Agency hopeful photos will attract new 'parents'

By AMANDA MORENO
 Staff Writer

The whole idea behind it is to touch someone's heart, which only makes the name more fitting: The Heart Gallery.

The Texas Department of Family and Protective Services began the Heart Gallery, a traveling photo collection of children waiting for adoption, in 2001.

"The idea is that someone will see these photos and want to adopt one of these children," said Rebecca Moughon, chairperson of the Howard County Child Welfare Board.

According to Amanda Wadsworth, HCCWB secretary, there are about 20 photos in this collection, but only 15 are in Big Spring on display. Twelve are on display at the Big Spring Mall, some are located next to Sears and the others are located across from Suggs Hallmark. Three of the photos are displayed at a local church, according to Wadsworth.

"None of these children are from the Howard County area due to privacy issues," Wadsworth said. "The Howard County photos were removed from the collection for this reason."

The photos are expected to be on display for about a month, or until they are requested by someone else, according to Moughon. This is the first time that Howard County has taken part in the project, but she said that there is no reason why the photos wouldn't make their way back again.

"The number of photos and the photos themselves are always changing," Moughon said. "They have seen a lot of good response from this."

When setting up the Heart Gallery, the intention was to give people the opportunity to see the children who are being impacted by a problem too often ignored, according to Moughon.

Fire knocks out power to 200 residences here

A fire in the 900 block of N. Gregg reported Wednesday afternoon caused approximately 200 homes on Big Spring's north side to lose electrical service, but no injuries or serious property damage was reported as a result.

According to Big Spring Fire Marshal Carl Condray, the fire was reported in an alley in the 900 block of N. Gregg Street at approximately 5:32 p.m.

"A storage shed was destroyed by the fire, which also managed to create a grass fire that destroyed about a half-acre nearby," Condray said. "No habitations were damaged by the fire, which was quickly contained to the area by our firefighters. It's unclear at this time what caused the fire, and whether it was the structure fire that caused the grass fire, or the other way around. It's still under investigation, however."

Condray said an estimate of the total damages to the property has not been established.

"We had three engines and our brush truck respond," Condray said. "There's such a heavy fuel load with the overgrown and unmowed lots, fires like these can spread really fast. However, we were able to keep this fire from threatening any habitations, which is really your goal in a situation like that."

Jim Clements, area manager for Oncor Electric Delivery, said approximately 200 homes were without power while firefighters tackled the flames.

“The fire took out a pair of our poles, so we were forced to open a few fuses while the firefighters were working on putting it out,” Clements said. “The effected homes — which were mainly concentrated on the north side of town — were without power for about an hour before we were able to restore service.”

While firefighters with the Howard County Volunteer Fire Department continue to battle wildfire and grass blazes in the unincorporated parts of the area caused by dry weather, Condray said the lack of moisture is taking its toll within the city limits, as well.

“We don’t have the acres and acres of brush and fields like there is out in the county, but we still have plenty of vacant lots and areas where the brush and grass has overgrown,” Condray said. “Unfortunately, because of the low levels of moisture, these grass fires can burn through a lot and threaten homes and other structures very quickly.

“It’s very, very important for area property owners to keep the grass and weeds cleared out from their property and the lots nearby. There is just so much fuel — much of it dead grass and brush — left over from the previous seasons, it poses a very serious problem in the city, as well.”

picking through the remains of his son’s wrecked home in Pleasant Grove, a suburb of Birmingham. “They said the storm was in Tuscaloosa and it would be here in 15 minutes. And before I knew it, it was here.”

He and his wife, along with their daughter and two grandchildren, survived by hiding under their front porch. Friends down the street who did the same weren’t so lucky — Stewart said he pulled out the bodies of two neighbors whose home was ripped off its foundation.

Alabama’s state emergency management agency said it had confirmed 131 deaths, while there were 32 in Mississippi, 29 in Tennessee, 13 in Georgia, eight in Virginia and one in Kentucky.

The National Weather Service’s Storm Prediction Center in Norman, Okla., said it received 137 tornado reports into Wednesday night. “We were in the bathroom holding on to each other and holding on to dear life,” said Samantha Nail, who lives in a blue-collar subdivision in the Birmingham suburb of Pleasant Grove where the storm slammed heavy pickup trucks into ditches and obliterated tidy brick houses, leaving behind a mess of mattresses, electronics and children’s toys scattered across a grassy plain where dozens used to live. “If it wasn’t for our concrete walls, our home would be gone like the rest of them.”

