us fairly tingle with patriotism and to make all of our petty problems seem to melt away in the face of our major task of safeguarding everything that the name America stands for.

When our patriotism can be aroused to such a pitch as it was in millions of homes on the Fourth of July, it is evident that most of us harbor a hidden longing for more opportunities for such expression of our emotions.

For years in this country, opportunities to express our love of country have been confined largely to school rooms. In the schools the singing of our national anthem and pledging allegiance to the flag are common practice, but for the rest of us the chances to do this have been far too few.

From now on, with the Fourth of July celebration as an example of what can be done, we hope that at every public gathering, Americans will be given an opportunity to give vent to their pent-up patriotism.

A DOG'S LIFE

The pulse of a nation beat in sympathy when newspapers carried the story of "Rowdy" the white and tan fox terrier consigned to death by his late mistress, Mrs. Clara Edgerton. She stipulated in her will that the pet be "painlessly" executed, so he would not be lonely and friendless.

Instantly there was a deluge of letters from all over the country protesting against the dog's legacy of death. They came from American citizens who read callously of the thousands killed in traffic accidents every year, who take the news of war deaths with routine reactions, quickly formed a "Rowdy Defense Committee." Thousands offered him a good home. And so "Rowdy" is now mascot for the Hamilton Field army camp in California.

The case of "Rowdy" may well symbolize the readiness of Americans to defend the principles of free life and their sympathy for the underdog.

Let dictators beware!

TODAY and TOMORROW
by DON ROBERTSON

SHELTERS . . . precaution

A friend of mine, who is building a new house, is considering including an air raid shelter in it. Most people who have heard about his plan laugh at the idea. They think it's silly to build an air raid shelter when there is so little chance of America being bombed. But his answer is that everyone laughed at Noah and his Ark until the rain came.

PLANS . . . government

I looked over some of the plans which have been suggested for a home air-raid shelter and was surprised to find that some were prepared by the U. S. war department. In presenting this information the government says: "In no sense should issuance of this bulletin be construed as the signal to start work immediately on any of the protective structures described. Nevertheless, it is deemed essential that responsible civil officials and civilian engineers give thought to methods, plans and especially procedures that can be followed in their respective localities should such protective structures become necessary in the future."

The government bulletin is largely concerned with shelters for large groups of people, but it also offers several plans for home shelters which accommodate six persons and which can be built at very low prices by mass production methods.

It is comforting to know that the government is making a careful study of shelter requirements, even though we may never have to use them. And although the government stresses the fact that shelters need not be built now, it does suggest that they be designed with a view to use in peacetime—such as storage sheds for factories, vaults for banks and basements of apartment buildings which might be built later on.

ATTACK . . . drills

If any bombers did attack America, I imagine most people would expect them to drop their first loads of bombs on New York. Cities like New York have taken a lot of protective steps and have civilian and official forces organized to act in case of any unexpected emergency.

But most people living in the biggest city in the west would undoubtedly head right for the subways if any bombing started. Because the subways are underground they would expect them to yield the greatest protection and they also know the subways in London have been utilized for shelters. But actually they would probably be safer to stay in their large office buildings and apartment houses.

The subways in London are tunneled through clay and are deep enough below ground to provide adequate protection, but most of the subways in New York are too shallow to offer adequate protection against direct hits by bombs which dig craters of from five to fifty feet. The populace of any city or town can't be expected to make a study of air raid precautions and the great problems of evacuation. These problems require the best engineering brains available.

But every one of us can cooperate with protective efforts that are made even though some of them may appear silly on the surface. In Newark, N. J., where a blackout is to be held on May 25, many people are treating it as a joke.

I hope we never do have anything more than mock blackouts, but even though we don't expect a school to burn down there's no harm in having fire drills.

HOME-GUARD . . . cynics

Cynics and so-called sophisticates, who refuse to take our existing dangers seriously and who make fun of those who are working at home for the protection of democracy, are perhaps the worst enemies we have today.

In every community there are a few people who will snicker over the organization of a home guard, who will make up jokes about the local police reserve and who will go into convulsions over attempts to organize a women's motor corps.

And yet if an emergency ever arises in any part of this country, it will be those half-way organized home groups which will spring into action and turn out to be a major force for the protection of democracy.

