It was a busy day in Justice Court.

Business was booming in Justice Court. There were more cases than usual heard during the day, and most of the defendants appeared to be charged with fairly serious offenses. The judge was kept busy throughout the day, and nine cases were decided as follows:

- Motion for rehearing for Everett H. Anderson, charge for the unauthorized possession of a firearm, was denied as there was no evidence of guilt. The judge was kind enough to say, "This is not blue Monday . . ."
- Motion for dismissal of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Sessions, who were charged with the illegal sale of alcohol, was denied. The judge said, "It was a busy day in Justice Court."

In County Court

A man charged with shooting a man with a shotgun was heard by Judge J. A. Ireland. The man was found guilty and fined $100. The judge said, "The defendant was found guilty of the act and is sentenced to pay a fine of $100."

Court Overview

A courtroom was packed with people waiting for the start of the trial. The judge, Mr. T. J. Smith, was busy with cases all day, and many of the defendants appeared to be those who had been charged with fairly serious offenses. The judge was kind enough to say, "This is not blue Monday . . ."

In a normal year close to 69,000,000 passengers travel by air in the United States. In 1948, the number increased to over 70,000,000. Air travel is becoming more and more popular, and the airlines are increasing their services to meet the demand.

COTTON

The cotton harvest in the United States was about 1,600,000 bales, which is about 50% more than in 1947. The cotton was harvested in October and November, and the prices were about $1.00 per pound. The cotton was sold to the cotton buyers who then sold it to the cotton millers. The cotton millers then processed the cotton into cotton goods which were sold to the consumers.

Mr. and Mrs. Jim Sessions were charged with the illegal sale of alcohol. The judge denied the motion for dismissal and sentenced the defendant to pay a fine of $100. The judge said, "The defendant was found guilty of the act and is sentenced to pay a fine of $100."

New Yorkers Learn About Nature In Big Snowstorm

New York City — The great blizzard that enveloped most of the United States over the weekend brought to a close the annual conference on "Nature In Big Snowstorms." Among the highlights were the following discussions:

1. The effects of snowstorms on wildlife. Dr. John E. Taylor, of the New York Zoological Society, spoke on the topic, "How Snowstorms Affect Wildlife." He pointed out that the blizzard had caused a significant increase in the population of certain species, such as the snowshoe hare.

2. The impact of snowstorms on plant life. Dr.rest of the section;

3. The economic implications of snowstorms. Mr. John Smith, a leading economist, discussed the costs and benefits associated with snowstorms, including the cost of cleaning snow and the benefits of winter sports.

4. The role of government in responding to snowstorms. Mr. Robert Green, a leading government official, spoke on the importance of preparedness and resilience in the face of snowstorms.

5. The scientific perspective on snowstorms. Dr. Mary White, a leading scientist, gave a presentation on the science behind snowstorms, including the role of climate change.

In conclusion, the conference organizers thanked all attendees for their participation and promised to continue to hold similar events in the future.
Sunday's league champion was the Texas Tech Mustangs, who defeated the University of Texas Longhorns, 41-39, in the opening round and defeating Loyola of Chicago, 35-61, in the following game to become the tournament champions.

The Mustangs, coached by William F. Branch, will now face Nebraska in the Rose Bowl on January 1.

The Longhorns, coached by Darrell Royal, were one of the favorites to win the tournament, but their loss to Texas Tech was a significant upset.

The Mustangs' victory was their third in a row, having defeated the University of Oklahoma, 70-64, and the University of Kansas, 70-64, in the previous rounds.

The Texas Tech Mustangs now have a record of 20-4 for the season and are considered one of the nation's top teams.

The University of Texas Longhorns, on the other hand, now have a record of 19-5 for the season and will have to regroup for their next game.

The Texas Tech Mustangs will now face the University of Southern California Trojans in the Rose Bowl on January 1, and the University of Texas Longhorns will face the University of Oklahoma Sooners in the Orange Bowl on January 2.

The Rose Bowl game will be held in the Rose Bowl stadium in Pasadena, California, and the Orange Bowl game will be held in the Orange Bowl stadium in Miami, Florida.

Both games will feature two of the nation's top teams, and fans are excited to see which team will emerge as the national champion.

The Rose Bowl game is the most prestigious bowl game in the nation, and the Orange Bowl game is one of the top five bowl games in the nation.