Dave Imy, a meteorologist with the prediction service, said the number of deaths was the most in a tornado outbreak since 1974, when 315 people died.

In Alabama, where as many as a million people were without power, Gov. Robert Bentley said 2,000 national guard troops had been activated and were helping to search devastated areas for people still missing. He said the National Weather Service and forecasters did a good job of alerting people, but there is only so much that can be done to deal with tornadoes a mile wide.

“You cannot prepare against an F5,” the most powerful category on a scale for measuring wind intensity, he said.

One of the hardest-hit areas was Tuscaloosa, a city of more than 83,000 and home to the University of Alabama. The city’s police and other emergency services were devastated, the mayor said, and at least 15 people were killed.

A massive tornado, caught on video by a news camera on a tower, barreled through the city late Wednesday afternoon, leveling it.

By nightfall, the city was dark. Roads were impassable. Signs were blown down in front of restaurants, businesses were unrecognizable and sirens wailed off and on. Debris littered the streets and sidewalks.

College students in a commercial district near campus used flashlights to check out the damage.

At Stephanie’s Flowers, owner Bronson Englebert used the headlights from two delivery vans to see what valuables he could remove. The storm blew out the front of his store, pulled down the ceiling and shattered the windows, leaving only the curtains flapping in the breeze.

“It even blew out the back wall, and I’ve got bricks on top of two delivery vans now,” Englebert said.

A group of students stopped to help Englebert, carrying out items like computers and printers and putting them in his van.

The storm system spread destruction from Texas to New York, where dozens of roads were flooded or washed out.

The governors in Alabama, Mississippi and Georgia each issued emergency declarations for parts of their states.

President Barack Obama said he had spoken with Bentley and approved his request for emergency federal assistance.

“Our hearts go out to all those who have been affected by this devastation, and we commend the heroic efforts of those who have been working tirelessly to respond to this disaster,” Obama said in a statement.

Around Tuscaloosa, traffic was snarled by downed trees and power lines, and some drivers abandoned their cars in medians.

“What we faced today was massive damage on a scale we have not seen in Tuscaloosa in quite some time,” Mayor Walter Maddox said.

University officials said there didn’t appear to be significant damage on campus, and dozens of students and locals were staying at a 125-bed shelter in the campus recreation center.

The Browns Ferry nuclear power plant about 30 miles west of Huntsville lost offsite power. The Tennessee Valley Authority-owned plant had to use seven diesel generators to power the plant’s three units.

something people think a lot about,” Moughon said. “Through these pictures there is a more personal feel and it catches people’s attention.”

In addition to adoption, Wadsworth and Moughon expressed there is always a need for foster families, especially in the Howard County area.

“There are no foster homes in our area,” Wadsworth said. “There are about 70 kids in care at any given moment and those children have to be sent away to be placed in care, which makes it harder for those children to stay in contact with siblings or other relatives.”

Moughon said the HCCWB does its best to help with the expenses in cases like that, but their funding is based on donations. There is no government funding, only private donations.

“We do our best to educate, encourage and promote the topic of adoption in the community,” Moughon said. “We are always needing members on the board if anyone is interested in helping that way.”

Those interested in becoming part of the HCCWB should contact Moughon at 816-1206.

The board meets the first Tuesday of the month at 7 p.m. at the Child Protective Services office.

“We are so thankful to the Big Spring Mall owner and manager for allowing us to have these photos on display,” Moughon said.

PAPER

— paper checks will no longer be an option. People currently receiving their federal benefits by paper check must switch to direct deposit by March 1, 2013.

“More than 18 million baby boomers are expected to reach retirement age during the next five years, with 10,000 people a day becoming eligible for Social Security benefits,” said U.S. Treasurer Rosie Rios. “It costs 92 cents more to issue a payment by paper check than by direct deposit. We are retiring the Social Security paper check option in favor of electronic payments because it is the right thing to do for benefit recipients and American taxpayers alike.”

The Treasury Department published a final rule in December 2010 to gradually eliminate paper checks for federal benefit payments. In addition to the taxpayer savings, electronic payments are safer and more convenient than paper checks, officials said. Last year, more than 540,000 Social Security and Supplemental Security Income (SSI) paper checks were reported lost or stolen and had to be replaced.