Our nation is composed largely of small towns—and if each small town is organized to act when the time comes the knowledge of such organization would do a lot to discourage any thoughts of an invasion by any enemy.

If each town in America is prepared, the wise-ones may be able to say, "I told you so," when no emergency comes, but if the towns don't prepare they will be extending an engraved invitation to trouble makers to do their stuff.

SUCCESSFUL PARENTHOOD

By MRS. CATHERINE C. EDWARDS
Associate Editor, Parents Magazine

'GOOD GROOMING' SHOULD START EARLY

Not long ago 20,000 questionnaires were sent out to high school sophomores in 23 cities asking what questions concerning personal health they would like to have answered. The answers were to be used in framing a health program for the schools based upon actual pupil interest in health matters. And this interest, especially among the girls, proved to be chiefly concerned with ways to improve their personal appearance.

There is nothing surprising or superficial about this. Both the social and business worlds today stress the importance of grooming and maintain that any girl can make a good appearance if she really wants to. And you may be sure it is no longer considered noble not to care! Nowhere is there a keener interest in standards of personal appearance than on the college campus. As an indication of this self-appraisal courses are springing up in colleges all over the country. But if mothers could realize how frequently girls are penalized in their high school and college life through lack of foundation training in good grooming they wouldn't wait for a college course to make up for their neglect. Besides, it is in childhood that a beautiful beauty regime can best be established.

One reason why early routines in grooming have lagged behind the strict health schedules which well-informed mothers take for granted nowadays is our inheritance of the Puritan belief that it is a sin to make a child conscious of her looks. Another strong deterrent has been the example of those mothers who go to such extremes in prettifying their children that they make of them obnoxious puppets. But nowadays health and beauty are so closely allied that the instinctive longing to be attractive can be used to inspire good health and eating habits in girls who might otherwise be careless and self-indulgent.

Here are the habits of personal care which should be taught children from their earliest years: (1) Brushing the teeth at least twice a day. (2) A daily bath—or a daily shower with two warm soapy lubb baths a week. (3) Frequent shampooing—the time between washings varies according to the type of scalp and whether or not the hair is exposed to much or little dirt. (4) Brushing the hair every day—even if the youngster's brushing habits do much good let her take turns with your more efficient strokes so she'll get the habit. (5) Keeping nails clean—although you'll have to do the filing at first, a child of 10 should be able to give herself a fairly good manicure.

Another advantage of learning these things in childhood is that skill and sprucing can be acquired. The notion that beauty care takes hours to accomplish is outmoded. Complete special-occasion glamour, according to today's college girls, can be achieved in 30 minutes and good everyday grooming in an hour divided into morning, before dinner and bedtime sessions.

LONDON GIRL GUNNER

IF A GERMAN AVIATOR is struck by a shell some night soon, while prowling about in London's skies, it probably won't hurt so much if he is told that the gun was aimed by pretty blonde Pat Lovell, now a full-fledged member of an anti-aircraft battery, somewhere in the danger area. However, if we may be permitted just one little pun this month, yes, you have guessed it, "we'll bet it won't be any 'love pat'."

LADY SAILOR Helen Slaughter

of Kansas City, Kan., has become the first woman staff officer of the U. S. merchant marine. She is assistant purser on the S. S. North America.

A GERMAN HOUSEWIFE

has been arrested for hoarding goods in wartime. Police found in her possession large quantities of face cream, perfume, shirt buttons, dust cloths and kitchen knives.

FEMININE RULE over the city of Dover, N. C., has ended. After running the city for two years, Mayor Anna Wilson and her three councilwomen turned their posts over to men.

RAILROAD WOMAN

ONE OF THE FEW WOMAN BLOCK OPERATORS in the country's railway system is Kitty Rich, who switches trains in New York's Pennsylvania station, operating a 46-lver switchboard, with an average of 176 trains per working day. That is, from midnight to 6 a. m.

DISNEY AID

FRANCES GIFFORD OF HOLLYWOOD has the distinction of being the first flesh-and-blood leading lady ever to work on the Walt Disney lot. She will appear in "The Reluctant Dragon," which, through trick photography, combines living people and animated cartoons.

