Step Foward For UN

The spirit triumphed over the letter when the UN General Assembly voted to debate the trials of Cardinal Mindszenty and the 15 Bulgarian Protestant leaders. It was a minor triumph. Twenty nations abstained from the vote, and the Soviet bloc of couse voted against it. The debate will not free the prisoners or end political persecution behind the iron curtain. Nevertheless, the vote cannot be dismissed as meaningless.

The champions of the letter had sound arguments on their side. Spokesmen for the Soviet block naturally argued that both trials were domestic matters which were outside the UN's jurisdiction. They tore into the human rights angle of the opposing argument by citing Australia's treatment of its aborigines, Bolivia's death penalty for attempts to establish a non-Catholic religion there, and America's Sacco-Vanzetti and Scottsboro trials.

Even the Scandinavian governments' spokesman objected to the debate, though there were no ideological issues involved. He argued that the matter should be taken up by the heads of the Big Three diplomatic missions in Budapest and Sofia, according to the Hungarian and Bulgarian peace treaties.

These were telling points. But the victorious champions of the spirit cut through parliamentary details to the heart of the question. Speaking for the United States, Benjamin Cohen said, "The question is not what happened in Eastern Europe before and during the war. The question is what is happening there now. . . . The item is not directed at a review of a specific, isolated trial, but rather at the general problem of the observance of human rights in the two countries.'

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship.

It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the FAMILY

Here is a team that is hard to beat—a family whose members work together and play together and are bound by a common tie of love and mutual interests. Such families are the hope of the world.

People do not have to be clannish or unsocial to enjoy such home life. They may have interests, associations, and pleasures outside, but their dominant interest will be in the home and the family circle.

Fortunate indeed are the children whose lots are cast in such a home. For parents who are motivated to build such homes are not apt to neglect the moral and spiritual values which make life strong and beautiful.

They turn naturally to the Church and the inspiration of the Holy Scriptures for guidance, knowing that these will endure though everything else may fail.

Children reared in such homes become good citizens and useful members of society.