Historic move away from checks

On Jan. 31, 1940, Ida Mae Fuller received the first monthly Social Security benefit check and, to date, about 165 million people have received Social Security benefits. The movement toward electronic payments has been steadily increasing. According to the 2010 Federal Reserve Payments Study, electronic payments now make up more than three-quarters of all non-cash payments nationwide. There were 5.7 billion fewer checks written in 2009 than in 2006, a decline of 6.1 percent per year — while electronic payments grew 9.3 percent during that period. Among federal benefit recipients, approximately eight in 10 receive their Social Security or other federal benefit payment electronically.

Timeline for phasing out paper checks

The Treasury Department’s Go Direct® public education campaign provides information to Americans about the change to how federal benefit payments are being delivered and makes it easy for current check recipients to switch online at www.GoDirect.org or by calling a toll-free helpline.

May 1, 2011: People newly applying for federal benefits on or after May 1, must choose an electronic payment option at the time they sign up for their benefits. If they wish to direct their money into a bank or credit union account, they will want to have the following information on hand at the time they apply for their benefits:

- Financial institution’s routing transit number (often found on a personal check)
- Account type — checking or saving
- Account number (often found on a personal check)

People who prefer receiving their payments on a prepaid debit card or who do not have an account at a financial institution can receive a Direct Express Debit MasterCard card. For more information, visit www.GoDirect.org.

March 1, 2013: Current check recipients must switch to electronic payments before March 1, 2013. Switching from checks to direct deposit is fast, easy and free at www.GoDirect.org, by calling the U.S.

Treasury Electronic Payment Solution Center’s toll-free helpline at 1-800-333-1795, or by speaking with a bank or credit union representative.

Anyone already receiving federal benefit payments electronically will continue to receive their money as usual on their payment day. No action is required.

AN ENCOURAGING WORD

By Eddy Pitchford

Two billion people are expected to watch the televised wedding of Prince William and Kate Middleton. The two billion appear to validate the power of television hype more than the power of England’s royal family.

What comes to mind when you picture two billion people trying to satisfy their curiosity about English royalty and ceremonial pomp? What about the attention given to another royal family?

Jesus Christ is King of kings and Lord of lords. The church is the bride of Christ. The members of Christ’s church are indeed a royal family. Their power is found not in television hype but in the name and nature of Jesus.

OUR VIEWS

What cuts would Jesus make?

It wasn't that long ago when Democratic members of Congress were warning about conservative colleagues trying to insert their religion into politics by trying to cut funding for Planned Parenthood.

For issues concerning family planning, the left generally agrees that it is wrong to impose religion on politics.

I don't think you'll be hearing the same scolds directed at the Sojourners' crusade against the House GOP budget and its orange bracelets that ask, "What would Jesus cut?"

Sojourners, a Christian organization that works on social causes, advises its supporters to fast every Monday in April and pray for a budget that better reflects the group's welfare-state politics. There is much to be said for people who want to do the right thing and stand up for what they believe. I cannot help but suspect, however, that if the religious right did the same thing, the pundit class now would be hectoring the faithful about the impropriety of implying that America, a theological melting pot, is a Christian nation.

What would Allah think?

Now, I agree with the Sojourners' assertion "A budget is a moral document." Indeed, House Budget Committee Chair Paul Ryan, R-Wis., told me he, too, agrees.

But I don't agree with the Sojourners' apparent belief that Jesus would make budgeting decisions in tune with its very modern sensibilities. Sojourners President Jim Wallis wrote in the Huffington Post against the GOP budget's cuts in funding for educational and child health and nutrition programs, even as — surely Jesus must be furious — the military budget would increase.

Now, Jesus famously said, "Render therefore unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's, and unto God the things that are God's." He was answering a question that provided a perfect opportunity to launch into a rant against militaristic imperial Rome, yet he deferred.

Nonetheless, Wallis seems sure Jesus would want to cut billions more from defense than the five-year $178 billion reduction recommended by Defense Secretary Robert Gates and included in the House budget.

Ryan would like to cut more, too, he noted, but: "We are in a three-front war right now."

While the Sojourners recognize that the deficit is a "moral issue" — as it would be wrong to "leave a world of debt for our children" — the group warns against reducing the debt "on the backs of poor and vulnerable people."