WINNER AT 81

MRS. ANNA MARY ROBERTSON MOSES, 81, of Syracuse, N. Y., recently won a $250 prize for a painting she submitted to the State Art Show in New York. Besides being an artist, she's a great-grandmother too!

WEAVER EXTRAORDINARY

LEAH KLEIN of New York, who was born blind and now, in her thirties, is a virtuoso of the weaving loom, makes table runners as her specialty. She tells colors by knotting the end of the thread once on the green shuttle, twice on the blue, etc. Using that system she works out such intricate patterns as a shaded brown and green pine tree.

FROM TENNIS TO ART

AMERICA'S NOTED SPORTSWOMAN, Helen Hull Jacobs, has turned her hand to fashion designing. Her first collection of active sports clothes, numbering 17 items and created exclusively for Jay Thornpe, Inc., will be launched this month.

REPRESENTATIVE WOMEN

SPEAKING BEFORE 1,000 Democratic women, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt said recently, "I think New York's mayor, Fiorello LaGuardia, is planning to have representative women from all over the country appointed to a national policy-forming committee." The President's wife pooh-poohed the idea that world domination was sought by Washington interests, stating that they were merely attempting to safeguard the integrity of the Western hemisphere. The meeting was a regional conference, held at St. Paul, Minn.

WOMEN MAY DEFEND MEN

MAN MUST LOOK to his honors on the dueling grounds if there are many more like Mrs. Florine Stiles, former Kansas City resident, who in three years, has become the Southwest's best woman fencer and will compete in the national tournament in New York city. Alas and alack, are the women planning to avenge the wrongs of their men, with their trusty swords?

U. S. G. BENEFIT BILL

THE PUBLIC had no chance to view the monies of Mrs. Grace VanDerbilt, who the society leader opened the doors for a million-dollar ball, at $20 per couple. The proceeds of the affair went to the United Service Organization to swell the fund being raised for recreational service to the defense workers of the U. S. A.

NURSE UNIFORM COLORFUL

AMERICAN WOMEN serving as nurses in the U. S. army are pleased at the new fashion note introduced into their uniforms. The olive-drab cape is to be discarded, in favor of a new two-tone blue number and will undoubtedly enhance their looks, if not their efficiency.

WAR LOAN RALLY

FIFTY THOUSAND persons listened to pretty Norma Shearer, Hollywood movie star, when she made a personal appearance, coupled with a brief talk, delivered in French and English recently. The occasion was a Victory Loan Rally, held in Montreal, where Miss Shearer was born.

WOMEN DOCTORS

EQUALITY OF RECOGNITION WITH MEN for the nation's 8,000 women physicians for service in the nation's armed forces is being demanded by Dr. Emily Barringer of New York. She asks that they be admitted to the medical reserve corps and be granted commissions.

HUNGRY

SPENDING $700 FOR FOOD IN 14 DAYS sounds like a lot of eating for one person, but that's what Flora Von Weiler spent during her brief stay in Lisbon, Portugal. "I was terribly hungry after living a long time on the food Germany dished out to me," she explained. Miss Von Weiler is the daughter of the Netherlands vice consul in Detroit.

By LYTLE HULL
U. S. O.

The United Service Organizations for National Defense (U. S. O.) have started a nation-wide campaign for the purpose of raising the sum of $10,765,000 for operating soldiers' and sailors' and defense workers' club-houses in towns adjacent to camps and defense plants. The United States government is constructing the club-houses.

The U. S. O. is made up of six organizations trained through long years of experience in the social life of young men and women. These organizations, which have banded together to work through this single co-ordinating body, are: the Y. M. C. A.; the National Catholic Community service; the Salvation Army; the Y. W. C. A.; the Jewish Welfare Board; and the National Traveler's Aid Association.

Their object is "to relieve the monotony of the essential routine in naval bases and army camps," and defense plants. These camps and plants sprang up overnight in locations suitable to their purposes but not necessarily suitable to the recreational needs of their inhabitants. The results in some cases have become matters of deep concern to the government, and to the soldiers and sailors and to the parents of these young people.

There are cases where only a tiny town with one or two picture houses and a couple of soda fountains are the only oasis within a radius of many miles where the men can seek recreation in their leisure hours. It is not difficult to imagine what the results will be. The men will become dissatisfied, the men will become disheartened, homesick and disgusted. They will lose respect for a government and a people who force them to add a little sunlight to their life of "all work and no play."

