The

STORY OF "Shortages"-

For months, the word "shortage" has twen applied to every basic industry and merial. There was a shortage of aluminum, see . lead, tin, copper, gasoline, rubber, etc. There have been critical shortages of important materials that have hampered the production of the vital implements of war, ships, planes, tanks and

For months there have been rumors of power shortages. But there has not been one single instance where production of material for armamont has been delayed because of a lack of Electric Power. The Electric Industry is the one industry that, even six months after Pearl Harbor, is able to furnish all the power necessary in our quickening drive for Victory.

LETS GET IT STRAIGHT

There has been ample Electric Power for all war needs without depriving offices, stores or households of their normal supply. No one has had to issue rationing cards for domestic use of Electricity. Let's remember these thoughts when we hear rumors of power shortages.

* These thoughts taken from a statement issued by J. A. Krug, chief of the power branch of the War Production Board, July 22, 1942, Washington, D. C.