Yet, Ryan would counter, the poor and vulnerable stand to lose the most as the looming "debt crisis" could destroy America's safety net if Washington fails to address the federal debt. The GOP wants to change the focus of welfare programs away from rewarding dependency and toward rewarding independence.

Ryan did not claim to know what Jesus would cut. The Sojourners did. Why, they even know Jesus believes in global warming.

Reader Glen Franklin Koontz came to a different conclusion. "In the Christian faith, the individual is commanded to love his neighbor as himself ... (and) to act charitably and to help others," he wrote. "Nowhere in the Bible does God command Caesar to do a damn thing."

I don't think that Wallis and company understand that the government is not God. And when well-meaning people try to make it a god, they likely will end up with — what? — $14 trillion in debt.

A SMALL PRAYER

by K. Rae Anderson

May we let Your understanding, Lord, guide us through our days. Amen

Finding my smile once again

It's going to be hard, it's going to be painful, but it has to happen.

I went away trying to find an escape and instead I found so much more.

I found an experience that opened my eyes and tugged at my heart.

I realized that even though the pain that I'm dealing with seems like more than I can handle, there are more difficult situations in this world.

There are people dealing with heartbreak, people dealing with loss, people dealing with worry and the journey of finding themselves.

There's going to pain and nobody tells us to ignore it or pretend that it doesn't exist because even those that are happy understand that pain is inevitable in this world.

As horrible and dreadful as it may be it is part of what keeps this world in balance.

It's not about ignoring the bad or pretending the bad doesn't exist or even about finding a way of making it not exist, it's about seeing the bad, but being able to view it from a different perspective.

For me it was about seeing things through a child's eyes, from the back seat of a motorcycle and from a place of simple escape.

I started the day out looking to find happiness, to find my smile again; even if only for a moment.

I knew that at the end of the day I would still have my broken heart, this lonely feeling and sense of sadness that I started with, but I also knew that somewhere out there my smile was waiting to be found.

I know they say running away isn't the answer.

You can't run from your problems and you can't ignore them, just as much as you can't dwell on them.

However, I had to run, I had to try and I had to search in the only way I could think of.

I found myself back in a place that I knew, with a group of people that I didn't really know. A group of people that I thought I understood, but it wasn't until I saw what's underneath that I truly understood.

I spent the day with a group of people that most would overlook, look down upon, or simply toss to the side. It was those people and their caring hearts and care-free characters that helped me find my smile.

They each have their own story, their own lives and I'm sure their own pains, but instead of caring only about themselves they devote their time to showing those that don't have a voice that someone cares.

They showed me that it's the little things that make all the difference. It's the small gestures to those that think society has forgotten them that can bring a smile to a child's face and security to an insecure life.

It's about being able to take off and throw your worries away, even if only for an hour or two. It's about finding that place that allows you to be you.

I never imagined that the day would turn out like it did. I wasn't even sure if my goal could be accomplished, if it was even possible to find what I was looking for.

Somehow, it was and I did.

A helping gesture, some rowdy and sometimes sketchy conversation and a bike ride later, I found myself smiling.

It wasn't the smile I knew before, but it was a smile that let me know despite the moment I'm in right now, there is a silver lining and there is hope ahead.

I'm not sure how long it will take or even if the pain will ever be fully gone, but thanks to a friend and the opportunity to escape, vent and the encouragement to let go I am certain that somehow, someday, I will be okay.

It's amazing how when friends see us hurting it's easy to say that it was for the best or that it will be okay and that you're

AMANDA MORENO

Is there a reason we are being treated as the Tea Party's hostages?

The Barefoot Conservative Nation descended on Washington in April like a wolf on the fold.

Libertarians, creationists, birthers, Birchers, flat-taxers, string savers, and tin foil collectors—all the wonderful groups that make up the tea party's intellectual wing—came to town waving signs, shouting slogans, and collaring hapless Congresspersons in their dens.

They may not have achieved their goal of shutting down the government, but in the end, they achieved something even more improbable—they made you feel sorry for Congress. (Makes you kind of miss the Silent Majority doesn't it?)

At issue was the federal budget, which needed to clear Congress to keep the government going.

The protestors think the government is spending way too much and the national debt is too big. They want to cut both of them to the bone. And they intend to use the Republican Party as their knife.