Homesickness is a mental disease from which soldiers sometimes actually die. With nothing to do but "sit" and talk about a people who will pay laborers from 5 to 20 dollars per day for an eight-hour day in a five day week, but won't do anything to add a little sunlight to the lives of the 20 to 30-dollar-per-month soldiers and sailors who must give up their lives if necessary—homesickness spreads like measles. Dissatisfaction and disgust become permanent bedfellows—and morale flies out the window.

The German armies have unfortunately been sweeping all before them. The only men who appear thus far to have been able to stand against them have been the British, Colonial and the Greeks. These fighters were only beaten because they were handicapped by inferior equipment or numbers or both. Not by morale.

Our men have got to be taken care of properly. The U. S. O. is asking for $10,765,000 to help in this desperate essential. If they need a hundred million dollars—we have got to provide it. We are drifting toward war. If we become involved we must send armies abroad and those armies must not be defeated. We the people must see to it that the morale of our men is kept at "an all time high"—or we the people will go down to defeat with our fighting forces. Our best possible investment at this time is whatever we can give to, or do for, the U. S. O.

APPLYING FOR A JOB BY MAIL

If you are going to apply for a job by mail, here's an idea you may be able to use. It shows how you may attract attention to yourself and make your job-application letter stand out from the others. I found this in a book entitled "The Strategy of Job Finding."

1. A very large red envelope containing a letter, stated in part, "Just as this letter stands out in your mail, so will my services stand out as profitable investment for your firm."

2. One youth secured an interview by the simple expedient of writing on the application blank after the question on height (in his case 5 feet and 7 inches), "Great oaks from little acorns grow," which was a gentle way of reminding the personnel manager that physical size is not a criterion of ability.

3. Another illustration is that of a woman applying to an advertising agency for a job. On the reverse side of a tape measure she typed a brief personal profile and the reasons why she wanted the job. It was attractively packaged. Her prospective employer naturally was sufficiently interested in the appearance of the box to open it. It is true he may have been somewhat disappointed when he realized it was a job application. As he pulled the tape measure out of its container, the side bearing the measurement was blocked out and he was referred to the other side. As he turned the tape over, the woman's personal profile was disclosed and her reason for wanting a job. The application ended by saying, "I, too, am a small package with the same potentialities, however, as this tape measure." She was given an interview.

4. One employment manager describes what another applicant mailed. A package arrived in which there was a test tube full of red ink, with the man's name, address and a few pertinent facts about him neatly written on a card attached, and the legend at the bottom—"If you hire me, you won't need this red ink." This young man did not get an interview. Another used this same device and said, "What you need is 'red blood' in your organization." This stunt also failed because of its presumptuous tone.

Good taste is essential. Employers in banks, public utilities and other conservative companies might consider such stunt approaches as those presented in the preceding paragraphs to be in doubtful taste; they have been mentioned not as models but only as examples.

SAVING MONEY With Cotton Bags

Snowy white cotton underwear beneath sheer cotton blouses is a new note this season. Slips and combinations are quickly and easily made at practically no cost. Make them of laundered Cotton Bags, which are soft, white and durable. Keep the lines of your "foundation" smooth and trim. For a gay note, add a flounce of lace or embroidery.

Don't Make Work Out of Play

When most persons start out on a vacation trip, it is usually with the hope of getting a badly needed rest. All too often they work so hard at their play that a vacation is more like an exhausting endurance contest. They return to their everyday routine more tired than when they left and the trip upon which they counted for renewed energy and pep has done more harm than good.

Outdoor exercise is a great bracer, but a person who is not accustomed to a strenuous life is inviting physical and nervous exhaustion when he plunges into a program that keeps him on the go from morning until night. Take your summer sports in small doses and mix them well with a generous amount of loafing. Get all the fun you possibly can out of your brief respite from the workaday world, but guard yourself from fatigue.

Classified Rates

The rates below apply to classified advertising rates, and two- and three-time rate, etc., apply only to ads scheduled consecutively.

Count five average words to the line. Each initial phone number or group of numerals count as a word. Allow four words for a News Review box number address.