Democrats, on the other hand, are more committed to using government to deal with the problems of the nation and tend to resist cutting programs.

Thus, a civil war seems to have broken out while we weren't paying attention.

This isn't the way to conduct a democracy. The traditional way for our two-party system to resolve differences is for each party to give a little and move forward without having satisfied the extremists on either side.

The tea party people and their cohort won't buy that. They don't want 60 percent of their agenda fulfilled. They don't want 90 percent. They want it all.

House Speaker John Boehner managed to keep his rebellious troops in line long enough to sign off on a compromise. President Barack Obama and Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid did the same with the Democrats. The conservatives got some of the cuts they wanted, but were forced to give ground on public subsidies to Planned Parenthood and government regulation of greenhouse gases.

Does that end the fight? Not on your life.

In a few weeks, by July at the latest, Congress will be asked to raise the debt ceiling so the government can continue to pay its bills and the rumble. The tea parties have promised not to be so compliant next time.

If we escape that crisis without a catastrophic meltdown, we will be looking at yet another new budget that needs congressional approval in the fall. By that time, the blood on the Capitol's floor should be up to the gunwales.

This is nuts. We can't allow a relatively small minority of zealots to hold the nation hostage to their ideology simply because they throw themselves on the floor and hold their breath.

It's not as though the tea party better off, but those words aren't comfort.

In all honesty, in those moments no words are going to provide comfort.

However, knowing that someone else has been in your shoes, knowing that someone else has survived the situation that you are in, gives a little hope. It gives a little boost to the faith and the courage to continue to put one foot in front of the other.

The truth is even though it may be okay eventually and that there may come a time that I look back on all of this and realize that life worked out the way it should, that's not what will get me through this. It's not what will help me get up every day and continue to go on.

It's knowing that it's going to take time.

Nobody can tell me how long and nobody can tell me how that journey will go, but in time, maybe a long time maybe a short time, but in time, the pain will lessen. There's no guarantee that it will ever disappear, that the scars it causes will ever be erased or the damage it does will ever be repaired, but there is the guarantee that life, the world, will continue to go on.

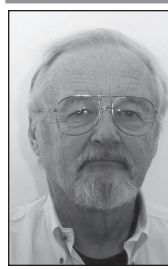

It's knowing that no matter how sad I feel, how much pain I have; I have to find a way to get up every morning, make myself get ready and act like I am enjoying life.

It's about knowing that even when I want to give up, I can't. It's knowing that it's okay to cry and nobody can tell me when those tears will stop.

Nobody can tell me when the memories will fade away, when the hurt will subside or even if I will ever have the opportunity that I want again. It's knowing that there are no answers.

At the end of the day, it's about crying when you have to, doing what you must and knowing that if even only for a moment, your smile can be found.

has right on its side—although you'd think so if you believed much of what you hear on radio and television.

Our federal debt is too big; I'll give you that.

But the government's not "broke," as Republican leaders insist on insisting. We're a rich nation, now and for the foreseeable future. Our deficit is manageable if we're smart about it.

There are deficits and there are deficits. Those produced by "stimulus" programs are acceptable, even desirable right now, because they bolster our sagging economy. If we'd had a bigger stimulus two years ago, we'd be better off now.

The long-term deficits we accrue with programs like Medicare, where we give money to doctors and patients only after we've paid a tribute to the insurance companies that guard the entrances to our healthcare system like trolls on a bridge.

Those deficits we can and should do something about.

We also need to raise taxes on upper income people who haven't shared in our "shared sacrifice."

Government has to be about more than making rich people richer.

They're rich enough now. It's time we started worrying about the rest of the people and about the future of generations yet unborn.

Casual Cooking with Kris Soliz

This week's recipe is inspired by a woman from my church. Once a month or so, the women at church get together and have a service of sorts based on relationship building, spiritual growth and educating ourselves on different subjects.

Last month was on health and fitness and some ladies brought different dishes reflecting such (I took grilled fish, rice pilaf and mango salsa on top.). Now, I have not had the pleasure of making this dish, which I try to do before writing about them. However, I fully had the pleasure of eating it and asked for the recipe so this could be shared by others.

This is easy enough to make in the mornings and have it ready in the fridge on these approaching hotter days to save you from heating up the kitchen at dinner. This makes a great potluck dish, but be prepared with copies of the recipe in your purse because you will be asked for them. This is a lite dish but heavy enough to serve as a meal with a bright green salad and some bread sticks. Enjoy!

Chicken Pasta Salad

2-4 pieces boneless skinless

- chicken or 2 cups chopped ham
- 1 box rotini pasta
- 2 bell peppers, any color
- 1 can black olives
- 1 small jar green olives
- 1 bag cubed Colby jack cheese
- 1 large bottle of Italian dressing
- 1 pkg. cherry tomatoes
- 1 red onion

Season with salt and pepper and cook chicken cut into bite-size pieces in a skillet. Boil pasta and cool. Pour entire bottle of Italian dressing, chicken pieces, onion cut into bite-size pieces, cheese, black and green olives cut in half, bell peppers (sautéed or raw) and tomatoes, cut in half, in a bowl. Mix all ingredients and add salt/pepper to taste.

3 Hawks sign letters of intent

By STEVE REAGAN

Staff Writer

Three members of the Howard College men's basketball team will be honing their hoops skills at a higher level next season.

Corey Stern, Joe Bright and Carlos Emory signed letters of intent to attend Division I universities during a Wednesday ceremony at Garrett Coliseum.

Stern will attend Texas State University, Bright will head to Stephen F. Austin and Emory will play ball for the University of Oregon.

All three sophomores played crucial roles this past season for the Hawks, who advanced to the second round of the Region V tournament before falling to McLennan Community College.

Stern, who played center for the Hawks, said he was swayed by the family atmosphere at TSU.

"They've got a great academic support system, and their campus (in San Marcos) is beautiful," he said. "I think it was just a good fit for me, overall. It felt more like family out there."

Academic opportunity also appealed to Bright when he decided on SFA.

"The biggest thing is that, if I graduate, they'll pay for my fifth year of college," said Bright, a member of Howard's 2010 national championship team. "I liked the family environment — everyone was so friendly and nice. Their facilities are top-notch and they have some great coaches."

Emory, also a member of HC's national championship squad, said he was undecided until very recently as to which university he would attend.

"I was undecided for a long time," he said. "A lot of schools were offering me scholarships and I was just looking for the best fit for me, and that was Oregon ... I liked everything about it."

Howard Coach Mark Adams said the three players were leaders in the classroom as well as on the basketball court.

"I'm excited that all three of them will earn their associate's degree here and go on and play Division I ball," Adams said. "That's one thing we told them when they came here — if they'd work hard and take care of business for us, we'd take care of them."

Spurs stave off elimination

By PAUL J. WEBER

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — Just 1.7 seconds is all that remained for Tim Duncan, Manu Ginobili and Tony Parker, who had been a wasted and humiliating dud of a playoff run.

An undrafted rookie didn't let them go down that quickly.

Catching the inbound pass with 1.7 seconds left, Gary Neal forced overtime with a spectacular 3-pointer in the face of O.J. Mayo as time expired, and the top-seeded San Antonio Spurs staved off elimination by stunning the Memphis Grizzlies 110-103 on Wednesday night.

"It felt good. I knew I had good legs going into it," Neal said. "It felt good. I followed through and it went in."

The eighth-seeded Grizzlies still lead the best-of-seven series 3-2. They will host the Spurs on Friday night, but left town knowing they missed a knockout punch.

"They're down by three, you've got to run them off the 3. You can't let nobody shoot an open 3," Grizzlies forward Zach Randolph said. "You've got to contest the 3, you've got to deny the ball."

The straightaway 3-pointer was the second of two remarkable San Antonio baskets in the final 2.2 seconds of regulation. Manu Ginobili, who scored 33 points, hit the other with a long corner jumper while falling out of bounds in front of the Spurs bench, in what was originally ruled a 3.

Ginobili? Parker? Duncan, in perhaps a repeat of his remarkable 3-pointer with 3 seconds left against Phoenix in the 2008 playoffs, before the Spurs went on to a double-overtime win?

Nope.

They drew it up for Neal, a 26-year-old rookie and former European journeyman who the Spurs signed this season after giving him an audition on their summer league team.

"You really don't think about the magnitude of making or missing it, you just think about trying to get the best shot that you can get," said Neal, who finished with seven points. "It went in today, but I think it's the best shot I could have got in that situation."

Randolph led Memphis with 26 points and 11 rebounds. He scored 18 points in the fourth quarter and overtime, but the Spurs assured a Game 6 in the overtime behind Parker, who scored 6 of his 24 in the extra period.