Lines	Words	1t	2t	3t	Add
2	10	25	30	40	10
3	11-15	30	45	60	15
4	16-20	40	60	80	20
5	21-25	50	75	100	25

Adjustments and Kills

In error which affects the results of an ad entitles the advertiser to an adjustment for one week only. After the first insertion the News Review is not responsible for errors. Charge is made for only actual insertions on an ad killed before completion of its original schedule, at the rate earned by the number of times it has been published. Adjustments and refunds are not made after 30 days from publication date.

'Bargain' Sight for U. S. Army

Two U. S. Army officers, Lieut. Chas. Yancey (left) and Capt. L. Bean (right) are shown with their homemade anti-tank gun sight which cost them $6.38 for materials, plus native intelligence and engineering knowledge. It is rated as being better than sights now costing the army $640. An order for 5,000 of these devices has been recommended.

Women Civilian Defense Worker Uniforms

Here are some of the uniforms proposed for women workers in civilian defense. Recently inspected by Mayor LaGuardia of New York and Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt the models displayed (left to right) may be deemed proper garb for: air raid warden, active nurse, utility apron, dress nurse, air raid warden dress and canteen, respectively.

All Out for National Defense

Here is one family that is doing its "bit" for national defense. Mr. and Mrs. William A. White of Washington, D. C., and 17 of their 18 children are shown at Washington's main post office as they purchased Defense Savings Stamps. Their son Theodore could not accompany them because he is serving on the U. S. S. Washington.

4-H Club Visits White House

Four-H club delegates from 43 states and Alaska attending the 15th annual National 4-H club camp in Washington are shown as they toured the White House and grounds. Responsibilities of rural youth was the theme of the convention, which marked the high point of the organization's yearly activities.

End of a Colorful River Era

The Golden Eagle, last of the old river packets to hang on after the Mississippi's colorful steamboat era, is shown as she appeared after striking a channel control fence and sinking. Fifty-five passengers and a crew of 50 were rescued. Used in recent years for excursion trips out of St. Louis, the ship was 53 years old.

Goods Exchangeable For Cotton Stamps Will Be Indicated

Hico merchants are getting to cooperate with the government's cotton stamp program, according to Max Hoffman, Hico member of the county committee. Operators of stores here handling cotton goods are familiarizing themselves with the provisions of the program, and any of them will be glad to explain any details their customers may want to know.

Robert C. Williams of Hamilton, chairman of the Cotton Industry Committee for Hamilton County, recently made the following statement:

"Retail merchants dealing in cotton goods will be one of the most important groups in the supplementary cotton program. They comprise tens of thousands of salesmen for America's most important cash crop—cotton. With foreign markets for American cotton sharply curtailed by war—America's merchants have a greater responsibility than ever before to help increase our domestic consumption of 100 per cent American grown, processed, and manufactured cotton products."

In explaining how our local merchants could assist Cotton Stamp customers and the general public to identify 100 per cent American cotton products in stores, he said "some retailers rubber-stamp the price tag or label with a picture of a cotton boll, or the words 'All American Cotton.' Any method may be used which will definitely show that the merchandise is made in the United States entirely of 100 per cent American cotton."

"After participating farmers receive their cotton-order stamps, it is up to the merchants to see that farm customers and others can readily find the American cotton products they are looking for. Adequate stocks, attractive window and counter displays, and regular advertising will be to the mutual advantage of merchants, farmers, and the general public."

Merchants who segregate their stocks of All American piece goods, women's dresses and house-coats, men's overalls and shirts, sheets, men's pants, children's clothing, men's underwear, blankets, work gloves, plowlines, stockings, and numerous other cotton products in attractive displays and advertising will contribute materially to the effectiveness of the program, and at the same time develop profitable new business," he said.

"How are you getting along now since your wife went on vacation?"

"Fine; I've reached the height of efficiency. I can put my socks on from either end."—Boys' Life.

Decorator Busy

J. W. Young Graves, local painting and papering contractor, reports that he has been quite busy for the past several weeks on jobs in Hico and other towns of this section.

In Hico, Graves reports the completion of papering and interior decorating at the residences of Mrs. J. S. Dorsey, Miss Thoma Rodgers, and Mrs. Roy Welborn. The Dorsey home was repainted in a two-tone color scheme of brown and cream.