Only eight teams in NBA history have ever come back from a 3-1 deficit. The Spurs, who were the NBA's winningest team for most of the season, are desperate to join that list.

NFL owners lose another round

By DAVE CAMPBELL

AP Sports Writer

MINNEAPOLIS — The NFL has promised to give its teams guidance on what to do after another stinging rebuke from the same federal judge who lifted the lockout.

Whether that includes rules for free agency, the NFL draft that begins Thursday night or simply whether players can talk with their coaches was anyone's guess.

U.S. District Judge Susan Richard Nelson late Wednesday rejected the NFL's request to put her order lifting the lockout on hold pending further appeals. She dismissed the NFL's argument that she didn't have jurisdiction and that it's facing irreparable harm because of her decision to end the 45-day lockout at the request of the players.

"The world of 'chaos' the NFL claims it has been thrust into — essentially the 'free-market' system this nation otherwise willfully operates under — is not compelled by this court's order," Nelson wrote.

And yet chaos there may be, perhaps as early as Thursday, the first day of the NFL draft.

James Quinn, a lawyer for the players, said free agency — the biggest immediate question for owners and players alike — should start immediately. NFL spokesman Greg Aiello said the league is "evaluating the district court's decision" and would advise teams Thursday morning on how to proceed.

The NFL Players Association, now a trade group and not a union, accused the league of stalling.

"On the eve of one of the greatest fan events in sports, the players moved another step closer to bringing the fans football," spokesman George Atallah said in an email to The Associated Press. "Owners seem determined to prevent that from happening. The NFL owners are not litigating to protect the game. They're litigating to protect a lockout."

Nelson's ruling was not a surprise, given her questioning of NFL attorney David Boies during an April 6 hearing and her 89-page order lifting the lockout. She wrote another 20 pages in her denial, declaring the public's interest in the resumption of league operations.

The judge acknowledged her decision will be appealed to the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in St. Louis, and Aiello said that step was being taken immediately. The appellate court is viewed as a more friendly venue to businesses like the league than the federal courts in Minnesota.

"We believe there are strong legal and practical reasons that support a stay and that the Court of Appeals should have an opportunity to address the important legal issues that will be presented," Aiello said.

League rules have effectively been shelved since the collective bargaining agreement ended on March 11 and the NFL's first work stoppage since 1987 began.

Nelson said that needn't be the case.

She suggested that the NFL "make a decision about how to proceed and accept the consequences" of that choice.

In saying the NFL could go about its business, Nelson noted that the league had already gone forward with the draft and announced the 2011 schedule.

Nelson also pointed to the contract tenders teams issued to restricted free agents in March before the lockout, "treating them as if the league intended to operate with the 2010 rules in place."

What the NFL will do Thursday was anyone's guess, though Packers president and CEO Mark Murphy suggested earlier the 2010 rules might be used.

Foods that improve your looks

If we are what we eat, then it may be a good idea to take inventory of the foods the average person consumes on a daily basis. Although some foods are sought after for their taste, there are many foods that can be enjoyed because they have a positive effect on a person's appearance.

In the simplest sense, eating a healthy diet can help maintain a good body weight, which is one way to improve individual appearance. But more specifically, there are certain foods that have particular benefits for the skin, hair and body. The key is knowing what to eat.

Soy: Soy is rich in amino acids. This food, whether eaten as a soy bean or in the many foods made from soy, including tofu, can help the skin retain moisture and improve elasticity. Soy is also protein-rich, which can help a person feel full longer and avoid over-eating.

Blueberries and cherries: These fruits are chock full of antioxidants, which studies show can reduce inflammation, a culprit of puffy, aging skin. Cherries are also a natural source of melatonin, which can help a person get a restful night's sleep — another component of looking your best.

Fresh herbs: Seasoning food with flavorful herbs instead of salt is another way to improve looks. Salt is often a culprit in water retention, which can lead to bloating and puffiness. This is also advantageous to people who need to reduce salt intake thanks to high blood pressure or other ailments.

Lime, pear, apple, and strawberry: These power fruits are high in vitamin C and other nutrients, making them an important component of a healthy diet. Furthermore, some research has suggested that certain foods, including limes, pears and apples, can whiten teeth.

Egg products: Eggs are high in vitamin A, which helps repair skin. Not getting enough vitamin A may contribute to wrinkles.

Milk products: Consuming low- or non-fat dairy products helps promote strong bones and teeth. Nothing says beautiful more than a big, bright smile. B vitamins in dairy also help with red blood cell growth, cells that are responsible for bringing oxygen to other cells. This can promote healthy, young-looking skin.

Yogurt: Yogurt contains beneficial bacteria, which help with digestion. This can help cleanse out the system and prevent toxins from backing up in the body.

Water: Of course a person needs to stay hydrated, and water can flush the body of excess salt and toxins while also plumping the skin.

There are many nutritionally sound foods that can boost outward appearance as well.

Certain foods can work wonders on appearance and help keep the doctor away

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Get creative. The Pisces moon is void of course and perfect for playing around in the poetic and ethereal realms. The Taurus sun will call on the powers of aesthetic Venus to add a touch of the romantic to your work. And with five luminaries in the youthful sign of Aries, the spark of timely relevance will be impossible to avoid.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). Intellectual pursuit makes you feel happy. You'll get busy exploring your world and suddenly realize that you are interested in so many things, it would be impossible for you to ever be bored.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Ask anyone who has risen to superstar status — failing makes you a success. You need the lessons so you can master the lessons. It is your mistakes you've learned from that give you the edge.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). You have some good stories. Plus, you have anecdotes that people can really learn from. If you explain yourself well enough, you'll never have to say, "I guess you had to be there." So make the effort to really spell it out.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). You cannot unlive what you have lived, but you can find another way to respond to it. You'll take a judicious trip down memory lane, and it will be a little like cropping a picture and keeping the best parts of the image in frame.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Children, and immature adults, throw tantrums. You are different. If you can't do what you want, then keep your wits about you and look for new opportunities. You'll succeed with your sly, foxy ways.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Some of your thoughts are the same as yesterday and will repeat again tomorrow. There will be completely unique thoughts, too — ones you will never think again. Capture them somehow so you will remember.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Sometimes you operate like a self-contained business of one, and other times, you behave like a cog in the wheel of a large organization. You balance your independence and interdependence well now.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Like any good superhero, your true identity must be, at times, hidden. Only the ones on the very inside are trusted with the information about your enormous strength and power.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). There is a buffer zone around you now, and you are careful to only include those who have proven themselves worthy of getting close to you. This is how you avoid distractions and accomplish what you need to do.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). You have a powerful personal radar system that extends from your heart to the hearts of those around you. You don't have to know a person well to recognize their pain. You're part of the healing, too.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). You will be assertive when you need to be, but mostly laid-back. You easily share yourself with others. This builds bonds that are enjoyable, effortless and a source of both pride and comfort.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). You have acted more sensibly than others in your family, and you will see the benefit of those choices now. You certainly don't want to win at anyone else's expense, but your victory will be noble.

Opening lead — heart of hearts.

The fate of many hands is determined primarily by how the opponents' cards are distributed, rather than by the skill of the declarer. But before a declarer decides that the outcome is purely a matter of luck, he should review all of his options.

Consider this deal where making five clubs appears to rest on the location of the ace of diamonds and king of spades. If West has both of those cards, declarer can make 12 tricks by taking the spade finesse and later leading up to the diamond king.

Alternatively, if each opponent has one of the vital cards, declarer loses either two diamonds or a diamond and a spade.

But if East has both key cards, it would seem that South must lose a spade and two diamonds and go down one. Yet closer inspection reveals that, with proper play, declarer can make his contract regardless of how the adverse cards are distributed.

South wins the first heart, ruffs a heart in dummy, leads a trump to the ace and ruffs his remaining heart. The closed hand is then entered with a trump, and a diamond is led.

If West follows low, dummy's ten is played, and East wins with the jack. If he now cashes the ace, he establishes dummy's king, on which declarer can park his spade loser. South also succeeds if East leads a heart, yielding a ruff-and-discard, or returns a spade into the A-Q.

Observe that it doesn't help if West puts up the queen when the diamond is first led. In that case, declarer simply covers with the king, and East finds himself in the same unpleasant position.

Nor does it matter if West actually has the ace of diamonds. As long as dummy's ten is played after West follows low, or the king is played if West produces the queen or jack, the defenders are helpless.

Tomorrow: Bidding quiz.