The homes of H. C. Odle and Flint Odle at Meridian also were reported worked over inside by Graves, as were the homes of Fred Anderson, Bob McDaniel, and Mrs. Butler at Carlton. At Fredell he reports that he has just completed painting, repapering, and refinishing the walls and woodwork at the home of R. A. French.

Graves was assisted on some of these jobs by his nephew, Paul Graves, who came down from Dallas a few weeks ago.

Mrs. Rose Tumelty, 93, native of Ireland, is pictured taking her oath of allegiance to the United States as she was naturalized in San Francisco. She passed her citizenship exam with one of the finest papers in her large class.

ease has passed and the patient is permitted to walk. It is most important that the affected part of the body not be fatigued. The secret of rehabilitation lies in the continuance of professional medical care and large doses of patience.

Children under five years are most susceptible to the disease and all children under twelve should be watched for suspicious symptoms. Your family physician should be called immediately if infantile paralysis is indicated. Local health authorities should be contacted immediately and patients isolated for at least 21 days.

Reading Lifetime Pursuit

But he has made reading—and the absorbing of what he reads—a lifetime pursuit. He has written several books, but none has ever been submitted to a publisher. He writes as he reads—for relaxation.

His favorite book? He says that it is hard to choose, but that if he has any single one it is Benjamin Franklin's Autobiography.

Llano Creek Near By

In front of their home and along one side of the ranch rushes the Little Llano—sometimes it roars and gets into their home as it did in 1935. At night its gurgling makes music by which to sleep.

Years ago, when he was more adventuresome, he told his wife one day that he could drive the old Model T Ford two miles right down the middle of the rushing stream to his ranch home—and he did it. There's no bridge over the Little Llano. One ford it to reach the house. And there's no telephone at the Stevensons'. Theirs is a self-reliant world up in the hills where distances are long and solitude is deep.

Infantile Paralysis Said to Be Largely A Summer Disease

Austin, July 9.—Dr. Geo. W. Cox, State Health Officer, states that infantile paralysis is largely a summer disease. Although cases may occur during any time of the year, over half the total number of cases occur from July to October.

Direct contact between persons forms the chief factor in the spread of infantile paralysis. Because of the seasonal prevalence of the disease, flies and other insects have been suspected of conveying the virus or germ. Insect transmission has not, however, been scientifically demonstrated.

After the acute state of the disease has passed and the patient is permitted to walk, it is most important that the affected part of the body not be fatigued. The secret of rehabilitation lies in the continuance of professional medical care and large doses of patience.

the house, the first man ever to serve two terms in succession as speaker. In 1938 he was elected lieutenant governor and he was re-elected last year and in this capacity he has presided over the senate.

Number 8 Significant

He tells how the number 8 has figured in his life. He was born in 1888. The first job he ever had in which he made any money was in 1898, when he was a boy on the ranch. In 1908, when just 20, he was made cashier of a bank at Junction and had to have his disabilities as a minor removed by the district judge. In 1918 he was elected county judge of Kimble County. In 1928 he was elected to the house. In 1938 he was elected lieutenant governor. He is one of eight children.

His mother is still living. Mr. and Mrs. Stevenson have one child, Coke Jr., who is county attorney at Junction, and two small granddaughters.

Delinquent Tax Payers TAKE NOTICE!

CITY COUNCIL APPROVES STATE TAX REMISSION

At its regular July meeting Monday night, July 7, the City Council of Hico voted to extend the benefits of H. B. No. 76 recently enacted to cover delinquent City Taxes.

In brief, this law remits penalties and interest on taxes delinquent on July 1st, 1940, provided same are paid in full not later than November 1st, 1941.

This act does not remit court costs already incurred in the 38 suits already filed on Hico property owners by the State and County in District Court but if you will see the City Attorney at once he will advise you how to hold down additional costs in those cases. If you were served with citations in tax suits last winter, be sure and see him at once.

IF THE ABOVE IS NOT COMPLIED WITH, THE LAW WILL HAVE TO TAKE ITS COURSE AFTER NOVEMBER 1ST.

E. H. PERSONS, City Attorney.
